BETHLEHEM City council taken to task

BY NATE JASTRZEMSKI
njastrzemi@tmonline.com

Perhaps still hot with election fever Nov. 7, 10 residents spoke for a full hour to council, many of them demanding transparency, answers and action from city government.

From resource allocation to shelter maintenance to poorly constructed curbs, item after item was clearly delivered for council's digestion. But some items may cause a little heartburn.

Residents Martin Romeril, Bill Scheirer and Beall Fowler charged the city is using "spot zoning" and "bogus maps" to allow businesses to move into residential neighborhoods — directly at odds with actual zoning designations. "Residences are being turned into commercial space," said Fowler, using increased prices. "There are people who

Miller Heights ES Principal Deborah Roeder welcomed dozens of veterans to the school's 18th annual Veterans Day program Nov. 8, noting the importance of honoring and recognizing their service and sacrifices.

Students sang patriotic songs, read inspirational messages and were joined by the Freedom HS Women's Choir and Patriot Band Fife and Drum Corps.

Fifth grade students in Boy Scout Troop 346 and Girl Scout Troop 8373 presented the colors during a procession into the gymnasium, followed by the Pledge of Allegiance.

Veterans in attendance were given a red carnation upon their arrival and recognized by service branch during the 'Armed Forces Medley.' Many had served as far back as the Vietnam War.

Students presented letters they had written to soldiers, and to Gina Ray, the wife of Thomas Ray who is currently deployed overseas.

Refreshments were served upon completion of the program, after fourth grade teacher Louis Poczak concluded it by playing 'Taps.'

TOUCHSTONE THEATRE

'King of Bethlehem Firemen' opens

BY KATHY LAUER-WILLIAMS
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Images from the time show a distinguished man with a firm brow and a magnificent handlebar mustache. S. Charles Seckelman had the look of a man who was a leader, and in the 19th century he was known as the King of the Bethlehem Firemen.

A new play about the Seckelman, premiering Saturday at Touchstone Theatre in Bethlehem, takes a look at the renowned firefighter and his time, when volunteers relied on horse-drawn apparatus and the nearest body of water to put out fires.

"The King of Bethlehem Firemen" is written by Karen Samuels, one of three local historians who penned "Firefighting in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, 1741-1917," published last year by Perseverance Publishing. The one-man play is directed by George B. Miller and stars Chris Simmons.

Samuels says she met co-writers Chris Eline and Nancy Rutman on Facebook, where all three frequently posted about the history of Bethlehem. They started to meet in person and realized they all had collections of firefighting memorabilia, particularly Eline.

"If you call the Bethlehem Fire Department and have a history question, they give you Chris's name," Samuels says.

She says between the three, they realized they had a book on the history of Bethlehem firefighting. But as they did research for the book, Samuels says, "one character really stood out."

All historical accounts indicate S. Charles Seckelman was a beloved, charismatic man who not only fought fires against the huge challenges of the time, but started many of the firefighting organizations that still exist today. He was instrumental in bringing the fire department into the 20th century.

want to turn our residences and offices into hotels and our churches into homeless shelters. [Ours is] a residential neighborhood," and he said should remain such.

Fowler said Planning and Zoning Director Darlene Heller has provided the Planning Commission a map color-coding rental properties - which are residential - in such a way as to separate them from homes, which he said is misleading. He cited other misrepresented properties he's personally aware of that blur the consistency of city neighborhoods.

Scheirer explained that a building made too pricey for a family is a good target for a company seeking something in the city but more affordable than commercial property. When this "market-driven zoning" is allowed to continue, he said, a city's commercial and residential areas are diluted and quality of life suffers.

Resident Louis James was joined by about 15 other Concerned Neighbors for Safety group members near downtown Center Street in the reading of a letter in which they address council, mayor, and Police Chief Mark DiLuzio about the opening of a nighttime shelter at the Christ Church UCC. He said during the four months the shelter was open last winter, Bethlehem Emergency Sheltering "was not a good neighbor" and that disturbances ranging from noise, harassment, exposure, drug use, littering and public defecation became common. He said the group feels BES lacks the resources to operate the shelter as promised.

At the mayor's request, DiLuzio took to the podium and explained his department is already considering ways to help the neighborhood, and that people seeking shelter after closure are welcome to ask for help at the police department itself. There, they will be screened, and if they have no open warrants and are not on a sex registry, may be provided a voucher and delivered to the shelter by officers. "You don't get into a shelter without a voucher from the Bethlehem Police," he said.

Resident Dana Grubb accused the Bethlehem Redevelopment Authority of using TIF funds, which are designated for public infrastructure improvements, to instead reimburse a private developer $800,000, and spent $60,000 on the popular Southside Ambassador program, among other uses. "You were lied to. This money has been misspent," he told the audience heatedly.

Another complaint was the complete lack of video feeds or archives of any city meetings for resident review. Romeril said a number of city meetings are set during the afternoon and are difficult for residents to attend, such as the CRIZ, Parking Authority and Water Authority meetings, and live streams or videos archived to YouTube for free would be very helpful. "Other cities do it, even here in backward Pennsylvania," he said.

Later, following a long and sometimes subtly contentious discussion between members J. Willie Reynolds, Paige Van Wirt and Bryan Callahan, council decided to indefinitely postpone planned increases to parking meters and fines.

In particular, Callahan said further discussion and debate of such a relatively small decision didn't need to be delayed. "All this is politics; it's just a ticket increase."

Van Wirt suggested the financial health of the Parking Authority doesn't necessitate any increases. Reynolds explained at length the Walnut Street garage renovation and construction of a Polk Street garage are the reasons for the increases, but as yet council lacks a lot of hard data regarding timelines and costs. He said he would prefer more time to coordinate with all the entities involved.

President Adam Waldron eventually decided on caution, seeking a postponement with the caveat he is wholly in favor of increases eventually. The motion passed with only Callahan against.

Mayor Bob Donchez said that information will become clearer in the new year, with the current estimate setting construction of Polk Street around the third quarter of 2019, and lasting 16-18 months.

"I was so impressed with all this firefighter had accomplished and he has generations of family in Bethlehem, many of whom have become firefighters," Samuels says. "Everything seemed to fall into place."

She says when the trio gave talks on their book, the descendants of Seckelman would attend and became a fan club for the popular firefighter.

Seckelman was a German immigrant who came over as a toddler and grew up in New York City.

Samuels says his family was known for being painters, but even as a child, Seckelman was fascinated by firefighting.

"He would chase firetrucks in Manhattan as a young boy," she says.

After serving in the Civil War, Seckelman moved to Bethlehem to start a painting business and again was drawn to firefighting, where he developed a far-reaching reputation.

"All the newspaper clippings call him a very famous firefighter," Samuels says. "He was a natural born leader and well liked."

Samuels says Seckelman was very civic-minded and started the Pennsylvania Association of Firefighters. He then brought together firemen from Carbon, Lehigh, Monroe and Northampton counties to create the Four County Fireman's Association.

Since men's social clubs were all the rage at the time, he also started a fireman's social club which still exists today.

The Ancient Antediluvian and Honorable Order of Goosenecks was named after the top part of a fire hose and was well-attended. The organization featured crazy rituals popular at the time, such as new members being tied up with rope and dragged across stage.

Seckelman also started the Bethlehem Maennerchor, a German American singing group.

He was known for fighting the city government for support for the volunteer fire departments and later in his life, traveled around the region selling fire hose.

"He must have been quite a character," Samuels says.

She set the play in three scenes. The first shows some of the difficulties of fighting fires in 1882. Water and water pressure were unreliable, equipment frequently failed and unpaved streets were often impassable. In the scene, Seckelman is fighting a linseed oil-fueled fire at a paint mill in Bethlehem, relying only on water from the Monocacy Creek.

"It was pretty difficult with the equipment they had," she says. "Access to water was the biggest issue."

The second scene goes into Seckelman's personal life as he grew up speaking German in school and moved to Bethlehem's an adult.

The third scene shows how he hounded Bethlehem City Council, begging for money for the fire department.

To direct the play, Samuels reached out to Miller, an award-winning director who is the artistic director of Selkie Theatre, an area Irish American theater company. She says he helped her refine the play.

"He has been really wonderful," she says.

Acclaimed actor Chris Simmons was tapped to breathe life into Seckelman, and Samuels says he is "so good" in the role.

Simmons is best known for producing, directing and performing in "An Evening at a British Music Hall" for 40 years in the Lehigh Valley, Philadelphia and New York City. He is currently working on a one-man show "The King of the Bowery- Chuck Connors, the Mayor of Chinatown."

A brief multimedia presentation on early firefighting in Bethlehem will be shown prior to the performance and there will be light refreshments.

Exec vetoes budget amendments

BY DOUGLAS GRAVES

Special to the Bethlehem Press

Making good on a promise, Lehigh County Executive Phillips Armstrong vetoed the budget for 2019 Oct. 31 because an amendment passed by County Commissioners rolled back the millage rate from the proposed 3.79 mills to 3.64 mills.

He made the announcement in a special news conference at the Lehigh Administration building attended by the press, members of the Armstrong administration, a couple of aspiring commissioners and one Lehigh County Commissioner, Democrat Amy Zanelli.

He warned against letting the Commissioner's amended budget harm the County's bond rating.

The amendment ignored the recommendations of the professional financial staff who prepared the budget. The amended budget was passed Oct. 24 6 - 3 in a party line split. The Republican majority preferred to promote a tax cut to residents and borrow money rather than paying cash for planned capital investments.

The immediate payout of the all-Republican vote was apparent. At a candidates gathering at Coca Cola Park a week after the county commissioner's meeting that tacked on the amendment lowering the millage rate, Board of Commissioners Chairman and Republican Marty Nothstein, who was vying for the Congressional District seat, claimed credit for a recent vote to lower real estate millage rate to what he said is the lowest in 20 years.

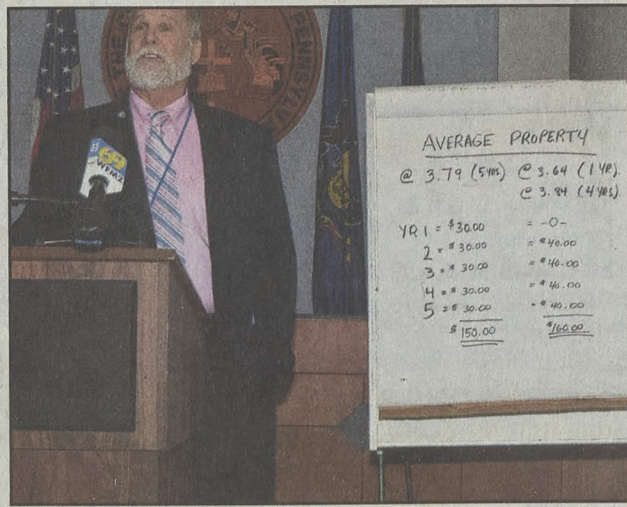

Armstrong said the budget as he had proposed it was made with the guidance previously passed by the Board of Commissioners, which required that all capital projects had to be paid from the county's operating fund - not through borrowing. That amounted to $7.7 million that would have to come out of the operating fund for capital projects, according to Armstrong. When the commissioners saw the resulting budget they, according to Armstrong, reversed their guidance and "redid the budget." They balked at the proposed millage rate of 3.79 and decided to pass an amendment offering a tax break to Lehigh County property owners with a revised rate of 3.64. This, according to Armstrong, was when the commissioners realized their new budget law, Ordinance 2018-22, which eliminated the financing of capital projects, would have a negative effect on future budgets. This led to the second version of the 2019 budget - one that projected just a portion of meeting capital expenses being met with the Operating Fund ($1.6 million), and the remainder ($6.4 million) needing to be financed. This was the budget with the administration's proposed 3.79 millage rate. This final budget proposal projected an ending Operating Fund balance of $26.1 million.

Armstrong also said he was concerned about the effect of the Republican budget on the bond rating

County gang task force lauded for teamwork

Lehigh County District Attorney Jim Martin has announced that members of the Lehigh County Gang Task Force received an award from the East Coast Gang Investigators Association. The association assists members of law enforcement in sharing gang-related information between their departments and agencies and offers training and education to members of the community in street gang awareness and identification.

The award was presented to members of the task force Sept. 25 at the association's annual meeting. The award was given for "superior leadership and teamwork involving gang investigations." It specifically acknowledged the task force's work related to the murder of Charles Bryant, 16, Aug. 5, 2013, in the 900 block of Oak Street in Allentown.

Sgt. Christopher McCarty, of the Allentown Police Department (APD), who is the former Gang Intelligence Detective for APD, nominated members of the task force who worked on that case for the award.

Task Force members who were nominated based on their involvement include: Julia Kocis, director of the Regional Investigation and Intelligence Center (RIIC), and her co-workers, Chief Criminal Analyst Kara Nyamuomba and Criminal Analyst Ashley Lovett; Det. John Brixius and former task force member Det. Raymond Ferraro, both of the Allentown Police Department; Jason Baer, Jennifer Grim, Kurt Ruane and Mike Zagorski, of the Lehigh County Adult Probation Gang Supervision Unit; and Chief Deputy District Attorney Bethany S. Zampogna. Two men were charged in relation to Mr. Bryant's murder. Tyrieff Hart and Joshua Livingston pleaded guilty to murder of the third degree and criminal conspiracy to commit murder of the third degree at their initial court appearances. Hart was sentenced to 10 to 25 years; Livingston was sentenced to 16 to 32 years.

CDDA Zampogna accepted the award on behalf of the other task force members who were honored.

Residents of Bethlehem and throughout the region had an opportunity to learn more about the Bethlehem Police Department's Mounted Patrol in early September. The second annual open house at the Quadrant Private Wealth Stable on East Langhorne Avenue had hundreds of visitors throughout the day, with activities for all ages. The day ended with a sold-out western barbecue.

Families could enjoy taking a shot at dropping Police Chief Mark DiLuzio into a dunk tank, pony rides, food vendors, mounted patrol training demonstrations, visits with a Cowboy Santa, photos in a horse stall, tours of the emergency response team's armored vehicle, country line dancing lessons, food vendors, a Home Depot kids workshop, tours of the stable, and the purchase of mounted patrol souvenirs at a volunteer manned tent.

Chief DiLuzio summed up the community support and open house experience in opening remarks, saying, "this is more of a community project than a police project."

MORAVIAN NOTES

By Logan Maeding

Coffeehouse sold out

Fall weather has caught up with Moravian after a long summer, and a very warm beginning of fall. Students have begun to wear sweatshirts and long pants in an effort to warm up for the coming of winter. In all, many different events have come up, like Coffeehouse, the International Festival and huge soccer games.

Every year, Moravian students perform in a variety show called "Coffeehouse." Faculty members Jarrod Yuskaskas and Rob Riker direct the show, in which students offer their many abilities, including dancing, singing, piano playing, comedic acts and cultural representations. I performed in last year's Coffeehouse and can say that it is a must-see. It takes place Friday, Nov. 16, and Saturday, Nov. 17, at the Moravian Merle-Smith Campus. Tickets are unfortunately sold out, but there is always next year.

At the annual International Festival, many different traditions and cultures were showcased at the Upper School. The night started off with the each grade level breaking off into groups to talk about different cultural topics. The group I attended was "The Danger of a Single Story," where we discussed stereotypes, and how ignorance can fuel stereotypes. As said by Elizabeth "Boots" Bloys (Class of 2021), "Ignorance is bliss, but is it really?" The discussion was serious, but at times we laughed at our stories of how we were met with certain stereotypes.

After we finished with the discussions, there was a parade of kids and drummers dressed in traditional clothing of different cultures, which led into the beginning of dinner that night. The food was spectacular, and represented countries ranging from Haiti to Ireland. The night ended with sweet desserts, also representing different cultures.

This year, sports have been a big part of Moravian's fall. Recently, Moravian's boys soccer team won the PIAA State Championship. This is the seventh time our soccer team has made it to the PIAA finals, and it is a huge rush for everyone at Moravian. On another note, girls soccer ended its season with a tough loss, but the team did win the District XI Championship, and made it to states for the first time in the school's history.

On a more serious note, following the shooting at the Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh, the Moravian Academy Upper School community honored the victims. Robbie Shaff (Class of 2018), who is the leader of Moravian Academy's Jewish Heritage Club, organized and led the emotional ceremony, which ended with the lighting of 11 candles – one for each victim – and the recitation of the "Mourner's Kaddish." One thing that stood out from the whole ceremony was when Shaff said that even though there has been much hate toward the Jewish people in the past, there has always been a response of "love, and kindness toward those who have hurt them."

The candles were left to burn for the rest of the day in the rose garden.

County to buy twp. human services building, then build forensic center

BY BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Northampton County Council voted unanimously Nov 1 to support a $39 million bond to purchase its Bethlehem Township human services building and build a state-of-the-art forensic center that includes something Coroner Zach Lysek has never had. A morgue.

The human services building, located on Emrick Boulevard, will cost $14,468,731.

Currently, Northampton County receives $800,000 from the state every year to help pay the $1 million annual rent at the human services building. If the county purchases the building, that money goes away. But if it borrows the money, it will continue to receive this money from the state.

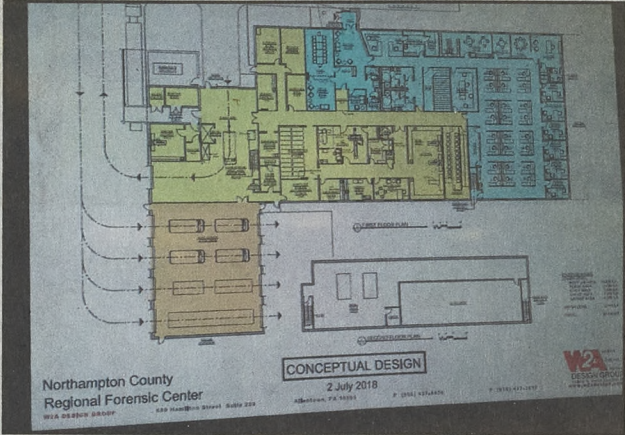

As council member Matt Dietz observed, the county's debt service will actually go down.

Before the vote, Executive Lamont McClure urged council "to be the county council that tackled long-term hard problems without the necessity in the foreseeable future of returning to taxpayers for any more real estate tax money." Though the idea of a forensic center housing a morgue was foremost in the minds of council members, McClure said acquisition of the human services building matters even more. He said in the "very near future," council will hear about some "dynamic 21st century programs that will be run out of the human services building that will protect children in a better way. That's the big piece of this."

The ordinance as drafted currently caps the bond interest rate at 5.5 percent. Dietz wanted it lowered to 5 percent. He proposed an amendment, which was seconded by council member John Cusick.

Bond counsel Anthony Ditka said reducing the cap on interest was no problem, but added the bonds will be sold in 75 days. He said it is highly unlikely that rates will approach that level in that time period. On hearing this, Cusick withdrew his second and the amendment failed.

Cusick has been a staunch advocate of a forensic center, something he calls a "core function of county government."

Dietz still supported the ordinance because he said he likes the leveraging of state money. What about that forensic center? McClure told council that three sites are still under consideration. One is at the northeastern section of Louise Moore Park, next to Route 33. Another is at Gracedale, near the 911 Center and the now vacant helipad. A third unspecified location would be the result of a partnership with a medical facility looking to build a medical school.

Though no one identified this possible partner, St. Luke's wants to start a medical school.

McClure said each site has advantages and disadvantages. He is still doing his due diligence. He was very clear that the budget will stay at or below $10.6 million.

Coroner Zach Lysek and architect Glenn Lichtenwalner presented drawings of the forensic center. It includes a public area and a separate area with 24 work stations, seven offices, work room and file room. It can store up to 24 bodies.

Currently, the county has no place to store bodies.

The body lab is where autopsies will be performed, as well as other tests performed on human remains.

The forensic center also includes digital forensics. Lysek explained that's where cell phone analysis is performed, as happened recently in the lookalike drug case.

The design includes solar panels on the roof.

In other business, council introduced ordinances to terminate the Higher Education and Hospital Agencies because their roles have been assumed by the General Purpose Authority. Council also voted unanimously to end its lease with St. Luke's for the helipad at Gracedale. That helicopter is now located at Geisinger Medical Center. They also agreed to purchase Bethlehem's trunked radio network. That is for the consolidated 911 mandated by the.

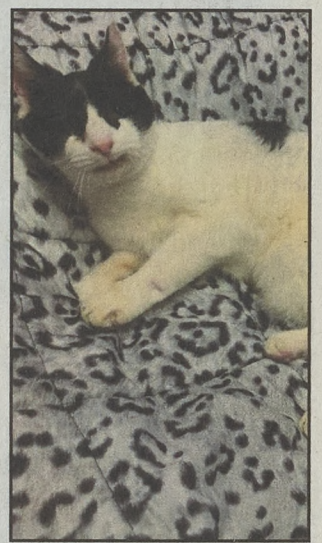

They also removed Robert Scott from the Revenue Appeals Board. He's been absent from that board for over six months, and has failed to respond to attempts to reach him.

Pates top Parkland

For the third straight year, Freedom will play for the District 11 Class 6A football title.

After losing to Parkland in each of the past two seasons, the Patriots advanced to this year's title game with a win over the Trojans in Saturday's semifinal at Bethlehem Area School District Stadium.

Freedom capitalized on four Parkland turnovers and Patriot quarterback Jared Jenkins threw for three touchdowns in a 35-21 win over the Trojans, ending their streak of six consecutive district titles.

"The biggest thing is we're going back to play for another district title," said Jenkins. "It's been bothering us that we have two silver medals from the past couple years. We're going to get prepared for next week and go play our best football game."

Parkland scored first

Friday night, but the Patriots responded with touchdowns on three-straight possessions.

Freedom got on the board with 2:09 left in the first quarter. Seven plays after senior linebacker/running back Tristan Wheeler recovered a Parkland fumble at the Trojans' 30-yard line, Wheeler took a handoff and dove in from a yard out for a 7-0 lead.

The Patriots went ahead for good on a 50-yard pass from Jenkins to Rontay Dunbar (3 catches, 117 yards, 2 TD). After stopping Parkland on downs, Freedom made it 21-7 when Jenkins hit Vincent Reph with a 16-yard touchdown pass with 5:09 left in the first half.

Parkland cut the lead to one score two times over the rest of the game, but each time the Patriots answered with a score.

The Trojans used a long kickoff return to set up a two-play touchdown drive and get within 21-14 with 4:19 left in the first half. But Freedom forced a fumble and scored on a one-play possession when Jenkins hit Dunbar with a 59-yard touchdown strike with 1:26 left in the second quarter.

"It starts with the guys up front," said Freedom head coach Jason Roeder. "We always say if we can protect Jared, he's got the ability to make plays. And we have playmakers on the outside. That's a total team effort when that happens."

When Parkland cut the lead to 28-21 in the third quarter, Freedom took just three plays to get to the end zone as Matthew Russin (9 carries, 113 yards) broke free for an 87-yard touchdown run to make it 35-21 with 4:09 left in the third quarter.

Freedom's defense took over from there, See FHS on Page A10

Zahir Seabrooks had been a big part of the Hawks impressive ground game so far this playoffs.

BY PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

It almost seems like the last two weeks of football was just a formality for Bethlehem Catholic, but the dirty work has been completed and berth in this Saturday's District 11 4A championship has been booked for the Hawks after handling Pottsville 40-28 Saturday afternoon at BASD Stadium.

The win matches Becahi (9-3) with a date against Saucon Valley (10-2) at 7 p.m. Saturday night at Nazareth.

It is the fourth-straight year the teams have met in the postseason and this will be the third-straight season the two teams have reached the championship, with Becahi winning the past two titles, including last year's 49-7 dominating victory.

This year's affair should be more competitive than last season's drubbing and head coach Joe Henrich expects his team to be ready.

"Being back in a final is one of our major goals coming into the season and we're excited about that," Henrich said. "I will tell you that we weren't pleased with how we played against Blue Mountain and we weren't happy with how they practiced leading up to this game [Pottsville]. I'm hopeful that we continue to grow up here and I'm confident they will. These kids know what's important now and what's in front of us."

Saturday's win over Pottsville looks closer than it was on paper, as the Hawks built a 40-0 lead effortlessly through two quarters to kick in

Pates end year in loss to Wilson-West Lawn

BY KATIE MCDONALD
kmcaldon@tnonline.com

Freedom's boys' soccer team signed off Saturday night after losing, 1-0, in the PIAA State Class 4A quarterfinal to Wilson-West Lawn.

The quarterfinal, which was played at Upper Perkiomen High School in Pottsville, started an hour late on an unseasonably cold afternoon, mostly due to wind.

About halfway through the first half, Wilson-West Lawn forward Sage Klein scored on a corner by David Dries.

Ten minutes later, a Wilson forward was one-on-one with Patriot goalie Derek Bast, but Bast made the save.

Freedom forward Bradley Turocy also had a shot in the last eight minutes of the first half but missed.

Sebastian Garces, who had the game-winner for the Patriots in their first state playoff game four days earlier, also just missed scoring halfway through the second half, followed by Mike Gschrey's attempt off a corner kick with 10:45 remaining in the game.

As time began to wind down quickly, the Patriots' urgency increased so much that even Bast ran downfield for the final minute, knowing a goal was essential.

When the final whistle blew, most Pates fell to the ground while others walked off the field in stunned silence.

It was the end to a 20-2-4 season for the Patriots, coached by Matt

Reightler, Daniel Periera, Dominic DeCesaris, and Jeremy Ethimides, that included 79 goals scored, nine goals scored against, 19 clean sheets, an EPC championship, and a District XI championship.

Members of the Freedom Patriot championship soccer team are Bradley Turocy, Sebastian Garces, Tye Roemersma, Ryan Raffino, Bryan Mora, Tyler Snow, Peter McGibbon, Jared Whitehorn, Ben Reich, Daniel Ramirez, Michael Gschrey, Zack Fereno, Gianni Hahalis, Austin Hoffert, Nick Stannard, Peter Tichy, Wes Young, Liam Pfeiffer, Zach Shay, Zach Chomitsky, Zach Raffino, and Derek Bast.

Freedom wins opening round of state soccer

kmcaldon@tnonline.com

Freedom's boys' soccer team knocked one down with the hope of three to go after defeating Spring-Ford, 1-0, in the first round of the PIAA State Class 4A soccer championships last Tuesday night at J. Birney Crum Stadium in Allentown.

With 21:20 remaining in the first half, freshman forward Sebastian Garces took a shot right in front of the center of the net and scored the only goal of the game.

"I was expecting the ball to come through and I was ready to put the ball in the net. The defender kicked it into my feet, and I just tilted it in," Garces said. "It was a big deal and it boosted our confidence and made us play better and harder."

Daniel Ramirez had the assist.

"Brad [Turocy] got it inside the 18 and then he passed it to me and I went in for a shot, just to put it anywhere," Ramirez said. "We're playing to survive and play another week."

The Patriot defense was strongly tested in the second half that resulted in a ball being knocked away by Freedom goalkeeper Derek Bast with 13:40 remaining and another save off a penalty kick with 8:49 remaining in the game.

"I was nervous because we didn't know anything about [Spring-Ford], but we knew who their best players were and what they'd try to do," said Freedom defender Liam Pfeiffer. "They weren't as direct as most teams we play. There were a few moments when they crossed in and I thought they were going to score."

Spring-Ford, based in Montgomery County, is from District 1.

"I feel great," Pfeiffer said, "and it's just amazing we won a state game."

Hawks Daddona commits to Penn State

BY PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Bethlehem Catholic senior Dalton Daddona recently announced the news that he'll be continuing his football career at Penn State.

The 6-foot-3, 275-pound guard and defensive end has been an anchor for the Hawks on both sides of the line and made the news public last week on his Twitter account.

Daddona visited Penn State on Oct. 13 for their contest against Michigan State and left with a strong impression that State College might be the place for him.

"I ultimately decided to commit to Penn State because it felt like home," said Daddona. "I love the way coach [James] Franklin runs his program and I know Penn State will make me into the best football player and student I can be." Other schools that were in the mix included New Hampshire, Robert Morris, Delaware State, Cornell and Air Force before Daddona ultimately decided to commit to the Nittany Lions.

Daddona was named as one of the top-five preseason offensive linemen in the state by Pa Rivals and was named to Penn Preps 247 preseason all-state team.

NASCAR THIS WEEK

SPEED FREAKS

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

What's the best thing that could happen at Homestead?

GODSPEAK: Since this started in 2014, the champion has won the Homestead race. I'd like to see all four drivers have trouble, then one limp across the finish line trailing smoke.
KEN'S CALL: Easy. Someone attempts payback on Logano in the closing laps, Joey Logano escapes, but Kyle Busch gets caught up in it instead while leading. The fireworks would be better than the Fourth of July.

Among the non-contenders remaining, who should be most disappointed?

GODSPEAK: I'm giving my vote to Aric Almirola. There were people who thought he could not drive, and he took the No. 10 Ford to new heights.
KEN'S CALL: Maybe Kurt Busch, because he was so close, but in reality it has to be Chase Elliott, because he had it in high gear when November rolled around.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

KURT BUSCH VS. DENNY HAMLIN

HAMLIN: On a Lap 269 restart, Erik Jones, Hamlin and Busch bunched up, and Hamlin knocked Busch into the wall in tight racing quarters.
GODWIN KELLY'S TAKE: "I got loose and I chased it up the race track and (Busch) was right there," Hamlin said. "I flat-out got cleaned out," said Busch, who gave Hamlin's car a love tap after the incident.

GODWIN'S PICKS FOR HOMESTEAD

WINNER: Martin Truex Jr.
REST OF TOP 5: Kevin Harvick, Kyle Busch, Joey Logano, Chase Elliott
FIRST ONE OUT: William Byron
DARK HORSE: Kyle Larson
DON'T BE SURPRISED IF: Truex closes out the legacy of the No. 78 Toyota by winning the race and the championship.

HOMESTEAD

THREE THINGS TO WATCH

1. Chess match

Look at the Championship Round at Homestead-Miami Speedway as more of a chess match than an auto race. The four eligible drivers are Kyle Busch, Martin Truex Jr., Kevin Harvick and Joey Logano. They will race heads-up for the Cup Series title. The highest finishing driver in this group will be crowned champion. Since the knockout playoffs started in 2014, the champion has won the race; likely again Sunday.

2. Three amigos

The "Big 3" made it through to the final dance. Busch, Truex and Harvick scored a combined 20 wins in the 35 races so far this season. Busch and Harvick are tied for most wins with eight each. Truex won four times, left several victories on the table and was taken out on the last lap as the leader twice during the playoffs. This will be the last run for the No. 78 Toyota, which is closing shop after Homestead.

3. No representation

For the second year in a row, Chevrolet does not have a driver in the Championship Round. Chevy's last hope was Chase Elliott, who knocked himself out of contention at Phoenix when he was caught speeding on pit road. The Ford banner will be held by Harvick and Logano, while Toyota has Busch and Truex in the fight. "It's an unbelievable group," Truex said of his team. "One last Martin Truex Jr. hopes to take the No. 78 Toyota to one last victory at Homestead.

PHOENIX

THREE THINGS WE LEARNED

1. 'Big 3' lives!

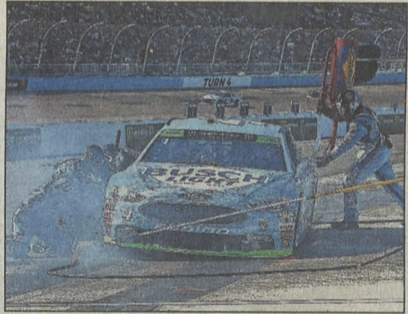

Kevin Harvick, Kyle Busch and Martin Truex Jr. were labeled the "Big 3" near midseason, and they stayed true to their nickname by qualifying for the Championship Round. Busch won at Phoenix, Harvick was fifth and Truex got through thanks to Harvick's 40-point penalty from Texas.

2. Billy the Kid

William Byron, who drives No. 24 Chevy this season, earned Cup Series Rookie of the Year honors. "There's been a lot of things to learn — how I've improved those things or how people have helped me improve those things ... looking forward to next year," he said.

3. Playoff pain

Tony Stewart felt the most NASCAR playoff pain when three of his four cars

Kevin Harvick, who was penalized 40 points last week, is gassed up and ready for the Championship Round.

[AP/RICK SCUTEN]

failed to make the Championship Round. Stewart-Haas Racing drivers Kurt Busch, Aric Almirola and Clint Bowyer were all stumped in the Round of 8. "(My luck) just hasn't been very good," Bowyer said.

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

Will one of the Final Four win at Homestead yet again?

Since going to the current knockout system in 2014, that's what has happened, so you tend to think it's no accident. Chase Elliott is obviously capable, as is Kurt Busch, Ryan Blaney and a few others, including Denny Hamlin, who desperately wants to avoid a winless year. But assuming no one wants to be the guy who makes a mistake and dumps one of the Final Four in the late stages, let's assume the streak continues. The hunch here is Martin Truex Jr., by the way.

Really? Truex can give Furniture Row a going-away championship?

Of course he can, and it would be among the most bittersweet moments in NASCAR history. It would be great to see a guy like team owner Barney Visser rewarded for his devotion, but it'd also remind everyone that a championship team is folding because a championship team can't afford to race anymore due to lack of funding. Very odd stuff for the casual fan to digest.

Emmaus will get its rematch vs. Freedom

BY STEVEN ALTHOUSE
Special to the Press

The last time the Emmaus Green Hornets played the Freedom Patriots it featured a classic comeback. This time it will feature a championship.

The two schools will battle for the District 11 Class 6A championship at 7 p.m. in Northampton on Nov. 16. The winner will claim their first ever district title.

"It means everything," said coach Harold Fairclough of this game. "It's a position this school has never been in and this is where you want to be ... This is an opportunity for us to leave a mark for the program, The kids understand that."

On Oct. 12 the Pates and Green Hornets played a game long to be remembered. The Green Hornets outplayed the Bethlehem boys and led 24-9 late in the fourth quarter. But Freedom could not accept its defeat, and stormed back to score 15 points in 90 seconds and then won on a two-point conversion in overtime. EHS coach Harold Fairclough said Emmaus did not lose the game so much as Freedom won it.

"It stings, but you can't get too hung up on it," the coach said of the loss. "... Freedom made the plays when they had to. They executed down the stretch."

After a regular season with just one loss, Freedom defeated rival Liberty in its quarterfinal playoff game. Then coach Jason Roeder's squad took care of perennial powerhouse Parkland 35-21 in the semifinal. The Patriots played a solid football game and beat the Trojans in the pits, something few teams accomplish. Freedom also set the game's pace offensively and distributed plenty of hard hits defensively, resulting in four Parkland fumbles.

The Patriots have many options on offense. They are led by quarterback Jared Jenkins, who has a superb touchdown-to-interception ratio and is a leader. Part of the reason Jenkins has been so effective this season is that he's spent most of the season upright, as his offensive line has usually given him good protection. Against Parkland, Jenkins threw three touchdown passes. His deep threat is wide receiver Rontay Dunbar, who burned Parkland on two long touchdown catches in the playoff (Dunbar was injured late in the game). Gabe Caton and Vince Reph are two other Freedom receiving threats.

Freedom has two outstanding running backs in Matty Russin and Jalen Stewart. Individually they are good, together they are great. Russin ran over, around and through Parkland defenders in the playoff, gaining 112 yards on nine carries. Most of those yards came on one beautiful play - an 87-yard touchdown. He's been a stud all season, averaging 8.5 yard each time he carries the pill. Stewart also gave the Trojans fits, acquiring 105 yards on 19 carries. During the 2018 campaign, he's averaged nearly five yards a pop.

In assessing the Patriots' offense, Fairclough said his team will not focus on "taking something away," so much as playing solid, team-oriented defense. His defenders "will need to tackle well" and "fly to the ball with a lot of energy."

Defensively the Patriots are hitters. They play good team defense and their linebacker fill gaps. Leading the hitting party is linebacker Tristian Wheeler, the Patriots' top defender. Two other linebackers, Jakub Szemiako and Darryl Shands, also like contact. The defensive line features the tough John Dentith. The Freedom secondary includes free safety Reph.

"They play an aggressive defensive scheme," Fairclough said. Their "3-3 stack scheme" puts a lot of pressure on the offensive line and ballhandlers. The coach noted they can play so aggressively up front because of their secondary.

"They cover so well back there," he said. "... They just don't make many mistakes."

With such evenly matched talent and great coaching, this game will most likely be decided by team that does their jobs better.

"Emotion is gone usually after the first few plays," Fairclough said. "... We have to stay focused."

forcing two more Trojan fumbles and not allowing Parkland closer than 23 yards from pay dirt on its final three possessions.

The Patriots piled up 468 total yards in the game, including 275 on the ground as Russin and Jalen Stewart (20 carries, 102 yards) both ran for over 100 yards. Jenkins threw for 193 yards, completing eight of 17 attempts. He also ran for 55 yards.

Freedom, which set a single-season school record for wins Saturday, moves on to face Emmaus in this week's district title game. Neither team has won a district title in school history.

The Patriots (11-1) beat Emmaus 32-31 on Oct. 12 thanks to a pair of touchdowns in the final two minutes of the game, a win that helped them earn the top seed in districts.

The No. 2 seed Hornets (11-1) feature a pair of third-year senior running backs in Lubens Myers (151 carries, 1,056 yards, 11 TDs) and Harvard-bound Sone Ntoh, who ran for 1,110 yards last season but missed some time with injury this year. He's got 652 yards and 10 rushing touchdowns as a senior.

Former Whitehall quarterback Ethan Parvel leads the Hornet offense. He's completed 105 of 171 passes this year for 1,627 yards with 27 touchdowns. He's got capable receivers in Deonte Castro (43 receptions, 713 yards, 10 TDs) and Izaiah McPherson (28 catches, 478 yards, 6 TDs).

It will mark the Hornets' first ever appearance in a district title game, while its familiar territory for the three-time district finalist Patriots, who had this date circled on their calendars since all year.

"It's been in the back of my mind," said Jenkins. "We try to take it week by week but we all know the end goal is to get that gold medal and that's what we're going to try and go do."

Pete's Top-10: More titles on the line this weekend

BY PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

With district titles handed out last week in various District 11 sub classifications, this weekend presents the showdowns that really count.

Freedom and Emmaus square off in must-see TV at Northampton Friday night and Bethlehem Catholic and Saucon Valley tango yet again at Nazareth on Saturday. With Becahi coming in as favorites over the Panthers, Friday's 6A championship should be one for the memory books between two teams that have played the best football all year.

It's only fitting that a gold medal is on the line. Check out the dwindling picks below to see who comes out of this weekend as champions.

the mercy rule at half-time. Becahi scored five of its six TDs on the ground over Pottsville, the other coming from a 45-yard pick six by Domenico Italiani. That blueprint sets up well for what Becahi hopes to do against Saucon in Saturday's final.

The Hawks ran for 299 yards against Pottsville and 327 yards in their opening round win over Blue Mountain and have created five turnovers over the past two weeks.

If Becahi can control the line of scrimmage with their bigger bodies up front and run effectively, as well as win the turnover battle, their fifth district title in six years will be sitting in the trophy case.

Saucon's approach to Saturday's contest might be the same. Run the ball and stop Becahi's rushing attack will be the keys for the Panthers. Running back Ian Csicsek ran 37 times for 260 yards and five touchdowns in last week's 42-21 win over Northwestern. The Panthers ran for 429 yards last week, as both teams will rely heavily on their ground game to dictate the script.

"As much as the game has changed, it's stayed the same," Henrich said. "You got to be able to run the football. We have two really good backs and a good offensive line. It's no secret what we do and when you get into these type of weather elements later in the year, you got to be able to run and stop the run."

Twins Evelyn and Bradyn Gould, dressed in Liberty HS Grenadier Band costumes made by their grandmother, to go trick or treating on Halloween. Their mother, Katie DeLong Gould, says the buttons come from old Grenadier uniforms and the plaid skirt was made from an old robe.

Future Grenadiers

Gould family members are devoted fans of the Liberty HS Grenadier Band. It's little wonder, given that Katie DeLong Gould and her sisters-in-law Amy Gould Swanson and Alyson Gould Brader, were all majorettes in the band.

Katie DeLong Gould even made a trip to England and Scotland with the Grenadiers in her freshman year at Liberty during the 1995-96 school year. So, it follows that her twins, Evelyn and Bradyn, have made the Grenadiers their favorite marching band as well.

This past Halloween the twins donned costumes made by their grandmother, Evelyn as a Grenadier majorette and Braden as a Grenadier band member, to go trick or treating.

Katie Gould says the entire Hanover Township family enjoys watching the band perform anywhere they go. Evelyn "loves watching the majorettes" and Bradyn "especially likes the horns and bagpipes."

"It's 'Liberty Forever' in the Gould Family," Katie adds.

No One To Thank?

We often equate success with wisdom—but Jesus told of a wealthy, successful farmer who was a fool! Why did Jesus call him a fool? Because he failed to acknowledge that God had given him that which he possessed (Luke 12:15-21). A "self-made man" does not feel the need to express gratitude or appreciation to anyone other than himself since, in his foolish conceit and pride, he is blinded to the truth that his achievements and accumulated riches are directly attributable to God and others in his life.

An old miser once grumbled, "I do not have to thank anyone for anything I have! Everything I have I got the HARD way—by the sweat of my own brow!" His neighbor responded, "But who gave you the sweat?" The old miser hung his head in guilty silence. He could not ignore the fact that God had given the "sweat"—the strength to work hard and gain material wealth.

If the successful but foolish farmer had just taken a moment to think—He would have thanked! Who made the seeds that he planted? God. Who made the ground that "brought forth plentifully" (Luke 12:16)? God. Who gave the rain and sunshine? God. Yes, this man was a fool to think he alone was responsible for his success. No wonder the Bible says, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God..." (Psalm 53:1)

What about you, reader friend? Have you thought of all God has done for you? For what will you thank Him this Thanksgiving?

Healing and humanity

"Charles F. Stonewall: Between Silence and Light" explores the emotional aftermath of personal trauma captured through the camera lens, in an exhibition through Dec. 15, Ronald K. De Long Gallery, Penn State Lehigh Valley, Center Valley.

Each photograph, shot with models, some with acting experience, reflects emotions of sadness, hurt and betrayal experienced by people who had been severely traumatized. The powerful works provide a face for the anonymous victims.

Their stories were collected by Stonewall from staff members of shelters where casualties of sexual assault, psychological abuse or domestic violence sought refuge.

"When I Call You Sis or Bro, it is Not Meant Lightly" (2007-2018, photograph, 35 in. x 30 1/2 in.) features a pensive young woman sitting behind a flimsy kitchen screen door that leaves her feeling betrayed and vulnerable.

Another work, "One of Us" (2008-2018, photograph, 23 in. x 30 in.) illustrates the grief of an elderly woman as she wraps a blue robe around her protectively. Many of Stonewall's subjects are wrapped in robes or blankets in this fashion.

"I think artists are brave people and they can represent other people to help become a voice for them," says Stonewall.

"Artists are really activists. They can become activists.

There's a history of that." He cites Stevie Wonder as the artist who supported the movement to honor the birth date of Martin Luther King, Jr. with a national holiday.

"Hope for Wounded Hearts" (2018, photograph, 35 in. x 27 in.) portrays an anguished young man prone on a wooden floor. The calming hand of an older woman touches his upper arm. The backstory for this work, explains Stonewall, happened when he was in graduate school.

"I'm in church and the minister had just finished this wonderful sermon," he relates. "The choir is swaying and humming."

Stonewall said he noticed a group of well-dressed elderly women "with their fancy hats" See HEALING on Page B2

"Playing with Color" explores the surreal through Yvette Hendler's infrared photography and color manipulation in an exhibition through Dec. 2, with an artist's reception, 6 - 8 p.m. Nov. 16, Civic Theatre 514 Gallery, Allentown.

The exhibition, curated by Deborah Rabinsky, features dreamlike landscapes, blossoms, and the human figure.

"We are surrounded by so much reality these days that we just can't escape it. So rather than reflect back the reality that is readily available, I present a surrealistic view through my art," states Hendler.

The self-taught artist has been working for six years on the work in the exhibition. Although based in New Jersey, Hendler has developed strong ties to the Lehigh Valley arts community.

Hendler captures a surreal looking landscape through the IR camera lens, then finishes the converted image with Adobe Photoshop and similar software.

Slightly Stoopid smart in managing

BY CAMILLE CAPRIGLIONE
Special to The Press

Slightly Stoopid, an eclectic band founded in 1994, makes its Penn's Peak debut at 7 p.m. Nov. 17.

"Most of the guys still live in the San Diego area," says drummer Ryan "Rymo" Moran, who has been with the band since 2003, says in a phone interview. "But we have a few band members who live in the Northeast, one in Connecticut and one in Boston. So, we're kind of bi-coastal at this point."

Of comparing the band's ninth studio album, "Everyday Life, Everyday People," released in July 2018, to its previous recordings, Moran says, "They all have a similar vein because it's us. Every album truly is a snapshot of time, in a way, so the lyrics tend to capture wherever the writers are in that moment. Of course, there's going to be some variation."

The band collaborates with other musicians to supplement its sound. The latest album includes Ali Campbell from UB40, Chali 2na from Jurassic 5, G-Love and Special Sauce, Yellowman and Sly (Dunbar) of Sly and Robbie, "plus, Don Carlos, an unofficial eighth member of the band," says Moran.

"The thing that separates us from some other bands is that we've always been a grassroots, DIY type of band. We've never really been on a major label or had any major financial support. It's always been sort of home-grown," Moran says.

The band created its own label, Stoopid Records, and maintains artistic control.

"Creatively, we can do whatever we want," says Moran. "We've kept our own formula and kept everything in-house in terms of writing and creating music. We can put a record out that we're proud of, and we own the masters and the rights to the music, as opposed to having to answer to a record label and do what they want to do and then forfeit some of those publishing rights.

"Our whole business is built on the newer model of the industry, being on the road and putting music out that we created ourselves. Staying true to what we want to do. We've never had that huge multimillion album-selling thing, but we've also never stopped and never had to change.

"We base our business on the Grateful Dead, the Dave Matthews, the Widespread Panic [type-bands] and those bands that are more about longevity than a quick flash in the pan."

As a testament to the band's popularity, Slightly Stoopid's fans sometimes travel hundreds of miles to attend the group's concerts: "We've had fans [see us in] Florida and follow us to Maine."

Slightly Stoopid supports the pediatric cancer organizations Grind for Life and the Sheckler Foundation. The band teamed with legendary skateboarder Danny Way for a limited-edition custom skate deck and CD fundraising project. In 2017, another of the band's fundraisers helped the Global Brightlight Foundation, a charitable organization that provides third-world communities with affordable energy solutions and solar power.

The band's album covers are veritable works of art, depicting unique or quirky themes. "This latest [cover] art is by a friend of ours from the East Coast, Jay Alders," says Moran.

Moran says the band members are products of their environment. They enjoy the beach, surfing, skateboarding and music, and they use those things as forms of escape. Their laid-back, peace-loving vibe easily translates to concerts.

"We have some of the best fans a band could hope for," says Moran. "We want people to come out and party and have some fun and be safe and have a good time. That's what it's all about."

"We don't have all the answers to save the world. We don't want to be considered a political band, by any means. We want our shows to be an escape from that."

With so much tension and political separation today, plus media and information overload, Slightly Stoopid wants its shows to be a panacea. "Turn it off for a couple of hours, let it all go. Enjoy the moment," Moran says.

The name of the album refers to the band itself. "People have this notion of music success [that means] you're on a pedestal, your life is perfect, you're married to a super nearby and their reaction to a muscular, 20-year-old man who was "filthy" and wearing a dirty shirt when he entered the church sanctuary.

"These elderly ladies at the side got up and they surrounded him," Stonewall recalls. "This guy, who was as muscular as he was, and as dirty as he was, he cried like a baby," adds Stonewall, who was moved by the suffering and compassion he had witnessed.

To make the exhibit an audio and visual experience, iPads with headphones provide audio recordings created by sound designer Kristian Derek Ball. These feature poems about suffering and recovery written by Justice Davis, Beth Harris, Corey Riotz and Justina Trotter.

Stonewall, born in Easton, began his career as a professional photographer at Pennsylvania Power and Light, Allentown, then worked as an educational consultant and photographer at the Sprint World Headquarters, Overland Park, Kan.

His work has been presented at a private reception at the Louvre Museum, Paris, and he held African-American art exhibitions in Easton during the early 1980s.

Stonewall received a BFA from the Kansas City Art Institute and an MA from the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Says Stonewall, "In a spiritual sense, 'Between Silence and Light' was chosen as a metaphor to reflect the restored soul yet to be revealed."

Finding joy in a drawer

This morning I was infused with a rare energy to clean some of the neglected corners in my house.

I was feeling good as I cleaned in crevices and took away some of the clutter.

Then "feeling good" turned to absolute joy when I opened a drawer and found some treasured friends in a long-forgotten file.

The "friends" were in the form of favorite recipes from cherished friends and family.

I have recipes all over the place — in two filing cabinets and in dozens of recipe books. But these old recipes were so special that I was filled with joy to find them again.

It was a 50-year-old newspaper clipping that created that joy as it took me down memory lane.

Smiling at me from the yellowed page was a beloved woman my daughters called Mama Molnar. Catherine wasn't related to us by blood — just by heart strings.

There are a few special people that when we meet there is an immediate strong bond. That's the way it was with Catherine and me when I was just a young newspaper reporter.

I had stopped to admire her husband's stunning flower and vegetable garden.

Louis Molnar was immediately welcoming when I asked about the kohlrabies he grew. I had never heard of it before then.

He brought me in the house to meet his wife, Catherine, who insisted I try a tomato sandwich made with their heirloom blooms.

That was the beginning of a true, long friendship that continued for decades. When I had my two daughters, Mama Molnar, as they called her, surrounded them with bushels of love and played an important part in their lives.

As far as we were all concerned, Catherine was family, a family we cherished until she passed away.

How nice it was to see her smiling face beaming at me again, even if it was through an old recipe from a 50-year-old newspaper.

The newspaper article also featured her recipe for Hungarian Chicken Paprikash, a dish I love so much.

She shared her recipe with me, and I made it dozens of times through the years, even though it was time-consuming.

But my version of her Chicken Paprikash couldn't come close to hers. Any "store-bought chicken" couldn't taste the same as Catherine's "real thing."

To get the chicken for her recipe, we had to travel an hour from her home in Kulpmont to Jim Thorpe so she could buy a freshly killed chicken raised by a farmer there.

"If we don't have a fresh chicken, it's not the same," she said.

Through the years I adapted the recipe to my lifestyle, dumbing down Catherine's recipe that took all day to make.

Yet even with my dumbed-down version, it always got rave reviews when I made it for company.

As I get older I take more and more shortcuts in my cooking. Old time-consuming recipes get pushed aside, shoved into a file that is soon forgotten.

Some of the recipes in that newly found file are absolutely priceless.

For decades I had wished I had my mother's recipe for what was called depression cake. It was my favorite dessert growing up. But Mom never wrote down her recipes, and whenever I attempted to duplicate depression cake I couldn't do it.

I was flooded with more joy when I found the yellowed family recipe in that forgotten file. It was sent to me decades ago by my sister Cindy, who did a good job of getting mom to tell her how to make what she called "Rich Man, Poor Man Cake," better known as depression cake.

The cake was made with one cup of lard, not with margarine or shortening. During the Depression and the lean years that followed, lard was easier to come by.

The forgotten file was definitely a treasure trove of favorite recipes from long ago. It was also a springboard for my mind to remember good times with good people.

If you're serious about cleaning out a shelf, drawer or closet that contains photos from the past, don't plan on making much progress once you find photos of those who own a chunk of your heart.

Catherine's photo ended my cleaning spree, but it was worth it when I could spend time remembering the past and those who were dear to me.

I'm not what they call "a nagger" because I know nagging someone to get something done is seldom productive. But every now and then I drop a gentle hint to my husband about his need to clean out his closet. It holds nothing but relics from the past that haven't been touched for decades and never will be.

Gentle persuasion doesn't work.

Then, one day out of the blue David announced he was going to clear out that closet. I kept my "I'll believe it when I see it" comment to myself.

After a half-hour he came to show me an exciting find: "Look at these old pictures," he beamed. "Look at my little brother."

I knew that would be the end of David's cleaning.

Few things can command more attention than those photos from long ago.

I was right. After oohing over the photos, David put everything back where he found it.

Well, at least he found his own temporary version of joy in a drawer.

'Tis the season for holiday tipping

Dear Jacquelyn,
The holidays are coming at us quickly and I always get confused about whom I should be tipping who normally does not get tips during the year. Also, how much should I be tipping so that I don't look like a Scrooge and at the same time not blow my own holiday budget?

RESPECTFULLY YOURS

By Jacquelyn Youst

Dear Reader,
Good for you: planning early.

Planning your holiday budget early to include tipping won't leave you scrounging for money at the very last moment. As the end-of-year tipping season approaches, figuring out who to tip and how much can be tricky. You will want to include those who provide outstanding, loyal service, and help you throughout the year.

There is quite a long list of individuals who would be considered customary to tip. When determining who to tip, start with people who help you care for your family, yourself, and your home.

Determining how much to tip depends on several factors, including how long you've used someone's services, how important the service is to your life and where you live.

Tipping tends to be higher in larger cities. It is also important to try, if possible, to tip early in the month so that the recipient can use it for the holidays.

Providing non-monetary gifts is also a gracious way to say thank-you. Consider a homemade gift with a handwritten note of thanks.

The following are my suggestions:

Babysitters — Tip the average amount of what you normally pay them for one evening's care.

Housecleaner — Tip one week's pay.

Hairdresser-Barber — Tip should equal the average amount you spend in one visit.

Caregiver — One week to one month's salary.

Manicurist — Tip the cost of one session.

Pet walker-Groomer — Tip up to one week's pay.

Personal trainer — Tip up to the cost of one session.

Yard-garden worker — Suggested amount $20-$50.

After-school dance instructor, little league coach, art teacher — $25.

Show appreciation to a teacher with a small gift. Avoid cash.

The point of tipping is to show our gratitude. "Gratuity" comes from the Latin root-gratus, meaning grateful.

Make sure to say "Merry Christmas" or "Happy Holidays" and always accompany gifts and tips with a handwritten note of appreciation.

Respectfully Yours,
Jacquelyn

iPhones, tablets, and restaurants

Q. I have become one of those parents I never thought I would be. On those rare occasions when my husband and I go out for dinner, we have started to bring along our iPhones and tablets to keep our children, three- and five-years-old, occupied so that we can have adult talk, and so they don't get bored. How can I stop this without them having a meltdown in the restaurant?

THE FAMILY PROJECT

By Carole Gorney

"We have to start by saying, 'It's OK,'" panelist Kristy Bernard said. "Times are changing, and technology is changing how parents raise children today."

Panelist Mike Daniels said, "Going out to eat involves things that just aren't fun for kids. I'd rather have my kids on an iPhone than running around the restaurant."

Noting that the parent was obviously uncomfortable with her children using iPhones at a restaurant table, panelist Pam Wallace asked whether the discomfort was with the technology or how it is being used.

Daniels asked if the parent would be more comfortable if her children were doing something educational with the technology.

Wallace and several other panelists suggested using the iPhones or iPads to teach something, such as number or letters, or bringing along interactive toys.

Panelist Denise Continenza talked about setting guidelines, for example, using computers until dinner is served, but not during eating.

The need for parents to give good examples of responsible use of technology was raised by panelist Wanda Mercado-Arroyo. She warned against turning electronics into pacifiers.

Daniels suggested, "Start by going somewhere for ice cream or a piece of pie only for about 20 minutes. Tell the children what you are going to do, but before going in, say, 'By the way, we need to leave the iPhones in the car.'" If they fuss, the parents cancel the treat.

Daniels said repeating this successfully a few times and increasing the time involved will show the children they can do without the devices.

Bernard said, "It's See FAMILY on Page B5

Surprise: Jumping Frenchmen of Maine

Q. A friend of mine was diagnosed with Jumping Frenchmen of Maine. Have you ever heard of this?

HEALTHY GEEZER

By Fred Cicetti
fred@healthygeezers.com

Not until now. Jumping Frenchmen of Maine is a rare, unexplained disorder that produces an extreme startle reaction to a sudden noise or sight.

Jumping Frenchmen of Maine was first identified during the late 1800s in Maine and the Canadian province of Quebec. It was discovered among an isolated population of French-Canadian lumberjacks. Since the discovery, the extreme startle reaction has been found in other societies in many parts of the world.

Jumping Frenchmen of Maine is one of almost 7,000 rare diseases. In the United States, a disease is classified as rare if fewer than 200,000 people have it. About 25 million people in the United States have a rare or orphan disease.

Some familiar orphan diseases are cystic fibrosis, Lou Gehrig's disease and Tourette's syndrome.

In 1983, Congress passed the Orphan Drug Act (ODA), which created financial incentives for drug and biologics manufacturers, including tax credits for costs of clinical research, government grant-funding, assistance for clinical research, and seven-year periods of exclusive marketing. At the same time, federal programs began encouraging product development, as well as clinical research for products targeting rare diseases.

Before Congress enacted the ODA, only 38 drugs were approved in the U.S. specifically to treat orphan diseases. From the passage of the ODA until May 2010, the FDA approved 353 orphan drugs and granted orphan designations to 2,116 compounds. As of 2010, 200 of the roughly 7,000 officially designated orphan diseases have become treatable.

An excellent source of assistance for these diseases is the National Organization for Rare Disorders (NORD), a 501(c)(3) organization. NORD is a patient-advocacy organization dedicated to individuals with rare diseases and the organizations that serve them.

NORD, along with its more than 280 patient organization members, is committed to the iden-

OK for kids to play with tech in restaurants, but if you don't want them to use computers, and you want adult talk, then don't bring the children with you. At three and five, they are not going to sit quietly."

Daniels said that going out to dinner with children is not a date night or parents' dinner. "It's family night, and the parents should be engaging their children."

Regardless of whether electronics or coloring books or interactive toys are used, the parents still need to converse with their children about things they understand and in which they are interested.

"If parents aren't engaging their children at dinner time, they are missing out on an opportunity to teach them socialization skills," panelist Chad Stefanyak said.

Hendler's "Be Fabulous Wherever" (2018-2018, digital C-Print, 5 in. x 7 in.) features a woman clad in a transparent lavender nightgown with straight arms partly spread downward on each side. She appears moth-like while walking away from the camera toward the dark monochromatic woods. Her hands and feet are almost the color of a light-skinned person.

The photographer tweaked some of the color back to "normal" to create what she calls an "anchor" for the work. She describes "anchor" as a device that provides people with something they can relate to, which draws them into rest of the image.

Says Hendler, "There is beauty everywhere in ordinary things with a surreal quality where anything is possible. Infrared has even made its way into my figure and form artwork as well.

"I found that by adding the human element combined with colors that were unexpected, I could tell different or more dramatic stories."

Each of the 28 images were photographed with a standard or super infrared converted camera. Hendler hopes to upgrade to a hyper-color converted camera, which provides a wider range of options.

Gypsy jazz goes 'Upstairs'

BY GEORGE VANDOREN
Special to The Press

The Hot Club of Philadelphia presents its contemporary take on gypsy jazz, 7:30 p.m. Nov. 16, in the "Jazz Upstairs" series, Rodale Community Room, Miller Symphony Hall, Allentown.

"I really rediscovered gypsy jazz around 2000," said Hot Club of Philadelphia founder and guitarist Barry Wahrhaftig. "I saw a show at Lincoln Center and then another player doing that style."

"I was astounded at the whole 'le pompe' the sound," he says, referring to the pumping sound of the two guitars and bass that serves as the rhythmic backbone of the gypsy jazz style, pioneered by the Hot Club of France, which featured jazz legends guitarist Django Reinhardt and violinist Stephane Grappelli.

"Django and Stephane were jamming on American hot jazz. In many respects, they were trying to get the sound of Joe Venuti and Eddie Lange. It was their gypsy French way of playing American hot jazz." Through the 1920s and early 1930s, violinist Venuti and guitarist Lang were featured soloists on numerous recordings.

In keeping with the gypsy jazz tradition, the Hot Club of Philadelphia has no drums, piano or brass. Members include Joseph Arnold, violin; John Catalano, rhythm guitar; Jim Stager, bass, and Phyllis Chapell, vocals. Wahrhaftig plays lead guitar and sometimes sings, as well.

Arnold, a Hot Club member for more than 10 years, has a BA in jazz studies from Carnegie Mellon. In addition to being a top-shelf violinist, he is a composer, arranger and leader of the Joseph Arnold Orchestra.

He also plays with the Birmingham Six, an Irish rock band, and teaches at the Philadelphia School for the Alexander Technique.

Catalano is a self-taught guitarist who studied classical guitar with Stafford Hontz Koster. He is active as a performer and teaches at the Catalano Conservatory at the Grace Milliman Pollock Performing Arts Center, Camp Hill.

Chapell is a songwriter and vocalist who sings in 13 languages. She performs as a soloist and with her ensemble Phyllis Chapell & Siora. For the "Jazz Upstairs" concert, she'll sing in French. "La Foule," made famous by Edith Piaf.

Stager has been with the Hot Club since its inception. He plays bass and does vocals. He is a native Philadelphian who has played with the bands Huffamoose and The World Takes.

Wahrhaftig does the arrangements for the group. He studied with Howard Alden, Tal Farlow and Stephane Wrembel, who composed "Bistro Fada" for Woody Allen's film, "Midnight in Paris."

Of "Bistro Fada," Wahrhaftig says, "It's a waltz. People love it. We're transported [to the past] and so is the audience. A nice escape in any year."

Hot Club of Philadelphia is working on a followup to its last CD, "Gypsy Roots." Says Wahrhaftig, "It will include one of Joseph Arnold's original songs, a little bit of Americana, maybe some Philly soul jazz, and a piece we play a lot that morphs from Stephen Foster's 'Hard Times' to 'Ashokan Farewell.'"

Asked about the "Jazz Upstairs" performance, Wahrhaftig says, "We do at least one Edith Piaf piece, probably a Beatles' song, maybe a Jimmy Hendricks' song. The more diverse it is the better. I like to keep it interesting. There will be some songs from our latest CD, 'Gypsy Roots.'"

"We have fun. We kid around with the audience. It's not stuffy. People need to know they can relax and have fun. We let them know that right away," Wahrhaftig says.
