Soldiers Help Rush Vital War Supplies To Yank Air Bases

When Berlin brazes from incendiary bombs loosed by American war planes. T. Sgt. Franklin H. Moser, son of Morris Moser, 119 East Elizabeth Avenue; and Cpl. William A. Daneels, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Daneels, R. D. 3, Easton, share the credit for another blow toward victory.

Assigned to the important Air Service Command chemical depot in England, they are helping to rush vital supplies of fire-spreading weapons to the combat air forces.

Cpl. Daneels was employed as a machinist apprentice for the Sheridan Machine Company of Easton before joining the Army in March, 1941. Sgt. Moser was employed by Suter's Dairy before entering the service in March, 1941.
