

Rahmer, Charles

NAVY ENLISTEE HONORED BY FELLOW OFFICERS

Motorcycle Officer Charles
Rahmer Given Wallet, Cash on Eve of Departure.

Admiral
Motorcycle Officer Charles Rahmer, who leaves on Tuesday for Philadelphia to join Uncle Sam's naval forces, was today the recipient of a handsome leather wallet, together with crisp U. S. currency, the gift of members of the police department.

"Charley" called at police headquarters this afternoon to bid farewell to his fellow officers "for the duration," and was surprised by the number of bluecoats who assembled in the recreation room.

Following a brief talk in which he complimented Rahmer on his record of service as a member of the police department, and extended best wishes of the department in his new venture, Chief of Police Ernest Stocker made the presentation.

A similar wallet, also containing cash, will be sent to John Pulley, at present in a naval school at Norfolk. He has been in the service for the past several weeks.

Both of the officers had been members of the shift captained by Harry Taylor.
