

CITY Zoners nix bank at 1 West Broad St.

By BERNIE O'HARE Special to the Bethlehem Press

Concerns about traffic and pedestrian safety prompted Bethlehem's Zoning Hearing Board to deny a drive-through bank branch at the former Bank of America building, located at 1 West Broad St. This unanimous decision followed a Feb. 27 hearing in which zoners heard from engineers who acknowledged that they had not yet conducted any traffic or pedestrian studies.

The drive-through would have replaced an old ice skating rink facing Broad Street, and would exit onto New Street. Bethlehem's new zoning ordinance permits bank drive-throughs, but they must exit onto alleyways or low-traffic streets.

Assistant Planning Director Tracy Samuelson, whose department wrote Bethlehem's new zoning ordinance, dismissed testimony from realtor Phillip Schenkel

Council denies diocese request

Bethlehem City Council denied permission Feb. 20 for the Diocese of Allentown to tear down a home in the Mount Airy Historic District. The home at 1304 Spring St. was owned by the gardener for former Bethlehem Steel President Eugene Grace and was built around the turn of the 20th Cen-tury. The Diocese of Allentown currently owns the home and repairs are estimated to cost $230,000.

BETHLEHEM

Several residents from the Mount Airy Historic District came to City Hall to show their support for the building, including Mount Airy Historic District Association President Mary Toulouse.

Toulouse said that the Mount Airy Historic District Association felt that Holy Family Manor, which is run by the Diocese of Allentown, is neglecting the home on Spring Street.

"Like any other member of the community, Holy Family Manor should bear the responsibility of properly maintaining the properties," Toulouse said. "Holy Family Manor has at least four of our Westside historic buildings. They are the caretakers of a large part of our community's heritage and allowing them to tear down one building would be a terrible precedent.

According to Joseph Leeson, attorney for the Diocese of Allentown, Bethlehem's Historic Officer said "there would be no nega-

BASD Board OKs MS building proposal

By DEB BOYLAN Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Bethlehem Area School Board members voted unanimously Feb. 25 to move ahead with plans to explore construction of a new Nitschmann MS building. The project will go into the design phase overseen by D'Huy Engineering Inc.

Total cost for a new Nitschmann is expected to be $53.7 million. D'Huy Engineering, Inc. will receive a fee of 3.5 percent of the construction cost, which is $48 million. This fee is based on industry-wide standards. D'Huy's services will encompass pre-design, design, bidding and closeout phase project management. The $53.7 million figure includes added expenses such as financing and contingency costs.

Board member Irene Follweiler clarified concerns that were brought to her attention regarding the process used in that a drive-through would make the building more attractive to a bank. She testified that it had operated as a bank at that location without a drivethrough for 40 years. She added that this proposed use would be contrary to a "pedestrian friendly" atmosphere being encouraged in the commercial business district.

Diversified Capital -Bethlehem, LLC, the building's owner, had previously sought approval from the planning commission and ran into the same obstacles there, Samuelson told zoners. The owner was represented by Terry Faul, whose firm is a tenant. He had argued that traffic and pedestrian studies would be done as part of the PennDOT approval process, and that no other location was feasible for a drive-through.

In other business, zoners approved the demolition of a vacant building at 1832 W. North St. so that the Rosemont Fire Company could construct a parking lot for its private social club. Its president, George Warren, told zoners that a parking lot would take traffic

HANOVER TOWNSHIP Feral cat lovers offer their help

Concerns over a proposed "Responsible Pet Ownership" ordinance prompted a small army of cat lovers to visit Hanover Township Supervisors at their Feb. 26 meeting. About 10 area residents, worried that stray dogs and feral cats would be systematically exterminated, were there to seek clemency. But as they were to learn, the ordinance was actually aimed at irresponsible people, not pets.

Liz Jones, of the Sanctuary of Haafsville, and Martha Kahan, of No Nonsense Neutering, told supervisors they'd like to implement a Trap-Neuter-Release (TNR) program for feral cats at no cost to the township. In addition to neutering the cats, they vaccinate them against rabies.

"We'll raise the money," Kahan promised. "We'll write the grants." She told supervisors that at her East Allentown facility, she's neutered more than 20,000 feral cats in the last five years.

Supervisors welcomed the news.

awarding the project management contract to D'Huy. Superintendent Joseph Roy explained that since D'Huy is currently retained as district engineer, as a professional service the district is not required to solicit request for proposals. A separate contract will be drafted between the district and D'Huy for the Nitschmann project.

Typically, when a district undergoes a major construction plan, a project manager is retained. The project manager acts to ensure the best interests of the "owner," in Councilman David DiGiacinto said he supported the preservation of the building, but questioned what the next step would be.

"What happens next?" DiGiacinto asked. "The building still sits there. The building doesn't get fixed."

DiGiacinto proposed a motion to postpone the vote until March 19 so people on both sides of the issue would get more time to meet up and discuss what needs to be done. He eventually pulled his motion after he thought it would not get enough support from the rest of council.

Council's decision to deny the demolition of the Spring Street home was unanimous.

They have no intention of eradicating the township's feral cat population, even though they get numerous complaints weekly. Supervisor John Diacogiannis told Jones and Kahal that the ordinance is aimed at problem residents, like those with 30 feral cats in their backyard.

"We're not going to go after people who are doing it right," he explained.

Supervisors encouraged Jones and Kalal to educate the public concerning the benefits of TNR, which will gradually reduces a feral cat population. The Feral Cat Coalition estimates there are 60 million feral cats in the United States.

Township Manager Jay Finnigan explained the township simply lacks the resources to target strays. In his six years as manager, he can recall only one incident in which the township ever made an effort to remove a cat from someone's home. A home health care worker brought a stray cat into a residence, and the cat began attacking him. The township's animal control officer responded, but the cat began attacking him too. This continued until a third person opened the door, and the cat bolted.

Finnigan also complained that the township has difficulties catching stray dogs because "we have a very slow animal control officer."

It is required by state law to capture stray dogs running at large. According to Finnigan, this has been no problem.

"We've been able to place every single dog we've picked up in the last two years," the manager assured these animal lovers. "But I'm running out of employees."

So who is Hanover's slow animal control officer?

Public Works Director Vince Milite declined to reveal that information.

"I'm not telling you," he said. But as the meeting wore on, it soon became evident – it's Milite. While he attempted to resign his post at the end of the meeting, the supervisors refused to let him go.

A Doubting Christian

Years ago I received a letter stating "I have been a Christian for my entire life (more than sixty years), but I'm finding that I'm doubting my faith and the believability of a Christ who doesn't return." It was signed "A concerned 'doubting Christian, whose faith is lapsing" after asking, "When is something going to happen, or does the world go on ad infinitum?"

pen, or does the world go on ad infinitum?" The whole chapter of 2 Peter 3 deals with this, predicting some will say, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation" (v.4). Peter tells how God had revealed the coming global flood to Noah who believed God and kept faith while he built the ark and preached repentance to an unbelieving world about the coming judgment for a period assumed to be 120 years twice that of the letter writer. God's word proved reliable, "the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished" (v.6). Jesus related this fulfillment of God's word to the certainty of His return, "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be" (Matthew 24:37). We tend to see things from the perspective of a limited lifespan, whereas Peter states, "one day" (v.8).

one day" (v.8). There is a reason why God has delayed judgment and the return of Christ. Peter explains, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise...but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (v.9). In Noah's day, God could have created the ark and sent the flood instantly, but "the longsuffering of God waited" mercifully to give time for people to repent and be saved (1 Peter 3:20). We all should be thankful that He gave us time to be saved! While we "look for" His return, we should win others to Him and heed Peter's warning, "beware lest ye...fall from your own stedfastness" (v.17). Tax Tips from IRS.gov Six Important Facts about Dependents and Exemptions There are some tax rules that affect every person who files a federal income tax return. These rules involve dependents and exemptions. 1.Exemptions reduce taxable income. There are two types of exemptions: personal exemptions and exemptions for dependents. You can deduct $3,800 for each exemption you claim on your 2012 tax return.

2.Personal exemptions. You usually may claim one exemption for yourself on your tax return and one for your spouse if you are married and file a joint return. If you and your spouse file separate returns, you may claim the exemption for your spouse only if he or she had no gross income, is not filing a joint return and was not the dependent of another taxpayer.

3.Exemptions for dependents. Generally, you can claim an exemption for each of your dependents. A dependent is either your qualifying child or qualifying relative. You may not claim your spouse as your dependent.

4.Some people do not qualify as dependents. You generally may not claim a married person as a dependent if they file a joint return with their spouse.

5.Dependents may have to file. Whether they must file a return depends on several factors, including the amount of their gross income, their marital status and any special taxes they owe.

6.Dependents can't claim a personal exemp-tion. If you can claim another person as a dependent on your tax return, that person may not claim a personal exemption on his or her own tax return.

Police said in a release the man long wanted for the stabbing death of 30year-old Jorge Velazquez in that year was discovered, thanks to a crossdepartmental investigation initiated by local Det. Lt. Mark DiLuzio.

Investigators came to believe Francisco Miranda, now 49, was hiding in the Dominican Republic.

Miranda was found, arrested and extradited. He arrived in the U.S. Feb. 22 and is charged with aggravated assault and criminal homicide.

Car break-ins

Colonial Regional Police responded to a number of reported vehicle-break-ins in the same area Feb. 26.

According to police, between 7:45 and 8:15 p.m. six cars parked in lots of South Commerce Way were entered by smashing through windows.

Purses and valuable items were quickly taken from vehicles at Liven Up Health and Fitness, St. Luke's Health and Fitness and Kids Co-Op. A darkcolored SUV was observed in the lots driving without its lights activated just prior to the discovery of the thefts.

Hawks rally to knock off Spartans

By KATIE MCONDALD kmcdonald@tnonline.com

As Bethlehem Catholic guard, Nicole Lacherza, sank the first of two free throws in the final seconds of the District XI Class 3A final against Southern Lehigh on Saturday, a full-blown smile came across Becahi coach Bill Lanscek's face.

It was a long time coming, considering there was no guaranteed Becahi victory until that very moment. In fact, the Hawks trailed for most of the game by as many as nine points, but a true team effort clinched a 50-44 win over the Spartans and a district championship at Easton Area Middle School. Becahi senior center/ forward, Bridget Smith, said, "It was really great, and I just thought finally. after four years, getting a district championship. It was such a good feeling."

For Smith, it was four years in the making. On Saturday, it took four quarters, literally.

"I think in the beginning, we didn't come out and play defense, and once we went to zone, we played really well," said Smith.

At halftime, Coach Lanscek told his team that once they got the lead, the See Hawks on Page A9

Freedom head coach Joe Stellato and the Patriots envisioned Saturday's District 11 4A boys championship game against Parkland differently than how it actually panned out.

The Patriots, who trailed by 12 going into halftime, saw their deficit grow to as much as 22 in the third quarter of their 65-50 defeat to the Trojans over the weekend.

"I don't know what to say," said Stellato. "We just didn't get it tonight. It was their night."

It was obviously disappointing. We all thought we could do this, and we all wanted to do it so bad. It just didn't work out."

And despite coming up short to the Trojans three out of four times this season, including in the LVC tournament semifinals in mid-February, there is still basketball left for the Patriots to Jackson was the lone Patriot in double figures, scoring a game-high 20 points. But as a team, the Patriots struggled to sustain any rhythm offensively until the fourth quarter when they scored eight of the first 10 points to cut Parkland's lead to 11.

"When they got five guys on the floor playing that well what are you doing to do," said Stellato. "You just do the best you can. And when we got into foul trouble, we were really fightto take a one-point lead into ing an uphill battle. So we just came up short on it.'

The seniors cranked out titles at their respective weights in consecutive weeks and will also be joined by Liberty's Jake Gunning (220) and Freedom's Jake Young (170).

Gonzalez (120) pulled out more of a methodical victory over Northampton's Zach Valley this time around, compared to their district championship, as a 3-1 decision was good enough to give Gonzalez the regional crown for the second time in his career.

Kauffman (220) turned a 5-4 decision over Gunning in the district finals to a 12-5 major decision at regionals to give him his first regional title.

Gonzalez finds himself pitted atop the 120-pound bracket in the 3A championships for this weekend and his main goal is to come back home with a state title.

"This is what I've been working for all year and this was just another step in the process," Gonzalez said about winning regionals and advancing to states. "The experience I have now going to Hershey will help me. Winning regionals is a good way to get momentum heading into states and I'm looking to come home with a gold state tournament this weekend. medal.

Gonzalez (33-2) opens with Dalton Macri of Cannon McMillan (41-6) once Thursday afternoon gets under way at the Giant Center.

Should he win, a potential bout with Southeast Regional champ, Ben Ross (41-1) of Pennridge, could be on the horizon.

State playoffs begin on Saturday

By PETER CAR pcar@tnonline.com

Bethlehem may have had a heavy contingent in the boys' basketball playoff scene, but the city came away empty-handed over the weekend when Freedom and Bethlehem Catholic both fell in the 4A and 3A finals.

Freedom was outgunned by Parkland in a 65-50 contest on Saturday night, while Becahi was overwhelmed by Central Catholic 87-61 on Friday.

Both move on to the state playoffs this weekend, but the one team that has had the most experience at the state level of any local team recently will be making an appearance again, as Liberty topped Stroudsburg Saturday afternoon 66-53 in the third place consolation round.

It's the seventh time out of the last eight years the program has reached the state playoffs and the fourth time under head coach Chad Landis' tenure.

After feeling the sting of losing to Parkland 62-59 in the district semifinals, Landis was glad his team was able to put that past them in last week's game against Stroudsburg and extend their season at least another week.

"I think we had to put that loss behind us," Landis said in reference to Parkland. "I was afraid that we wouldn't play well against Stroudsburg, but our guys came out and did their job. It's always a good opportunity to have a chance to go play in states. It'll be a good experience for our guys.'

The Millionaires are a high pressure defensive team that thrive on their intensity to generate points offensively.

Landis expects plenty of pressure on his guards and knows that keeping the ball secure and

'They're a very athletic team that likes to get up and down the court," he said. "We knew we were going to have to travel for games like this and this is exactly why we scheduled tough non-league games this season.

'Now we're going to find out if all those experiences we had are helpful.'

Freedom (17-9) may have lucked out the best out of Parkland (21-7) and Liberty with the brackets, since they don't have Chester (24-3) in their end.

Chester is by far the most talented team this year, as the District One champions are the top seeds.

The Moravian Academy presented the Rupert Holmes musical production of Charles Dickens' final novel "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" March 1, 2 and 3 in the Dyer Auditorium on its Upper School Campus. Jarrod Yuskaukus directed and choreographed the production, which included more than 50 student actors, musicians and crew. Auditions began this past December with rehearsals starting at the start of January.

"Drood" is set in a Victorian style music hall and is told in a narrative third-party style. The fact that Dickens did not complete the novel has often left the ending up to audience participation and interpretation. during my grandfather's youth. The surroundings have changed drastically. What we're familiar with today - neighborhoods, offices and businesses were once fields as far as the eve could see.

A few small farmhouses and barns dotted the landscape. Jacksonville Road was more commonly known as "Chickentown Road" because of the many chicken farmers out that way.

At that time only two buildings sat off Eighth Avenue north of the school. One was Roller-Smith, a manufacturer of circuit boards and other electronics. Durkee would later move into this building, and today the spot is home to Lowe's. The other building, built by a silk company called Schwarzenbach and Huber, was further up the street on the corner of Eaton Avenue.

A small shanty sat close to where 378 exits onto Eighth Avenue coming south. This was the office of the State Police and where one could take the driver's exam.

What's hardest to picture is the absence of the prominent landmark, Martin Tower.

"My dad and I used to go there when it was farmer's fields and pick dandelions," recalls Woody.

As for Nitschmann itself, it was just the main building then: no extensions. Each morning students lined up outside either the "Girls" or "Boys" entrance, located on opposite sides of the school. This practice was left over from an earlier era, as classrooms were coeducational during the 1940s.

Woody still remembers lining up outside where my grandfather 1945-46 school year and played his junior high basketball under Coach Danny Sylvester.

"The ceiling was like a canvas, and so when we had basketball practice, guys would get coins and wing them up and see if they could throw them through it, because it was so old.

In those days, Nitschmann did not have a cafeteria. Bag lunches were the norm, and for a small price students could purchase milk and graham crackers. My grandfather occasionally received a quarter from his parents for this purpose.

"So what we would do," Woody grins, "was on the corner of Sixth Avenue and Union Boulevard there was a tiny mom and pop store. We used to go over there and get a Pepsi Cola and a package of Drake's Yankee Doodles. Ten cents and we had 15 cents in our pock-

Sometimes during lunch my grandfather would run to his home at 69 West Goepp St., eat a quick sandwich, turn around and run back to school.

"I was in good shape then," he laughs.

Nice weather allowed for a variety of outdoor activities during a student's lunch break. One option was to play touch football across the street at the Rose Garden. Those a little more daring could climb to the top of the AM transmitter for WGPA, which was located on Eighth Avenue.

My grandfather remembers playing "war" in the fields behind the school. One side acted as the U.S. and flung grass hand grenades at the "Germans," who retaliated with barrages of their own. After lunch the soldiers filed back into their classroom covered in dirt, much to the chagrin of their teacher.

Some distance behind Nitschmann stood a great big culvert.

"We used to take the cover off and climb down inside and walk around," explains Woody. "But we never followed it to the end."

During winter an area west of the culvert was flooded to create an ice rink. I wonder how many people can still recall skating there on cold afternoons

Many of the things and places mentioned in this article are long gone. An open patch of grass is now a rarity. Soon even Nitschmann will be torn down. However, if you squint your eyes and look hard enough, you can still see the area the way it was when my grandfather was a boy

Dislikes: The main thing that bothers me is when people profess the name of Christ while living a life of sin. Smaller topics that bother me are rap, hip-hop, other music genres that just don't appeal to my ears. I also dislike people bullying others.

Greatest accomplishment (so far): Entering National Honor Society is my greatest achievement yet. During the induction ceremony I felt as if I joined the upper echelons of an academically well-rounded group of people.

Advice for peers: Don't ever hold grudges; it will leave a spiritual hole in your heart unless you forgive and move on. There's not enough people in this world that smile. Keep smiling. Despite all the fun times you had in high school, you need to have the strength to move on in life and overcome any sorrow you'll face after leaving some of your best friends behind. Besides, your college years may be a better chapter of your life. Through many of the people in my life, God metamorphosed my integrity for the better. I believe He can do something awe-inspiring in your life as well. Get involved in after-school activities. My peers should not burden themselves with regrets from the past. They should just move on, accomplish their present goals and not worry too much about the future. Don't compromise your faith in God. If I could summarize the meaning of life in one sentence, I'd say, "Live life to the fullest in a Godly fashion."

Sustaining the inner poet Marilyn Hazelton taps into creative roots at FloreAnt Projects Gallery workshops

By EMILY THIEL Special to The Press

All art forms have a poetry expressed by the artist and the work they create.

With "Sustaining the Soul Through Creative Discovery," Marilyn Hazelton offers inspiration to allow one to tap into his or her creative self by writing poetry.

In a series of four work-shops at FloreAnt Projects Gallery, 215 Main St., Emmaus, Hazelton guides participants through a background of poetic Japanese art forms, and as a communal group, participants work together to discover and harness their inspiration.

Hazelton's next workshop, 9 a.m. - noon March 23, concentrates on creative biography by combing meditative prose with tanka or haiku and photographs to create haibun, a Japanese literary form.

The final session, 9 a.m. noon April 20, celebrates spring and incorporates participants' photographs with tanka, haiku or haibun.

Hazelton's monthly workshops began in January and conclude next month.

Anthony and Florence Rodale opened FloreAnt Projects Gallery about one and one-half years ago.

The gallery features artists from San Francisco and New York whose work is global in scope. The Rodales' focus is to show sustainabil-ity through the art of photography.

remember how absolutely delicious were the chocolate bunny ears I looked forward to on Easter Day. When you're deprived of anything, it's especially good to have it again.

Last year at the start of Lent, our pastor asked how many were planning to 'give something up" for Lent. Almost every hand went up, including mine.

Our unorthodox pastor surprised us with his next word: "Don't," as in, don't think of Lent as peniten-tial. Instead, he told us for the 40 days of Lent we should relish every gift of life, including food.

"Go home," he said, "and enjoy a glass of wine while you think about the goodness of God.

We could hardly wait to see what he told us to do for this Lent. Again, he surprised us.

Clear out your life by paring the nonessentials from it," he said. "Stop saying 'yes' to people when you really want to say 'no.' Rid your home and closets of excess clutter. Stop running around doing what you don't want to do and make room in your life for something more meaningful.'

As if all that weren't a big enough task, he had one more Lenten suggestion: "For the 40 days of Lent, do not charge anything on a credit card except what is absolutely needed. Learn to tell the difference between need and want."

Some of us joked that we would rather last year's Lenten guidelines. It's eas-ier to appreciate life than it is to clear away people, places and things.

So it was one more thing we added to the calendar.

As a kid, did you ever play the card game where you kept building houses from cards, stacking one card on top of the other until the house caved in?

Well, my house is caving in. I've added at least one activity too many Yesterday, I did a newspaper interview in the next town then took a recently widowed friend to lunch. While I was in that town, I stopped to see another friend I've been neglecting. Then I did my grocery shopping along with some errands. I left home early in the morning and didn't get home until it was dark.

"All I want to do," I told my husband, "is to sit still for a half-hour."

He reminded me, once again, that I'm the one who fills a schedule to the brim until it overflows.

I took a serious look at my calendar and scratched off some non-essential activities, even though I want to do them. I eliminated shell crafter classes, writer's workshops and almost all meetings.

Two friends of mine don't have my manic schedules but they do spend time doing things they don't want to do.

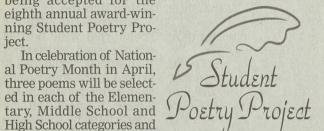

"I can't say no," said one friend, "even when I'm silently screaming inside that I don't want to do it.'

Another friend claims she hangs out with someone who is absolutely toxic to her peace of mind. "She makes me feel bad about myself and about life in general," said my friend.

All three of us, follow-If I work on clearing ing the pastor's Lenten the clutter from my home challenge, are trying to and from my calendar, I give up bad habits. My friends are trying to learn to say "no" to others while I'm trying to say "no" to myself.

This week, after ten straight days of being on the go day and night, I find myself longing for some quiet time.

I tell myself it's because I try to be all things to all people. I don't want to let my husband down and I don't want to neglect my friends.

I try to nourish my spiritual health as well as my physical health and to be there for those who need me. I'm also addicted to an active lifestyle and want time to dance, bike and kayak. Throw in the time I spend interviewing and writing and it's a jammed calendar.

My husband points out that every single activity I have is one I chose for myself. He's right in that.

When it comes to people and to activities, I'm like the starving person standing before a banquet of food: I want everything.

When I did a story this week on pickleball, a sport similar to tennis that is

Oscars for one and one for all

Among the dozens of entrants in the annual Lehigh Valley Press Focus section Readers Pick the Oscar Recipients contest, REVIEW not one person correctly By Paul Willistein picked all recipients in the contest's seven categories.

Karen Drake of Whitehall picked six out of seven. For the director Oscar, she chose Steven Spielberg, "Lincoln," instead of the recipient, Ang Lee, "Life of Pi."

Karen will receive a $50 Penn's Peak gift card, Roxy Theatre tickets, a Lehigh Valley Press prize package and have her photo in the Focus section.

I was also six for seven. I correctly picked: "Argo," picture; Ang Lee, "Life of Pi," which led Oscar recipients with four, including cinematography, visual effects and original score; Daniel Day-Lewis, "Lincoln," actor; Jennifer Lawrence, "Silver Lin-ings Playbook," actress; Anne Hathaway, "Les Miserables," supporting actress; and "Brave," animated feature.

missed with Christoph Waltz, "Django Unchained," supporting actor. I chose Tommy Lee Jones, "Lincoln." I still hold that Waltz's role in "Django," for which director Quentin Tarantino received an original screenplay Oscar, was a lead actor role.

As expected, Oscar spread the gold at the 85th Academy awards Feb. 25. That's not surprising because 2012 was a very good year for cinema, critically and commercially.

As of Feb. 22, the nine Oscar picture nominees neared the $1-billion club, receiving more than $944 million, or an average of $105 million, at the box office.

"Argo," which received three Oscars, including adapted screenplay for Chris Terrio and editing, has grossed $132 million. "Life of Pi" has grossed $116 million. "Silver Lingrossed $115 million. "Les Miserables" has grossed $147 million. "Django for picture when the director wasn't nominated since "Driving Miss Daisy" in 1990.

"Silver Linings Playbook" was the first film to receive nominations in all four acting categories since "Reds" in 1981.

Emmanuella Riva, at 85, was the oldest to be nominated for an actress Oscar for "Amour," which received the foreign film Oscar.

Jessica Tandy was the previous oldest, nominated at 80 for "Driving Miss Daisy."

Riva's 86th birthday was Feb. 25, the date of the 85th Oscar telecast.

Quvenzhane Wallis, at was the youngest actress Oscar nominee, for "Beasts of the Southern Wild."

The erratic, uneven and often frustrating Oscars telecast was filled and we're not only talking about host Seth McFarland as host and his frequent off-the-mark and incredibly unfunny and cruel jokes.

Even William Shatner, in "Star Trek" Captain Kirk attire, moonlighting as a TV critic via an onstage big-screen, couldn't blunt the flop that was McFarland's frat-boy humor amidst his otherwise slick smiles and selfserving song and dance numbers.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the evening other than Ang Lee winning a well-deserved director Oscar for the sublime "Life of Pi" — was First Lady Michelle Obama announcing "Argo" as the Oscar picture recipient via a bigscreen satellite feed, as Jack Nicholson, in shades and his best Cheshire Cat grin, looked on.

Movie song production ings Playbook" has numbers saved the day, er, night with: Oscar song recipient (with Paul (Lpworth) Adele's James Bond "Skyfall" theme; the cast of "Les Miserables," which received three Oscars, including makeup and hairstyling and sound mixing, on stage cast (including Allentown's Amanda Sevfried) singing "One More Day" and "Dream"; Barbara Streisand's "The Way We Were" tribute to composer Marvin Hamlisch, and most of all, Shirley Bassey sounding better than ever on the

The Oscar telecast's other highlight was Charlize Theron and Channing Tatum dancing ala Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers to "The Way You Look Tonight.'

That was glitz. That was glamour. That was entertainment, sorely lacking thanks mainly to host McFarland's pottymouth humor. The good news is that McFarland vowed to not again host the telecast.

It's not too late to catch Oscar's best. While "Argo," which received three Oscars including adapted screenplay, is out on Blu-Ray, it's still playing in theaters, as are: 'Amour," the Oscar foreign film recipient; "Django Unchained"; "Les Mis-érables"; "Lincoln"; "Silver Linings Playbook" and "Zero Dark Thirty."

"August: Osage County," Tracy Lett's 2008 Pulitzer Prize-winning play, hits you upside the head with the force of the cast-iron frying pan wielded by one of the cast members Witty, comedic and unflinchingly raw dialogue combined with stellar performances by an ensemble cast make this Lehigh Valley debut a must-see, 7 p.m. March 7 -9 and 2 p.m. March 10. Civic Theatre of Allentown, 527 N 19th St., Allentown.

The creative staff involved in the production has achieved nearperfection in staging the contemporary tragic-comedy and intense character study, propelled by a line from "T.S. Elliot's poem, "The Hollow Men": "This is the way the world ends.

The good bones are already there in Lett's brilliant script, but only with solid casting and direction by Williams Sanders can the true vision of the play be ful-filled. Civic Theatre proves more than up to the task and deserves high praise.

Boyle Construction has announced completion of construction for Lehigh County's first detoxification center, located in eastern Salisbury Township. The $3.6-million residential facility is expected to provide local drug and alcohol treatment for 700 patients annually. The 12,000 square-foot building has 31 beds for residents. Some of the beds are medically-monitored rooms for detoxification. Others are dormitory-style rooms for rehabilitation. The single-story brick and mineral board façade building has meeting rooms, staff offices, common spaces, and an outdoor recreation area. The facility was to have begun accepting patients late last month.

Relay team awarded golden sneaker

By LOU WHEELAND Special to The Press

The Relay for Life Team at Cedar Lutheran Church was awarded the "Golden Sneaker" award at the 9 a.m. service Feb. 17.

"Carolyn Self of Church World Service spoke for a few minutes about CWS and the relationship to the CROP Hunger Walk. Debra Olphin, a representative for the Greater Allentown CROP Walk Committee, presented The Golden Sneaker Award to recruiter Cindy Borger and the walkers from Cedar Lutheran Church, said Cindy Borger," chairperson of the Cedar Relay for Life committee.

Borger said last year the Greater Allentown CROP Walk planning committee designed this award to surprise the church/organization, who had the highest percentage increase in donations collected from the previous year walked and Cedar Church had a 24 percent increase.
