

George, Franklin

CORP. FRANKLIN GEORGE
LAUDS ENGLISH SPIRIT

Letter to Friend Cites Determination to Win Despite Hardships.

The splendid spirit of the English people, their determination to win, impresses Corporal Franklin George, son of Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn George, 546 North New Street, he writes in a V-letter to W. C. Urner, 618 North New Street.

"For some time now, the British have been doing without things which we take for granted back home," observes Corporal George. "In addition to this, they salvage every possible thing that is humanly possible. But blackouts, bombings and shortages have not depressed their spirit at all. Out of all this has come a fine and real determination to win."

He reports having visited Shakespeare's home and Oxford University, seen a Shakespearean play, heard symphony concerts, and details how England went all out to observe the American holiday of Thanksgiving, adding, "but woe is me, no football games."
