Council updates meeting rules

Dolan hopes to avoid any lawsuits

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI njastrzemski@tnonline.com

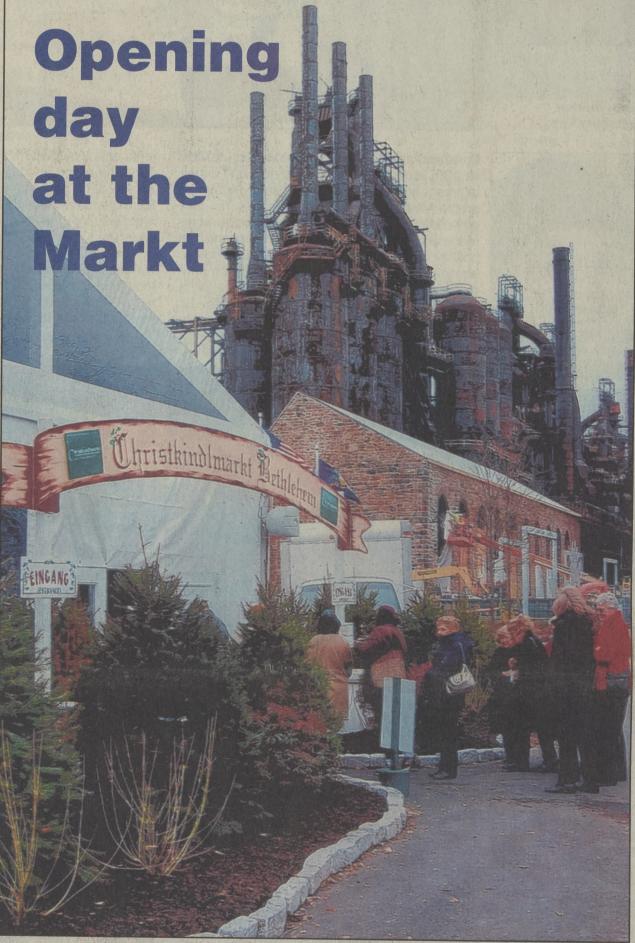

City Hall was dark, empty and silent, except four voices which muttered, mumbled and occasionally cajoled from the mayor's conference room on the second floor. Here, the evening of Oct. 26, a special committee discussed rules changes to City Council sessions for two-and-one-half hours before calling it a night.

Council Members Karen Dolan, Eric Evans and Gordon Mowrer, along with resident and Robert's Rules guru Bill Shearer talked as city clerk Cynthia Biedenkopf recorded the discussion. The sole witness was this fly-on-the-wall writer. Dolan said their intent was to update rules to increase speed and overall consistency, explaining council sometimes breaks its own rules during meetings in the name of expediency. "Our current practices are not current with the rules,' she said. "Our habits are vestigial to when Bethlehem Steel ran the council." She was concerned noncompliance would open council and the city up to lawsuits.

First and foremost was the invocation. Long used at the start of council meetings to silence the audience and focus all present on good behav-

Monument to steel workers dedicated in restored cemetery

By ZACH LINDSEY
Special to the Bethlehem Press

A cemetery is a place of stories. Those stories only end when the people buried in the cemetery are forgotten. Cemetery board President Ed Vogrins and others are trying to make sure that the stories of the people buried at the Fountain Hill Cemetery don't come to an end.

Since Vogrins began managing the cemetery, he turned what was once a poorly financed, unkempt mess into a community-supported property that has received attention from authors and members of the state legislature.

The Fountain Hill Cemetery (which is actually located in Salisbury Township) is not a famous one. Many of the people buried there are former steelworkers and their families. But worth is hardly measured in fame.

A small group of volunteers and supporters who attended the dedication on Oct. 26 includes Jerry Green, president of United Steelworkers Local 2599; local 2599 business agent Tim Rehrig; Dennis Fertal, who assembled the monument; Ed Vogrins, president of the Fountain Hill Cemetery; Stephen Donches, president and CEO of the National Museum of Industrial History; and Ron Leposa, who chairs the St. John's Windish Lutheran property committee. Missing from the photo is former Bethlehem City Councilman Larry Kisslinger.

The contributions the South Bethlehem, Fountain Hill and Salisbury Township residents buried in the Fountain Hill Cemetery made to their community struck Vogrins as important.

Vogrins' board took over cemetery management eight years ago, he said, starting off with a simple outreach. They taped waterproof envelopes onto tombstones where they found flowers. The letters inside asked for small material donations or help with maintenance. Since then, while Vogrins admits, "we don't have deep pockets," support for restoration has trickled in.

At first, his efforts were centered on cleaning up the cemetery, which was overgrown in some portions. But now, scores of donations from people such as Steve Donchez of the National Museum of

An early holiday surprise

Gracedale costs may be less than expected

By BERNIE O'HARE

Northampton County's proposed 2012 budget calls on taxpayers to pay $7.2 million to keep Gracedale, the county-owned nursing home, afloat next year. But at a Nov. 15 budget hearing, Gracedale's new management firm, Premier Healthcare Resources, suggested it can trim $1.6 million from that figure.

How will it do this? Primarily, by increasing the census from 591 on Nov. 15 to 638 residents next year, giving the nursing facility an additional $1.1 million in revenue. The rest of the savings will come from $500,000 in as yet unidentified cuts.

Dubious council members grilled interim administrator Dave Holland on whether this would be possible. While conceding that the Lehigh Valley is an increasingly competitive market, Holland suggested that placing a nurse liaison at local hospitals would bring in new residents. He would attempt to attract Medicare, as opposed to Medicaid patients, which are more profitable. But council members questioned whether that would defeat the whole point of keeping Gracedale in county hands.

The five-acre natural burial section of the Fountain Hill cemetery will look different from the surrounding cemetery. From far away, it'll barely look like a cemetery at all. The ground will glow with native wildflowers, and headstones will be Dolan suggested simply moving the invocation up the agenda, outside items of business, would keep it from appearing the city is officially declaring for a religion.

"It doesn't make much difference to me and I'm the religious one," Mowrer, the Moravian minister, said.

Secrets to being lean (even during the holidays)

Eggnog, turkey and stuffing, assorted pastries - the holidays are as much about the food and drink as they are about sharing good times together. So is it any wonder that many gain weight during the holiday season? Researchers at the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development and the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases have found the average person gains a pound a year from holiday eating, which accumulates and can lead to health problems later in life. But there are some lucky few who seem impervious to the goodies, staying thin despite the extra holiday food. How do some seem to stay so thin all of the time?

According to Men's Health expert and editor-in-chief David Zinczenko, who has spent more than 20 years interviewing all sorts of leading weight loss experts and reviewing various studies, "What separates the fit from the fat is a series of rules." These rules are easy to follow and they don't require any special exercise equipment, crash dieting or subsisting solely on wood chips to keep fit. Here are some things to consider during the holidays and as you make healthy eating resolutions for the new year.

* Stop dieting. Some studies indicate that individuals who are currently on a diet are more likely to gain weight in subsequent months or years. That's because restriction of fat and caloric intake can affect muscle growth and bone density. Muscle burns calories very well, so you want to hold onto strong muscles. Also, carefully monitoring what you eat can lead to stress hormones flowing through the body. Hormones like cortisol have been linked to weight gain. So ease up on watching every bite of food you eat and you just may be happier -- and thinner -- for it.

* Choose high-protein foods. Protein fills the stomach and takes a longer time to digest in the body, which in turn helps you to burn calories. Selecting lean proteins, like turkey, chicken, lean beef, and pork, can help you to feel fuller longer and reduces the chance you'll nibble on fluff snacks during the day. When faced with holiday fare, choose protein sources to fill you up before indulging on other items.

* Fill up on fiber, too. Studies indicate that getting 25 grams of fiber, which is easily achieved by having three servings of fruits and vegetables, can boost fat-fighting efforts of the body by at least 30 percent. Many processed foods are increasing fiber content, but be sure to read labels. That fiber may also be accompanied by a lot of sugar and extra carbohydrates. Fresh fruit and vegetables and whole grain breads are easy ways to get a fiber

* Engage in fun exercise. Many people equate staying thin to spending hours at the gym every day. But all it takes is about 20 to 30 minutes of any type of daily activity, whether that be chasing around the kids or playing fetch with a dog. The concept of losing weight just by doing enjoyable activities is known as non-exercise activity thermogenesis, or NEAT. So go for a bike ride and burn 200 calories in the process.

* Skip fat-free foods. It would seem foods that have no or low fat would be better for you, but fat is actually a necessity for the body - helping you to feel satiated. Eating a fat-free item could have you feeling hungry soon after and ready to snack later on. In addition, some fat-free items have extra sugar or preservatives for flavor, which can undermine weight-loss

* Don't be a couch potato. Get up from that computer chair and cut down on television watching. A sedentary lifestyle can easily pack on the pounds. A study by researchers at the University of Vermont found overweight participants who cut their daily TV time in half (from an average of 5 hours to 2.5 hours) burned an extra 119 calories a day. Remember when you were a kid playing with your friends outside from sunrise to sunset? You probably weren't overweight then. But adults now spend more time indoors, and all that time spent in front of the tube could be hindering your weight-loss efforts. If you follow a few easy rules, there finally may be a way to stay thin without dieting, even during the holiday season.

Board postpones any action Meals for needy to be held Nov. 24 on athletic facilities repairs

The Saucon Valley School Board decided Nov. 7 that it would be prudent to delay further action on a host of renovations and repairs, totaling nearly $3.5 million, to the school district's athletic facilities.

During the monthly board meeting, Andrew Alicandri of The Architectural Studio (TAS) of Allentown presented school board members with a litany of bids, which Alicandri said were broken down to allow the district to more effectively pick and choose which projects to pursue. He further told school board members that the bids were set up to allow for the hiring of local contractors.

Alicandri presented the bids in two parts: the first group of bids included improvements and renovations to the field house; the second group encompassed improvements and renovations to the athletic field and

Anderson Campus: 'If we can dream it ...'

PRESS PHOTOS BY DANA GRUBB

The St. Luke's Anderson Hospital building is splendidly lighted in patriotic colors the night of the dedication ceremonies on Veterans Day. Full coverage in this week's Focus section.

Dedication of the St. Luke's Hospital Anderson Campus took place with a Veterans Day flagraising and official ribbon-cutting Nov. 11. Located in Bethlehem Township at the junction of Route 33 and Freemansburg Avenue, the nation's newest hospital sits on a 500-acre campus and reflects an initial investment of $175 million. In his remarks, current president, CEO and campus namesake, Richard Anderson, told those in attendance, "I've always believed that at St. Luke's if we can dream it, we can do it, and that is exactly what we have done here." The Anderson Campus boasts a 108bed acute care inpatient hospital, a medical office building and cancer center with parking for 1,200 vehicles.

St. Luke's president and CEO Richard Anderson is joined by past chairmen of the Board of Trustees Douglas Caldwell and Kenneth Smith, current chairman of the Board of Trustees David Lobach, Pennsylvania Secretary of Health Eli Avila, president of St. Luke's Hospital Anderson Campus Edward Nawrocki and others for the official ribbon cutting.

During tours of the newly opened hospital, Dr. Lee Riley is at work in the St. Luke's Hospital Anderson Campus Cancer Center research lab with microwaved and treated tissue on a magnetic stir plate. Riley hopes to create a cancer vaccination through his research.

Habitat dedicates William St. home

By BERNIE O'HARE Special to the Bethlehem Press

Habitat Lehigh Valley dedicated its 90th home Sept. 24 at William Street in Bethlehem for Elizabeth Lemos and her two children, Joshua and Kiana. The three-bedroom home, which includes a garage, was sponsored by the Bethlehem Housing Authority and built with the hard work of numerous volunteers, including 250 hours of "sweat equity" from Lemos herself.

Mark Ehrle, chairman of the board of Habitat Lehigh Valley, said another six homes are "in flight" right now, and are acquired via donations and grants. People are selected for home ownership as a result of an application process requiring good credit scores and an income level that that is 35-to-65 percent of the area's median income. He indicated that, so far, all homes have been built in the Lehigh Valley's three cities.

Lemos was presented with housewarming gifts that included a bouquet from the Bethlehem Garden Club, an embroidery from LV Embroidery Guild, and a big box of Just Born candies.

"Don't eat them all at once," wisecracked mentor Dot Cressler.

Ehrle gave Lemos a Bible as well as an honorary key.

Senior Jon Mill, a Liberty High School graduate, had a big hand in the special season. He was one of the center backs on the defense, and a vocal leader. Whichever goalie was playing behind him knew Mill was a magnet to the ball and did not give the opposition much of a good look at a shot on

"I was positive about this team going into it," said Mill. "We had a good team, a lot of returners and starters [from last year]. So we felt that we would be able to compete at a high level.

"We had a really good season," Crampton said. "We looked at each game one at a time. We just kind of hit a bad patch in the conference playoffs, but our schedule was so strong that we got an atlarge bid. We ranked second in the NCAA Regional poll most of the year."

The at-large bid to the NCAA tournament, led to a DeSales victory over York College, the Bulldogs first ever tournament win.

"It was very exciting," added Mill. "We didn't know exactly if we would get into the NCAA tournament after we lost in the semi-finals of the Freedom Conference tournament. And for me, espesenior, I thought my season was over.

Hunters prepare for start of deer season

By NICK HROMIAK Special to the Press

It's the day all Pennsylvania big game hunters await. On November 28 the rifle deer hunting season in Pennsylvania gets underway and will be welcomed by over 750,000 licensed hunters. And for those hunting in WMUs 2A, 2C, 2D, 2F, 2G, 3B, 3C, 4B, 4D and 4E, they will be limited to a five day antlered-deer only season that ends December 2.

This is followed by seven days of antlered and antlerless season like the remainder of the state, with both seasons closing on December 10.

Due to recent power outages and storms, some schools will be open on November 28 as a make-up day when they're normally closed for the post-Thanksgiving Day holiday. It's the day many youngsters would join dad or relatives at deer camp.

When I was a kid growing up in West Catty, I would await the arrival of the neighbor's two doors down who would always bring deer home on opening day and hang them in their back yard for aging. A tradition not seen these days mainly because it may offend an anti-hunting neighbor.

For deer hunters who possess an unused bear tag, they may also take a bear during the first week of the deer season in selected WMUs. Reporting requirements are the same as during the regular bear season.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission reminds hunters that they have 10 days to report their deer harvest either by a mailed-in report car, online via the PGCs website, or by calling (855) 724-8681.

Hunters may report one or more harvests in a single session and should have their hunting license tag number, field harvest tag info and WMU number handy when calling

A CHINESE GETAWAY

By BRANDON TAYLOR Special to the Bethlehem Press

nown as the Venice of the East, Suzhou in east China's Jiangsu province is praised for its lush gardens and enchanting waterways. Miles of narrow, interconnected canals criss-crossing the old section of the city provide endless opportunities to explore and discover.

Alleys and major walkways lined with quaint single-story houses retain their local flavor while catering to the needs of the modern traveler (i.e. better bathrooms and coffee shops). And small wooden boats give visitors the chance to see a different side of Suzhou at a much slower pace. The absence of major industries pumping pollutants into the air leaves the heavens an unnatural blue.

I visited this canal town during China's National Holiday in early October and expected the tiny alleys and narrow canals to be packed. I was pleasantly surprised to find the opposite: a dearth of tourists that allowed me to explore the old city without bumping elbows with noisy Chinese travelers. The skies were clear, no rain or smog clouds in sight.

Venturing away from the main city corridors, where malls and McDonald's are plentiful, I spent an entire day getting lost in side streets and following river passages from one neighborhood to another. For hours I watched the small wooden boats come and go. I enjoyed the skies - those immaculate blue skies - and fresh air - well, almost fresh

Locals reside in many of the houses not claimed by hostels, cafes and souvenir shops. As they have for hundreds of years, they use the waterways in their daily chores. From fishing and washing laundry and dishes, to dumping out wastewater, the canals are still a vital part of these peoples' lives, although the waters show the wear and tear signs of modern use.

Still, Suzhou is a throwback to older times and a nice respite from city life. And did I mention the clear blue skies?

Small, wooden gondolas packed with tourists make their way down a canal in Tongli, a small canal town near Suzhou.

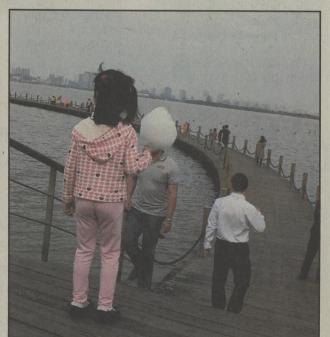

The life of a gondolier may be tiring on the arms but provides the chance to chat with tourists and enjoy a short cruise on the waters of the canal on a daily basis

A man fishes in one of the canals. Had he caught something, he probably should have thrown it back - most of the water in the canals as a murky brown, a result of people dumping their trash and cleaning clothes in it.

People living along the canals still use the waterways for their daily chores, like washing dishes, cleaning clothes and dumping out dirty water from the houses.

A little girl stands on a boardwalk extending out into Jinji Lake in Suzhou. The western area of the city is more developed than the old city and its canals, with modern industrial parks and shopping districts.

With the drought Texas experienced this year, the Agriculture Extension Office gave instructions on how to help trees survive. They specified the need to water the trees long, allowing the water to go deep. Giving the trees only a surface watering will cause the roots to move toward the surface seeking after that little bit of water which will eventually cause the plants to die. A long, deep watering is needed to cause the roots to go deep.

In Scripture, there are various analogies made between trees and those who are right with God. It seems that this piece of advice about watering trees deeply can apply to those who know God, too. Each of us experiences trials, difficulties, or dry times in our lives. What we need in those times of drought is not just a "little" word of inspiration or a "little" devotional. We need to drink long and deeply from the river of spend time reading and thinking abou God's Word and letting it sink down deep into our lives. We need to spend time talking to God in prayer and letting Him meet our needs. Jeremiah 17:7-8 says it this way: "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is. For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding

Not only do we need to drink deeply from God's Word during times of drought, but we need to also drink deeply before the dry times come so our roots are deep and ready for hard times. Psalm 1:3 says that the one who delights in God's Word will be, "like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his lead also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

Lehigh Valley Industry and Culture website. Lehigh University created this online archive under the supervision of project coordinator Julia Maserjian. The following is a brief summary of this great man's life, from his autobiog-

William Laurence Estes, the first superintendent and chief surgeon of St. Luke's Hospital, was born Nov. 28, 1855, on a large cotton plantation in Tennessee. His father, Albert Monroe Estes, and his uncle had migrated to Tennessee from Virginia. His mother, Marcia Burton Owen, was Albert's third wife. William Estes was the youngest of a large family, including the children from his father's previous marriages.

Estes grew up in an isolated community of workers and about 150 black slaves. They all served in the maintenance of the plantation and the large Estes home.

During the Civil War years, the planation was raided regularly by both armies. Horses, mules, cattle and hogs were stolen and a year's crop of cotton was burned. The Estes family soon became impoverished.

Albert Estes died of pneumonia in 1865. The family then divided up the estate and voung Estes moved with his mother to a smaller farm. Now emancipated, many of the former slaves still chose to stay with the family. Economic independence for former slaves was difficult to achieve during the Reconstruction

Estes' school career began in a small country school. At Bethel College, where he excelled at foreign languages. In the fall of 1874, Estes entered the medical department of the University of Virginia and earned a medical degree. He continued his education in medicine at the University of New York to earn his second medical degree.

This was a time when most doctors went into practice without prior clinical experience, but Estes secured an internship in surgery at Mt. Sinai Hospital and eventually became a staff surgeon there. He met his future wife, Jeanne Wynne, through his many acquaintances in New York City. Wynne was well educated and an accomplished musi-

r. William L. Estes wrote he meet with Dr. William Chandler, professor of chemistry at Lehigh University and board member of St. Luke's Hospital. Chandler was looking for a medical superintendent to organize the new and rapidly growing hospital (founded in Estes met with Chandler in September 1881 and was surprised to find that St. Luke's Hospital was already a modern facility on 30 acres in a beautiful location. An orchard of apple trees and groves of oaks, poplars and hickory trees surrounded the newly built hospital pavilion equipped with 24 hospital beds.

At the time, the hospital served South Bethlehem, Bethlehem and West Bethlehem, with a total population of 12,000. The three towns were not yet consolidated. Four different railroad companies ran trains to Bethlehem. There were slate quarries to the north and Bethlehem Iron Company in South Bethlehem, yet St. Luke's Hospital was the only hospital in the entire Lehigh Valley

The hospital board promised Estes a fixed salary, living quarters and the opportunity to shape a modern hospital. William and Jeanne were married as the hospital board voted to employ Estes in October of 1881. The board hired the right man, at only 26 years of age, to usher in modern procedures to their hospital.

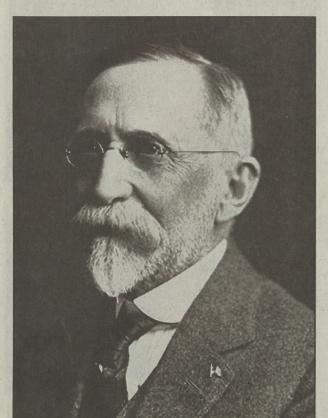

Estes instituted the methods discovered by Joseph Lister (antiseptic system) Louis Pasteur (use of oxygen to prevent growth of bacteria) and John Tyndall (killing bacteria by boiling food) and many others. Estes stayed at St. Luke's for 39 years and led the hospital to becoming a 210-bed facili-

Estes saw the need immediately to establish a school of nursing. It was an experimental idea at the time, however, the school was founded in December 1884. The St. Luke's School of Nursing remains the oldest degree granting school in the United States. In an address to the 1871 nursing graduates, Estes "Nurses, as well as poets, 'are born, not made.' Alert, quick, painstaking, vigilant and untiring you must be, and even more. A nurse should possess a degree of finesse and conscientiousness, which never fails, a sense of duty which impels her to discharge with the same diligence and care the menial and so-called small affairs, which belong to the care of the sick as the large and conspicuous ones."

William and Jeanne raised nine children in their home in Fountain Hill. Their son, Dr. William Estes Jr., followed in his father's footsteps. He became a renowned authority on surgery and Chief of Surgery at St. Luke's Hospital from 1930-1949.

William Sr. passed away in 1940 and his wife Jeanne before him in 1905.

Group contributes $50,000 for church's 'New Beginning'

By KAT SCHNEIDER Special to the Bethlehem Press

t. John Windish Lutheran Church now has the capital to survive into the next century, thanks to the church's New Beginnings Committee. Over the past six years, members of the committee have raised $50,000. Recently, members presented the check, along with a glass sculpture with the church's likeness from Crystal Signatures of Bethlehem.

"This church has served the community for 100 years. We wanted to be able to make a sizeable contribution," said committee member Frank Podeliszek.

A large "token" check was presented Nov. 5 at the beginning of the church service. A jovial Rev. Doctor Gary J. Langensiepen gratefully accepted the check and the glass sculp-

"It's magnificent, absolutely beautiful and amazing, thank you," Langensiepen said upon receiving the gift.

According to Podeliszek. the members of the New Beginnings committee raised money over the past six years by hosting myriad events, with the largest and most recent being a fashion show featuring clothing from 1910-2010. The time period represents the 100year period during which the church has been in operation. Other fundraising activities have included selling food and holding drives and dinners.

"We are well known for our food," Podeliszek, a retired lower Bucks County teacher, said proudly.

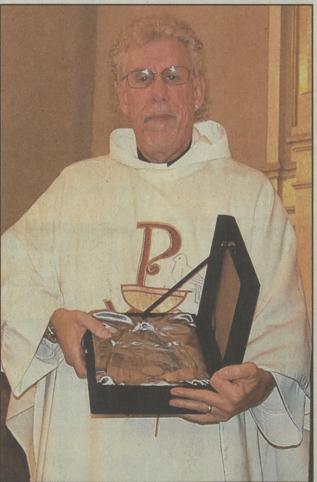

Though a gift, the money does come with certain safeguards in place to protect the church and its members. For example, each expenditure the money is used for must be a large-scale project and cost $10,000 or more. The interest earned off the money, however, can be used for incidental or dayto-day expenses.

tures an engraving of the front of the church and will join two other like sculptures given to the church by the pastor of their sister church in Murska Sobota, Slovenia.

"The committee wanted to be able to give a tangible representation of our appreciation to the church," Podeliszek said of the sculpture.

St. John Windish Lutheran Church was designed in the style of the "great worship houses of Europe," explained Podeliszek. The church was founded by immigrants who spoke the Slovenian language and who had difficulty understanding the predominantly German Lutheran services at their church, St. Peter's Lutheran Church, also on Bethlehem's Southside.

According to the church's 100 year anniversary pamphlet, members of the new group of Slovenian immigrants bought the site on Fourth Street for $2,000 and a small 90 by 30-foot structure was built on the site for $8,000. Today the structure has grown and stands as an imposing figure on Bethlehem's Southside.

With help from members of the church, such as Podeliszek and his group, the church will continue to be an institution on Bethlehem's Southside.

"We're like a family; People help each other when they need it. It's a very warm church," said Podeliszek.

Favorite subject: My two favorite subjects are English and French. I love to read and write, so any class that involves a great amount of either will be a favorite of mine. I'm currently taking a really interesting class about African-American literature at Moravian College. I also really love the French language. It just sounds so beautiful when it's pronounced correctly. My goal is to be able to speak fluently and study abroad in college!

Activities: In school, I play the violin in our string ensemble, and outside of school I play in Lehigh University's Philharmonic Orchestra. I'm also in my school's Women's Awareness Club and Amnesty International Club.

Next steps: I plan on studying either biology or journalism, or both, and then, after graduating from college, going on to study at a veterinarian school.

Career goals: I'm going to study to become a veterinarian, and hopefully participate in the program "Veterinarians without Borders.'

Heroes: My main hero is Tina Fey, because she's such a hilarious comedian, but I also agree with a lot of her opinions and the way she handles opposition. Fall book fair at St. Mike's

CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

Two times each year, St. Michael the Archangel's Home and School Association sponsors a Scholastic ™ Book Fair to raise funds for the school and its library. Students enjoyed a new twist on the event this fall. Organizers created a "book café" in a multipurpose room at the school complete with dining tables, comfortable seating, hot chocolate and snacks. The extra money earned from the sale of drinks and baked goods will help fund middle school dances. Students were given class time during one school day to shop and the café was opened for two more days during recess, at which time students were able to relax with friends, shop and enjoy refreshments. # Thanksgiving prayer to end hunger

Boneless chicken had doubled in price from a short while ago. Even ground beef went up $1 a $5 a box.

I consider myself a smart shopper. I'm a coupon clipper and I don't do all my grocery shopping at just one store. Instead, I read the ads each week and buy the specials at three different stores.

But food is going up so much there is no such thing as a safe haven for a thrifty shopper. When I saw the galloping prices, I was feeling frustrated and a bit down as I tried to figure out what I could buy for our week's groceries.

But then, as I pushed my cart through the aisles, my attitude changed and I was overcome with a sense of gratitude.

I am grateful I CAN fill a grocery cart with food. Many people can't.

That thought is uppermost on my mind as we approach Thanksgiving, I never take having food for granted. I grew up listening to stories about how my parents struggled to get enough to eat during the early years of their mar-

Now, the problem many of us have, is eating too much, not too little.

My parents couldn't afford to eat meat — unless my father brought it home from hunting. Their stories made a permanent impact on me.

It's one reason why I am especially aware of those who do not have the luxury of food in the refrigerator. It's one reason why staunchly support community food pantries.

A few weeks ago I learned about the hidden hunger epidemic in our local elementary schools. With the growing economic crisis, an escalating number of elementary school children get a free lunch and free breakfast because of poverty level family income.

That's fine for these kids while they are in school. But what happens over the weekend when there is no one to supply the food?

In many cases, the answer is that the kids go hungry.

Teachers are seeing kids who come to school Monday morning asking teachers if they have any chewing gum or candy. They don't necessarily want sweets. They want food because they didn't get enough of it over the week-

Teachers say some kids are too hungry to concentrate.

Sometimes it's because sudden unemployment pushed parents who were living from paycheck to paycheck into poverty. It doesn't matter why these kids are hungry. No child should have to go hungry. But many do.

In our area, one woman named Jolene went to her college reunion where she heard others talking about an offshoot of a poor economy - kids going hungry. She wondered if that was true in our area.

Jolene is more than financially comfortable. So are all her friends. All around her, she doesn't see hunger. Most of us don't. But that doesn't mean it doesn't exist.

After contacting teachers, Jolene learned the sad facts most of us don't know: Many kids are going hungry. After they leave school on Friday, there is no guarantee they will have another meal until Monday when they come to school and get the free breakfast and lunch given to needy kids.

Jolene belongs to a group of about 30 women who call themselves the YaYa Girls. That's grandmother in Greek, I'm told.

At first, the group thought they would raise enough money to sponsor one school — giving back-packs with nonperishable food to children identified by the school as especially in need. They have now expanded the program to seven elementary schools.

'We can't rest until no child goes hungry," Jolene

Heartfelt notes from the children tell how much the program means to them. I read some of those notes today and they can't fail to touch your heart and make you want to help.

One child wrote that he was happy to give his little brother cold cereal and applesauce from his backpack because that was the only food they had over the weekend.

Most people aren't aware of how much the economic crisis is affecting everyday families. They don't know some families have to shuffle from house to house, sleeping wherever someone offered them a bed. Most of us are shocked when we learn of children who have little or no food.

If homelessness and hunger are not part of our lives, we don't see it.

I'm convinced most of us want to help. We take donations to food pantries and we support charities that help the needy.

But if more of us knew the scope of the problem, we would realize donating a few bags of groceries a year is not enough.

Nothing is enough until people are no longer hun-

In this season of because parents are too Thanksgiving, those of us who have enough to eat can say "thank you" in a meaningful way. We can help those who don't have enough food.

Our food banks and church and community food pantry programs need donations. Look around and see how you can help.

That would be a fitting prayer of Thanksgiving.

Man versus grey squirrel

First of two parts

If you are among the many people who enjoy feeding and observing our local songbirds, then BUD'S VIEW whether intended or not, By Bud Cole you're also a member of the vast fraternity that guarantees that the local gray squirrels are well fed, too.

Bev and I enjoy watching the skills and ingenuity used by the grey squirrels to obtain the seed and these observations have provided many hours of pleasure. But the squirrels' tendencies to chew and ruin our bird feeders and birdhouses have kept me engrossed in an ongoing battle of man against squirrel

In addition to capturing their clown-like actions with my digital camera, I also capture them in a Havahart live animal trap and take them for free rides to new habitats.

Although I have relocated a many squirrels, the population on our property does not appear to have decreased. I know they are very clever thieves, but are they able to return to our yard. Do they have a built in GPS? Maybe I need to transport them to more distant destinations, like another county or maybe another country.

I plan to find out if tiny radio transmitters are available to attach and track the relocated squirsame way the Pennsylvania Game Commission uses radio collars as part of their research to track black bears, white-tailed deer, bob cats and other mammals. Maybe I will discover a new species of "homing squirrels" living here in the Keystone

The gray squirrel, one of several squirrel family members found in our area is probably the most commonly observed and the most common of the species across Penn's Woods.

Sciurus carolinensis when full grown weighs from one to about one and one half pounds. The tail takes up approximately 8 white.

1/2 inches of its 18-inch length. The Latin sciurus means "shade-tailed." The long tail is important as a counterbalance. The body is predominantly gray with white underneath. The bushy tail hairs are usually yellowish at the base changing to black and finally tipped with hollow trees or build nests from twigs, leaves, and grass constructed in the crotch of tree branches. Breeding takes place in late winter and early spring with a gestation period of approximately 45 days. Four or five young are born and nursed in the safety of the tree den for a period of five to seven weeks. They mature slowly. It takes about two months before the young venture from their home tree. This is the reason why we do not observe baby squirrels following their mother around the yard or park. Although they provide me with constant entertainment, the cost involved replacing damaged and destroyed feeders and bird houses, not to mention the cost of the seed they consume daily, has driven rels' movements in the me to an ongoing squirrel war.

The following are some of the inexpensive methods I've used in my battle with the squirrels. My first attempt was to place a piece of downspout around the feeder pole.

They were able to climb it. So I greased the pole. But after a few unsuccessful attempts at climbing and several rains, the grease was gone and you know the results. My third method was to hang a feeder from a thin strong wire on a tree limb. They were able to slide down the wire headfirst from the branch to the feeder.

Then, I attached a wire between two trees where I hung a homemade feeder constructed from a twoliter bottle. The squirrels did a tightrope performance to which Barnum and Bailey audience would have surely given a grand applause. The score is: Squirrels, Four; Bud

At least the two-liter bottles are easy to replace and less costly.

Please send in your squirrel battle accounts or amusing anecdotes for the next Bud's View. I will also discuss my offensive plans Five, Six, Seven, etc.

That's the way I see it! Email comments and questions to: bbbcole@ enternet. To schedule programs, hikes and birthday parties, call 610-767-

Boutique benefits First Baptist Church ministries

The 26th annual Christmas Boutique at the First Baptist Church in Bethlehem was held Nov. 5. The juried craft show is put on by the youth of the Linden Street church as a fundraiser for the student ministries program. The holiday fair features many crafters and artists from the Lehigh Valley whose wares must be handmade. The free show appeals to all ages. # An Uniorgettable Feast

A Tuscan-Inspired Holiday Menu

Family Features

This holiday, serve an inspired meal bursting with the rich flavors of Tuscany. With these recipes — a moist and tender turkey along with savory sides you can create an unforgettable experience with family and friends.

These Tuscan-inspired recipes from Carapelli Olive Oil will enhance and lighten up your holiday favorites with the distinctive taste of heart-healthy olive oil. Naturally cholesterol free, olive oil is a monounsaturated fat, which makes it a healthful substitute for butter, shortening and other oils.

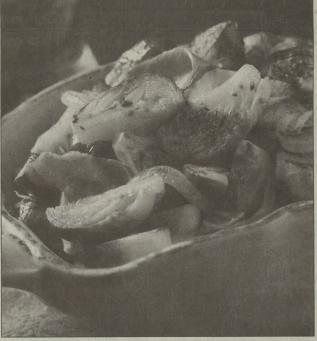

Whether you are entertaining a large crowd or serving up a small family-style dinner, this Tuscan Roast Turkey will be the centerpiece of your holiday table. The juicy flavors and crisp, golden brown skin come from a Tuscan Herb Paste made with fresh herbs and a blend of olive oils.

After you've tried Olive Oil and Herb Mashed Potatoes, you may never want to go back to plain mashed potatoes again. The creamy texture and robust flavor are a perfect complement to the turkey.

For another amazing side dish, try sweet and salty Brussels Sprouts with Caramelized Onions and Prosciutto — it just might become the family's new

The rich taste of olive oil promises to elevate your holiday cooking to delicious works of art. For more recipes that will turn any meal into an unforgettable feast, visit www.carapelliusa.com.

PUBLIC NOTICE The Borough Council of the Borough of Alburtis, at its regular meeting to be held on Wednesday, November 30, 2011 commencing at 7:00 p.m. at the Alburtis Borough Hall, 260 Franklin Street, Alburtis, Pennsylvania 18011, will consider, and may enact, an ordinance entitled and summarized as follows

AN ORDINANCE RE-ADOPTING, RESTATING. AND AMENDING ITS EARNED INCOME TAX ORDINANCE (CODIFIED TO CHAPTER 82 OF THE ALBURTIS CODIFIED ORDINANCES FOR YEARS THROUGH 2011, AND TO CHAPTER 80 OF THE ALBURTIS CODIFIED ORDINAN-CES FOR YEARS BEGINNING ON OR AFTER JANUARY 1, 2012) TO ESTABLISH CONFORMITY WITH THE LOCAL TAX ENABLING

ACT AS AMENDED BY ACT 32 OF 2008; LEVYING A TAX ON EARNED INCOME AND NET PROFITS: REQUIRING TAX RETURNS: REQUIRING EMPLOYERS TO WITHHOLD AND REMIT TAX; PROVIDING FOR COLLEC-TION: PROVIDING FOR INTEREST, PENAL-TIES, COSTS AND FINES FOR VIOLATIONS AND NON-PAYMENT OF TAX; PROVIDING FOR SEVERABILITY, REPEAL, CONSTRUCTION, AND EFFECTIVE DATE, AND RELATED

PROVISIONS.

The proposed Ordinance is being adopted, and notice is being given, pursuant to the Local Tax Enabling Act, 53 PA. STAT. ANN. § 6924.101 et seg. The Ordinance restates and amends in entirety the Borough's currently existing Earned Income Tax Ordinance in order to conform to the provisions of the Local Tax Enabling Act as amended and restated by Act 32 of 2008. The proposed Ordinance imposes a tax of one percent (1.0%) on the earned income and net profits of residents of the Borough. The tax is in addition to any earned income tax levied by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or school district in the Borough, but may be subject to certain reductions, credits, or deductions permitted or required by law. The Ordinance will be ef-1, 2012, and continues the earned income tax previously imposed, and at the same rate. The Ordinance will apply to earned income and net profits earned or received by a taxpayer during calendar year 2012 and each calendar year thereafter without annual re-enactment unless the rate of tax is subsequently changed. The nature of the tax is substantially the same as the earned income tax currently levied, subject to the changes required by Act 32 of 2008. The tax is imposed for general revenue purposes, including general operating revenue of the Borough, and is necessary to be continued in 2012 and future years, in the judgment of Borough officials, so that the Borough may continue its operations without having to make increases in the real property tax and/or other taxes to replace the earned income tax which has been imposed and collected for many The estimated annual revenue generated by the earned income tax is $260,000.00.

Copies of the full text of the proposed ordimay be examined or obtained at cost at the Alburtis Borough Hall at the address set forth above during regular business hours (8:00 a.m. , Monday through Friday, except holidays). The Alburtis Borough Hall is accessible to the disabled. Please contact the Borough Executive Secretary at 610-966-4777 to arrange for any accommodations for a disability. David G. Knerr, Esquire 610-866-4515 1620 Stefko Blvd. Bethlehem, PA Is premium gas worth the extra expense?

Filling up at the gas station is an expensive way to spend a few minutes. As the cost of gasoline continues to fluctuate, drivers want to get the most bang for their buck at the pump. Understanding octane and which one is appropriate for certain cars can save drivers substantial amounts of money. When vacillating between whether to choose premium or regular, it pays to read your owner's manual and it can't hurt to learn a little about the chemistry of gasoline.

Gasoline is the fuel for your car. It is available in 87 octane (regular), 89 octane (plus) and 91 octane (premium) in most areas. Regardless of fuel grade, the three major octane levels at the pump offer the same amount of heat energy, say automotive experts. What determines the differences in gas is the propensity for the gasoline to cause a ping or knock. This occurs when an uncontrolled burn or an explosion of the fuel takes place in the engine. Typically, this happens when part of the fuel-air mixture in one or more of the car's cylinders ignites spontaneously due to compression. Higher performance cars require more engine compression to generate more horsepower.

Therefore, putting regular gasoline in these types of vehicles may exacerbate knocking and pinging issues. Premium, high-octane fuel is specially designed to burn more slowly than regular, reducing the chances for those small explosions in the engine.

Some people are under the impression that premium fuel offers other benefits, such as it contains more detergents to help clean the engine during use. This is inaccurate, and the U.S. government requires a certain level of detergent in all grades of gasoline. Despite these untruths, some people are insistent upon paying $.20 to $.30 more a gallon to fuel up with a higher grade of gas. Typically the higher the price of the car, the greater propensity it will "require" premium gas. Automakers use premium fuel to distinguish their higher-market models. For example, most Toyota models can run on regular, while the Lexus line suggests premium. The same can be said for Honda/Acura models. Premium gasoline garners a higher profit margin for gasoline retailers and refiners, so there is a definite advantage for them working in cahoots with automakers to push premium gas. While premium gas may reduce some knock and ping in high-performance engines when they are pushed, in most cases vehicle owners will be hard-pressed to tell the difference in performance when filling up with regular or premium. According to fuel specialists at General Motors, the only modern engines that should really need premium are those with superchargers, which force feed fuel into the cylinders. In fact, drivers of cars that require regular who routinely fill up with premium gas could be doing their engine a disservice. The higher density of premium gasolines could lead to a buildup of waste products inside the engine over time.

The Federal Trade Commission has even issued a consumer notice in the past, stating: "In most cases, using a higher-octane gasoline than your owner's manual recommends offers absolutely no benefit. It won't make your car perform better, go faster, get better mileage, or run cleaner." The bottom line: Vehicle owners should read the car manual that comes with the auto. Stick to the recommended octane level, and the car should perform as indicated. If a car requires premium fuel, experiment with mid-grade to see if knocking occurs or if there is any apparent decrease in performance. If not, enjoy the extra savings at the pump.
