In the Poconos, an untouched lake sparkles amidst gentle, pine-covered hills. Clear streams, ferns unfurling along their edges, wind their way through the acres of forest land surrounding the lake, interrupted only by a deserted dirt road, or a fallen tree.

Though far from the city limits, the land and the lake are part of Bethlehem — one most people come in contact with every day. All you need to do to catch a glimpse of the beautiful expanse of water is walk into the bathroom, turn on the light and look into the toilet bowl.

The view is not as pretty as the one at Wild Creek Reservoir, but the substance is the same – the water, which has flowed more than 23 miles to reach Bethlehem homes.

On average, 24.5 million gallons of Wild Creek water are used per day in the city of Bethlehem and its surrounding communities, with little concern for its origins.

"Too often people take water for granted," said Superintendent of Water Jeff Andrews, "They turn on the tap and it comes out."

t was a knee-jerk reaction to a good idea. Bert Daday, president of the chamber of commerce, was talking up a plan to send hundreds of local business people into Bethlehem Area School District classrooms.

The idea, called First Step, was to get the business community involved in local schools.

The idea was wildly successful. So many people volunteered to be speakers this past Tuesday, all of them couldn't be accommodated.

I was assigned to speak to three of Mrs. DePaola's seventhgrade reading classes at East Hills Middle School.

When I was asked at registration early last month to name my topic, I thought for roughly five seconds and wrote down "writing

I rued that choice for weeks, thinking that, for boring potential, that title was right up there with the management of storm water drainage

I wished I'd advertised my talk as something like "The post-Cobain future of Grunge."
(At one point, a student asked me if, as a journalist, I'd written about the death of Kurt Cobain. I said no, I focus on Bethlehem topics and that I actually had never even heard of Kurt Cobain before he committed suicide. That sent a buzz across the room as though I'd just asked what country I was in.)

Anyway, with that billing, I expected the kids to bring pillows along. They didn't.

Some of Tuesday's speakers
may have been met with blank stares and yawns.

But most of the kids in my classes were attentive and inquis-

They asked a wide range of questions, from "do you ever have to write about boring things," to "how much do reporters make?"

One young man, his chin nestled in his hand, listened quietly to the discussion before raising his hand and asking flatly: "Do you have a good retirement plan?"

The centerfold of the "A" section in this week's Bethlehem Star is the first installment of of our tour of Bethlehem's Homes and Gardens. The first tour focuses on the bulb flowers now in bloom. Our photographs were taken in the garden of Rita Sillivan Smith's remarkable garden off Route 512.

More of Bethlehem's homes and gardens are on the way. Each will include full color photographs showing some of the best examples of garden design and home decorating in the city.

We're already planning to tour the Sayre Mansion and revisit Mrs. Smith's garden to learn about her renowned "Fairy Garden.

lehem Area School District's $92 million budget the wrong direction.

Local school districts such as Bethlehem's are struggling with a need to produce citizens capable of competing on a global scale. At the same time, these local school districts are being distracted and burdened by children state will kick in about $21 milwho are not getting the support lion. One school board member suggests that the school district shouldn't have to worry about 3year-old children - they should remain the parents' worry.

That's quite right. They should. But the reality is that some parents lack the social skills to properly prepare their children for here. But they are not as oppresschool. They don't have these sive as some would have us skills because their parents didn't have those skills.

We can pay now to get these kids prepared and break a destructive social cycle. Or we can watch them struggle in school, fail to compete and eventually drop out.

Bill Nelson, BASD's director of elementary education, said the $325,000 the district has included for this program, known as SPARK, is an investment with a concrete return for taxpayers.

Nelson said a study indicates that for every $1 spent putting a child on track, $7 are saved down

To the Editor:

Recently, you examined the "Changing Face of Religion" in To the Editor: the Bethlehem area. The interviews with Bethlehem church themes of traditional vs. contemporary services, methods to attract attendance, declining membership, denominational competition, location and relocation, changing neighborhoods, financial stability and survival.

Strangely absent from your discourse was any reference to the intangible. A 4,000 word dissertation on religion, predominantly Christian, that never included God's grace, love of neighbor, faith, hope for the future, salvation, conversion or life-changing attitude revealed either reporter timidity or a painting partially complete.

One of the five points of The Bethlehem Star on South Mountain signifies religion. Just as food is necessary for physical growth, religion is intrinsic to the development of Values. May I suggest you spend another issue on the tremendous potential for individual and community enrichment in Bethlehem. Supportive municipal and civic leadership, our 250th Anniversary, Advent and Mayor's breakfasts, soup kitchens, homeless shelters, food banks, educational opportunities, Northeast and South Bethlehem Neighborhood Centers, pastoral care at the hospitals, sensitive spontaneous outreach for Hurricane Andrew, Midwest floods and California earthquakes are examples of faith

Disadvantaged kids need SPARK

The problems facing our chilleaders highlighted concurrent dren today are many and, according to a new study, some of the most serious problems are highlighted right here at home.

Three neighborhoods in the Lehigh Valley, including one in Bethlehem and two in Allentown, have been identified in the 1994 Kids Count data book as being "severely distressed environ-

This means that in these neighborhoods, there is a poverty rate above 28 percent; more than 40 percent female-headed households; a high school dropout rate over 23 percent; more than 47 percent of males "unattached to the labor force," and more than 17 percent of families on welfare.

In the case of Bethlehem's dis- State Rep. T.J. Rooney tressed neighborhood, 59 percent 133rd District of families are below poverty lev-Northampton and Lehigh counties

What this means in regard to our children is not necessarily that they are growing up in a bad neighborhood (in fact, this area has a lot to be proud of), but that these children, coming from economically disadvantaged, culturally and linguistically diverse populations, may find it harder to excel at school and out in society.

To me, this also indicates that as a community, we should work to bring residents in areas like these the same services and quality of life that we have in our other neighborhoods.

It is for these reasons that the work of organizations like SPARK, Smart Program for At-Risk Kids, is so important. I am pleased to say that this group, which serves the Bethlehem Area School District, received a $10,000 state grant this week to aid their efforts to educate and assist children and parents living in distressed areas.

Like members of this group, I believe it is crucial to provide necessary assistance for these more unfortunate families and help their children find a niche in society where they can be successful. If we can accomplish that, we can help children and their families make good choices for themselves and others.

Bethlehem's far-off source of clean water

From the cover

the time it hits the sinks of an estimated 112,000 individuals, a drop of water has already had a journey of four to six hours, downhill all the way from Wild Creek and Penn Forest, Bethlehem's two major reservoirs located in Carbon County.

Of the two reservoirs, Penn Forest is slightly larger, with seven miles of shoreline, a maximum depth of 125 feet and a capacity of 6 billion gallons. It flows into the 4.1 billion gallon Wild Creek reservoir, which has six miles of shoreline and measures 135 feet at its deepest point.

Natural quality

Of the surrounding watershed of 22 square miles, the city of Bethlehem maintains close to 13,000 acres in the Wild Creek area, plus another 9,000 at Tunkhannock Creek, which supplements the main supply. The land, which is owned by the Bethlehem Authority, is leased to the city and run by city personnel.
According to Mr. Andrews,

Wild Creek water is of naturally high quality. "We have a natural filtration plant," said Mr. Andrews. The forest floor, with its leaves and branches, helps to pull impurities from the water even before it reaches the reservoir. In addition, 10 pure groundwater streams feed the lakes.

To test the clarity of the water, Mr. Andrews said, a weighted disc is lowered into the water. "We can drop it down 100 feet and see it on the bottom," he said.

A fieldstone building at Wild Creek, marked with an out-of-place "City of Bethlehem" sign, houses the mouth of the pipeline, drawing the water from the lake to a small treatment plant a few hundred yards away.

Inside the plant, a tangle of different colored pipes fills the basement. There, the plant's eight employees monitor the addition of four different chemicals to the raw water. Chlorine disinfects the water and hydrofluosilicic acid commonly known as fluoride - is added to reduce dental problems. Lime and calgon are also added, to alter the acidity of the water and control corrosion of the pipeline.

Larry Enstrom, Chief Water-shed and Water Plant operator, lives across the street from the plant, almost within sight of Wild Creek Reservoir, where he manages day-to-day operations.

He said that the watershed lands, most of which are open to the public, get limited recreational use because nearby Beltzville reservoir offers opportunities for swimming, boating and fishing. We do get hiking, bird watchers and a lot of activity during the hunting seasons," he said.

One of Mr. Enstrom's duties is maintaining 14 miles of 8foot-high fence, which surrounds the two reservoirs. Though motor vehicles, trail bikes and snowmobiles are not allowed on watershed roads, people explore the area as long as they do not cross any boundaries.

heavy snows of the past winter. Creek Reservoirs are "healthy" and at capacity, according to Mr. Enstrom, "We're going into the season with full reservoirs, and that's good," he said.

Due to the

Downhill all the way

The water flows on to Bethlehem without the help of any pumps; the pipeline, which passes underneath the Beltzville reservoir and the Blue Mountain range, is entirely gravity-fed, traveling from an elevation of 820 feet at Wild Creek to Bethlehem, where at Broad and New Streets the elevation is 340 feet.

In September, the pipeline will be interrupted by a new $21.5 million filtration plant, mandated by Pennsylvania's Safe Drinking Water Act enacted in March of 1989 by the Department of Environmental Resources. tougher state regulation calls for the filtration of all surface water supplies, without exception, in an the 23-mile journey it takes before both the Penn Forest and Wild effort to prevent the outbreak of diseases transmitted through water. To date, Bethlehem has not experienced any problems with water-borne diseases,

In Mr. Enstrom's opinion, water is not something the city's residents take for granted.

'I feel that people in Bethlehem are very knowledgeable about the water supply," he said. "We're spending a lot of tax money, and people want to know where it's going."

When the system comes on line, the Wild Creek treatment plant will shut down, and all chemicals will be added at the new facility. There, the water will pass through several filters of coal and sand designed to trap bacteria and protozoa, then will rest in a 7.5 million gallon underground tank, giving the chlorine more

One of the reasons that Bethlehem has not experienced problems with its water is because of Residents of Bethlehem and nearby communities draw 24.5 million gallons of water a day from Wild Creek Reservoir (top), which is fed by streams and springs in the surrounding Penn Forest (left). The water makes a stop at the treatment plant (above) before heading into reaching city faucets. "We have a long time for that chlorine to act once it's been added to the water," Mr. Andrews said, "That goes a long way towards protecting the quality of the water."

Currently, the city pays $822,800 to lease the reservoirs from the Bethlehem Authority. The money goes toward maintenance of the pipelines, water meters and other hardware, and includes payments on the bond issues that were floated to pay for the construction of the reservoirs.

Fees will increase

When Bethlehem was founded in 1917, its water came mainly from the Lehigh River and several wells located at Illick's Mill, which soon proved to be an inadequate supply for the growing city. After years of review and planning, Wild Creek Reservoir, with its 1,076-foot-long dam, was completed in 1941, at a total cost of $4.1 million.

The Penn Forest Reservoir, created to save the water that was lost over the Wild Creek spillway, was completed in 1958. The Tunkhannock Creek project was finished ten years later.

Now, to pay for the construction of the new filtration plant, the Bethlehem Authority has taken out two more bonds totaling close to $83 million. The bonds cover the purchase of the 110 acres of land for the plant, engineering and construction costs, plus four miles of new pipeline that will be installed in the Blue Mountain area.

Because of these costs, the city's fee to the Bethlehem Authority will increase to $3.8 million in 1995, and then $6 million in 1996, in turn doubling or even tripling city water rates.

'It'll be more like doubling rather than tripling," Mr. Andrews said. Paperwork on projected revenues predict an 82 percent increase in water rates would be necessary to maintain the supply by 1995, but Mr. Andrews said the numbers are not reliable.

"That 82 percent may or may not mean anything," he said, "The number is unknown at this point."

According to Mr. Andrews, the average Bethlehem resident has a water bill of $22.02 per quarter, which he said is a low rate by Pennsylvania standards. He said the increase, the bulk of which is due to the new plant, would bring Bethlehem into an average range.

The surrounding woods have 1,500 mixed yellow daffodils.

Daffodils have the ability to compete with low grass. So, it's possible to take a large expanse of lawn and turn in into what will appear to be a natural field of daf-

The only drawback is that you will have to wait for the daffodils' foliage to mature (and replenish the energy in the bulb) before you mow it down.

As the photograph of Mrs. Smith's property shows, daffodils naturalized in the woods can provide an uncommonly beautiful frame for your garden.

Plant bulbs as densely together as the planting instructions allow. With bulbs, more is always better.

And remember, many bulb flowers will multiply by themselves.

Use your flowers. Waning bulb flowers, especially hybridized, or specially bred varieties, should generally be picked.

Another advantage of planting large masses of flowers is that you can out and cut an armful. Cutting off the flower head prevents the flower from going to seed and allows it to put all of its energy back into the bulb.

Planting seeds of community spirit

BY CHRISTOPHER JUDD

It is difficult for Christine Coll to describe what the abandoned lot next to her home on Alaska Street looked like last year. People don't save snapshots of the neighborhood dump.

But the leaning, metal fence surrounding her property betrays the recent past.

'See how my fence is going in? The weeds would grow so high they would bend my fence," she said. Her 3-foot fence slopes backward at the top where, until last spring, weeds grew unmolested by mowers.

"They were as big as that fence back there," she said, pointing to the rear enclosure, which is about 6-feet high.

On Sunday, the South Side lot, once owned by an infamous absentee landlord, will be dedicated as the Alaska/Itaska Streets Community Garden. It is named after the block watch group that is coordinating the Tired of the trash, motor oil, bee hives, and rats, Mrs. Coll, 28, last year asked the city to clean it

"They said, 'If you're so concerned about it why don't you get some Lehigh University students to clean it up?' "she recalled.

Deciding that the rat-infested lot needed to be cleaned up was easy for Mrs. Coll, who lives with her husband and four children at 646 Alaska St. Trying to get permission from the current owner who, until approached, didn't even know she was the owner was another story.

The building that stood on the 40-by-55-foot lot was at one time

The city donated three crabapple tree seedlings and snow fencing. Frank's Nursery & Crafts on Union Boulevard donated gift certificates for rose bushes. Laufer's

'They said 'We're going to be in that area next week. We'll stop by with some chips," said Mrs.

It was not a bad take for a block watch group with eight full-time members.

"The only money we had to spend was about $50" for odds and ends, she said.

Local men tilled the soil and kids rustled up some loose bricks from one of the many aging structures in the neighbor-

First, she needed permission from the current owner. Mrs. Coll said she found out that Mr. Marra had transferred the title into the name of a Palmer Township woman. It was the first the woman had heard of a empty lot in Bethlehem, or a community garden, or the $10,000 lien for unpaid taxes.

Today, the weeds are gone. So

No one in the neighborhood claims to be a gardening expert. The mums, petunias and pansies are going in not far from the onions, carrots, lettuce and collard greens. Hopefully, the flowers will bloom and add some color to Alaska Street.

Mostly, however, Mrs. Coll just wants the garden to keep young children in an area where they can be watched and bring together some of the parents as well.

"We going to hold our next block watch meeting in the garden," she said. "Maybe this way

Greg Funfgeld, 41, is music director and conductor of the 110member Bach Choir, director of music at First Presbyterian Church, and founder of the Musikfest Chorus. He also assists Bach to School, which over the last year exposed up to 7,000 school children to the music of What is it like in the days leading up to this month's Bach Festival?

The preparation for the festival involves a great deal of score study, piano study; working with instrumental and vocal soloists. There is lots to do.

In one sentence, with no commas, how would you describe the Bach Choir?

The Bach Choir is the oldest musical organization in the U.S. dedicated to the study and performance of Bach, exclusively. One comma, sorry.

Just Bach?

It's mandated in our constitution. That's what makes it very what do you and Steve Carlton have in common?

Who's Steve Carlton? He's a Hall of Fame former Phillies pitcher who keeps a pretty nice wine cellar, as do

Oh, OK. Yes, I have an interest in wines and like to share them with friends.

Where do you find young choir singers these days?

We advertise in newspapers when we hold auditions. And there's word of mouth. We have a reputation for quality, and people want to be a part of that. (Many college students perform with the Musikfest Chorus in August.)

For the average concertgoer who may not understand - just what are you conductors doing up there with your animated expressions and flailing arms?

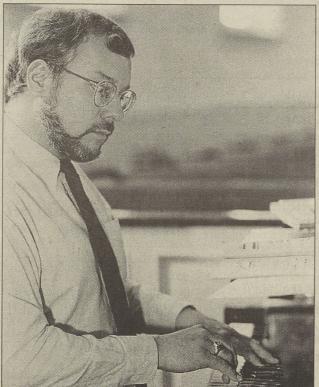

The most important thing as a conductor is to think deeply about the music. Why was the composer inspired by the text? We go into a deeper realm. That's in addition to the technical aspect like the tempo and volume during certain stretches.

Who are the main supporters of the Bach Choir, locals or out-of-towners?

Do you know who you are going to vote for in the May 10

No, I don't. But I will. Has the choir put out any recordings?

The Bach Choir has two record-

What is it like to turn around after a moving score and find hundreds of people with lumps in their throats?

It is a wonderful feeling because you know that you shared something with somebody who listened attentively. I always liked the moment of silence before the applause.

Let's say there's this guy who would like to join the choir, but this person isn't the greatest singer. Do you grade solely on talent, or do you give points for sheer volume?

There are many qualities in the voice. There's volume, vibrato, how it blends with other voices. The person's ability to read music. And then there's what I perceive as a desire to do it.

City police seek sobriety checkpoints

Bethlehem police on Thursday will ask city council's Public Safety Committee to approve a plan to reinstitute sobriety checkpoints in the city.

Police would use $42,063 in state Transportation Department funds to pay for overtime and equipment needed in the operations. Police would set up 10 checkpoints over 15 months. On eight occasions during the same period, three patrol cars will be on the roads specifically looking for drunken drivers and underage drinkers.

Motorists suspected of being under the influence will be tested at the checkpoint. Those who fail will be sent to the Northampton County DUI Center at Bethlehem City Hall for processing. In the late 1980s, Bethlehem discontinued sobriety checkpoints because of costs associated with them.

Auditor sues city seeking $atisfaction

As he had threatened, an auditor hired by Bethlehem in 1992 to filed suit against the city seeking commissions on taxes the city opted not to collect.

In a complaint filed in Northampton County Court, Robert Susko seeks $257,000 in commissions and $186,000 in damages. Mr. Susko was paid 15 to 20 percent of what the city collected. However, city solicitors decided that some of the businesses cited by Mr. Susko were actually manufacturers and exempt from the mercantile tax. The city ended up collecting about $800,000 of the $2.2 million that Mr. Susko had cited.

The suit does not name the businesses in question. But, among those that had their bills reduced by the city were the Coca-Cola and Canada Dry bottling companies and Service Tire Trucking Center, which solicitors ruled were manufacturers.

Zoning board ponders What is a family?'

The city Zoning Hearing Board postponed until May 25 a decision on a plan to run a home for ex-convicts on the South Side. Sister Virginia Longcope wants to house five former inmates referred from local county prisons at a home called Stephen's Place, at 729 Ridge St.

Under city ordinance, the Catholic nun would need to find unpaid mercantile taxes has obtain zoning approval if the property is considered a treatment facility. The city defines such a facility as one that houses "protected classes" of people, including ethnic and religious groups, mental health patients and disabled persons. Sister Longcope contends ex-convicts are not a protected class, rather, they would live as a family. A single family home does not require zoning approval.

Residents of Stephen's Place would stay for about six months, during which they would find jobs and save money.

Firefighters union sued over contract

International Association of Firefighters Local 735 intentionally acted against the interest of two fire inspectors when it negotiated the current contract with the city, according to a suit the pair filed in Northampton County Court.

Thomas Falvey and Terry Meixell said the union: failed to respond to a grievance they filed for alleged salary underpayment in 1993; conducted separate negotiations with the city against the interest of the plaintiffs; limited the number of holidays even though the city offered an increase; failed to address the lack of union representation in the plaintiffs' platoon.

Named in the suit are the union, its president - Alan Hoppard of Bethlehem - and seven

A little above the ears

How in the world could that jumble of letters produce such beautiful harmonies?

Well, it's because it stands for the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America. The local arm of that national group with the mouthful of a name is the Lehigh Valley Harmonizers, who have been gather-ing around the old red-and-white striped pole and singing in perfect unison for years now.

This weekend, their shiver-inspiring harmonies will feature an evening of Broadway Show Stoppers, including music from "A Chorus Line," "Phantom of the Opera" and "West Side Story."

The highlight of the evening will be the a cappella skills of The Classic Collection, 1982 International Quartet Champions and one of the best quartets in the country. Performing with the Lehigh Valley Harmonizers, who won the 1992 Mid-Atlantic District Intermediate Chorus Championship, will be three

If you didn't catch any of the performances in this season's Chamber Music Series sponsored by the Chamber Music Society of Bethlehem, don't miss this Friday's.

First of all, it is the last performance in the spectacular series. Secondly, it features the remarkably cohesive work of the Wister Quartet from Haverford College.

Though only in existence for a half-dozen seasons, the quartet displays a wonderful musical bond that has left critics uttering such heaping praise as "glowing refinement," "warm and smooth tone," and "fresh, stunningly alert and, most of all, musically cohesive.

On Friday the group will perform Mozart's "Quartet in C Major," Brahms' "Quartet in A Minor" and Shostakovich's "Piano Quintet," featuring pianist Marcantonio Barone.

Sidewalk Art Show

Fun and Entertainment

10 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Sunday, all along Main and Broad Sts., 868-1513.

Forget those stuffy indoor museums. You can get your art in the great outdoors this weekend.

Works from hundreds artists will line the streets of Downtown Bethlehem during the annual Sidewalk Art Show presented by the Bethlehem Fine Arts Commission. There will be an invitational exhibition by nationally recognized artists in the Sun Inn courtyard, where Bethlehem's own watercolorist Fred Bees will be painting and exhibiting his art. Also student artists from local schools will display their artwork in the scholastic exhibition.

And the talent won't be just of the visual kind - there will also be live music throughout the day, including Phil Stahl and a jazz trio on Saturday and John Wesley Dickson, The Earthriders and Anne Hills on Sunday.

work in illustrating and writing to bring young children this lovely and entertaining tale.

For the rest of us, the Bethlehem Public Library is dusting off its shelves of old books and offering them during its annual book sale. Thousands of titles will be available, many for as little as 50 cents, including technical and reference manuals, paperbacks and recent best sellers. There will also be records and other recordings available.

One of them has a conscience that gets in the way. But not for too long.

White Fang 2: Myth of the White Wolf (PG)

AMC Four, Palmer Township This is the sequel to the 1992 adventure "White Fang," about a boy and his half-dog, half-wolf and their adventures in the wild. This time the fearless pair must help save an Indian tribe from starvation by finding caribou.

Directed by Ken Olin, the film stars Scott Bairstow as the kid, Charmaine Craig, Alfred Molina and Geoffrey Lewis.

Four Weddings and a Funeral (R)

The Boyd, Bethlehem; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; County Theater, Doylestown; AMC Four, Palmer Township Director Mike Newell has given us something truly unique: a love story presented in an unusual and fabulously clever manner.

Hugh Grant is splendid as Charles, an Englishman who is consistently late and completely incapable of committing to a serious relationship. As the film opens, Charles rushes to a wedding, in which he is the best man, dressing en route and naturally forgetting to bring the wedding ring. After the somewhat improvised ceremony, he meets Carrie, a lovely, somewhat frisky American vixen played by Andie MacDowell. Smitten by the American's charm and blunt nature, Charles falls easily into her arms, only to watch her leave for home the next morning.

The remainder of the movie follows Mr. Grant as he goes from wedding to wedding to funeral to wedding. Nearly every scene takes place either in or around a chapel, and at every ceremony he runs into Carrie. This fiendish plot technique, the magic of screenwriter Richard Curtis, allows us to watch as Charles slowly comes to understand the meaning of true love, overcoming his natural fears of R.H.

Mighty Ducks 2 (PG)

sticking Ducks are back on the ice for some more sampling from the classic kids-vs.-adults move 'Bad News Bears.'

This time fame is theirs, along with all the temptations and silliness that entails. The bad guys in this version are - guess the Cold War has left us without a ready supply of goons — those nasty foreigners from Iceland.

Emilio Estevez ("Repo Man") returns for another batch of abuse as the begrudgingly kindhearted lawyer-turned-hockeycoach. And all those little illbehaved (but, darn, if they ain't cute) kids are back, too.

Naked Gun 331/3: The Final Insult (PG-13)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley

Three words for the type of humor presented in the three Naked Gun films: lowest common denominator. This is by no means a criticism.

In "Naked Gun 33 1/3" allegedly the final installment in the trilogy of Lt. Frank Drebin, the boys from TV's short-lived Police Squad" are up to their old tricks, as well as a few new ones. Leslie Neilsen, the incorrigible Drebin, has gone into retirement and now plays house-husband for his lovely wife, Priscilla Presley. Naturally, O.J. Simpson and George Kennedy manage to talk Drebin out of his pink slippers and back into a squad car, being as he is the only one incompetent enough to catch the bad guys, in this case a group of terrorists.

The plot is, at best, predictable, which is fine because it really is the least important facet of the film. The fun lies in watching the brutal onslaught of sight gags, physical comedy, and general silliness we have all grown to love (or hate).

Philadelphia (PG-13)

United Artists, Allentown

Jonathan Demme, the director of the Academy Award winner for best picture of 1991, "Silence of the Lambs," returns with, believe it or not, the first mainstream Hollywood film to deal with the touchy subject of AIDS. It's been over 10 years since the disease first began claiming its victims. The story explores both the isolation AIDS sufferers feel, and suggests that if homophobic hysteria didn't surround the disease then AIDS discrimination might

In the City of Brotherly Love, Tom Hanks portrays hard-working gay lawyer Andrew Beckett who is fired from the firm where he works after being diagnosed with AIDS. Beckett decides to sue the law firm that wrongfully discriminates against him.

After nine lawyers refuse to take his case, Beckett finally hires Joe Miller, a heterosexual, homophobic personal injury lawyer played by Denzel Washington. Jason Robards, Mary Steenburgen and Antonio Banderas also star.

Schindler's List (R)

United Artists, Easton

Director Steven Spielberg once again turns his creative eye toward making a serious, mature film. By some accounts, it looks like he's finally gotten it right with this three hour, 15 minute epic about the Holocaust, filmed in black and white. Themes of corruption, greed and unintentional heroism are explored in this story adapted from Thomas Keneally's book of the same name. With frequent use of a moving, hand-held camera, operated by Spielberg for many sequences, the film often resembles a documentary.

After the Nazis blitzkrieg their way to victory in 1939 Poland, registered Jews began entering Krakow at the rate of 10,000 per week. Oskar Schindler (Liam Neeson), a member of the Nazi Party, makes arrangements to run a company to be staffed by Jewish slaves.

In an unsympathetic portrayal, Schindler's actions are motivated primarily by profit. Itzhak Stern (Ben Kingsley) is his Jewish accountant and right-hand man. In great detail Spielberg examines the descent of Jews from refugee status in Krakow to their confinement in a ghetto by 1941, the creation of a forced labor camp in 1942, and the extermination of the ghetto dwellers in

Grumpy Old Men

AMC Plaza Theatre, Whitehall If you like crusty curmudgeons, then here's a film for you.

Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau, two of Hollywood's finest character actors, who teamed up for such classics as The Fortune Cookie" and "The Odd Couple," are reunited in this light slapstick romp that also has its bittersweet moments. With a story that takes place from Thanksgiving to Christmas, John (Lemmon) and Max (Matthau) play aging, widowed Wabasha, Minn., neighbors in their 60s who have enjoyed playing pranks on each other throughout their lives. Their mischievous ways are rekindled when Ariel, a free-spirited widow played by Ann-Margaret, moves in across the street. She puts some spark back into the old boys' lives and soon they are a fussin' and a feudin' for her affections.

Subplots abound. John's daughter (Daryl Hannah), estranged from her husband, is the object of affection for Max's son (Kevin Pollak). And John, besides trading crude insults with Max, faces the threat of foreclosure on his house by an IRS agent (Buck Henry). Burgess Meredith also appears as John's senile but still lustful 94-year-old father who dispenses inappropriate romantic advice to his son. Directed by Daniel Petrie, who did "Mystic Pizza."

Ace Ventura: Pet Detective (PG)

The Roxy, Northampton

Standup-comic-turned-movie actor-turned-TV-series-star Jim Carrey, the goofy, rubber-limbed white-guy of "In Living Color" whose running routines have included Fire Marshal Bill, is back on the big screen as the star and title character of this whacked-out comedy.
When the Miami Dolphins' mascot and quarterback mysteriously disappear only a week before the team is slated to play in the Super Bowl, Ace Ventura (Carrey) is put on the case. This will hopefully be better than Damon Wayans', ("Color's" Homey the Clown) attempt at big screen stardom in his woefully misguided star vehicle, "Mo Money." Carrey co-wrote the story, which also stars Courteney Cox, Sean Young and Tone Loc.

On Deadly Ground (R)

The Roxy, Northampton

Action-film star Steven Seagal returns to the silver screen after his last commercial success, "Under Siege," in another big budget action blockbuster. Seagal, in his directorial debut, casts himself as an oil-rig worker who winds up fighting with his bad guy ex-boss (A greasy-looking, dark-haired Michael Caine) who's messing up the Alaskan wilder-

Our hero teams up with environmentalist Joan Chen ("The Last Emperor," "Twin Peaks") to protect the area's people. Expect lots of gunplay and things that blow up real good amidst the consciousness raising.

The Piano (R)

The Roxy, Northampton

Nominated for an impressive eight Academy Awards, including best picture and best director (Jane Campion), the buzz is that Holly Hunter's performance here as a mute mail-order bride has made her a shoo-in to receive the Oscar for best actress.

Hunter portrays strong-willed Ada, who, along with her 9-year-old daughter (Anna Paquin), arrives in a remote harbor in 19th century New Zealand to fulfill the terms of an arranged marriage. They plan to begin a new life in the home of a white colonialist, a repressed and racist landowner (Sam Neill). He has her possessions carried from the boat to his house, except for her piano, which he trades for some property with another Englishman (Harvey Keitel). Her new husband's narrow views and cold-as-ice demeanor pushes Ada into the arms of Keitel, who offers her an arrangement in which she can earn back her piano from him.

Alley cats enjoy their spare time

BY TOM HARPER

hile many of today's fashions, attitudes and musical tastes seem to change hourly, it's good to know that there is one social institution that has remained constant.

Bowling alleys.

Bowling alleys present a slice of Americana that you won't find advertised in your J. Crew or Victoria's Secret catalogues (just what is her secret anyway?). Dockers and taffeta dresses have as much a place here as Robert Dole does at a rally for President Clinton.

The sport traditionally has emphasized the blue collar worker motif: work 9-to-5, eat dinner, kiss the family goodbye, bowl a few games, pound a few beers, go home and do it again the next night.

Just what is the fascination with bowling, especially in the summer? For that, you have to go where the keglers are.

Perhaps this is because a bowling alley is the only place where a person can continually end up in the gutter and still get another chance.

For obvious reasons bowling is a perfect winter sport, but many still find their enjoyment in bowling alleys throughout the spring and summer.

Some places offer weekend "midnight bowling," in which the lights are turned low, obviously for a romantic atmosphere, and specially colored pins are mixed among the white ones that can win a bowler some dough or a free game if a strike is thrown.

On a recent evening, a man sat staring into the lanes in an

Eagles jacket, navy blue hat pants, and smoking a Marlboro, obviously obeying the unwritten dress code of bowling. When asked why he wasn't bowling, he responded, "No comment." When asked what he liked best about the sport, he said, "No comment."

Shortly thereafter, his son came over to the table to speak to dearold silent dad. The lanky 22year-old looked like a bowler with his polo towel shirt, draped over the shoulder and, of course, those god-awful shoes fit only for the color-blind. When asked about his presence in the alley, he offered just one poignant comment: "Ask my dad."

Meanwhile, three kids were busy marveling at the centrifugal forces of a nickel spinning on a nearby table. Another old man, wearing a brown-and-white button-down shirt with his long gray hair concealed under his Coors Light hat, high-fived his daughter in obvious jubilation.

Many spoke in the vernacular language befitting this environment. One man used soothing words of praise to his aqua bowling ball he nicknamed "Hammer," going so far as to kiss his small, round friend. Another created new words for the English vocabulary after each missed opportunity for a split. And any 7-10 split or gutter ball produced innovative expressions of disbelief among the crowd.

If there was one consistent pattern, it was the religious practice of etiquette in this guttered temple. If a bowler in one lane sees a bowler to his/her right or

The Gazelle just never stops winning.

Janelle Thomas, Liberty's star sophomore cross country and track runner, showed the folks down in Philadelphia why she is the best runner in the state, and one of the best in the country.

At the Penn Relays at Franklin Field on Thursday, Ms. Thomas ran the fifth-fastest time ever turned in the 3,000-meters (9:33.61) en route to winning the event's championship.

She outran the event's top seed and favorite Erin Davis of Saratoga Springs, N.Y., this year's national cross country champion, by 14 seconds. Ms. Thomas atoned in dramatic fashion for last year's performance in the Penn Relays, where she injured her left hip, which caused her to miss both the East Penn Conference and District XI championships.

There's not much left for Ms. Thomas to accomplish. She already owns EPC, district and PIAA titles in cross country. After qualifying in New York with a third-place finish in November, she placed fourth overall at the Foot Locker Cross Country Championships at Balboa Park in San Diego on Dec. 11 in a time of 17:39.9. The time was a 33-second improvement from her achievement in the event the previous year, when she finished 12th.

left about ready to throw, then he/she will wait until the other bowler has done so.

On the flipside, however, the one rule that is rarely heeded is that all beverages, food and smoking are prohibited in the lanes. The rule is obeyed about as much as a college drinking

Perhaps that is why people come to bowl in the summer. Maybe since alcohol these days is shunned in public, and smoking isn't allowed anywhere anymore, those with a penchant for the two vices congregate in this atmosphere. And besides, exercise can be found here. The biceps get lots of work (the bowling-ball and the 16-ounce curl) and there is some walking involved, albeit seven or so steps at a time.

A few nights later, at another bowling establishment, the scenery was pretty much the same: the carpet with the weird shapes on it (blue this time, not red), the ball lustre machine (which makes your ball look and feel like a professional's but won't make you play like one), the jukebox, the endless racks of black and uniquely colored balls and, of course, that odd-mingled smell of sweat, beer, and feet.

It was glove night (primarily because virtually everyone was wearing those wrist braces that most bowlers wear for support and others to look like they know what they're doing). One of the more vocal participants wore a Coed Naked Bowling shirt which read, "Keep your balls in the lane and your mind in the gutter." He, like most people on this night, spent his time doing just the opposite.

The arcade games were popuest in improving their bowling game came secondary to buttkicking and machine gun-blasting their computerized nemeses.

Upon leaving the alleys, it was clear that there is no definitive reason why so many people prefer to bowl in the summer instead of exploring the vast outdoors.

For some, the allure of the sport is found in the opportunity lated by kids whose vested inter- to improve on the pinpoint release of the ball, which could stand between a strike and a gutter ball.

For others, it's a fun way to spend a few bucks and hang out while making complete idiots out of themselves while trying in vain to imitate the greats. (We're still waiting for some names).

As for for the rest? No comment.

LLS COUNTRY CLUB

TIPS FOR PLAYERS

Woodland Hills Country Club has been open since 1964. Its 6.300 yards include a great variety of holes, making this course one of the area's most interesting to play.

The course is long, but many of its holes offer wide fairways and areas of rough clear of trees and shrubs.

That means this is the place to wale away with your driver. If you're on target, you'll get a good chance for a birdie. But if you miss the fairway, you may still get a decent shot at the green on some holes.

Seven of the holes stretch farther than 400 yards from the white tee.

The 18th hole (par 5) holds the distinction of being the longest on the course at 508 yards. It's one of the area's best finishing holes, offering great opportunity for drama for golfers who know how to handle a fairway wood. But, its steeply sloped green can turn an eagle putt into a bogey in the blink of an eye.

The shortest hole is the 15th (par 3, 132 yards).

The course begins and ends with par 5s. The 470-yard first hole has a creek running across the fairway about 100 yards from the green. Should you decide to lay-up like most players prefer to do, keep your shot to the left side of the fairway, avoiding a large tree that guards the green. But, go too far left and a small pond awaits your ball.

Water also plays a role on the sixth hole (par 3, 162 yards). An uphill hole, it features a small pond directly in front of the tee box. The green slopes back to front and evil pot bunkers defend the front. Make sure your tee shot reaches the green safely in one try.

The most difficult hole on the course is the third (par 4, 371 yards). Bunkers appear to the lower left and to the right of the fairway approaching the green. A well-placed lengthy drive, particularly to the right side of the fairway, is the best solution to nearing the green. But the second shot adds further difficulty by giving players an uphill lie which makes playing the hole seem longer.

What's considered to be the easiest hole — the 15th — really isn't easy. The elevated green is surrounded by a bunker and a wall about three feet high in the back of it. Keep the tee shot with your mid-iron short, or else any ball rolling back off the green will require at least two shots to get you back on.

And then there's the 11th hole (par 5, 496 yards) which has a double dog leg. A tee shot 200 yards or more would be ideal. The second and third shots create an uphill lie; keep a lay-up shot to the right side of the fairway for the best angle to the green.

What Is A Golf School?

We believe it is vital to take KNOWLEDGE and learn how to APPLY it through EXERCISE so you are able to EXECUTE with RELAXATION & CONCENTRATION that will REPEAT leading to CONFIDENCE, TRUST, & ASSURANCE for best potential results and lowest scores. You can't learn these things or put them all together in a quick fix 1/2 hour ineffective lesson. The best potential for game improvement and more enjoyment is a professionally designed golf school.

Forgotten Pickering

everal Lehigh Valley residents played prominent roles both in the creation of our nation and in its government. Unfortunately their stories are often forgotten. One function of a local historian is to see that their significant deeds do not pass into dark oblivion. For example, consider the accomplishments of Timothy Pickering of Easton.

Timothy Pickering, born in Salem, Mass., in 1745, graduated from Harvard in 1763 and was admitted to the bar in 1768. An ardent advocate of American independence, he joined the Continental Army, serving as General Washington's adjutant-general and from 1780-1785 as quartermaster-general. After the Revolution he moved to Philadelphia.

In 1787, the government of Pennsylvania sent him to the Wyoming Valley to represent the state in a dispute there between the Pennsylvania and Connecticut settlers who had purchased valley land from the state of Connecticut. A bitter and increasingly violent dispute arose between the conflicting groups, a fussing and feuding called the Pennamite War. With considerable struggle and no little trickery, Pickering's men arrested and took the big, burly and rugged Yankee leader, John Franklin, to Philadelphia. Other Yankees were later taken to the county jail in Easton, only to escape, thanks to a negligent jail-

Charles G. Hafner is a retired social studies teacher who lives in Bethlehem

Pickering was also assigned the responsibility of organizing newly formed Luzerne County.

After serving as commissioner in the Pennamite War, Pickering moved to Easton. In 1789, he and Samuel Sitgreaves served as area delegates to the Pennsylvania Constitutional Convention. Sitgreaves, another nationally prominent local figure, would later have the noteworthy distinction of serving as prosecutor in the first trial for treason (U.S. vs. John Fries) and as chairman of the first committee of the House of Representatives to prepare articles of impeachment (charges brought against Sen. Blount of Tennessee).

Pickering served as postmaster-general of the United States under President George Washington from 1791 to 1795. He holds the unique distinction of United States history of having served as both secretary of war and secretary of state simultaneously, two posts he held in 1795, after the resignation of Edmund Randolph as secretary of state. President Washington replaced him as secretary of war by appointing James McHenry to the post. Pickering continued on as secretary of dismissal by President John Adams in 1800.

Policy differences developed between President Adams and the outspoken Pickering, a Hamiltonian Federalist, largely over the issue of relations with the new revolutionary government of France and commercial relations with Great Britain. Pickering's New England roots undoubtedly influenced his advocacy of closer commercial ties with the British, a position strongly opposed by the Jeffersonian Republicans, a political party that was forming in opposition to the Federalists.

The arrest of John Fries here in Bethlehem for his leadership in the area's Fries Rebellion, a tax revolt, and the court's subsequent guilty verdict for the charge of treason, became the basis for a charge of tyranny against President Adams and staunch Federalists like Pickering, despite the fact that President Adams had pardoned Fries, who was much better at persuasive oral presentation than military and political organization.

In the election of 1800, with the nation divided politically between Federalist and Republican parties, despite President Washington's clearly questionable advice against formation of political parties, all electors voted according to party loyalty. Thus there was a tie in the electoral vote for the presidency between Thomas Jefferson and his vice presidential candidate Aaron Histories and legends

The 12th Amendment was added to the Constitution (ratified in 1804) calling for separate elections of the president and vice president in the Electoral College. Hamilton incurred the bitter enmity of the very ambitious but would later kill him in their ed States development.

Pickering returned in December 1800 to Easton. He returned in late 1801 to his native New England after selling his Pennsylvania lands. There he took up residence in Salem, the town of his birth. In 1802 he was elected U.S. senator from Massachusetts, a position he held until 1811. He continued his ardent advocacy of a pro-British policy, strongly opposing the War of 1812, as did many other New Englanders. His death in 1829 saw the passing of not very scrupulous Burr, who an important figure in early Unit-here wasn't a lot of traf-fic at 6 a.m. When I pulled into the parking lot of the Monocacy Nature Center only three other vehicles were there, and two of them belonged to my birding friends.

The other one I rightly guessed belonged to a fisherman.

I was late and knew they would be far down the trail, so I opted to walk the railroad tracks because it was more direct. Besides, the path through the middle of the park was really muddy.

Almost as soon as I gathered

I quickly forgot about the muffled sound of traffic as I walked farther along the this stream rich with food. Com- same time. What a thrill it can be tracks.

Yellow-shafted flickers feeding on the ground seemed to take off from everywhere as I approached the open grassy area on my right. Once there, the gurgling of a house wren perched atop a honeysuckle tangle caused me to stop

But 10 years, two children and a whole different set of values later, I set foot for the first time on this piece of land. The local birding experts had told me that this ing on to less developed areas. was THE PLACE to go, especially if you wanted to see warblers.

As I noted the new plantings of shrubs and trees along the edge of the grass, my attention was drawn back to the woods by the flutelike song of the wood thrush. Somewhere in the trees right migrants. above me was a blue-gray gnatcatcher making its almost inaudible high-pitched "tse-tse-tse" call.

The thought crossed my mind that the first time I was here I could barely identify that bird by sight, let alone by its call.

As I passed the quarry on my right, I noticed four or five small birds flitting around in the top of a big oak tree that was just beginning to bud out. I knew they had I feel strange every time I bird to be warblers; I just didn't know Warblers travel great distances and sometimes in great flocks during the night and often stop at daybreak to refuel. In birding parlance that's called a "warbler fallout," and a birder finding a mixed flock of warblers is like a golfer shooting a hole in one.

I quickened my steps as I saw my friends in the distance. I paused for a moment to look at a stand of trillium that was growing in the rich earth under some trees. I haven't seen these wildflowers in many places and certainly didn't expect to find them here.

As I greeted my friends my mind was on some literature I had just recently read. It had been put out by the Bethlehem Parks Department back in 1974 and it said: "Welcome to the Monocacy Nature Sanctuary. This area has been set aside by the City of Bethlehem so that anyone who passes by here may stop and enjoy the beauty and tranquility of nature. news & notes

Bird watch

The wood warblers are showing up everywhere. Reports of black-throated blue, blackthroated green, black and white, yellow-rumped, cerulean, Nashville, blackpoll, Native gardening and others have been received.

Green Pond is still a hot spot. This week birders have reported a cattle egret, double-crested cormorant, greater and lesser yellowlegs, snipe, purple martin, chestnut-sided warbler, and least, pectoral and solitary sandpipers around the pond or in the flooded fields nearby.

Another unusual shorebird, a dunlin, was at Spring Creek, off Route 100 south of Trexlertown.

Evening grosbeaks, purple finches and pine siskins are still migrating northward. They can be found refueling at feeders.

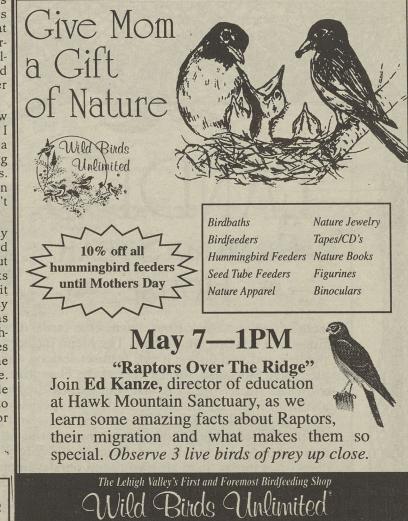

Hellertown Reservoir is a good place to bird. A red-breasted nuthatch was there this week, along with rose-breasted grosbeaks, indigo buntings, and a northern oriole.

Wood thrushes are now calling. Listen for their beautiful song to come from any good-sized wood lot, especially late in the day. It's a six-note call that ascends on the third and descends on the sixth tone.

On Saturday, May 7, at the Wildlands Conservancy Emmaus from 9 a.m. to noon, two certified Master Gardeners will give an in-depth look at gardening with native plants for natural land-scaping. Members can attend free; the fee is $2 for nonmembers. Call 965-4397 for further information.

Birding trip

The Lehigh Valley Audubon Society will conduct a birding trip to Jacobsburg State Park on Saturday, May 7, at 6 a.m. Meet at the K-Mart shopping center on Tilghman Street, just off Route 309. No fee is charged.

HEAR YOU SIGNED UP TO

PLAY SOFTBALL AT RECESS

I MEAN, IT'S FUN PLAYING BASEBALL WITH JUST YOU, BECAUSE WE BOTH GET TO PITCH, BAT, RUN AND CATCH ALL AT ONCE

WELL, SPORTS ARE GOOD FOR THEY TEACH TEAMWORK AND COOPERATION. YOU LEARN HOW TO WIN GRACIOUSLY AND ACCEPT DEFEAT. IT BUILDS

JUST ARGUE BE WITH TEAMS OVER THE RULES AND ASSIGNED WE MAKE UP! POSITIONS AND AN UMPIRE! THAT'S THE PART I LIKE! IT'S BORING PLAYING IT THE REAL YAW! M

BUT THIS WILL

EVERY TIME I'VE BUILT CHAR-ACTER, I'VE REGRETTED IT! I DON'T WANT TO LEARN TEAM-WORK! I DON'T WANT TO LEARN ABOUT WINNING AND LOSING! HECK, I DON'T EVEN WANT TO COMPETE! WHAT'S WRONG WITH JUST HAVING FUN BY YOURSELF.

SEE, THAT'S ANOTHER DO YOU EVEN KNOW HOW PROBLEM! TO PLAY THE REAL WAY ? SUPPOSE THEY MAKE ME A HALFBACK CAN T TACKLE THE SHORTSTOP OR NOT?

WHEN YOU GROW UP, IT'S NOT ALLOWED

LONG-TERM PROTECTION AT $24,000.

It's the kind of comprehensive coverage even Democrats and Republicans could agree on: a steel unibody with Side Impact Protection System, anti-lock brakes, as well as driver and passenger side supplemental restraint system (Dual air bags). So why wait around for Washington's plan when ours is avail-(Dual air bags). So why wait around for washington's plan able right now: the affordability and protection of a Volvo 940 Wagon.
