MUSIKFEST AT 30

Getting together

By CAROLE GORNEY
Special to the Bethlehem Press

If you lived in the Lehigh Valley 30 years ago this month, you might remember hearing about a small festival with a German-sounding name that was being held for the first time under the bridge on the north side of the Lehigh River in historic Bethlehem. It was being promoted as a way to bring the community together, and to encourage people to visit the Christmas City beyond just the December holiday.

If you went to Musikfest that first weekend, you would remember that festivities were pretty much limited to the large white tent where polka bands played almost nonstop, and an enthusiastic crowd of people danced and ate and drank. Up on Main Street, however, you'd never guess anything was going on.

A week later it was a different story. Some downtown merchants set up tables and chairs on the sidewalks, and others staffed makeshift booths to sell food and other merchandise to the hundreds of people Musikfest was already attracting. There was no going back.

Thirty years later, Musikfest is now the nation's largest free music festival, and that milestone and the many people who helped make it possible were honored at special opening ceremonies held last Friday night. Jeff Parks, the visionary who helped create

State ID law put on hold

'We need to encourage people to vote'

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Commonwealth Court in Harrisburg heard closing arguments Aug. 1 in the Voter ID Law case that has pitted Republicans against Democrats in the state legislature. No Democrat voted for the law when the Republican-controlled state legislature passed it in March 2012.

A legal challenge to Pennsylvania's law was filed by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of a then-93-year-old woman and others.

The law, if enacted, will require all voters to present an approved photo identification card at the polls prior to voting.

However, Pennsylvania state attorneys arguing the case agreed to extend the injunction in place since 2012, regardless of the court's pending decision, not to enforce the law until after the November 2013 elections.

Supporters argue that the law is needed to guard against voter fraud. However, the lawyers for the

Dent wants NCAA to be accountable

By BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

While Division I college athletes bring in the bucks for their colleges, many of them are actually forced to live near or below the poverty level. Once an athlete's eligibility is used up, he's put out to pasture. If he makes the mistake of accepting a suit or a free dinner, the NCAA can swoop down and destroy him.

In the case of Penn State, 14 years of Joe Paterno's victories were erased without a hearing. And scholarships were taken away from high school students who know nothing about the Sandusky scandal.

So it's about time that the NCAA itself be held accountable. Penn State fan Charlie Dent and Ohio State fan Joyce Beatty are from different parties and are doubtless bitter rivals whenever those teams clash. But they have united in proposing legislation that will soften the association's draconian sanctions by mandating administrative hearings with a right of appeal.

"Too often, I open the Musikfest, ArtsQuest and SteelStacks, presided over the ceremonies, but shared the spotlight with Bethlehem Mayor John Callahan.

In a special announcement, Callahan told the surprised audience that a part of South Bethlehem's Third Street from the Banana Factory to SteelStacks was being renamed "Linny's Mile" in honor of philanthropist Marlene "Linny" Fowler, who died in February. Fowler was a major benefactor to Arts Quest and its many projects in Bethlehem that benefit minority and disadvantaged children.

Also receiving special posthumous recognition was John E. Walson Jr., whose multi-media Service Electric Co. televises both Musikfest and the IronPigs minor league baseball games. Walson's contributions were credited with helping make Musikfest what it is today.

Callahan, who is serving his 10th and last year as mayor, was in for a surprise of his own during the ceremony, when he was presented with a glass replica of the iron furnaces, which he and Parks worked to preserve after the Bethlehem Steel plant closed. Parks praised Callahan and the city government for its cooperation over the years. "SteelStacks is a classic example of what can happen when entities work together," Parks said. Callahan in turn credited the 10-day festival with helping "reinvent this old steel town" which is "far better for Musikfest."

Noting the price of admission to Musikfest is the same as it was 30 years ago - free - Parks said, "It wouldn't have been possible without our wonderful volunteers and sponsors, who this year have donated $2.5 million in cash and in-kind services." Among those 130 different sponsors, three were presented with the Founder's Award for their outstanding contributions.

The awards went to Darlington Exterior Services for years of power washing of public places, to the Hotel Bethlehem for providing accommodations for performers for the past 26 years, and to St. Luke's University Health Network for its contributions to all events for almost three decades.

Among the thousands of Musikfest volunteers over the years, 23 have served the entire 30 years of the event. Special recognition was given to Paul Fister, who then read the names of the other triple-decade volunteers.

In keeping with tradition, singer-songwriter John Gorka, who was the very first person to perform at Musikfest, was on stage at the 30th-year opening ceremony to sing The Youngblood's "Get Together." This was the song the Moravian College graduate opened Musikfest with in 1984.

state, at the beginning of the trial, which started in 2012, could cite no cases of voter fraud statewide.

Opponents of the law argue that the law is an attempt by Republican lawmakers to limit access to the polls for the poor, the young, the elderly and minorities, most of whom they believe would vote for Democrats.

This view gained ground when, in June 2012, House Majority Leader Mike Turzai, R-Allegheny, said the new law would help Republican Presidential candidate Mitt Romney beat Obama in Pennsylvania.

"Why do they want to enforce a voter ID law to begin with?" said Bethlehem NAACP director Esther Lee in an interview. "We are all American citizens. Your name and signature are on the rolls.

"We need to be encouraging people to vote," said Lee.

Lee said she believes ID the law is aimed at people of color because the majority of the population is "turning brown."

"Politicians are looking at that [voter ID law] like a 10-year plan to ensure they win future elections," Lee said.

She also took issue with the redistricting that allows politicians to remain in power when populations move across congressional district lines.

"This realignment of districts is only to favor the future of the Republican Party; to ensure their future success winning elections," said Lee.

paper and I read a new story about how the NCAA has mismanaged its investigations," Dent said at an Aug. 1 news conference. He said the ones who suffer most "are our nation's young student athletes." Dent said he thinks those young minds and bodies are what the NCAA should protect.

The NCAA Act will require annual baseline concussion testing in certain contact sports. Four-year scholarships will no longer be revoked if a student is injured or loses his athletic prowess. Before sanctions are imposed, against either a college or student, there will be at least one administrative hearing and a right to appeal.

"This bill will ensure that students - the individuals the NCAA is charged to protect - will, once again, come first in collegiate athletics," said Congresswoman Beatty.

BETHLEHEM ZONING

Advice: Always bring a neighbor

By BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

In zoning cases, use variances are tough. You have to convince a Zoning Hearing Board to permit a land use that is contrary to the plain provisions of the zoning ordinance. Bethlehem Township's strict board has refused to grant one in recent memory, but they've never seen Bethlehem Attorney Jim Holzinger. He worked his magic with Bethlehem's zoners at their July 24 meeting.

Representing Chris Brown, Holzinger sought a use variance for a vacant lot at 822-824 Atlantic St. that would permit a two-family dwelling in an area where only single-family homes are allowed. With folksy charm that belied a great deal of advance preparation, Holzinger spun a tale that made it seem as if his client was doing Bethlehem a favor, and not the reverse. He introduced testimony showing that a single-family home at that location would cost almost double what would be realized from the sale. He showed numerous other doubles and apartment buildings in the area, including massive apartment buildings. But his secret weapon, as always, was the next door neighbor.

Joan Duser, who owns the property next door and grew up in that area, told the Zoning Hearing Board that "it'll be nice." She said she's happy to see something being built because "the hedges haven't been cut in five years."

By a 4-0 vote, Brown had his variance. Bill Fitzpatrick, just confirmed for a new five-year term on the board, joked with Duser that Chairman Gus Loupos "might come down and cut your hedges."

Afterward, Attorney Holzinger gave this piece of advice. "I always say, 'bring a neighbor.'"

In other business, zoners allowed Michael Kehl to convert a beauty salon at his 914 Linden St. property into a residential unit. He and wife Sarah will live upstairs and rent out the first floor. Sarah told the board she was concerned that someone would break into a salon after hours when it is empty, and would feel safer if someone was living there. The vote was 4-0.

A third matter on the agenda, an off-premises billboard at 1501 Gary St., was continued. Attorney Kevin Kelleher, representing Atlantic Holdings, asked for the extension because the actual application deviates slightly from the application. That raises questions of notice to the public.

ATTORNEY Jim Holzinger sought a use variance for a vacant lot at 822-824 Atlantic St. that would permit a two-family dwelling in an area where only single-family homes are allowed.

Gracedale costs raise concern

By CAROL SMITH
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Gracedale's chief administrator confirmed for Northampton County Council that the county-owned nursing home has exceeded its six-month spending plan by 1 percent.

However, Gracedale Administrator Millard D. Freeman told council members at their Aug. 1 meeting "it is too early to predict if [the nursing home] would be overbudget for 2013."

Savings from policy changes and Medicaid reimbursements have not yet been entered on the nursing home's balance sheets for the year.

In the nursing home industry, a resident receives care immediately but the medical reimbursement to the facility often lags by six months. At the end of June, the nursing home had approximately $2 million in state and federal subsidies as well as uncollected payments from residents. Some outstanding payments date back to last year.

On the positive cash flow side, Freeman said Gracedale is expected to sell some bed licenses and become a 688-bed facility to be more competitive and to keep costs down.

Currently, the census is at 647 beds and there have been no additional staff hired. As the census rises to full capacity, Freeman said state health laws will require hiring additional staff, which will keep overtime costs down.

NORTHAMPTON COUNTY

On the negative cash flow side, Freeman said that $1.9 million in contract-negotiated raises and $2.4 million in the rising cost of fringe benefits have been factored into the request for $5.9 million as the 2014 county contribution. Also included in Gracedale's 2014 budget is the $700,000 for new generators, for which the county recently borrowed money.

The county's auditor is checking to determine if this capital expense can be deleted from Gracedale's bottom line.

In response to Freeman's numbers analysis, councilmen Lamont McClure and Bob Werner said they were reassured that the budget would get back in line and the end of the year would find Gracedale on target with its expenses.

In other business, council unanimously overrode Stoffa's veto of a measure it passed at its July 18 meeting. By an earlier 5-3 vote, council changed the way professional-services vendors are selected as a response to an ongoing legal dispute over Gracedale's non-emergency medical transportation contract. The change in the law would prevent future use of the competitive sealed bid process by the executive as a way to go around council's vote in the selection of vendors. Stoffa vetoed council's action.

Council's override now prevents the county executive from using a competitive sealed bid process as an alternative if county council has previously voted down a vendor. See NORCO on Page A7

Sabor Latin Festival takes center stage

DISC JOCKEY sensation Justin Lopez has almost everybody on their feet as the 8-year-old from Bethlehem mixes music, sings and dances during a performance in the Arts Quest Center during the Sabor Latin Festival. The young performer's stage name is DJ Ju5tin because he turned to music at age 5 to better cope with glycogen storage disease, a rare form of muscular dystrophy, according to his father and manager Dan Lopez. A part-time disc jockey for 20 years, Dan added that his son has been following in his father's footsteps and "has found life in music." Justin attends the Lehigh Valley Academy Regional Charter School in Hanover Township.

A lesson in knees and life

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Jonathan Bender was emailing Mark Cuban back and forth about his ideas. Bender, the fifth overall draft pick of the Toronto Raptors in the 1999 NBA Draft, was emailing the Dallas Mavericks owner about a product he had developed.

Cuban was looking for a product himself, a seven-foot, big-man, instead of what Bender was trying to pitch him.

"I told him about my product and he told me I needed a big man," said Bender. "It's tough to get owners to look at you as more than just athletes."

Bender has grown to become more than just a former NBA player, who spent most of his career with the Indiana Pacers after the Raptors traded him. Growing up in Picayune, Miss., Bender jumped straight from high school to the NBA to earn millions. He spent seven seasons with the Pacers, but retired in 2006 due to persistent knee ailments that can be traced back to his days in Picayune.

"There was a year in high school where I grew six inches," he said. "I didn't know it at the time, but I should have been resting my growth plates, instead of working out and doing everything athletically. By the time I was in the NBA, the workouts got even tougher and the damage was already done."

Starting in 2007, Bender began to articulate his own plan after the NBA and developed his own product to help against deteriorating knees and back pain, which is now known to be the JB Intensive Trainer. The product attaches to your lower torso and has two resistant bands that stretch along the backside of each leg, which are attached to supportive ankle harnesses. The bands essentially take the pressure off the knees and redistribute it to your leg muscles and core.

"I had to have strong quads, glutes and core to carry the weight of my upper body," said Bender. "A lot of NBA players are shaped like carrots, big on top and skinny at the bottom. This helped me strengthen all those core areas to take away pain from my knees. I was able to basically walk around with the product on and rehabilitate at the same time."

Bender notes that the product can help anyone strengthen their lower extremities and core, but is the most effective in people already suffering from knee or lower back problems.

"The best demonstrations I have is when I go into a store and somebody is already hurting," said Bender. "There was one store manager that had a sciatic nerve problem and he put the product on and he felt better immediately. Older people who have knee, hip or back problems, who hurt with every movement they make can't exercise and forced into surgery because of the pain. My product can help prevent because it helps train those muscles surrounding the area of pain that haven't been trained for years."

The JB Intensive has been studied by Purdue University Weldon School of Biomedical Engineering and scientifically

Frew, Greb get their workouts during TOC

By JEFF MOELLER
Special to the Press

Mike Frew and Ken Greb both grew up in New Jersey, but the duo have managed to establish themselves as basketball fixtures in the Lehigh Valley over the years.

Recently, the duo played for G&S against Roosevelt in the Catasauqua's annual Tournament of Champions at the Catty Park. In a battle of undefeated teams in the championship game, Roosevelt won, 68-56.

Yet, Frew and Greb have settled in the greater Bethlehem area since they played together and graduated from Moravian College in the late 1990s. In fact, Frew will be entering his third season at the helm of Bethlehem Catholic boys' program this winter and Greb will be on the bench as one of his assistants.

Their friendship has also developed through both the Catasauqua and North Catasauqua summer adult basketball leagues since 2002. During that time, the duo has helped their team to two championships in the Catty League.

"We have a group of guys who have been playing together for a long time," said Frew. "We have a bunch of guys who know each other from college and from the area. We have grown on the basketball court and we're all good friends. In one season, we had teams in the championship game on the same night in both leagues, and we had to split up the team."

"It has been a lot of fun for everybody."

Through the years, Frew and Greb have played with Moravian teammates Chris Early;

G & S took second place, falling to Roosevelt's. Members of the team are: Doug Spadt, Dave Spadt, Mike Frew, John Seaman, Mark Fransition, John Stubits, Steve Weiler, Ken Greb, Mark Lesko, Chris Early, George Yasso and Greg Haas.

Doug Spadt, an Emmaus grad; and Bethlehem's Steve Weiler along with Bethlehem's Greg Haas and George Yasso; Northampton's Mark Lesko; Catasauqua's Jon Seaman; Nazareth's Jon-Frank Stubits and Mark Fransition.

Age on the team could be considered a factor in the Catty League that has been fueled by younger teams recently, but Frew and his crew haven't been sidetracked.

"There was one night when one of the younger teams referred to us as the San Antonio Spurs," noted Frew about one of the veteran teams in the NBA. "We do have a number of younger guys on the team, but we really are a veteran team."

"We all have families now, and it was a lot easier for all of us in our twenties."

Summer football camp starts early for some

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

It would only make sense that the year the PIAA has instituted a three-day heat acclimatization period for football only, we'll probably see the coolest August summer camp in years.

Nevertheless, as the first official day of fall practice is slated for August 12, schools across the state have the option to complete their mandatory, three-day heat acclimatization program starting on August 7 through August 9.

The PIAA web site lists these core principles as staples of the program.

•Practices are limited to 5 hours of practice daily for the 3 days of heat acclimatization. Practice sessions may be no longer than 3 hours in length and teams must have 2 hours of rest (recovery period) between sessions.

•If starting the previous week by school option, these days are to be three consecutive days and are not to be earlier than Wednesday the previous week – August 7th. Helmets and shoulder pads with shorts the first 2 days and full gear on third day. No contact on third day (prior to start date).

•If more than 48 hours between the conclusion of the heat acclimatization program and first day of practice, the program will not have its intended affect medically. Therefore, these practices are limited to five hours per day with no contact on the third day since it is prior to the start of the stipulated fall season.

•If starting the previous week option is chosen, Monday's practice – August 12th – may be 5 hours with a 2 hours buffer between practices and contact may be included.

The one staple of this program that causing an issue, is its optional status. This gives schools the option to start their summer camp three days before the official August 12 date, or allows them to stick to the original date intended and theoretically have them playing catch up to schools who opt for an earlier start.

It's the optional status that Bethlehem Catholic head coach Joe Henrich has a problem with.

Becahi and Central Catholic have mandated shutdowns imposed by the diocese that prevents any sport related activities, as schools use this week shutdown as time for families to either relax or go on vacation before the start of the school year.

Liberty, Freedom, Whitehall, Northampton and Emmaus are among other LVC schools that will be starting practices this week.

Henrich has no problem with the guidelines of the program itself, he just doesn't appreciate the optional status of the program.

"I just don't think it's right for the PIAA to give an option to schools on when they can start," said Henrich. "They've [PIAA] created a competitive imbalance. Schools that start earlier are getting at least 10 hours of extra practice, that we can't get. That's a lot of time, especially for kids, where technique and repetition are so important."

With schools participating in the program having the ability to go full pads on August 12, they can get right into contact from day one, whereas the latter of the bunch can't start until Wednesday.

Even though we're talking about a couple days of practice here, football coach views every single minute of their sessions as important steps to their season, especially in the month of August.

With this being the inaugural year the program is being implemented, Henrich hopes that the PIAA will review the status of the program to not exclude schools from having the same opportunities as everyone else.

"I've expressed my concern to Jason Zimmerman [former District 11 chairman] when all this news coming out last spring," said Henrich. "I don't know what else we can do at this point, but I sure hope that the PIAA will look at things next year and give every school the same guidelines they have to follow."

Greb also realizes how age can affect the team, but he doesn't see any difficulties in the future.

"We had a great season, but we'll be hungry to come back next year to get to the championship game again," said Greb. "We have been playing together for a while and we feel we still have a long

"But first and foremost, we really like each other and we're good friends on and off the court. We all play the same kind of game and we're all ready to sacrifice for the better of the team."

Along those lines, Greb has downplayed his two Most Valuable Player awards he has received over the years.

On any given night, we could have any of us put up 20 or more points," said Greb. "Steve Weiler just had seven 3-pointers. We never know we could have a big game for us. We have the talent here and we all feed off each other."

"It has been four or five years since we won our last championship. We all know winning is everything and we're all very competitive. We're still playing together and having fun doing it."

speaking, it's been proven to increase the necessary force in all the muscles surrounding the knee, while improving the load balance between the medial and lateral sides. Balancing the load across the knee joint produces the results that Bender boasts.

It was one of the main reasons Bender was able to come back to the NBA in 2009 to play for the New York Knicks. After working with team doctors and trainers, Bender had tested to have the strongest lower extremities on the team. It was proof that his idea and work meant something.

After a year with the Knicks, Bender retired on his own to pursue business and a life after the NBA.

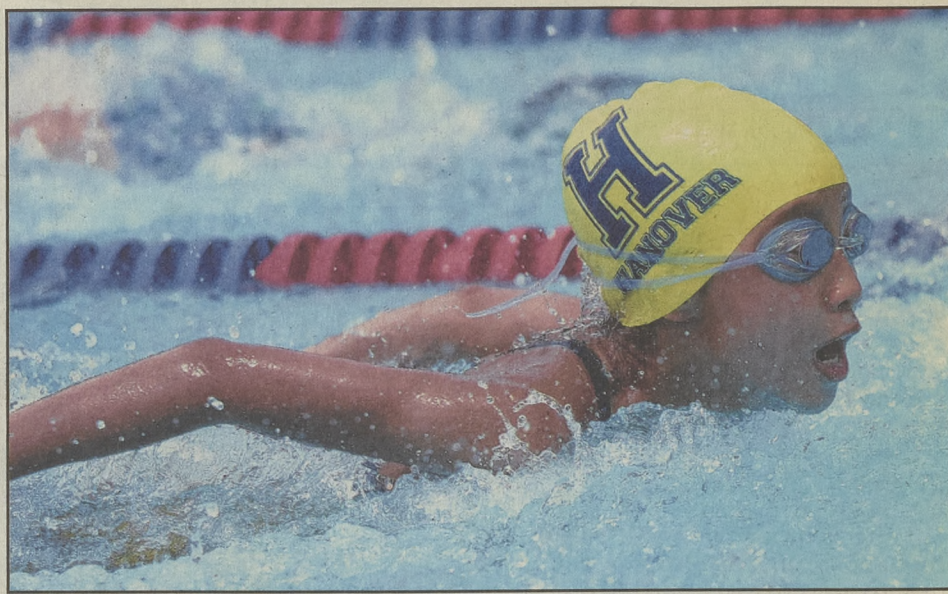

Without a college degree, Bender studied some of the brightest minds in business and learned from trial and error to get his product where it is today.

He currently sells the JB Intensive Trainer in a chain of Houston stores called 'Relax the Back' and online. He hopes to have his product nationwide over the coming years.

But one thing that he wants the most, outside of Mark Cuban looking at him as a product, is to have his product help people.

"I created this from nothing to help people on a daily basis," he said. "I knew that if I wanted to leave a legacy behind, I had to put my feet in the dirt and do things for myself. I had to deal with a lot of adversity through this process, but the difference is determination. You have to take advantage of everyday, no matter what comes to you."

Investigating a reported fight in the 300 block of East Fourth Street, police made three arrests regarding a firearm.

According to police, around 1 a.m. July 20 officers arrived at the location of a reported incident and smelled marijuana emanating from the building.

Police obtained a warrant and entered, finding numerous unspecified items of drug paraphernalia and a shotgun which had been stripped of its serial number as well as ammunition.

Angela Rodriguez, 25, Jamie Cornier-Nadal, 20 and Lauren Gonzalez, 27, are charged with possession of a firearm with altered number.

Fleeing

Police attempting to stop a driver with an expired inspection sticker instead arrested him on an array of charges when they caught up with him around 8 p.m. July 25.

According to police, James Beasley, 36, of Clay Street in Tamaqua, swung behind the Spillman Drive Cigars International, nearly striking a pedestrian. He then fled officers who attempted a traffic stop and was apprehended later. Officers discovered he was already wanted on a drug-related warrant in Montgomery County.

Beasley is charged with false ID, fleeing and eluding, reckless endangerment, possession of paraphernalia and eight assorted traffic and vehicle documentation violations.

Park neighbors object to TeamX Xtreme noise

HANOVER TOWNSHIP

By BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Since 2011, each spring and fall, TeamX Sports has conducted flag football games every Saturday for kids more interested in fun than in winning. Loudspeakers near the Hanover Township Community Center would help put kids in a festive mood. But they did nothing for neighbors awakened at 7:45 a.m. on weekends by loud, vibrating music. That's what Nick Csorba, accompanied by wife Deborah and Sue Hahn, told supervisors at their July 23 meeting.

Csorba complained that the noise sometimes lasts for seven hours straight. He denied he's against youth sports, but said, "Other sports don't do that." They brought along a petition signed by about 20 neighbors.

"They probably won't be back," Manager Jay Finnigan said of TeamX.

"We may not see them," added Chairman John Diacogiannis, noting they were changing the terms of the permit to reduce all the noise. "We're sympathetic to your needs and concerns."

"I was gonna' bring an attorney, but he wants money," Csorba said.

"They always do. Look how they dress," answered Diacogiannis, as Township Solicitor Leo DeVito and real estate Attorney Joe Piperato, both of them nattily attired, looked as though they wanted to shed their jackets.

In other business, supervisors decided to move ahead with the long-awaited Village View Park, to be built on a 25-acre tract along the east side of Airport Road. It will eventually include four playing fields for soccer, lacrosse and field hockey.

Open space money from Northampton County, a gaming grant from Monroe County and land donations from the Lehigh Valley International Airport make this park possible.

According to engineer Jim Milot, two larger fields (108,000 square feet each) can be used for professional and international events. The other two fields (75,600 square feet each) are large enough for high school and NCAA games. Each of the fields can also be divided for youth tournaments.

"You don't need music for soccer," Diacogiannis noted.

At Milot's suggestion, this $1.2 million project will be advertised and bid through PennBid, an online bid management service that increases efficiency and transparency while reducing cost. Construction will start next year, and Finnigan predicts the first two fields will be in use by spring 2015.

"The 40-foot lights will come later," he joked.

"And the dome," added Solicitor Leo DeVito.

Finally, in a tangible sign of an improving economy, treasurer Ryan Kish told supervisors that building permits and inspection fees are up 70 percent over the first six months of this year compared to the same period last year.

Lum announced her resignation near the conclusion of the July 23 board meeting. The board has 30 days to appoint a replacement to fill the vacant seat.

"I will be pursuing other interests at this time," Lum read from a statement.

Lum previously decided she would not seek reelection in the next election.

School board member

Charles Bartolet said he regretfully accepted Lum's resignation. He praised Lum for her service on the school board. Board member Sandra Miller voted in opposition to Lum's resignation.

FEST NOTES

Compassion and professionalism were highly evident on Main Street Sunday afternoon when a pedestrian fell and hit his head on the roadway. Stunned and bloodied as a result of his fall, he was comforted by two passers-by who immediately called 9-1-1. Within a couple of minutes, two fire inspectors were on the scene aiding the gentleman and they also dialed 9-1-1. Another two minutes and an ambulance was on the scene stabilizing him and readying him for transport to a hospital for medical care. Within a few more minutes a fire pumper arrived and the firefighters cleaned the area with bleach and water. Visit Musikfest and you will be in good hands should there be an emergency.

Dana Grubb

My wife and I made our annual pilgrimage to Musikfest for two reasons: Cast in Bronze and The Red Elvises. We parked at the Press office on East Third Street and walked over to SteelStacks to pick up a shuttle to the Northside. Shuttles run back-to-back and make travel between the two sites easy. The $3 all-day pass is reasonable. Sunday evening was a beautiful evening to be at Musikfest. Cast in Bronze had an interesting variation of "Tubular Bells" with a little "Phantom of the Opera" mixed in. Loved The Red Elvises at Levitt but their show had a little different feel to it than when we are all stuffed inside the tent at Volksplatz.

Q&A

BY MARY FLETCHER

Q What is hepatitis?
What is the difference between hepatitis B and C?

A Hepatitis is an inflammation of the liver. Hepatitis can occur due to various reasons, including infections, alcohol, medications, environmental exposures and autoimmune diseases. Of these, the most common is infection with hepatitis viruses such as Hepatitis A, B and C. Hepatitis can be caused by certain viruses, of which the Hepatitis A, B and C viruses are the most common. Hepatitis B (HBV) and Hepatitis C (HCV) are transmitted by blood and certain bodily fluids whereas Hepatitis A (HAV) is spread by ingesting contaminated food or close personal contact.

Q What causes hepatitis B and C?

A HBV and HCV are both transmitted when blood or certain bodily fluids from an infected person enters another person's body. These include sharing needles among drug users, needle sticks on the job (health care) and at times from an infected mother to her baby. Although both viruses can be transmitted through unprotected sex with an infected individual, it is far less common with HCV.

Q What are the symptoms?

A Most common symptoms of hepatitis are non specific and may include tiredness, lethargy, decreased appetite, abdominal pain, nausea, muscle aches and low grade fevers. Patients may also develop jaundice (yellowing of the skin and eyes). People infected with HCV may have no symptoms at all for many years and diagnosis is usually made incidentally with blood work. If the disease progresses to liver failure or cirrhosis, symptoms can include abdominal distention with fluid and confusion.

Q How are hepatitis B and C treated?

A In a majority of the patients with hepatitis B infection, the body's immune system is able to fight off and suppress the virus within six months. In patients who continue to have the infection, the treatment consists of long-term antiviral medications. Hepatitis C virus leads to a more persistent infection in the majority of the infected individuals. The treatment for this persistent or chronic infection is also with antiviral therapy. This therapy is comprised of medications known as interferon, ribavirin and more recently, protease inhibitors. A com-

City officials are now in the early stages of planning for the 2014 state Community Development Block Grant and have scheduled several public meetings for discussion; the first of which is tomorrow.

According to a release from City Hall, Bethlehem will likely receive about $1.026 million in CDBG funds for next year and $265,000 in HOME program funds.

Tomorrow's meeting, at 10 a.m. in City Hall, is designated for citizens to bring their ideas for community development and housing needs for consideration toward CDBG and HOME program funding.

BETHLEHEM

Administrators suggest residents review the application booklet, available at www.bethlehem-pa.gov down the page at a link titled "CDBG and HOME Applications for FY 2014" or call 610-865-7085.

A project recommendation form should be used when suggesting activities, and the Application Checklist and Funding Request must be used to request funding for personal projects.

All requests must be submitted the Community and Economic Development office by 4:30 p.m. Aug. 23.

Later public meetings will be held Oct. 15 and Nov. 6, both at 7 p.m. in City Hall.

Center in need of donations

Chairman Roger Hudak trumpeted the success of summer youth programs across South Bethlehem before turning the attention to the Hispanic Center food bank, at the Mayor's South Side Task Force meeting July 30 at Northampton Community College's Fowler Family Southside Center.

The Hispanic Center food bank, which began operations last November, is short on food, according to board member Donna Taggart, due to high demand. She went on to say the food bank serves more than 80 families composed of more than 300 people.

"The need is tremendous," said Hudak. The food bank is open the third Saturday every month between 1 and 3 p.m. The success has led to the Hispanic Center seeking more food donations. The center is located at 520 E. Fourth St. In addition to the food bank, the center runs other programs for the community.

Taggart went on to mention that the next meeting for the proposed Community Benefit District will be announced soon. The district, which could run from Wyandotte to Hayes streets and from First Street to Packer Avenue, would cost property owners an annual fee which would be used to pay for additional services. In addition the district would be guaranteed services from the city of Bethlehem.

In other business, task force member Dale Kochard reminded that a quarter of Lehigh University's incoming freshmen will arrive Aug. 19, with the rest following on Aug. 22 for orientation weekend. On Aug. 23 roughly 700 members of the freshman class will be invited to eat out at a South Bethlehem restaurant.

"If you're planning to have dinner out that Friday, it's going to be a little crowded," Kochard added.

The next meeting of the South Side Task Force will be at 4 p.m. Sept. 24 at Northampton Community College's Fowler campus in room 623.

"WE HAVE come a long way. A lot of people are shocked," says Roger Hudak, chairman of the Mayor's South Side Task Force, regarding South Bethlehem.

This is the second resignation this summer the board has had to cope with. Former board member Sharon Stack submitted her resignation June 11. Stack resigned from the board to relocate to Texas due to her husband's job.

The board later appointed Mark Sivak to fill Stack's vacant seat, which expires January 2014. Sivak serves as the Bethlehem director of budget and finance.

Those interested in Lum's open seat should submit letters of interest to the Saucon Valley

COLOR ME RAD 5K

PRESS PHOTOS BY CYNTHIA UNDERHILL

The weather on the first morning of Musikfest may have been gray and drab, but the streets of Bethlehem were filled with color. Participants in the Color Me Rad 5K came to town wearing all white and left looking like rainbows. They ran, walked and rode in strollers along a course where, instead of having clocks to check their time, they had color stations where the participants were blasted with color. Five color stations were on the course, but nowhere was safe as many runners carried color bombs, or packets of dyed cornstarch that they could bomb each other with at any time. ABOVE: A wave of runners takes off at the start of the course.

BEFORE the start of the run, runners try to catch color bombs that are being tossed into the crowd. The bombs are small packets of colored cornstarch that the runners throw at each other during the run.

A few lucky visitors on the first day of Musikfest spotted one of the true icons of the 10-day festival - the Chicken Lady. Some even had a chance to see the elusive hen perform her world famous Chicken Dance during a set with Joe Stanky and the Cadets. Why this rare sighting? In the person of Pat Holetz, who retired in 2004, the Chicken Lady agreed to ruffle her feathers for the first time in five years in commemoration of the 30th year of Musikfest.

The Chicken Lady was created in 1984 to personify the popular Chicken Dance played often by polka bands under the tent at Festplatz. The staff was looking for someone to wear the feathery costume for that year's Halloween parade, and Holetz, who was working in the Musikfest office as a volunteer, was asked to play the part.

"Costumes weren't really my thing, but I was so dedicated to Musikfest, I agreed," Holetz said.

That one appearance eventually became 20 years of clucking and flapping and wiggling. The Chicken Lady danced her way into everyone's hearts, becoming Musikfest's official ambassador.

"Being the Chicken Lady gave me an opportunity to be a representative of our community, and also part of one of the premier music festivals in the nation," Holetz said. "I enjoyed the interaction with people so much. Words can't describe how it made me feel."

In 2004, the Chicken Lady flew the coop for Florida, but Pat Holetz has come back every year since to work in some other capacity at Musikfest, becoming one of 24 individuals who have served as volunteers at all 30 events.

Grigsby was senior vice president and vice president for academic affairs at Shenandoah University, Winchester, Va., since 2008. Under his academic leadership, Shenandoah became the first environmentally friendly laptop campus in 2009, distributing MacBook Pros and iPod Touches to all incoming students. He worked with the president and the vice president for development in a successful $65 million capital campaign.

He earned a bachelor's degree from Moravian College, a master's degree from Wake Forest University (which included studying at Oxford University, England) and a Ph.D. from Loyola University Chicago. He specialized in medieval literature, early modern literature and the history of medicine; and taught composition, Chaucer, Shakespeare, medieval and early modern literature, and the history of medicine and disease during his career. 'Safety Squad' visits schools

Capitalizing on a State Farm "Celebrate My Drive" grant, the Freedom HS advanced drama class undertook a safety project and delivered their message to the Bethlehem Area School District's 16 elementary schools this spring. The drama students wrote, produced and designed costumes for their class Project S.O.S. (students own safety) titling it "Super Improver Safety Squad." Characters in the series of skits were modeled after super heroes and their nemeses. They demonstrated safe actions to the tune of hip chants in order to promote safe behaviors. Biking, pedestrian safety and driving distractions were targeted. Second and third grade audiences attended each presentation and were engaged in inter-according to information provided by Jennifer Wescoe, Freedom's drama teacher/theater and SADD adviser.

WHEN asked by Freedom HS drama teacher/theater and SADD advisor Jennifer Wescoe how many ride bicycles, nearly all of the William Penn ES students signal that they do.

bination of these medications is given for a number of months depending on the response to treatment. In the event that cirrhosis or liver failure develops, the patient may be referred for liver transplantation. Apart from antiviral therapy, guidance has to be provided to patients for proper vaccination, alcohol abstinence, avoidance of medications that may be harmful to the liver, screening for liver cancer and proper diet and exercise.

Q What is the prognosis for people with hepatitis?

A The majority of the people infected with hepatitis B virus are able to clear themselves of the infection without any treatment. The ones who do get started on treatment for persistent infection are able to successfully control the infection with excellent prognosis. A small percentage may still go on to develop cirrhosis of the liver or liver cancer. Hepatitis C infection may progress to liver cirrhosis in approximately 25 percent of patients. Treatment with antiviral medications is initiated to prevent this progression. The response to HCV treatment depends on the strain (genotype) of the virus. The most common in the United States is genotype 1 and cure rates with the newer medications approach 70 to 80 percent.

Q How can we prevent hepatitis' spread?

A The spread of hepatitis A, which is spread by contaminated food, can be prevented by good hand hygiene (proper and frequent hand washing) and safe food preparation practices. Hepatitis B and C can be prevented by avoiding sharing razors or tooth brushes, covering open sores and cuts, avoid donating blood, organs or sperm and cleaning up any blood spills with bleach and water. Hepatitis B can also be spread by sexual contact, and safe sex practices, including use of condoms, is highly recommended. Hepatitis C, however, has a very low rate of transmission through sexual contact, especially among monogamous partners. For both hepatitis B and C, casual contact including hugging, kissing, sharing eating utensils or cups, sharing food and water, hugging, kissing, coughing and sneezing do not increase the risk of transmission.

Q How widespread are hepatitis B and C?

A Hepatitis B and C are fairly common in the U.S. The Center of Disease Control has reported 43,000 new cases of hepatitis B in the U.S. in 2007 and approximately 1.2 million people with chronic hepatitis B infection. For hepatitis C, there were 17,000 new infections diagnosed in 2007 and approximately 3.2 million people with chronic hepatitis C infection.

Those '70s bands

KC, Foreigner, Styx rock ArtsQuest SteelStacks; Ke$ha, Avenged Sevenfold close out 30th year

By PAUL WILLISTEIN
Focus Editor

From KC to Ke$ha, the second week of Musikfest's 30th anniversary on the Sands Steel Stage at SteelStacks on Bethlehem's south side has an amazing variety of music.

There's the double bill of classic rockers Styx and Foreigner, 7 p.m. Aug. 7.

Also on the Steel Stage, Darius Rucker, country rocker and former Hootie and the Blowfish lead singer, 7 p.m. Aug. 9, with Chase Rice; and, on closing night, the heavy metal band, Avenged Sevenfold, 7 p.m. Aug. 11, with Mindset Evolution and Fight or Flight.

That '70s band, KC and the Sunshine Band, spins the retro disco ball at 7 p.m. Aug. 8.

KC and the Sunshine Band, founded in 1973 by Harry Wayne Casey, is known for the No. 1 '70s hits "Get Down Tonight," "That's the Way (I Like It)" and "(Shake, Shake, Shake) Shake Your Booty." KC received two Grammys (album, producer) in 1978 for his work on the soundtrack for the movie "Saturday Night Fever."

Opening for KC is The Family Stone, who founded the group in 1967 and wrote and produced the hits "I Want to Take You Higher," "Everyday People," "Thank You Falettinme Be Mice Elf Agin" and "Dance To The Music."

Ke$ha headlines at 7 p.m. Aug. 10.

Ke$ha has had pop and dance hits with "TiK ToK," "Take It Off," "Blow," "Your Love Is My Drug" and "We R Who We R" from her debut album, "Animal" (2010). Ke$ha's "Warrior" (2012) had the hits "Die Young" and "C'Mon."

Opening for Ke$ha is Semi Precious Weapons.

Styx got its start in Chicago in the early 1970s and had its first hit single with

"Lady," "Come Sail Away," "Renegade" and "Fooled Yourself."

Foreigner landed on the charts in 1976 and continued with the hits "Cold As Ice," "Feels Like the First Time," "Hot Blooded," "Double Vision," "Dirty White Boy," "Head Games," "Urgent," "Juke Box Hero," "Waiting For a Girl Like You," "I Want to Know What Love Is" and "I Don't Want to Live Without You."

The Bangor High School Select Choir won a concert to sing backup vocals on Foreigner's 1984 hit, "I Want to Know What Love Is." The Bangor choir's version of "Whatever Happened to a Saturday Night" from "The Rocky Horror Picture Show" won after receiving the most votes during an online voting contest.

While the Sands Steel Stage concerts require a ticket, Musikfest has a dazzling array of music, with more than 500 performances on 14 stages; 60 food vendors, and 45 artisans as part of the milestone year.

Downtown Bethlehem and 18th Century Industrial Quarter venues include Main Street, Lederplatz (Sun Inn courtyard), Vesper Series (Central Moravian Church), Chamber Series (Central Moravian Old Chapel), Plaza Tropical, Handwerkplatz, Festplatz and Volksplatz.

South side Bethlehem venues include Americaplatz (Levitt Pavilion), Town Square, Lyrikplatz and Jazz Cabaret (ArtsQuest Cinemas) and Musikfest Cafe.

As part of Musikfest's 30th anniversary, Liberty and Freedom High School "Marketing Musikfest 30" class students helped ArtsQuest book and promote eight bands at Plaza Tropical, including Ballroom Thieves, 2:30 p.m.; Fox-Street Allstars, 3:30 p.m.; Dana Twigg, 4:30 p.m.; and Mad Rapture, 5:30 p.m., all Aug. 10.

May the bluebird of happiness ... nest

The song, "Happy Days are Here Again," was written in 1929 with music by Milton Ager and lyrics by Jack Yellen.

It's best remembered as Franklin Delano Roosevelt's campaign song during his first successful 1932 presidential campaign.

Some historians have said the song became very popular with the repeal of Prohibition on April 7, 1933. The song is No. 47 on the Recording Industry Association of America's "Songs of the Century" list. As of 2006, there were 76 commercially-released versions of the song.

Since the bluebird is known as the "bluebird of happiness," the familiar song came to mind with the return of bluebirds to our backyard.

BUD'S VIEW

By Bud Cole

Last year, we thought the bluebirds were nesting in the bluebird nest-box located closest to our patio. The male spent several days at the bird-box, going in and out.

We were away on vacation. I assumed the female had made her nest of grasses and laid her eggs while we were gone.

Suddenly, the male disappeared. We feared he had been taken by a hawk or neighborhood roaming cat. I decided to check out the nest-box and to our disappointment it was empty except for a few sticks, most likely placed there by a house wren.

This year's bluebird pair must have raised their first brood somewhere else in the neighborhood. Mid-July is the time when most bluebird pairs breed, nest and raise their second brood. Because we were away during the first two weeks of July and we saw the male and female checking out the nest before we departed, they had enough time for the baby bluebirds to hatch.

On a recent morning, I watched the male and female bluebird taking turns catching bugs, flying to the nest-box and feeding the hatchlings. There is something about their color and duty to their nestlings that has endeared them to me. Bev and I have enjoyed many hours observing our bird-feeders and nest-boxes.

We feed birds year round in order to enjoy the neo-tropical birds that visit our feeders. Neo-tropical birds are the colorful species that spend their winters in Central and South America. They include orioles, rose-breasted grosbeaks, indigo buntings, redstarts, northern towhees and the many warblers.

I cleaned out the beginnings of several house wren nests in the bluebird boxes. The house wrens finally used the wren house and the gourd that I drilled and cleaned of seeds about eight years ago.

The gourd hangs from the branch on one of our native dogwood trees. Their broods have already bred, hatched and fledged.

THEATER REVIEW

A star is born in Pa. Playhouse 'Aida'

By PAUL WILLISTEIN
pwillistein@tnonline.com

As the late theater critic Jack O'Brian (1914-2000) wrote in his syndicated column, "Voice of Broadway" and said on his afternoon interview show WOR-AM: "Always the young strangers."

It's uncertain whether the phrase was borrowed from the title of Carl Sandburg's 1953 book, but O'Brian used it to refer to new talent in breakthrough roles in Broadway shows.

The joy of discovering new talent applies to regional theater, and especially, community theater, as in "Aida," with music by Elton John and lyrics by Tim Rice, through Aug. 11 at Pennsylvania Playhouse, Bethlehem, where Charlene Jean, a Parkland High School graduate attending Howard University this fall, is stunning in the title role.

Jean has a wonderful stage presence and sings superbly as the Nubian princess Aida in "The Past Is Another World"; "Easy As Life"; "How I Know You," a duet with Mereb (Alessandra DeMartino, a sprightly presence in strong voice); and the "Enchantment Passing Through," "Elaborate Lives" and "Written in The Stars" (recorded and sung by Elton John and LeAnn Rimes, reaching No.2 on Billboard) duets with Radames (Charles Weingold III, who assays the role with brio) and "Not Me," sung with Mereb, Radames, and Amneris (Kendra O'Donnell).

O'Donnell presents a determined Amneris, princess heir to the Egyptian throne, in "I Know The Truth" and "My Strongest Suit," with the Palace Women in full 1960s' girl-group vocals and go-go choreography by Shane Fischetti.

Jim Vivian is an authoritative Zoser and in fine voice in "Like Father, Like Son," a duet with Radames, and "Another Pyramid," a reggae-flavored tune sung with the Ministers providing backup.

Deborah D'Haiti is a memorable Nehebka in "The Dance Of The Robe."

Bill Bynon is an affable Pharaoh.

Laurie Zane Wieder effectively stages the numerous scenes (12 in act one, 10 in act two) and keeps the large cast of seven leads and ensemble of 18 moving.

Wieder and the cast, led by Jean, O'Donnell and DeMartino, achieve a moment of true artistry and theatrical emotion with the gospel music influenced "The Gods Love Nubia" act one closer.

Pravin Matthew conducts the orchestra of eight musicians, including those on violin, viola, clarinet and French horn, who deliver the challenging score in rousing fashion.

Speaking of fashion, the costumes, with an uncredited costume designer, are often gorgeous, including a purple gown worn by Aida and courtly attire and gowns worn by Amneris.

The songs, from a story based on the Giuseppe Verdi opera, are in the style of Sir Elton, while not particularly as memorable as his biggest hits.

The set is minimalist. The musical is framed with interesting museum scenes, which lend a certain poignancy.

If you enjoy a good yarn and the music of Elton John, and want to discover a rising star, don't miss "Aida" at Pennsylvania Playhouse.

eboration of that."

The group dresses up on stage in elaborate mummy garments and uses stage names. The band describes its sound as "Funk and B." Some of HCTM's song you may hear include "Chaperone" and "Petting Zoo."

According to Java, who jokes that he was born in 1974 — B.C., "I'm a lover not a fighter, and despite being dead, I have the insatiable urge to get down."

Adds Java, "We have been playing music together since our mummy-inducing curse. We were a nomadic musical tribe that swam in the wrong pharaoh's gene pool. He cursed us. We woke up as mummies."

As the mummies humorously reflect upon their ancient history, they like to inform their fans that they were discovered in the desert by Professor Nigel Quentin Fontenelle Dumbucke IV (1895-1973). He described them as "Terrifying Funk From Beyond The Grave." That became the title of their 2002 debut album.

"Our favorite part about being in the band," says Java, "are the dancing ladies."

"History is history. Fun is what we're all about," he says.

Jackman expands 'Wolverine'

"The Wolverine" gets deeper into the psyche of Logan, aka Wolverine, the Marvel Comics superhero, thanks to an intense performance by Hugh Jackman, reprising his role as the title character, and thoughtful and compelling direction by James Mangold.

In "The Wolverine," the second movie to focus on Logan and sixth in the "X-Men" movie franchise, a man rescued by Wolverine during the World War II atomic bombing of Nagasaki, Japan, is on his death bed and wants to say his farewell. Wolverine finds himself in the midst of a family feud to determine a successor to Yashida (Hal Yamanouchi).

Viper (Svetlana Khodchenkova) implants a device in Wolverine that strips him of his superpowers, especially that of wound-healing.

Jackman as Logan, aka The Wolverine, make the character believable. After all, three shiny steel spikes jutting from the knuckles is preposterous, super hero or not.

Famke Janssen (Jean Grey-Phoenix) is seen in several Wolverine dream sequences.

Tao Okamoto (Mariko), a European runway model in her feature film debut, is luminous as the Wolverine's love interest, and provides a calming presence.

Rila Fukushima (Yukio) is humorously impish, yet phenomenal when she springs into action in the martial arts conflicts. It appears Wolverine may have a new sidekick.

Mangold ("3:10 To Yuma," "Walk The Line," "Girl, Interrupted," "Cop Land") is one of America's strongest film-makers, able to master most any genre. With "The Wolverine" Mangold has made a comic book superhero movie with its feet firmly planted in Asian martial arts movies.

The screenplay by Mark Bomback ("Total Recall," "Unstoppable," "Live Free or Die Hard") and Scott Frank ("Marley & Me," "Minority Report," "Get Shorty") has a good mix of charac-

"The Wolverine" is one of the better comic book-to-screen adaptations and should please "X-Men" fans.

"The Wolverine," MPAA Rated PG-13 (Parents Strongly Cautioned. Some Material May Be Inappropriate For Children Under 13) for sequences of intense sci-fi action and violence, some sexuality and language; Genre: Action, Adventure, Fantasy; Run time: Two hours, six minutes; Distributed by 20th Century Fox.

Anonymous: Stay after the top of the "Wolverine" end credits roll for a teaser scene, possibly for "X-Men: Days of Future Past" (previewed at last month's Comic Con International in San Diego). Wolverine goes through airport security screening when Professor Charles Xavier (Patrick Stewart), who trained the X-Men and his nemesis Eric Lensherr-Magneto (Ian McKellen), who leads the Brotherhood, appear. Here's hoping Ororo Munroe-Storm (Halle Berry), Marie-Rogue (Anna Paquin), Raven Darkholme-Mystique (Jennifer Lawrence), Kitty Pryde-Shadowcat (Ellen Page) and Scott Summers-Cyclops (James Marsden) return.

Accepting change is a challenge

I'm still hearing from readers sending their responses to my question of what life lessons are worth passing on.

One response is so thought provoking and well written that I want to print it in its entirety. This is what Kathy wrote: "I am a little slow in replying to your column but better late than never. Being a wife, mom and nurse for over 35 years, I have learned many lessons that I would like to share.

1. Appreciate what you have right in front of you because in a second everything changes and things never go back to the way they were.

2. You can never ever take enough pictures of your family and friends. Take pictures of everything and take lots of pictures.

One day you will be so thankful to be able to look back at your life and savor all the wonderful events, big and small. Pictures help us hold special memories in our mind and heart and can provide much comfort whenever we need comforting.

Photos serve as reminders of all the things you go through in life and help us when everything changes.

3. If you have kids, give them the gift of your time, attention and love. Listen to them. Laugh with them. Cry with them.

Let them know that they are not perfect and many times we as parents have to let them make mistakes but also must be there to help them clean up their messes unconditionally.

No matter what, try to be in their corner but also try to balance out just what your kids need.

Put them in their place when they are being disrespectful but also be in their corner anytime they are down and try to make it better if you can.

Be happy that you are the first person they call when something happens, good or bad, and guide their footsteps in this trying world.

4. Last, but not least, life is definitely going to throw you many curves — some good, some funny and some devastating.

Life is pretty easy when everything is going good. But it's what we do when our world is turned upside down that really matters.

Be strong. Pray always. Don't be afraid to ask for help when you need it.

Never, ever stop learning and changing.

Remember life is a series of changes. Nothing ever stays the same. It's what we do when those changes come that makes us who we are!

Be kind. Kindness goes a long way. Be empathetic toward others, even strangers, for we never know what burden that person is dealing with."

Thanks, Kathy, for sharing your words of wisdom. I think a lot of readers will relate.

I was struck with what Kathy said about welcoming change. For most of

WARMEST REGARDS

By Pattie Mihalik
newsgirl@comcast.net

us, I think that's one of the hardest things to do.

Some people can't handle change of any kind, regardless of how small a change it is.

One example is what happened at my first newspaper job when the boss decided we would all function better if he shook up the place with changes.

Some of us had the focus of our job changed. Others got away lightly. The only change they had to make was changing work stations.

I will never forget what happened when Betty learned she was being moved from a back office to the front reception desk. She had to take a medical leave because she said "her nerves couldn't take it."

I've always believed that those who do the best at work are those who can quickly adapt to job changes.

But there are a lot more serious changes that are harder to handle.

I have seen many people happily sail through life until they are hit with one of life's major changes.

Adjusting to the life changes that come with losing a beloved spouse is one of the hardest changes to handle.

It's not just being without the person that was always by your side. Losing a spouse can also mean losing your identity, your purpose, and your entire way of life.

On top of the normal grief that is difficult to overcome, there are lifestyle changes that are hard to handle.

Some respond with anger, railing against God for doing that to them.

Others go into a deep depression, unable to handle major changes.

From my own experiences as well as from letters readers have shared over the years, I know how devastating change can be.

When Andy died, everyone thought I handled it so well. How little they knew.

I looked for every support group or learning opportunity to help me adjust to my lifestyle change.

When a seminar was offered an hour away on accepting change, I signed up and listened to everything the speaker had to say. It helped. So did the support of my friends.

What I learned is that the old platitude is true: We have to close one door before we can open another. And what waits on the other side of that door can be incredible. For me, it has been.

But you'll never get to that "other side" if you don't learn to accept change.

It's another one of life's lessons.

LV auto dealers add to employment rolls

The Greater Lehigh Valley Auto Dealers Association (GLVADA) has announced results of its 2012 Economic Impact Report.

GLVADA Executive Director Tom Kwiatek and Dan Rothrock, chair of GLVADA's marketing committee, shared key insights from the latest

The house wrens usually beat the bluebirds to the bluebird nest-boxes and use them as nest sites.

A quote from the 1989 baseball movie, "Field of Dreams," starring Kevin Costner, applies to bluebird enthusiasts: "If you build it, they will come."

Bluebird populations dwindled as their preferred cavities in dead trees and old wooden fence posts were removed. Today, thanks to the efforts of many birders, nest-boxes built and placed specifically for bluebirds are bringing this bird linked to "happiness" back in greater and greater numbers.

I placed our first bluebird nest-box in our yard one early spring when we moved to our home in Lehigh Township in 1993. We have had off and on years, sometimes with no bluebirds and other times with the same pair raising two broods in the same nest-box.

Although I have five bluebird boxes scattered around our acre of woodlands, we have only ever had one box used by bluebirds at any one time. From what I have read, bluebirds don't tend to like neighbors of the same species.

Now that the bluebirds are back, we are enjoying their company. Unfortunately, we missed seeing the female bring nest materials to the box while the male stood guard.

In previous years, the female worked on the nest as her mate chased away squirrels, red-bellied woodpeckers, cardinals, catbirds and other intruders that came too close to the nest-box. The male and female like to perch on the top of the windsock pole, which is near the nest-box.

The nests are constructed of dry grasses, pine needles and other soft materials. Females lay one egg per day. An average clutch size is three to five eggs about the size of a marble.

Incubation begins after the last egg is laid. This allows most, if not all, of the eggs to hatch on the same day. As incubation begins, the female creates a "brood patch" by pulling out feathers from her lower abdomen. This bare area increases the amount of body heat transferred to the eggs.

Incubation lasts from 12 to 14 days, sometimes longer if the weather is cold. Bluebirds raise one to three broods each breeding season.

Nesting females spend about two thirds of the day and the entire night incubating the eggs. The female leaves the nest for short feeding periods during the day. The male brings food to her while she is nesting. The eggs are constantly turned and rearranged during incubation.

The babies fledge about 16 to 22 days after hatching. The male and female attend to the young. The parents spend the daylight hours flying to the nest to feed their young. It is a very busy time.

This is also the time when I begin providing mealworms for the pair's hatchlings. The adults soften the mealworms with their beaks. The parents consume about one out of every eight mealworms and take the other mealworms to the nest-box for their offspring.

Please email me your interesting bluebird stories for consideration in a "Bud's View" column.
