

Rowe Jr., Russell

Ship's Cook Finds Bethlehem Girls Changed In Two Years

MAY 15 1945

Bethlehem girls aren't the girls he left behind when he sailed away two years ago, was the conclusion reached by Russell Rowe, Ship's Cook 2/c, who arrived home Mother's Day on his first leave after two years of overseas duty.

The young seaman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rowe, 640½ On-the constant heat, which approached 85 and 90 degrees all the time, hard to stand. When it comes to travel, he stated he would "ride a ship any day in preference to an airplane," but he likes the land better than the sea.

At the end of his 30-day leave, Russell expects reassignment to continued overseas duty. His grandfather, with whom he is spending a great part of his time, is Charles Renz, for 20 years in the employment of the city and city hall's present custodian. Just before being granted leave, Russell was elevated to his present rank.

RUSSELL ROWE JR.

tario Street, who celebrated his 20th birthday on April 27, saw too many girls on his first day at home with "pants rolled to the knees." "All they want to talk about is their work," Seaman Rowe objected.

The young man was inducted April 3, 1943, one day after his graduation from Bethlehem Technical High School. He sailed overseas July 4, 1943, and he has been in the South Atlantic theater of operations ever since. He found

May 15, 1945