No decision in Elias appeal

By BERNIE O'HARE

Bethlehem's Zoning Hearing Board was the place to be Nov. 10. Eighty-three people, including City Council members Eric Evans and Gordon Mowrer, were crammed into Town Hall to hear Round Two of the dispute pitting Elias Farmers Market against some of its residential neighbors and City Council.

Zoners gave Elias their blessings in Round One, but Judge Edward Smith sent the case back in September to determine whether this busy market is entitled to a special exception for a nonconforming use in a rural residential district. After four hours of testimony, complicated by bickering barristers, chairman Gus Loupos called it a night.

A date for Round Three still under consideration.

Zoning officer John Lezoche came under heavy fire during the session. He told Elias Attorney Joe Piperato that, prior to the Elias zoning bill, he had never received a complaint about the market. Four residents disputed that remark, including Yong Hao who actually accused Lezoche of making false statements.

Lezoche sat there stoically, but Loupos was offended. Banging the gavel, he told Hao, "That's uncalled for," and cautioned him against "character assassination."

Lezoche was even grilled over old zoning records until Zoning Solicitor Mickey Thompson decided that a city lawyer should Proposed budget eliminates jobs, contains no tax increase

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI

Mayor John Callahan released his proposed 2011 budget Nov. 12. In it, he cuts 54 positions and approves a $20 million property lease that should fund debt payments while allowing the citizens a fifth consecutive year without a tax increase.

Callahan said in his three-page prepared statement he feels government's most important duty is "the responsible stewardship and expenditure of tax dollars" and that in the current financial plight increasing property taxes would be a mistake. Job losses, decreasing wages, rising energy costs and a flatlined cost-of-living adjustment for seniors means higher taxes are "not an option."

That did not, however, keep this budget from eliminating dozens of city employment slots for next and following years.

"Bethlehem, like so many other cities, can no longer afford the government it had ... in the face of rising pension and medical costs," Callahan said. Of the 54 positions lost, 30 will

With a state unemployment rate of 9.2 percent and unemployment benefits expected to end in November, for the 600,000 unemployed in Pennsylvania finding a job is looking like an impossible mission.

Speaking to about 250 educators and business leaders attending the Oct. 11 Lehigh Valley Business/Education Partnership Reengagement Summit, Nancy Dischinat, executive director of Lehigh Valley Workforce Initiative, painted a less than rosy picture of the Lehigh Valley labor market.

Highlighting labor data from a September 2010 state Department of Labor & Industry report, Dischinat stressed the importance of an educated workforce. The summit was held at the Best Western Conference Center in Bethlehem Township. See STAY on Page A4

People gather at Municipal Park in Bethlehem Township for the annual Veterans Day ceremony. Doug Bruce, assistant township manager, greeted everyone and led the Pledge of Allegiance, followed by the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner." U.S. Navy Chief Gerald Lebeduik (retired) spoke at the ceremony reminding everyone that Veterans Day is in honor of all who served, not just those who gave their lives. The ceremony closed with the release of 60 white doves. The doves circled the crowd while "God Bless America" played.

Riverside project paying dividends

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI

The massive St. Luke's Hospital Riverside campus, which may actually be decades from attaining its full potential, is coming along on schedule and is already paying dividends to Lehigh Valley employment. St. Luke's Hospital and Health Network Media Relations Director Denise Rader said in a recent press release.

The first phase of the Richard A. Anderson campus, located at Freemansburg Avenue and Route 33 and expected to be completed by December 2011, is rolling right along, according to Iron Hill Construction representatives. The project is estimated to have produced 150 - 200 construction jobs and promises not only hun-

"St. Luke's decision to construct this project, when other companies have decided to wait, underscores our commitment to the community both in providing health care and stimulating the economy," said Riverside Executive Director Anita Kingsbauer in the release.

Network Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer Joel Fagerstrom said the new hospital, office building and cancer center will need to be staffed, and that those hundreds of employees and their families will put more money into local real estate and stores. "Every extra dollar

The story published on Nov. 10 about Ebenezer Bible Fellowship Church's ceremony honoring local veterans should have listed Katie Davis as the musician who played "Taps" concluding the ceremony. Davis, a Freedom HS Patriot Band and Fife Corps junior, replaced Liberty HS's DeVaughn Roberts, who was listed on the ceremony's program. Roberts was unable to attend the program.

The bagpipers, Kimberlee and Travis Leidich, who played "Amazing Grace" are students from the Liberty HS Grenadier Band Bagpipe Corps - not Freedom HS as stated in the story. Kimberlee and Travis helped coordinate the program with Ebenezer Bible Fellowship Church and brought in friends from Freedom HS to help. Kimberlee said rival students can be friends and can work together. She said the Nov. 7 veterans ceremony, despite the rivalry between the two high schools, "showed we could come together and work together."

Veterans Day ceremonies at the East Third Street Steelworkers Veterans Memorial attracted about 75 steelworkers, veterans, elected officials and their families Nov. 11.

Keynote speaker, David A. Christian, the youngest officer in Vietnam and most highly decorated, described a firefight as "almost like an orchestration of war" during his remarks, saying, "The whole time your heart is in your throat and is racing ... and all you want to do is come home."

Christian, who was awarded two Silver Stars, the Distinguished Service Cross, seven Purple Hearts, the Bronze Star, an Air Medal, Combat Infantryman Badge, two Vietnamese Crosses for Gallantry and recommended for the Medal of Honor, became a captain at age 20 and was medically retired from the U.S. Army at age 21 due to being critically burned by napalm in January 1969. He led a crack recon platoon during his service in Vietnam.

Looking skyward for a moment and in a prayerful intonation Christian said, "I'm looking to the heavens and saying, you are not forgotten."

The Broughal MS Rockets Band provided music. Trumpeter LeRohn Deyscher from Hellertown, a Musician First Class during World War II, played the service hymns. Event organizers were the Steelworkers Veterans Memorial Committee.

State Representatives Steve Samuelson and Joe Brennan, Mayor John Callahan, and Northampton Community College VP of community education Paul Pierpoint also made remarks.

be early retirements, 12 current employees and 12 will be the deletion of already-vacant jobs. The latter includes three unfilled police positions and two firefighter positions.

The total savings from salaries and benefits will be $3.1 million.

Debt restructuring and refinancing will save the city more than $4 million in 2011 and 2012, and an increase in certain user fees – such as permits, recycling fees, housing inspections and towing company agreements – will decrease the city's budget overall from $71.6 to $65 million next year. When asked later with the smaller budget what the difference would be between revenue and expenditures for next year, Callahan gave the floor to Business Administrator Dennis Reichert, who said simply at the end of the year the city would be "about even."

The budget is also tighter in the City Health Department, leaning on local hospitals and not for-profit agencies to continue education and clinic duties. Policies regarding care for residents outside the city limits are also being reviewed, but no service has been cut, said Director of Community and Economic Development Tony Hanna.

"We believe that the residents of Bethlehem will not be affected by these cuts," he said.

The $20 million will be borrowed against a city-owned parking garage, and while the money will allow repayment of debts, the aggressive repayment policies of recent years will slow. Callahan said there are simply too many ways to split the money among areas of responsibility, and the city simply can't do it anymore. He said it will fall to council to accept or reject the budget, but if they don't want the $20 million in payments, they can raise taxes. Paying the debt slowly, he said, "is a sacrifice I'm willing to make to not raise taxes."

The budget is available for review at City Hall. Council will take a final vote on the proposed plan at its Dec. 21 meeting.

represent Lezoche, and the zoning officer's testimony was suspended.

Elias engineer Steve Pany testified that an expansion is necessary to address a steeply sloped loading dock and to provide for a larger warehouse. He rejected the notion that Elias would be a distribution center and predicted that the larger warehouse would actually result in fewer deliveries. He repeatedly stressed that the current loading dock is unsafe, calling it an "accident waiting to happen."

Piperato also attempted to introduce a petition in support of the expansion, signed by 1,000 people.

"There's been representations here that Attorney Spadoni is here on behalf of the residents of the City of Bethlehem," and Piperato offered the petition to show widespread public support.

An angry Chris Spadoni responded.

"Mr. Piperato just said - and we'll have the court reporter read it back - that I represent the citizens of Bethlehem. That has never been said. And I would ask that he stand corrected on the record."

Spadoni is Bethlehem City Council Solicitor and that is how he introduced himself.

Attorney Dave Backenstoe objected to the petition as well.

"That is absolutely inadmissible hearsay," Backenstoe said. "You don't know how those signatures were obtained. You don't know where they were obtained. You don't even know if those are residents of the City of Bethlehem."

Piperato backed off, withdrew the petition and rested.

Guishu Fang, who lives next door to the Elias market, contradicted Pany's assertion that there is only one tractor trailer. She presented several pictures showing three different trucks, though she had no pictures of the three trucks together. She complained about constant truck noise, day and night, as well as fumes, adding she cannot even go into her backyard. An expansion to a three-bay loading dock and larger warehouse will only aggravate these problems, she argued.

Fang indicated she has complained to Elias about garbage that already litters her backyard.

"They never call me," she said. "They never come. They have my phone number."

An expanded operation will just add to the debris, she argued.

"Can you imagine what will happen when they put this huge warehouse and loading dock there?" she asked.

Pany had earlier testified that Elias intends to create a fenced and covered dumpster site, located farther away from Fang's property than the current location.

Growing increasingly emotional, Fang complained about a proposed three-bay loading dock.

"They want to move this loading dock to my bedroom side because there's nowhere else to build and because they have a hardship," she said. "How much hardship they created for me!"

Some of the audience applauded when she was finished testifying.

Al Bernotas, another voice of opposition, complained of tractor trailers idling at Elias. Although he lives 500 feet away, he said that closer neighbors will be affected by "dumpsters, trucks, diesel fumes, traffic, unsafe conditions for kids going to school, the whole thing."

At the end of the night, Loupos thanked everyone, and stated that whatever zoners decide, it will upset 50 percent of the people.

"We don't have a happy medium in what we do," he lamented.

During the hearing, the crackle of a radio could be heard from time to time as a uniformed police officer stood in the back of Town Hall. Asked why he was there, he smiled and said, "Babysitting duty."

spent by these families impacts local business owners and helps to stimulate the economy. The economic impact of this project exponentially increases with each new family that joins the community.

The hospital network expects to initially create between 685 and 1,400 jobs, representing a yearly payroll impact of $28 million and an indirect payroll impact of $30 million. Rader said St. Luke's is investing more than $60 million in contracts and services provided by 45 local businesses and contractors for this project.

In an economy with only four or five applicants, most unemployed workers cannot find a job. These workers possess significant skills and education as well as an extensive work history. They would rather work than stay home and receive benefits. Forty percent of unemployed workers have education beyond a high school diploma and 17 percent, or about one in six unemployed workers, have less than a high school diploma or GED. With five or six applicants for each job opening, the new high school degree is now the associate's degree.

After 25 years in the business of helping link people with careers, Dischinat said educators and business people need to join forces to make sure that students are graduating with the education and problem-solving skills needed for the in-demand jobs. Dischinat said, "We need a smarter community."

To energize and inspire the summit participants, keynote speaker Jeffrey Zaslow spoke about the hard decisions we are faced with and the important role education plays in helping us make those choices along life's journey. Zaslow, author of "A Heartfelt and Humorous Look at Life's Transitions," co-authored two books with two courageous people: Randy Pausch and Captain Chesley Sullenberger.

"The Last Lecture" was Pausch's legacy to his students and his family. Diagnosed with pancreatic cancer, Pausch, a Carnegie-Mellon professor who died July 25, 2008, used his lecture to share important life lessons with his students. The book was an extension of these life lessons.

With a conference audience that could not hold back the tears, Zaslow replayed segments of Pausch's lecture, which was delivered on his wife's birthday, the last one they shared together. Zaslow described Pausch as a man who knew the importance of teaching his children to love themselves and each other and to not be afraid of expressing that love.

Rather than feeling sorry for himself, Zaslow said Pausch spent the remaining months of his life having fun with his three children and making sure there were safety nets in place.

"We cannot change the cards we are dealt, just how we play the hand," Pausch said in his lecture.

When confronted with engine failure, the pilot of Flight 1549 made the decision to land his $60 million aircraft filled with 155 passengers in the Hudson River rather than attempt to land at LaGuardia Airport, which was five minutes away.

Captain Chesley Sullenberger's 300-page memoir, "Highest Duty: My Search for What Really Matters," looks at the life lessons that prepared him for Flight 1549.

As Sully's co-author, Zaslow said that it wasn't only Sullenberger's skills as a veteran pilot that made him decide to turn away from the airport, it was also his upbringing, his sense of integrity and his urge to save people that led him safely to that river.

These two hope-filled messages are important life lessons. There is no doubt that this is the most severe recession experienced in the United States since the Great Depression. In the face of significant unemployment, it takes courage, the ability to prepare for life by casting safety nets and a desire to have fun while making life meaningful that will help job seekers in their career search.

CITY POLICE Tea Party members question upgrades

Break-in

A woman reported an unknown man entered a house wearing a black ski mask around 6 p.m. Nov. 11.

Police said the victim was at a friend's home in the 2400 block of Nottingham Road when the man entered the unlocked rear door, startling her. She grabbed a baseball bat and swung it at the man, putting a hole in the wall near his head. He reportedly fled the scene.

Police said the man's physical characteristics were hidden, but he is estimated at around 6 feet tall or more by the location of the hole.

Theft

Police arrested a 19-year-old woman for stealing from ArtsQuest while serving as a volunteer around 3:30 p.m. Nov. 11.

According to police, Shelby Litzenger, of Pierce Street, was caught in the act of lifting merchandise from the ArtsQuest store at the Banana Factory. She later admitted to stealing cash from the Handwerk Platz during MusikFest, totaling about $3,000.

Litzenger is charged with theft and receiving stolen property.

DUI

Police arrested Wayne Dennis, 30, of Bethlehem, for driving under the influence after he crashed his vehicle into a number of other cars as he drove around the city Oct. 15.

According to police, Dennis was observed around 3 p.m. menacing other drivers and striking three other vehicles from Pembroke Road to Stefkou Boulevard to Washington Street. A series of calls from residents led a plain-clothed officer to Dennis' position, and he followed the suspect's Mercury Sedan to Fritch Drive, where the man was finally confronted.

Dennis is charged with DUI, hit and run, speeding, reckless endangerment and careless driving.

Members of the Saucon Valley Tea Party were present at the Oct. 26 Saucon Valley School Board meeting to voice their opposition to the board's spending priorities.

"You guys have to step up to the plate and give the money back to the taxpayers," said Hellertown resident and Tea Party member Bryan Eichfeld.

Eichfeld's concerns regarding the school board's recent discussions to invest $3.1 million to renovate the district stadium and playing fields were echoed by fellow Saucon Valley school district residents and Tea Party members, Gordon Gress and Kim Schmidtner, both of Lower Saucon Township.

School Director Charles Bartolet vehemently disagreed with Bryon that the school district is recklessly spending money, asking Bryon specifically what his tax rate was for the year.

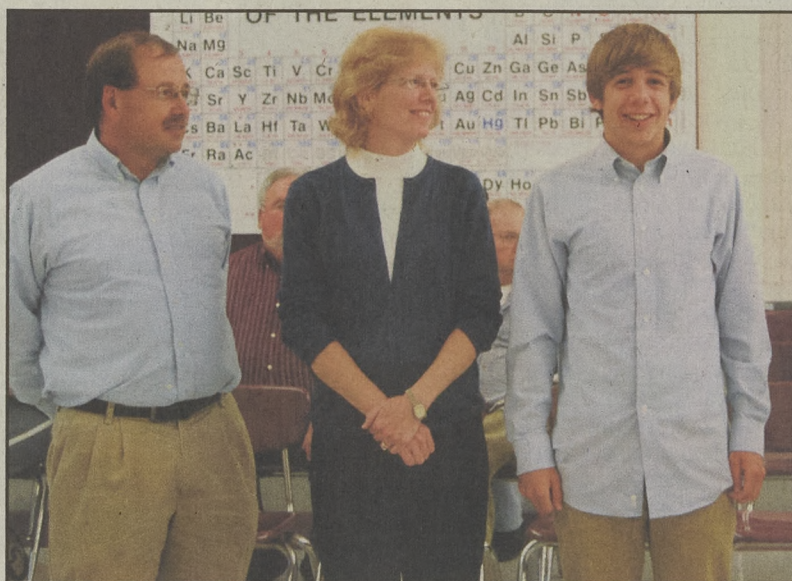

"What was your tax increase this year?" Bartolet asked. "You had a no millage increase. I take umbrage that we're wasting money."

At the conclusion of the board meeting, Eichfeld further suggested that the school district discontinue investing money in what he considers unnecessary facilities and infrastructure.

"They got to start pulling back," Eichfeld said. "Three million dollars in capital investments is crazy. Right now the district has to live with what they have."

Gress additionally expressed his dissatisfaction with the school board's approach toward spending.

"The spending has got to stop," said Gress. "It's about time they look after the taxpayers. Right now we pay more in taxes than we do our mortgages."

Schmidtner also shared her disagreement with the spending priorities of the board.

"The real problem, which is spending, has not been solved," Schmidtner said. "When you look at people losing their homes, the amount of money being spent by the district is a slap in our face."

In an Oct. 27 e-mail to The Press, district Superintendent Sandra Fellin responded to claims that the district is investing money in unnecessary infrastructure.

"The campus is fairly new and that includes the middle school and elementary buildings along with the high school science wing and administration center," Fellin explained. "The only item we have been looking at for the past two years is the stadium and field upgrades."

The current millage rate in the SVSD is 51.74. For the past two years, the school district has met its budget priorities and passed a zero percent tax increase.

That is the result of reducing building budgets, supplies, adjusting retirements, as well as this past year taking the $90,000 fund balance to reach zero, according to Fellin.

In other business, the board approved Natalie Lipinski as middle school emotional support long term substitute teacher. Her position will begin mid-December and will end in April, 2011.

The board additionally approved the Glee Club, Gay Straight Alliance Club, and School Spirit Club. Director and board treasurer Edward Inghrim inquired of the board if there would be a cost to the school district for the new clubs. Fellin said the new clubs would not require district funds to administer.

The board also recognized Patrick Miller as a National Merit Commended student. Patrick is the son of Donald and Kathleen Miller.

ACLU opposes private detention center

By BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

"You're pushing 10 percent unemployment. I'd like to help you solve that problem."

That's the argument made by GEO officials representing the largest provider of corrections and mental health facilities in the world in support of a self-contained detention center for 2,200 immigrants facing deportation. Because of its proximity to New York, Newark and Philadelphia, the Slate Belt is considered an ideal location for such a facility.

The privately run facility would produce 350 local construction jobs and another 500 detention jobs for people facing deportation. But at Northampton County Council's Nov. 4 meeting, the ACLU's Emma Cleveland cautioned against any private facility for immigrants.

"The ACLU of Pennsylvania has taken a position in opposition to a private immigrant detention center because we're concerned about the large amount of civil rights abuses," Cleveland said. She added that civil rights abuses, including rape and murder, occur with greater frequency at privately run facilities.

Council President Ron Angle told Cleveland, "We have no say here, whatsoever, as to whether that detention center goes in Upper Mount Bethel Township."

But Cleveland told Angle that county council had already submitted a proposal for a detention center, "so you have taken a position."

Angle acknowledged that the county has laid the groundwork to act as an intermediary for such a facility, similar to what exists in other counties, but takes no position endorsing a specific location or proposal.

She also said that there would be no immigration courts in these facilities, but Angle corrected her, stating that GEO had advised there would be courts.

"I'm curious how you all know this because the public does not know this, and I'm a member of the public," argued Cleveland.

"Actually, it was discussed at the public meeting," answered council solicitor Phil Lauer. "They referred to two courtrooms."

City enters watershed management pact

Cleveland also said that private facilities are under no obligation to respond to Freedom of Information or Right to Know requests.

In response to questioning from council member Lamont McClure, Cleveland listed murders, suicides and riots at GEO facilities.

"They do not have a good track record," she said. "The federal government does a better job."

GEO has submitted no formal proposal to any municipality, but will conduct an open forum about a potential Slate Belt detention center at Bangor Area MS at 6 p.m. on Nov. 10.

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The City of Bethlehem owns more land in the wilds of north-eastern Pennsylvania than it owns within its own city limits. The watershed land that guarantees the city's water supply is a wooded, serene place that Councilwoman Karen Dolan called one of the "most beautiful places in Pennsylvania."

On Oct. 19, the City Council approved non-binding terms with The Nature Conservancy that set the guidelines for an agreement between the Bethlehem Water Authority, The Nature Conservancy, and a third party carbon products marketing company.

When signed, the agreement will bring professional management to two separate forested tracts owned by Bethlehem. About 12,000 acres along the Wild Creek Watershed in Carbon and Monroe counties and a second tract of about 8,500 acres along the Tunkhannock Creek watershed in Carbon County are included in the agreement.

Bethlehem's 3.9 billion gallon water supply is in the Wild Creek Reservoir in Carbon County.

The Nature Conservancy's Working Woodlands Program will provide the Bethlehem Water Authority with certification from the Forest Stewardship Council which allows the Water Authority to better manage its resources and provide additional revenue.

It will, according to documents provided in support of the plan, improve forest product marketability and give options for long-term land protection. It will also provide revenue from carbon credit sales.

The Nature Conservancy and the Bethlehem Water Authority will contract with Blue Source, LLC, a marketing company that will sell carbon credits on their behalf.

According to the proposed agreement, the Conservancy will "maintain and improve high quality ecological and economic values associated with forest, waters, and barrens" of Bethlehem's watershed. improving the water supply. If the Water Authority in the future decides to establish wind power stations, it must be in accordance with the Pa. Wind and Wildlife Collaborative's guidelines.

The Water Authority must agree to follow a forest management plan certified by the Forest Stewardship Council. Conservancy and authority staff must supervise any logging.

According to Water Authority Executive Director Stephan Repash, writing in the American Water Works Journal, the program will reduce the cost of water treatment and "find its way back to the pocketbook of the consumer" in the form of lower utility bills or even lower taxes.

Companies that exceed the government's limit on carbon dioxide emissions can turn to the carbon trading market to buy carbon credits and subtract the credits from their total. This allows them to keep their production up even though they still are emitting carbon. They can show that they have reduced the amount of carbon which otherwise would have been produced. Using someone else's saved carbon to offset the carbon dioxide emitted in a factory is called carbon trading.

After paying the expense of the carbon manager or dealer, the forest owner keeps most of the money received. By enrolling in the Working Woodlands program city officials believe they can protect the city's forest while gaining income to offset other expenses.

'Mountains for Mark' honors fallen officer

By DANA GRUBB
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Celebrating the life of Bethlehem native and Seatle area police Sgt. Mark Renninger, who was murdered with three other officers on Nov. 29, 2009, friends Chris Eline and Marty Coleman created a Boys and Girls Club fundraising initiative called it "Mountains for Mark."

Eline, a Bethlehem firefighter, and Coleman, a middle school reading and math intervention teacher in Brooklyn, are Bethlehem natives who reconnected at Renninger's December 2009 Bethlehem area memorial services. Renninger and Eline were members of the Boys and Girls Club in their youth, and each credited it for having a positive effect on their lives.

On Aug. 12, Eline, Coleman and the Renninger family joined Boys and Girls Club Executive Director Gary Martell and club staff, representatives from the Bethlehem Housing Authority, and the Bethlehem police and fire departments to demonstrate the commitment that training requires for many challenges in life.

Eline and Coleman had been training for months to challenge themselves with a climb of Mt. Rainier. In remembrance of Mark Renninger they decided to capitalize on that effort by creating the Mountains for Mark initiative to raise funding for the Bethlehem Boys and Girls Club.

At the August event, club members were treated to hands on experiences with police and fire equipment, as well as a rock climbing wall and refreshments. Boys and girls had a chance to meet and chat with Eline and Coleman just days before they left for Washington State.

'Build relationships'

Hispanic Center, Police Dept. host Nov. 20 workshop

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI
njastrzowski@nonline.com

CITY

The Bethlehem Hispanic Center and Bethlehem Police Department will host a relationship-building workshop Nov. 20.

Olga Negron, center executive director, said the fully interactive session, held at the Fowler Youth Center at 504 E. Fourth St., will allow residents to work directly with officers to overcome misconceptions to help build a safe and healthy neighborhood.

Negron said she helped create the program with the National Coalition-Building Institute when she worked for the city of Allentown five years ago and it has been a success in forming friendships between police officers and residents. "It's very helpful and very powerful to get together and build relationships," she said.

"It's an opportunity to be in each other's shoes and see each other from a human perspective," Negron said, rather than judging by uniforms or where people live. She added the exchange of phone numbers and lasting friendships have developed between residents and officers who have attended in the past.

Police Commissioner Stuart Bedics, who will attend at least half of the event himself, said there will be about a half-dozen officers there and that, as an extension of the NCBI Cops and Community Program, the workshop is a good idea. Sitting down with residents to open up a dialogue and hear concerns is paramount to the department. "It's the essence of what community policing is," he said. "It engages people to get them involved."

Bedics said he intends to learn what types of crime the residents want police to focus on and in return he expects to hear from them when they see something suspicious. He wants to two-way flow of information. "I want to show that we care about their concerns and I expect to be called."

Negron said the workshop begins at 9 a.m. and typically lasts from five to six hours. Lunches are provided by the Hispanic Center. Space is limited, and interested residents should email Spanish-Council@ed@gmail.com or call 610-868-7800 ext. 221 to reserve seats.

Take on Emmaus for Eastern Conference title

Jim McCarthy scrambles before reaching the end zone for a touchdown against the Trojans.

Devon Jones and the rest of his Liberty teammates knew that revenge was going to be a factor when they opened up their postseason last Friday night at home against Parkland in the Eastern Conference 4A playoffs.

An October loss to Parkland equated to the end of season agony of missing out on the real subregional playoffs all the Liberty faithful had hoped for.

So, despite the Eastern Conference journey being equated to college basketball's NIT, Liberty didn't want their suburban counterparts to cost them two games in one year.

With Parkland leading 21-13 heading into the fourth quarter, it appeared as though the Trojans would live another week, but the Hurricanes rallied for 21 unanswered points in the final frame to storm ahead for a 34-21 victory.

The win gives Liberty (7-4) its final game of the season Friday night when they host Emmaus (7-4) for the Eastern Conference title. The Green Hornets waxed Pocono Mountain West 56-0 last weekend to pit the two Lehigh Valley Conference foes in this week's final.

However, if it wasn't for Jones' heroics on a fourth quarter punt return, this could be a different story.

Jones broke six tackles midway through the fourth quarter to break open a 72-yard punt return TD to put Liberty ahead 27-21 following a convert-

Youth Football in the middle of November - who would have thought that the drink of choice at the Bethlehem Raiders Sell Field refreshment stand would be cold since the temperatures were pushing 70 degrees.

The Bethlehem Raiders staff had the gridiron looking better than many high school fields for the Suburban Youth Football League championship games on Nov. 13.

In the 105-pound game, the Bethlehem Township Bulldogs were winless at 0-8 last year and turned it around to go 6-2 this year in the regular season and came into the playoffs as the sixth seed, taking on the South Parkland Trojans.

South Parkland's Tyler Hays scored on a 25-yard scamper in the first quarter. The conversion was no good to keep it 6-0. But after that, the game became a defensive struggle.

Brandon Dixon broke up a Trojan long bomb, but gave up the ball when Hayes intercepted the ball on the Bulldogs 45-yard line. Hayes has great acceleration went 30 yards on a sweep. South Parkland's line opened big holes for Hayes and Ryan Geroulo on the ground.

The Trojans went to the air, but Bethlehem's Jamal Williamson picked the ball off at the 14-yard line and ran it back 18 yards. Williamson ran for six and passed for six more to Alex Huertas. Bethlehem Township was in a hurry-up offense as time was running out in the second quarter when Williamson's feet got tangled. SP's Drew Mohr made sure he was down and time ran out on the Bulldogs.

The Bulldogs had their best drive of the day after Dixon recovered an on-side kick to start the second half. On 4th-and-7, QB Williamson ran a sweep for a 12-yard gain. Dixon ran the ball to the 27, but the drive would stall.

Last season, Liberty's hockey entry in the Lehigh Valley Scholastic Hockey League (LVSHL) took nine weeks before it registered its first two wins of the season in consecutive weeks.

This season, it took them just two weeks before they defeated Easton, 8-7, in a Non-Pure Division contest.

Despite the early surge, head coach Pete Darlington has still felt some leftover feelings from last season. In fact, he is quite frank about his team's chances the rest of the way with 14 skaters and one goalie.

"It will again be a struggle for us," said Darlington, who is in his seventh season at the helm. "This year, we are facing a number of teams who have combined their team with another."

"We have talked about that situation among us coaches, and it just makes it more difficult for us to win. We don't have enough talent and it is very difficult for us to win against teams with better talent."

This season, senior captain Ryan McMahon will be the one of the team's main goal scorers. Through the first six games, McMahon had 11 goals and two assists, tallying 11 of the team's 20 goals through the span.

Senior Nick Martone, an assistant captain last season, had three goals through the

This week's trivia: What runningback holds the District 11 record for rushing for over 300 yards in 3 consecutive games. **This includes teams from the MVC, LVC, Colonial league, Pius X and P'Burg. Let me know what you come up with.

Week #9 trivia question: Kowan Scott of Wilson just broke the District 11 record for receiving yards in a career against Saucon Valley. Scott now has 2,539 yards breaking Central Catholic's Jeff McGeehin's 37-year-old record of 2,377 yards.

Out of top-27 receivers from the area, only one player (John Gardus of Salisbury) had a catch as a freshman (1 for 13 yards). Matt Camilletti of Pius X (1,575 yards career yards) sits in 29th place all-time just 8 yards behind 27th place, Cat'asauqua's head coach Tom Falzone.

Camilletti (only a junior) coincidentally now has 36 catches this year to go along with 36 catches he had last year and 36 catches he had as a freshman. His freshman year (2008) he set District 11 freshman records with 36 catches for 455 yards and became the first freshman to have 100 yards receiving in a game (167 against Holy Name Reading).

The second player to have 100 yards receiving as a freshman did it last year. Name that player, and the other 4 players that had at least 10 catches as a freshman. **This includes teams from the MVC, LVC, Colonial league, Pius X and P'Burg. Answers on bottom of page.

 ed two-point conversion. He added another two-yard score nearly a minute later to secure another week of football for his mates, as well as some long awaited revenge.
 "We knew that we didn't want to stop playing this year," said Jones, one of Liberty's pesky, athletic running backs. "We want to win the Eastern Conference, but we also wanted revenge on Parkland. We know that if we would have beat them earlier in the season, we probably would be in districts. This game meant a lot to us."
 Jones only had four rushes for 21 yards on the night, but his newly acquired duties on punt returns turned the momentum in Liberty's favor for good.
 "They [coaches] just put me on punt return, like two weeks ago, so it's still pretty new to me," he said. "I just refused to go down and this team refused to lose."

 On Parkland's (4-7) ensuing possession quarterback Tim Baranek was stripped of the football by the torturous Dante Holmes.
 Ahmad McFarland recovered at the Parkland 26 to give Liberty another boost of moxie. Liberty quarterback Jimmy McCarthy then found Mikey Harris wide-open over the middle for a 24-yard completion to the two, which was followed up by Jones two-yard scamper at the 4:35 mark to seal Parkland's fate.
 "I thought going into the fourth quarter, this game looked really similar to the last time we played them," said Liberty head coach Dave Brown about the 28-21 loss they suffered to the Trojans last month.

"We were really close offensively to getting things going throughout the game and our kids finally made some plays in the fourth quarter."
 Trailing 21-13 at half-time, the Hurricanes seemed as if they couldn't contain Parkland's offense, primarily the workload of running back Jarel Elder. Elder, who carried 11 times for 59 yards on the night, scored three touchdowns in a rapid second quarter when he broke for TD runs of 19 and 21 yards. He also returned a kickoff 88 yards for a TD. However, in the second half he was a non-factor along with Parkland's offense, which was out-gained by a 348-146 margin in the contest.
 "I don't think we really focused on him, because you can't really do that with their offense," Brown said in reference to Elder. "We just played disciplined football in the second half."

Finals

 EC games... Emmaus is coming off a 56-0 thumping of PM West as senior RB Joe Williams rushed for a school-record 283 yards and 6 TDs in the first half... Liberty is fresh off a 34-21 come-from-behind win over Parkland... Junior Devon Jones scored a pair of TDs, including a key 72-yard punt return as the 'Canes scored 21 unanswered points in the fourth quarter to avenge an earlier 28-21 loss to the Trojans... Liberty handed Emmaus its worst loss of the season (34-21) back on Oct. 8 in a game in which the 'Canes rushed for over 400 yards on the ground.

Coach Bottiglieri: "You don't get too many chances to play a team a second time that you lost to so it's a chance for our kids. You can say what you want, but the bottom line is that we want to win eight games and win the Eastern Conference championship. Those are the two goals. It just so happens that Liberty is the opponent. I think we learned a lot from the first time we played them so we know we have to make some adjustments and make the most out of what we learned from that game."

Coach Brown: "Regardless of how bad we beat them the first time around, our job is to win the Eastern Conference championship. Just because we won the first time doesn't mean they're just going lay down for us."

WHERE ARE THEY NOW? Braun pacing DeSales harriers

Becahi graduate, Sarah Braun, has become part of the DeSales University trio of freshman women cross country runners, helping to lead the Bulldogs to top finishes this season.

Along with Cara Guth of Mohnton and Melissa Buttner of New York, Braun has been consistent in placing in the DeSales top-three.

"We're competitive, but not against each other. We encourage each other and pull each other up. We talk in the middle of races, which is something new for me," said Braun.

Braun was named Athlete of the Week on Nov. 1 after receiving MAC All-Second team honors on Oct. 30.

Braun noted several differences between high school cross country and collegiate cross country.

"In high school, we'd have one meet a week and then an invitational on the weekend. It was important to beat this team or that team, and make districts," Braun said. "In college, it's low key, but it's still serious. There are a lot of physician assistant majors on the team, and the coach is okay if we have to miss practice for a lab or something."

The Bulldogs are preparing for their regional meet, which will take place in Pittsburgh.

"It's been really exciting to help the team out, but we're really building the team for next year and some new recruits, so we have a chance to make it to nationals next year," said Braun.

The Bethlehem Township Bulldogs fell to South Parkland in the 105 Suburban finals.

got the ball on the Trojans 39 after a 20 yard punt return. Dixon got a yard, Williamson rolled out and threw a 14-yard strike to Huertas. Chris Rich then ran to the 20. The QB sweep worked again as Williamson got to the 12. Dixon ran to the 2-yard line, but coughed the ball up to South Parkland who ran out the clock.

Huertas led the Bulldogs with seven tackles. Williamson had six and an interception. Steve Rold, John Volpe, Samuel Powell had five tackles each. Dixon four and a broken up pass. Domenico Italiani and Isaiah Joyner made three. Deavin Pelonero, Colin Harms and Rich all played well on defense.

The sting of a championship loss lingered for a few moments for the Bethlehem Township Athletic Association Bulldogs 105s. It was encouraging to hear the parents say "let's hear it for the coaches" before head coach Elvin Williamson addressed the team and parents.

"It was a great season and a good job," Williamson said. "They (South Parkland) had a game today. We're losing half of you guys who are moving up but I will stay optimistic."

"I was never more proud of you guys, you gave a great show all season and never quit. You came focused and went from 0-8 to become a solid team."

The Bulldogs finished 6-3 overall and were the Colonial Division runners-up. The team is comprised of: Chris Rich, Jamal Williamson, Alex Huertas, Joseph Rosete, Samuel Powell, Brandon Dixon, Gable Dixon, Colin Harms, Jack Gawlick, Kevin McNulty, Joshua Benak, Tyler Sloss, Shaun McNulty, Steve Rold, Isaiah Joyner, Noah Evans, Sam Goff, Deavin Pelonero, Riley Torres, Mark Hansen, John Volpe, Erik Glasthal, Aleem Mims, Jaycobe Bryant, Domenico Italiani and Michael Murray.

South Parkland finished with an 8-3 record and was 5-3 in the National Division.

Brown helps Hounds to 22-12

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcDonald@tnonline.com

Becahi graduate, Kelly Brown, recently completed her first season as a member of Moravian College's women's volleyball team.

Brown, an outside hitter, started most games for the Greyhounds.

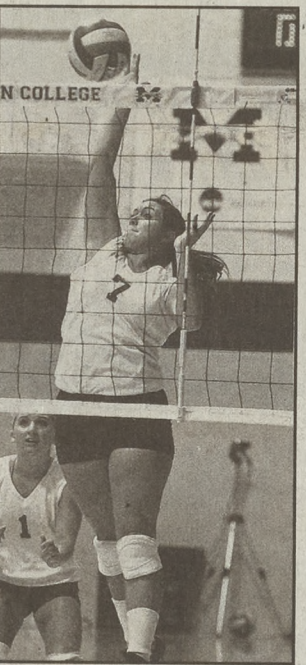

"I enjoyed it a lot. It was a lot of fun. The girls were really welcoming," said Brown.

Brown was out for six games toward the end of the season with a sprained shoulder, but the Greyhound freshman started Moravian's last game against Juniata.

"Juniata is one of the best teams, so I was trying to think of ways we could win. They have really tall girls, but I was hitting balls through their block," Brown said.

Although Moravian lost, the team finished its season with a record of 22-12.

Brown chose Moravian College because it's close to home, and she was impressed by the girls on the volleyball team. The Greyhounds are coached by Shelley Bauder and first-year assistant, Jon Yanek.

first five games and he will be counted on for his leadership ability. Fellow senior Tom Darlington will spearhead the defensive effort.

"We will need Ryan (McMahon) to put the puck in the net for us," Darlington said. "We didn't have him in a game and we saw a big difference. He (McMahon) helps get everyone else going."

Along with several returnees to the lineup, junior goalie Joe Yarka is also back after a learning experience in the nets last season. He continued to plug way in the nets last season despite having numerous games when he gave up double-digit goals.

"Joe (Yarka) had a tough season last year, but he worked hard through hit," Darlington said. "He is off to a better start and has played at a higher level this year. He started slow last year, but he came on at the end of the season."

"Joe really wants to do well this season and he'll work hard all season."

Liberty began the season with two defeats to Pleasant Valley/Palisades (7-2) and Southern Lehigh (10-2) before they defeated Easton (8-7). They then suffered lopsided losses to Quakertown and Phillipsburg by identical 11-3 scores. Liberty began its week against defending champion and undefeated Northampton/Whitehall Monday night.

"For me, I'm going to relax and enjoy the season," said Darlington, who is coaching is final season at Liberty. "I feel for the kids because they can get frustrated with the situation."

"We also have had a practice situation due to Lehigh Valley only having one rink and Bethlehem Muni (Municipal) having late practices. But we have to stay positive and keep our work ethic throughout the season."

"We worked hard all last season and we got some games as the year went on. We want to grab some more this year."

Who is going to advance in this week's playoff games?

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

With football season winding down, the weather certainly hasn't felt like it's approaching December. Hopefully that same premise will keep teams playing hot football as the state tournament rapidly approaches.

Here are the consensus picks for this week's District 11 games:

District 2-4-11 4A Subregional Easton (1) vs. Eastburg South (5)
The Cavaliers have played one LVC opponent this year and they got destroyed by them. That team was Freedom in week one. Now, we all know that you can't judge a team by how they did over two months ago, but the Cavs are heavy underdogs in this one.

The Pick: Easton 35 - ESS 14

Nazareth (2) vs. Whitehall (3)

The rematch that everyone wanted, especially Whitehall. After Nazareth beat the Zephyrs three weeks ago in a shoot-out, the Zephyrs get a chance for redemption on the road. The Blue Eagles have a ton of confidence and I think running back Chuck Dibiio is just too much.

The Pick: Nazareth 40 - Whitehall 28

Eastern Conference 4A Liberty (1) vs. Emmaus (3)

The Hurricanes blasted

Emmaus 34-21 earlier this year in a game that wasn't even as close as the final score indicated. This time around I think the Hornets will be able to hang, but Liberty has too much speed for the Hornets.

The Pick: Liberty 28 - Emmaus 21

District 11 3A Central Catholic (1) vs. So. Lehigh (3)

An easy no-brainer as the Vikings are strong favorites to make a run to Hershey. Southern Lehigh will be over-matched in every aspect and can't pull off the upset for a consecutive week.

The Pick: CCHS 42 - Solehi 14

District 11 2A

No. Lehigh (1) vs. N. Schuylkill (3)

Another heavy favorite with Colonial League champion Bulldogs, as they seem primed for at least a few more weeks of football. The Bulldogs rushing attack will take over in this one. The Pick: Nolehi 34 - North Schuylkill 17

Budget cuts limit tech support

BETHLEHEM AREA SD

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Aging computers and a shortage of technology experts will put pressure on Bethlehem Area School District officials and the school board as they prepare for the new budget. The days of an audio-visual savvy student helping get the in-class movie projector going are over. Now, the job falls to a corps of professional teachers who have cross-trained in modern computer-driven technology.

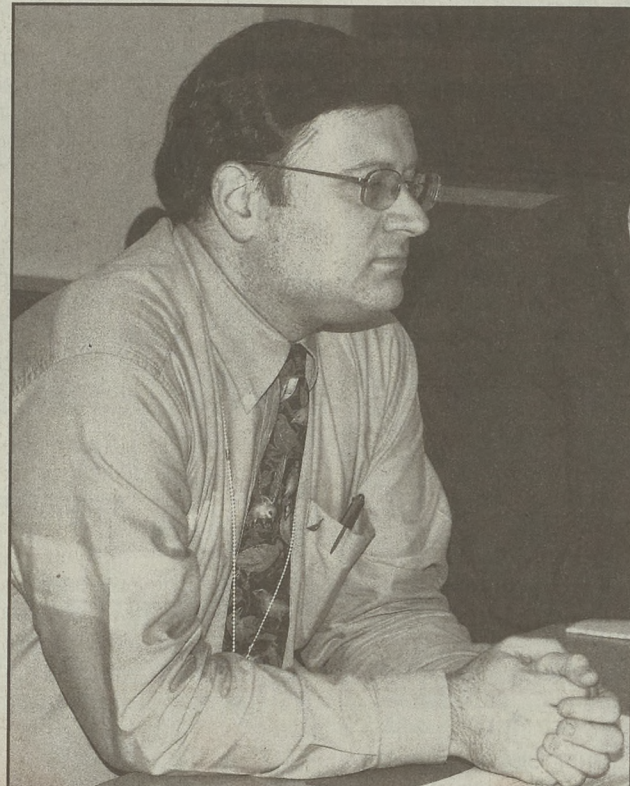

Frank Arbushites, BASD technology director, told the district's Board of Directors at the Human Resources committee meeting Nov. 1 that the loss of three technology integration specialists leaves the district with only four experts to help teachers master their increasingly technology-dependent curricula.

School board member Michael Faccinetta had requested a status report on technology assignments forced by budget cuts.

Arbushites said that if teachers have classes that need technology support and a technology specialist is not on hand to help, then the teacher might not be able to complete that class.

Arbushites said that Liberty HS, Broughal MS, and seven elementary schools are doing without resident technology specialists. LHS will be supported by all of the specialists; Freedom HS has a dedicated technology person and Broughal is now sharing a tech with Nitschmann MS and Northeast MS.

Frank Arbushites, BASD technology director, explains that the loss of three technology integration specialists leaves the district with only four experts to help teachers master their increasingly technology-dependent curriculum.

Marvine ES, Farmersville ES, Asa Packer ES and Clearview ES share a single tech. Thomas Jefferson ES, Fountain Hill ES, the SPARK-program, Governor Wolf ES, Miller Heights ES, Calypso ES, Freemansburg ES, Spring Garden ES and Donegan ES all share another.

This year the administration eliminated three positions, leaving the technical support staff too thin to adequately support the increasingly technology-based classrooms, according to Arbushites.

Arbushites said certain large projects, such as a recent change in e-mail involved in maintaining or supporting computer equipment.

"I don't want the IT department to be thought of as the department that fixes things or sets up equipment or keeps it running," he explained.

He said that the tech specialists are educators and that the administration needs to maintain its focus on the educators who work in the department.

The specialists are a critical component of the IT department, according to Arbushites. They help develop the budget and test software to make sure teachers and students get proper support.

Arbushites, in an interview, said that technology integration specialists are hired under a teacher's contract but do not teach regular assigned classes. They "float in and out" of school buildings, providing professional development as they work with teachers.

School board member Eugene McKeon didn't like the budget-induced staff cuts that leave LHS with no tech specialist. He said that reducing the tech staff may have been a case of "cutting off our nose to spite our face."

Liberty Principal JoAnn Durante said in an interview that this shortage, "just means that we have to learn to share." Durante said she won't know if the shortfall will have an adverse impact until the end of the school year.

Jack Silva, BASD's new curriculum chief, told the HR committee, "Most younger teachers are comfortable with technology," but older ones fear that technical programs will fail when they are counting on them during class.

Silva said that a good staffing balance might be had by assigning two technology information specialists to support the high schools, two to support the middle schools and two to support the elementary schools.

Why Giving Thanks Is Good part 2

This is part 2 from my recent message on, "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD" (Psalm 92:1) in which I asked, "What is it that makes giving thanks a good thing?"

It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord because in doing so we are a witness for Him to those around us. Our text goes on to say, "To show forth thy lovingkindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness every night." A thankful Christian is a credible witness of God's lovingkindness and faithfulness in this dark, depressing, and ungrateful world. Jesus said we "are the light of the world" (Matthew 5:14). Our thankfulness to God testifies of His awesome goodness! Daniel "gave thanks before his God" and it resulted in a powerful witness to the whole world of the reality of God as we read in Daniel 6:25-27, "Then king Darius wrote unto all people ... in all the earth ... I make a decree, That ... men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for he is the living God, and steadfast for ever ... He delivereth and rescueth ... who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions."

Giving thanks to God is a good thing in that it keeps us from becoming greedy with what He has given us! Considering all God has done for us, we joyfully give back to Him of our time and money. Thanksgiving is composed of "thanks" and "giving!" The Bible states, "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give ... for God loveth a cheerful giver" (2 Cor. 9:7). A woman brought to her minister some money and said, "In former years I paid about this amount in medicine. This year there has been no sickness in our family. I want to show my gratitude to the Lord in this way." Later she again came explaining that many of her neighbors had suffered losses in a wind-storm, but that her farm had been spared. She said, "I bring this donation as an offering of thanks." That's gratitude!

Gaming grant to improve borough police facilities

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI
njastrzemi@tntonline.com

The borough was perhaps the most needy and best prepared to present its proposal for an expanded police headquarters of those applying for the money.

Freemansburg has submitted its application for a beautification grant and won a sizable grant from the Northampton County Gaming Commission.

Borough Manager Debra Ross said the commission announced the successful $825,000 grant Oct. 25 as a much-needed fund to enhance — indeed to introduce the bare necessities to — the meager accommodations for the police force. The borough's officers currently have only a couple cramped offices in borough hall, little space allocated for equipment, lackluster external security and no holding area to speak of.

The borough was perhaps the most needy and best prepared to present its proposal for an expanded police headquarters of those applying for the money. The borough went to much trouble to analyze and record the impact of increasing crime and numerous road closures and redirections coinciding with higher traffic volumes caused by the opening of the Sands Casino.

FREEMANSBURG

Council voted Nov. 1 to increase the number of trees planned for the Main Street beautification project before the Transportation Economic Assistance grant application submission Nov. 8. Member Charles Derr said the trees would cost between $500 and $600 each, increasing the amount requested in the grant. The species would also have to be chosen, he said, from a small number considered acceptable for street-side planting, but he was unsure what is currently on that list. The choice is important because individual property owners would eventually assume responsibility for the plants.

Derr said he would find the species, likely akin to the Littleleaf Linden, and the proposed increase up to 60 trees total would prove no problem as, "It's easier to take something out than put it in."

"Well," said President Homer "Bud" Lorrach, "we can always go with palm trees."

If the Main Street TEA grant and project as a whole is successful, however, Lorrach, Derr and Mayor Gerald Yob share concern the moment the street is finished (in two years or so) someone will swoop in and dig it up. They said it's only a matter of time before a utility company or PennDOT "will rush in and tear it up for some reason," cynically adding there may be a case of beer waiting as a bet for the organization to do so first.

Two other issues facing Main Street are a collapsed culvert and the placement of the yellow line.

Solicitor Lawrence Fox said Main Street is PennDOT's responsibility, despite its claim otherwise in the instance of a hole developing at Main and Washington streets, and he asked to send a letter to PennDOT admonishing the hands-off approach. Lorrach pointed out PennDOT has already accepted such responsibility by repairing a similar culvert not 40 feet away within the past 12 months.

As for the yellow line, supposed to have been replaced Oct. 1, thus redefining streetside parking? Yob said the Sands has promised to take care of it, but he was given no indication when.

Big Top celebrates successful treatment

PRESS PHOTOS BY CYNTHIA UNDERHILL

Everyone had fun and forgot their troubles at the annual Chemo Big Top Circus sponsored by the Pediatric Cancer Foundation of the Lehigh Valley, Inc., held Aug. 4 at Lehigh Valley Hospital-Muhlenberg.

Several of the children attending are still undergoing treatment at the Pediatric Specialty Center at Lehigh Valley Hospital-Muhlenberg; however, many were proud to say they are cancer survivors.

Benjamin Wagner, of Bethlehem, is a cancer survivor. He was diagnosed July 22, 2006.

"That's a date I'll never forget," said his mom, Suzanne Wagner. "I heard the words 'cancer' and 'leukemia' and I thought that was it."

Wagner was happy to report that Benjamin is "off treatment as of November '09. He starts first grade in the fall. I never thought he'd be there."

The Pediatric Cancer Foundation of the Lehigh Valley, Inc. supports many programs and activities for children with cancer and their families, including monthly family fun events, date nights and spa days, workshops offering education and therapeutic tools and developmentally based programs focused on addressing the effects of treatment.

Nicole Roneo, executive director of the Pediatric Cancer Foundation of the Lehigh Valley, Inc., said, "We focus on quality of life and long-term survivorship."

Sarah Neary, of Bethlehem, loves attending all of the events the foundation sponsors. She was diagnosed with cancer March 25, 2009, and will be in treatment until next July.

"She's doing great," said her father, Steve Neary. "She loves everything about the clinic. They have so many activities."

The Pediatric Specialty Center at Lehigh Valley Hospital-Muhlenberg makes it much easier on the children receiving treatment, as well as their families. Before it opened, children had to go all the way to Philadelphia for every aspect of their care.

Lauren Loose, of Easton, was diagnosed with cancer in 1999 before the center was open. Lauren's mom, Marianne Loose, is glad the facility is now available. "It's terrific being surrounded by family. The day-to-day things she needs are so much easier," she said, explaining if Lauren needs blood work or to have something checked, it can be done at the center.

"Not only does it save time, but it benefits the whole family," Loose said.

Christina Whitehead, of Kutztown, peeks out while getting a massage.

A bit of Syrian flavor

Dave, Joanne, and Hend Yazigi, the owners of neighborhood market Chris's Deli at Seventh and Spring streets, stand ready with a kitchen full of classic American and Middle Eastern foods for a bit of something different on the sleepy lower west side. The store opened in June and has a deli counter, sodas, snacks, canned and household goods and a Mediterranean section. The menu includes everything from burgers, fries and hoagies to gyros, falafel, meat pies, and chicken and beef shawarma. Daughter Joanne, acting manager, says her family long wanted to open its own store and fell for the scene – the neighborhood – and thought adding a bit of Syrian flavor would be a new experience for many local residents. Chris's is open Monday through Saturday with plenty of goods and a hot grill. "We're ready," Joanne says. "We have a lot to offer."

Seminary for Young Ladies

By KAREN M. SAMUELS
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Moravian Seminary for Young Ladies (now known as Moravian College) was established in 1742 by Countess Benigna, daughter of Count Zinzendorf. The school became the first well-known girls' boarding school in the country. It was the first school to employ a female teacher.

The schools of the Moravians were established to provide for the improvement of academic skills as well as artistic expression for boys and girls. They were ahead of their time in provided a liberal education for young girls. In a 1893 address, R.K. Buehrle, superintendent of the Lancaster School District, described the Moravian view of education: "When you educate a woman, you educate an entire family."

The girls were expected to learned to write in both English and German. They covered the subjects of arithmetic, geography, history, botany, grammar, astronomy, penmanship, plain sewing, singing and playing music, writing essays and poetry, spinning, knitting and weaving. The girls were expected to have impeccable manners, and keep their rooms clean and neat.

Initially the school accepted non-Moravian students but by 1750 found that it couldn't accommodate the large number of applicants. A policy was put in place to only accept children of the Moravian faith.

The school continued to operate during the most stressful events in Bethlehem. During the years of the French and Indian War, refugees arrived in town in a state of terror seeking protection. The American Revolution brought hundreds of sick soldiers seeking care in a makeshift hospital in Bethlehem. All these outsiders noted the exceptional Moravian girls school and word spread about the school throughout the colonies.

In 1785, under the guidance of Bishop John de Watteville and his wife, Countess Benigna, the school opened its doors once again to accept non-Moravian students. The tuition charged for school and boarding, in Pennsylvania currency, was five pounds per quarter or $114 in today's economy.

The Seminary for Young Ladies was an extraordinary school when you considered the quality of education provided elsewhere in the newly formed United States. In the one-room schoolhouses that dotted the countryside of Northampton and Lehigh counties, a young girl could expect to learn to read well enough to be able to read the Bible. She would finish school knowing how to write and spell passably and to be able to do ordinary computations.

During a typical five-month school term she would have access to few or no books of literature, textbooks or maps. The skills of the schoolmasters varied widely as there were no colleges to train teachers. A teacher could be as young as 16 years old.

Mary Catherine (Polly) Blum (Bloom) was born to Frederick and Maria Catherine (Weiss) Blum Oct. 6, 1785, in Hope, N.J. Frederick operated a tannery in the small Moravian settlement. When Polly was born, Hope had 100 residents of the Moravian faith. Membership in the church steadily decreased until 1808, when the congregation decided to terminate the church there and sell the property. The Hope Moravians returned to Bethlehem or Nazareth. At this time, Polly was enrolled in the Bethlehem Seminary and upon graduation stayed on at the Seminary as a teacher.

Polly was described as a pretty young woman. In their book, "A Century of Moravian Sisters: A Record of Christian Community Life," Elizabeth Lehman Myers and Frank J. Myers (mother and son historians) quote Polly's response to why she never married: "I could never stand seeing the same face, day after day, year after year." Instead she devoted her life to teaching. She was in charge of the older girls for 33 years, retiring in 1842. She helped educate thousands of young women during these years.

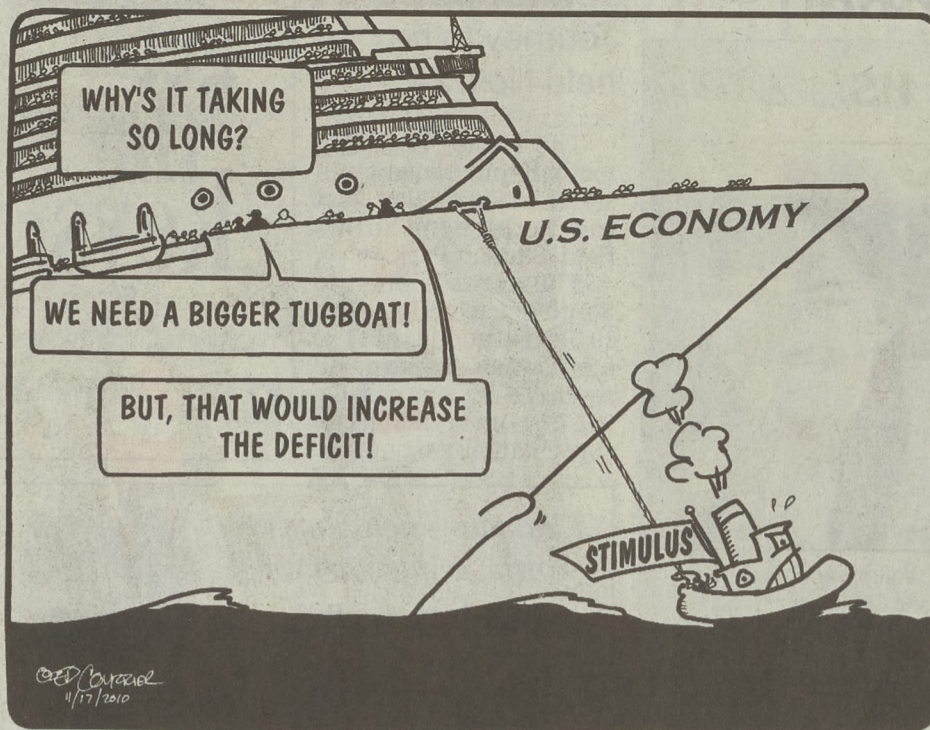

In 1818, Polly introduced to the curriculum needlework done in crepe and ribbon, which became a specialty of the Moravians in America. A typical pattern was a floral arrangement on a silk canvas made from a combination of silk crepe, silk and chenille ribbons. No mistakes could be made, as the silk canvas was unforgiving and showed all punctures of the needle.

Under Polly's tutelage, her students created pieces of ornamental needlework that encouraged the artistic expression of the girls. She supervised the students who created a needlepoint for First Lady Louisa Catherine Adams in 1826. This gift can be seen today at the Adams Home Museum in Quincy, Mass. Mrs. Adams wrote a letter of thanks to the girls, which is now held in the Moravian Archives.

In her retirement, Polly continued to live in the Sisters' House, lending a hand at the school when needed. Even at an advanced age, her handwriting was described as, "exquisite, as clear cut as a steel engraving." She suffered hearing loss, causing her to speak loudly during sermons, unknowingly entertaining the congregants who surrounded her. She died Nov. 23, 1875, at the age of 90. She was the oldest person living in Bethlehem before her death. Polly was buried in God's Acre on Market Street.

Pavel Petrovich Svinin painted this watercolor of three Moravian sisters in 1811. The sisters' names are not identified but the young woman in the middle appears to be the right age to be Polly Blum. The painting captures how the sisters dressed in the early 1800s.

ANOTHER VIEW

No more electoral Halloween years

You can't, of course, talk partisan politics in a polling place. But you CAN talk about the mechanics of elections. When I arrived to vote, very early on the morning of Tuesday, Nov. 2, people were doing just that. Whoever we had come there to vote for, many seemed to agree that something was very wrong with the election process, and that it needed to be fixed.

I don't know what gave us all a clue. Could it be that the whole year to that point had resembled a political Halloween, with a whole army of unqualified and unqualifiable people suddenly lusting after political careers, putting on their candidate costumes, and announcing for important offices? Sometimes they wound up on General Election ballots, too. The results could be ludicrous. More reliably, they were frightening.

Or could our clue be the unbelievable sums of money spent to buy the services of political shills - the folks who produced the gut-wrenching ads that defiled our papers, mailboxes, television screens and radio speakers with lies and mere modifications of the truth?

I've heard the total bill for all that shillery was $4 trillion. It doesn't seem that could be possible. Is there that much money in the world? Imagine what even a fraction of that might have done to solve our problems - to educate, heal, rebuild infrastructure, end global warming, employ those who need jobs, bring back hope where there has been only despair?

Since I am writing on the afternoon of Election Day I have no idea how this is all going to come out. I am closer to despair than to hope; but obviously I did go to vote - with crossed fingers. And I did find some cause for hope in the concern of the poll workers.

One idea that seemed to appeal to them was not new. But there can be nothing like an election cycle such as this one to renew interest in it. The idea is this: Why not have a British-style election, at least in terms of time frame? Six weeks, from start to finish. That should cut down drastically on the amount of campaign money spent, because it will limit the amount of time there is in which to spend it.

It would be a great start; but by itself it is hardly likely to be enough. We need to muzzle the corporations, which the Supreme Court has declared to be living, breathing beings endowed with rights to all the freedom of expression they can pay for.

I am not going to say that it will be easy to shorten the election cycle to a few weeks, and to stuff the genie of corporate greed back into the bottle. One of the reasons is that, right now, the corporations can afford a lot more freedom of expression than we can.

But we need to set out. There is no getting there unless we start.

MORAVIAN COLLEGE SPEAKER

Arizona's immigration law

By DOROTHY GLEW
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Members of the Moravian College community had the opportunity to hear a presentation about the Arizona immigration law from the perspective of a Native American. The Sept. 21 talk was part of a series of programs on immigration, sponsored primarily by Moravian's Office of Institutional Diversity.

Sam Tso, a member of the Navajo Tribe, is a practitioner of native medicine and Keeper of the Oral Teachings and stories of the Diné. Reflecting on the Indian experience in the United States, Tso discussed reasons for Indian solidarity with Mexican immigrants.

The displacement that law-abiding, hard-working immigrants, who have lived in the United States for years, will face if the law is passed is all-too-familiar to Native Americans. While the tragic history of Indians forcefully driven from their lands is well known, Tso described how, by more subtle means, Indians continue to lose lands they have settled. Some have been appropriated for use as military preserves; No Trespassing signs have suddenly appeared on others.

Moreover, the racial profiling that could become a reality for immigrants if the law is passed has been very much a part of the Native American experience. To their amazement, Indians have been stopped and asked for their immigration papers, he said.

Reflecting on the Indian experience in the United States, Sam Tso discussed reasons for Indian solidarity with Mexican immigrants.

Tso is a healer interested in helping people. He gets calls from Canada requesting his help. He described the harassment he experiences when crossing the border into Canada. His bags are searched, and he is required to explain what each of the objects he is carrying will be used for. He has even been detained at the border for a couple of days.

Tso pointed out that for decades Navajo Indians in Mexico have been denied entry into the United States. He bemoaned the fact that the government is failing to make a distinction between members of drug cartels and other undesirables on the one hand and members of Indian tribes on the other. Many of these Indians are relatives of Navajos living in the United States.

Shaking his head wearily, but with a twinkle in his eye, Tso remarked that the early European settlers who came to America were never asked to produce immigration papers by the Native American residents.

Council nixes name change

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The efforts of two civic watchdogs Nov. 3 succeeded in reversing a Public Works Committee recommendation to rename Silvex Road to College Drive. In spite of a strong argument by Councilwoman Karen Dolan in support of the change, the City Council voted 5 to 2 against changing the name.

Dana Grubb and Stephen Antalics had argued that the short road retain the name in recognition of the long defunct Silvex Spark Plug Company.

"I don't have a casual attitude toward street names," Dolan said. "But street names are not necessarily an accurate guide to history."

Dolan was responding to a humorous tongue-in-cheek proposal by Grubb that all the streets named after U.S. presidents be re-named generic, meaningless names like Maple Street and Elm Street.

She had previously linked the Silvex Spark Plug Company to the transportation industry known for being polluters.

Dolan continued her spirited defense of her position. "We need to use our intelligence and apply it to every case."

Bethlehem Citizen's Association member William K. Scheier also opposed the name change. "Those who are casual about preserving history are condemned to lose it."

Councilpersons Jean Belinski and Eric Evans urged the council not to change the name of Silvex Drive.

In other business, Police Chief Stuart Bedics told the council that in response to a pedestrian being hit in a crosswalk on Elizabeth Street near Liberty HS, "We are starting to make it part of an officer's duty to go out on the street to help pedestrians."

Mayor John Callahan pledged to add pedestrian signs and to coordinate with the Bethlehem Area School District on traffic safety issues around Liberty.

Andy Prickler, owner of Andy's Hauling and Waste Disposal and a Bethlehem Parks employee, objected to the idea that the city might contract all waste disposal to a single vendor.

"This is nothing more than harassment," said Prickler, speaking to City Council. "If this doesn't stop, there will be repercussions."

He didn't elaborate on what the repercussions might be.

He said there are now 19 contractors working in the city to haul trash.

Earlier in the evening, the Public Safety Committee considered the proposed ordinance to require gun owners to report a lost and stolen gun to police.

Resident Bill Jackson said, "The whole concept is crazy." He said the bill was probably illegal. "It's a feel-good accomplishment ordinance that wastes a lot of time of the people at this table."

Chris Miller, an employee of Dunkelberger's Sports Center in Stroudsburg and a National Rifle Association member, called it a "nanny law" akin to seatbelt laws and bike helmet laws that would turn good citizens into criminals.

The committee, chaired by Councilman David T. DiGiacinto, went over its scheduled time and adjourned to make room for the City Council, which convened immediately following the committee meeting. DiGiacinto will put the issue on the agenda for the next meeting of the committee.

'Last full measure'

The ninth annual Miller Heights Elementary School Veterans Day program was observed Nov. 10 with dozens of veterans in attendance. Most were the parents, grandparents and siblings of students attending the school. On what was the 235th anniversary of the U.S. Marine Corps, students received an education in civics, patriotism and sacrifice throughout the program, which also included a quiz by U.S. Marine Corps Staff Sgt. Christopher Bodner. Honorary guest Congressman

Charlie Dent thanked those who have served and those who have given "that last full measure of devotion." Dent also recognized the sacrifices that military families endure. Patriotic music by the fourth grade chorus, a Veterans Day poem recitation, a military tribute slide presentation, recognition of all veterans present, and a U.S. Marine Corps Color Guard were highlights of the ceremonies, which were followed by refreshments for guests.

CHRISTMAS

IN THE CHRISTMAS CITY

During the holidays, all roads lead to Bethlehem, which does its best to, as Charles Dickens urged, "keep Christmas well."

Bethlehem again ready to make the season bright

By CYNTHIA UNDERHILL
 Special to The Press

Bethlehem is a mecca for travelers during the holiday season.

One experience many do for the first time is view a Moravian Putz. Among the few Moravian communities in the United States, Bethlehem has three putzes open to the public during the holidays at Central Moravian Church, East Hills Moravian Church and Edgeboro Moravian Church.

A putz is a miniature manger scene. It can be as small as a single scene that fits under a tree or very large, filling an entire room and taking several people many hours to build.

The three public church displays in Bethlehem are large and depict many scenes. Moss and branches from nature, combined with figurines, depict scenes such as "The Annunciation to Mary," "baby Jesus in the manger," the "visit of the magi from the east" and "The flight to Egypt."

Groups gather in a darkened viewing room to view the putz. As verses of scripture are read, the corresponding scene in the putz is lit.

Another holiday activity in Bethlehem is the "Live Advent Calendar." The door to the Goundie House serves as the door on the calendar.

At 5 p.m. daily during Advent, the Goundie door is open and the crowd is treated to a surprise. It could be a performance, discounts to local stores, or a treat.

Where else can you walk from Nazareth to Bethlehem?

The 51st Annual Nazareth to Bethlehem Christmas Peace Pilgrimage is Dec. 11. After the walk, there's a light meal while listening to Nancy Tate, Executive Director of Lepoco, the oldest continually-active peace organization in the Lehigh Valley, present "We Have Only Begun: Reflections on our Work for Peace!"

The holidays in Bethlehem are steeped with opportunities to learn about the city's history with activities like a "Horse-Drawn Carriage Ride" through the historic district or walking and bus tours of Bethlehem. The 1750 Smithy is open with blacksmiths showing their skills. In addition, Historic Bethlehem Partnership museums add holiday decorations to their exhibits.

You can listen to the sounds of the seasons at one of many concerts in Bethlehem, including the Advent Organ Concert, Central Moravian Church, Nov. 27; German and English Advent Singstunde, Central

The Society of the Arts (SOTA) is doing a kitchen-tour fundraiser 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Dec. 2.

According to Nancy Odorski, SOTA Fundraising Committee Co-Chair, the tour features kitchens at six beautiful homes in the Saucon Valley-Coopersburg area. The homes will be decorated for the season, and attendees will also be able to sample cookies from area specialty bakers and bakeries.

Attendees go first to the Welcome Center at the model home in the new Epernay condominium development just off Spring Valley Road in Saucon Valley. Ticket holders receive tour maps and cookie containers, and will tour the model's country French-style kitchen. Before leaving the model, they will have the opportunity to purchase cookies and holiday flowers.

The five other kitchens on the tour reflect a range of tastes and styles, including two traditional kitchens, a contemporary art-filled space, a Tuscan-style, and a Victorian country kitchen filled with a collection of antique cookie cutters.

Appreciating things great and small

One by one, they come back to the bus, clutching their treasures in their hands.

They are members of my Englewood Shell Club and we have spent the past two days treasure hunting in Islamorada and other parts of the Florida Keys.

Some hunted underwater, wearing wet suits and snorkeling gear to better find the prizes they sought.

Some stayed on shore, hunting under rocks and in hidden crevices.

When we boarded the bus at the end of the day's search, our club president asked to see what treasures we found.

Jeanne Friend opened her small bag to show several kinds of coral, including a distinctive rose coral shell.

"Ohhhh, how pretty!" exclaimed the club president in appreciation as she eyed Jeanne's treasures.

"The way we carry on, one would think we had real gems here," laughed Jeanne.

They did have gems. They had handfuls of proof of the wonders of nature. When you learn to appreciate the intricate beauty of even the smallest shell, you begin to fully appreciate the scope of how wondrous nature is.

As seashells go, what we found on that trip weren't the finest or the rarest of shells. Islamorada is a boater's paradise lovely to visit but it doesn't offer a treasure chest of shells such as one can find at Sanibel, one of the best shelling places in the world.

Because we didn't have the variety of shells we usually find, we had to look harder and longer for our treasures from the sea. And that had its own special rewards.

Many of us ended up collecting snail shells, of all things. I thought the bleeding tooth nerite was extraordinary in the way it looked like two teeth under bloody gums. It's certainly well named.

I never realized how varied, how colorful and how beautiful something as simple as a snail shell could be.

If you doubt this, pull up photos of snail shells on the Internet. I think you'll be amazed at the intricacy and beauty of these shells.

It's not a stretch to say shell club members are a bit like shells themselves in that the more I learn about each one, the more intriguing they seem. One of the things I like best about them is their appreciation of each and every thing in nature.

When we made a side trip to see the Key deer at Big Pine, there were so many oohs and aahs when we spotted the tiny deer that are about half the size of Pennsylvania's white tail deer.

I thought then of the children's poem about all creatures great and small. The older I grow, the more I appreciate all creatures great and small. I'm even starting to appreciate the alligator in my backyard pond.

I've been told that photographers learn to "see" differently and I know that's true. It's true of shellers, too. Those who learn to look for the beauty and specialness of a fingernail-sized shell learn to extend that appreciation to all of life.

Seeing beauty in simple things is a gift worth cultivating for anyone because it reaps personal rewards.

Someone once explained that theory by comparing it to using a flashlight instead of a floodlight. While a floodlight illuminates the broad picture, a flashlight can pinpoint small areas, letting you see more detail.

Do you look at the world through a floodlight, or a flashlight? If you learn to zero in on detail in any simple thing, you see more of the miracle of creation.

Author and radio personality Joni Eareckson Tada isn't a sheller but, through necessity, she has learned to look at life through a narrow beam. When she was a teenager, Joni dived into a shallow pool, breaking her neck and becoming a paraplegic.

One would think living life in a wheelchair would be limiting. But Joni says having limited movement expands her world rather than limiting it.

"It's all in how you learn to see," she said during one radio broadcast. When your world is smaller, you see more, she explained, because you look more closely at every little thing. She talked about relishing the detailed beauty of the inside of a flower and appreciating the play of light as the sun poked through trees, things others might miss as they hurry by.

Before her accident, she said "big boisterous pleasures" provided only fleeting satisfaction for her. Now, she finds pleasure in the way a breeze feels on her face and in the sound the wind makes when it rustles leaves.

"Smaller pleasures are rich because these things yield a spurt of gratitude," she said.

I've always remembered her talk about small pleasures. The older I get, the more I seem to relish small pleasures of all kinds.

Joni Eareckson Tada is right. Whether it's a seashell, a sunset or a snail, zeroing in on small pleasures truly does expand your world as well as your gratitude for life.

Pianist Vivian Wang with PSO for gala

Pianist Vivian Wang was only 11-years-old when she performed her first solo concert at Wesley Church, Bethlehem.

Now a familiar face to Pennsylvania Sinfonia Orchestra audiences, Wang, at the seasoned age of 17, will perform at the Sinfonia Gala concert at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 20 in Symphony Hall, 23 N. Sixth St., Allentown.

Sinfonia music director Allan Birney began teaching piano to Vivian when she was 6, and since has helped her seize many opportunities at a young age, including top prizes at recital competitions and solo concerts with the Sinfonia.

The Sinfonia will accompany Wang for her rendition of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor.

The piece is said to capture Mozart's mature style during his career in Vienna in the 1780s. Frustrated by difficulty of establishing himself as an independent composer and musician, Mozart produced this darker and more reserved piece, which is portrayed through heavy tension between the soloist and the orchestra.

The concerto will be preceded by Mozart's Symphony No. 23 in D and Schubert's Mass No. 2 in G.

The symphony, written when Mozart was 17, was influenced by the composer's journeys in Italy as a young, traveling prodigy, as evidence by its upbeat, Italian Rococo style.

Schubert, at 17, wrote his second mass in less than one week. The piece will be performed by the Sinfonia and the Camerata Singers, both founded by Birney.

A reception and meet-and-greet the artists will be held following the concert in the Rodale Community Room on the third floor of Symphony Hall.

Seventh LV acoustic contest continues

By RICHARD GENSIK
Special to The Press

What started as a one-off several years ago is now a buzzed-about event that proudly states "by musician, for musicians" and is also a fine way to spend a Tuesday night: the Lehigh Valley Acoustic Performers Contest.

This year's 7th annual edition continues Tuesday nights in November at Mezza Luna Bar & Grill, 1193 Airport Road, Allentown.

By all indications, this year's contest is shaping up as the biggest one yet.

"The biggest change is the growth in the audience," says Blake Dannen, who is in charge of media relations for the contest.

"What I also like is what hasn't changed. It has maintained a nice supportive, networking vibe. Bands have been formed out of people who have met at the contest," says Dannen, heard weekends on 93.3 WMMR.

The set-up is similar to your average open mic night, sans cover tunes. A sign-up sheet is placed out at 7 p.m. There are three judges from regional media each week, without prior knowledge of which performers will be playing. Adherence to the word "acoustic" is the law of the land.

Judges pick the best of the night each Tuesday for the finals Nov. 30, based on songwriting, musicianship, stage presence and overall performance.

Previous winners include Leechboy, winner of the first year's contest; Ricky Bell, host of this year's proceedings; and last year's winners, Tim & Jules, a guitarist-conga player combo.

On Nov. 9, the second finalist chosen was Paulie Knakk, aka Paul Knakkergaard of Bethlehem. Pocono-based band Mouths Of Babes was the Nov. 2 winner, first night of this year's contest.

There was also a contest Nov. 16. The next contest is Nov. 23, when area blues-rock guitarist Craig Thatcher is scheduled to play a few songs in a Martin Guitar demo.

There has been the fair share of unusual acts this year, according to Dannen.

"[This band] Midway consisted of a singer who sat and played a bass drum kick pedal while playing banjo and harmonica — sometimes all at once — a washtub bass player — the real deal that sounded awesome — and a wild-eyed washboard player who played it with spoons and brushes. She actually jumped down from the stage and ran around the audience while she played."

Among the patrons lending their support this year will be former George Thorogood guitarist Steve Chrismar, who is expected to attend Nov. 23 and 30.

The four weekly winners will return as finalists Nov. 30 to compete for the grand prizes. In all, more than $3,000 in cash and prizes will be awarded to local musicians who write and perform their own original songs.

Grand prizes include: $500 from Mezza Luna; $800 DX 175th Anniversary Limited Edition guitar from The Martin Guitar Co., Nazareth; $500 photo shoot package from Image By Hugo, Whitehall; $250 gift certificate from SoLowB Productions live sound production ($150 for solos-duos); $200 gift certificate from Dave Phillips Music and Sound, Allentown; eight hours of recording time at Brian J. Anthony Studios, North Catasauqua; and a $100 gift certificate from Hawk Music, Bethlehem.

Weekly prizes for all four finalists include: $100 in graphic design from Creative Mind Lab, Northampton; professionally-shot DVD of performance at the Nov. 30 finals; two tickets and a T-shirt for the Lehigh Valley Music Awards Dec. 5; prize packs from 99.9 The Hawk and 107 The Bone.

Each performer receives a pack of guitar strings and gifts from Martin Guitar.

How to select the best holiday tree

It is hard to believe it is almost that time of year again.

Some families, as soon as Thanksgiving is over, are out looking for their Christmas tree.

Other families, however, would rather wait until Christmas Eve to put up their tree.

No matter what your family's tradition may be, some basic steps must be taken to ensure your tree's freshness.

Wrap your tree before going home, or better yet, put it in the car-van if possible. Seeing people drive home with their selected tree on top of the family car is not the best idea. As you drive, you can subject your tree to 35- to 65 miles-per-hour winds, which can quickly dry out even the freshest tree.

Once home, cut at least one inch from the base of the tree and place it in a bucket of lukewarm water. If you are not planning to put the tree up right away, try to avoid placing it near sun or drying winds.

Once you are ready to put the tree up, use a clean, sterilized stand with an adequate water reservoir. Avoid placing the tree near a heat source like a wood stove, heat vents or a television. Heat will dry out the tree that much faster.

The type of tree you

GROWING GREEN

L.C. Cooperative Extension
LehighExt@psu.edu

select depends on what you are looking for. Do you want a tree to last a very long time or is that fresh "Christmas" smell more important?

Are children involved in decorating? If so, avoid trees with sharp needles. If you have cats, sharp needles may be just what you are looking for.

Some of the most common types you can buy include:

Scotch pine (Pinus sylvestris): Probably one of the most popular trees of choice. They have very good needle retention and they have a nice full shape. The color can range from green to blue-green. Needles tend to be short (one-inch) and only slightly sharp.

White pine (Pinus strobus): Needles are long and soft. Needs to have been sheared heavily or tends to be sparse or open in shape. Needle retention is fair, lasting a couple of weeks. Popular for its softness and great pine fragrance.

Balsam Fir (Abies balsamea): For the traditionalist, this is the only "true" Christmas tree. They have short, flat needles that are green on top and silvery-white below. The needles are soft and their retention is good, lasting about three weeks. Balsam fir is best known for its great fragrance.

Fraser Fir (Abies fraseri): The southern cousin to the balsam fir — originally from North Carolina. It is similar to the balsam fir except it is less fragrant and its needle retention is a little better.

Douglas Fir (Pseudotsuga menziesii): As the scientific name indicates, this is not a "true" fir. It is one of the most popular trees throughout the United States. Needles are short and not too sharp, with a deep-green to blue-green color. Its claim to fame is its excellent needle retention.

Colorado "Blue" Spruce (Picea pungens): The Colorado spruce is quite popular, especially those with the ice-blue coloring. The needles are very sharp and the tree is difficult to decorate. Needle retention is fair (two to three weeks).

Norway Spruce (Picea abies): Norways are popular for their shape and lower price because of its speedier growth. Needles are short and sharp with a rich green color. The tree also has a very nice fragrance when fresh. Needle retention is poor. Needles begin to fall within a week. At best, the tree will only last two weeks.

When purchasing a tree, always ask how fresh it is. Make sure it was not cut more than a few weeks in advance of the sale. To test for freshness, run your hand along a branch and see if any needles come off. If more than a few come off, the tree isn't very fresh.

Your best bet is to go to a local Christmas tree farm and cut your own. Call the Lehigh County Extension Office (610-391-9840) for copy of the Lehigh Valley Farm Market Map and Guide to locate a tree farm near you.

For answers to your garden questions, call the Lehigh County Cooperative Extension Office, 610-391-9840, or Northampton County Cooperative Extension Office, 610-746-1970, and ask to speak with a Master Gardener. Volunteers staff phone lines several days a week, Monday - Friday.

'Nowhere' to run for Lennon

"He's a real nowhere man, Sitting in his nowhere land, Making all his nowhere plans for nobody."

"Nowhere Man"
 While the lyrics are attributed to The Beatles' John Lennon and Paul McCartney, it's widely believed the song was written mainly by Lennon, who sang lead vocals on the 1966 No. 3 Billboard chart hit from the album "Rubber Soul" ("Yesterday and Today" in the United States' release).

The title of "Nowhere Man" inspired the title of the film, "Nowhere Boy," which purports to tell the story of Lennon's teen years, leading up to his skiffle band, The Quarrymen, formed in 1957, and concluding with The Beatles perched on the precipice of fame, about to cross the Channel for those transformative 1960 gigs in Hamburg, Germany.

"Nowhere Boy" is of chief interest to Beatles aficionados and Lennon fans. The biopic depicts Lennon as being an extremely angry young man, a ruffian with a mischievous nature and cruel streak. The young Lennon acts, reacts, regrets, has remorse and apologizes.

The screenplay by Matt Greenhalgh ("Control") is based on a memoir by Julia Dykins Baird, a daughter of John "Bobby" Albert Dykins and Lennon's mother Julia, who died after being hit by a vehicle in 1958.

Baird wrote "John Lennon, My Brother" after Lennon was killed in 1980 and "Imagine This - Growing Up With My Brother John Lennon" (2007).

Lennon (often spot-on Aaron Johnson) is shown in an emotional tug-of-war between his mother, Julia (flamboyant Anne-Marie Duff) and Aunt Mimi (reserved Kristin Scott Thomas) in lower middle class Liverpool, England. Lennon's father, Alfred, a merchant seaman, never appears. Mimi's husband, who later dies, embraces him. Julia's boyfriend rebukes him.

By turns, Lennon's music, political causes and life, for better or worse, was a lonely boy's quest for a father's approbation not found, ironically, on Menlove Avenue, where he grew up with Mimi.

Director Sam Taylor-Wood, in her feature film debut, makes do with a screenplay long on melodrama and short on music. We hear snippets of the rock 'n' roll that influenced Lennon and the lads from Liverpool.

There's a version of the first Lennon-McCartney composition, "Hello, Little Girl." Over the closing credits, Lennon's "Mother," his post-Beatles angst-ridden paean to his mother, is heard.

One of the most intriguing segments is at the end where photos of the actual Lennon, McCartney, George Harrison, Aunt Mimi and Julia are shown, as if the director is saying, "See, I got that right."

Taylor-Wood gets many things right. Still, "Nowhere Boy" nowhere near provides much insight into John Lennon.

For that we have "In His Own Write" and other writings, his drawings, his songwriting and his recordings. But we don't have him.

DiBussolo takes it 'Upstairs' for jazz

By JERRY DUCKETT
 Special to The Press

Emmaus guitarist Frank DiBussolo calls himself one of the most unknown guitarists around, but virtuoso guitarists like Bucky Pizzarelli, Jimmy Bruno, Howard Alden and Jack Wilkins are just a few of many who would disagree.

The Frank DiBussolo Quartet, with guest guitarist Justin Odom, performs at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 19 in the "Upstairs at Symphony Hall" concert series in the Rodale Community Room, Symphony Hall, 23 N. Sixth St., Allentown.

Pizzarelli and Bruno have made appearances at the Macungie Institute, Macungie, where DiBussolo hosts monthly concerts March through September.

Says Pizzarelli, "Frank [DiBussolo] is a player of great taste, strength and technique, and it is fun to make music with him."

Adds Bruno, "It would be hard to imagine anyone playing the guitar better than Frank [DiBussolo]."

Philadelphia native DiBussolo, an eight-time Grammy nominee who has performed since 1965, has played with Buddy Rich, Frank Sinatra, Dizzy Gillespie, Tony Bennett, Bobby Vinton and Diana Ross. Most of the gigs took place in Atlantic City, where he found himself, as did many jazz artists looking for their start.

DiBussolo, a graduate of Weidner College, Philadelphia, who received Masters and Doctorates in Musical Arts from Combs College, Philadelphia, is Director of Jazz Studies and Instrumental music at the Lehigh Valley Charter High School for the Performing Arts, Bethlehem.

DiBussolo began his music career with singing lessons in grade school. He wanted to play the trumpet, but his father, a cabinet-maker, took the advice of a friend who played with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra and advised him not to allow his son to take up the trumpet.

By the time Frank was 12, his father rented a guitar and he took lessons. His first professional gig was in his sophomore year at high school. He put a band together called the Uniques. They played New Year's Eve, and then got a twice-monthly Friday night gig at the Aqua Lounge in South Philadelphia.

He became more well-known following a gig with the Howard Lanin Society Band, then the premier band in the Philadelphia area.

"Tony Mattola was really my first influence. Then came Joe Pass, Bucky Pizzarelli and Wes Montgomery. I called Wes in 1968, told him he did not know me, but could he give me a lesson when he came to Philadelphia for the Kool Jazz Festival. He said, 'Sure,' but died two weeks later."

DiBussolo has recorded eight albums. His latest is "Average White Cats," released in May on the Lost World label.

"Four or five years ago, I decided to have some of my good buddies come up here and play at the Institute with no preparation, just duos. It led to a regular thing."

"The guitar is a wonderful, beautiful instrument, and I would like to see more interest in some great virtuoso playing that is listener-friendly."

"Too many people think of guitar playing as loud, and not very pretty, because of rock 'n' roll and the media. We try to communicate our music with the audience and our musicians. We try to make it a great experience, not something where the audience is imposed on."

Concert series goes Irish

By JERRY DUCKETT
 Special to The Press

Tony Kenny

Tony Kenny is billed as Ireland's premier entertainer, and at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 19 in the Parkland High School Performing Arts Center, 2700 N. Cedar Crest Blvd., South Whitehall Township, he will take you on a journey filled with dreams, Irish wit, Christmas songs and hymns, and youthful dancing.

The multi-talented entertainer has put together "Christmas Time in Ireland," an extravaganza presented by the Allentown Community Concert Association.

In addition to Kenny, who was Ireland's 1998 Entertainer of the year, the show includes Joe Cuddy, Victoria Kenny and the Dublin City Dancers.

Kenny has performed worldwide, including a 30-city United States tour.

Kenny, born in 1949 in Dublin, Ireland, discovered music as a boy. His grandmother carried a harmonica in her apron. One day when she went to town, she left the apron on a chair.

Says Kenny, "I crawled up on a chair, took it from the pocket, and by the time she came home I figured out how it worked, and learned to play two tunes on it. That's the first time I realized I had a bit of music in me.

"I participated in a lot of school and church choirs, and involved myself as much as possible. I was called upon quite often to participate in many things.

"The church was good, because I learned to love the music of the church and its many different types of music. Also, you were very lucky if you had a good choirmaster or music director who took an interest in you, and I was very fortunate that way."

Kenny's was 18 when he had his first professional gig as part of a small vocal harmony group that sang with a dance band. There were many dance bands working in Ireland at the time. Kenny was asked to join The Sands Show Band as lead vocalist. He studied dance, drama and voice.

"After awhile," says Kenny, "I thought the band was too restrictive for what I wanted to do, so I left at 22, and after a very short time was offered the lead in the Irish premier of 'Jesus Christ Superstar.'"

Kenny next joined the Jury's Irish Cabaret, a large stage show presented in a Dublin hotel of the same name. The show was a hit with locals and tourists.

Kenny made his first recording, "Walking in the Sun," in 1970. His most recent is "Tony Kenny's Collections" on Dolphin Records.

Packer Avenue, Lehigh University, Bethlehem.

Toussaint, born Jan. 14, 1938, has produced, written for, arranged, had his songs covered by and performed with Paul McCartney, the Rolling Stones, Paul Simon, Elvis Costello, Mac "Dr. John" Rebennac, Aaron and Art Neville, the Meters, Patti LaBelle, Joe Cocker, The Band, Little Feat, Ernie K-Doe, Lee Dorsey, Irma Thomas, Etta James and Ramsey Lewis.

Moravian Church, Nov. 30; Bach Choir Christmas Concert, "Bach, Haydn and Mendelssohn," Dec. 11, First Presbyterian Church of Bethlehem; and "Handel's Messiah," Dec. 19, Cathedral Church of the Nativity.

The holidays are always a great time to enjoy theater and the arts. Bethlehem's theater companies have several long-standing holiday shows. They include Touchstone Theater's "Christmas City Follies XI," Dec. 2-19, The Pennsylvania Youth Theater's "The Christmas Doll 2010," Dec. 3-19, the Pennsylvania Youth Ballet's "Nutcracker," Dec. 18, 19, and Pennsylvania Playhouse's "White Christmas," Dec. 3 - 19.

This year, Gerald Charles Dickens will again, as his grandfather urged, "keep Christmas well," by performing "A Christmas Carol" Dec. 13 at the Moravian Book Shop.

The holiday season wouldn't be complete without plenty of opportunities to shop. This year's shopping season will kick off with merchants in the Downtown Historic and Southside shopping districts unveiling their holiday window displays Nov. 20 during the "Christmas Open House & Doors of Bethlehem." Dancers from the Pennsylvania Youth Ballet perform in the store windows 1 - 4 p.m. Nov. 20.

The Christmas City

Tree Lighting Ceremony is at 4:30 p.m. Nov. 26 at Payrow Plaza, 10 E. Church St., Bethlehem.

Christkindlmarkt, Nov. 26 - 27, has different artists many of the weekends, selling hand-made creations under a large heated tent in the vicinity of the Hill-to-Hill Bridge. There's music, ice sculpture, food and, of course, Santa Claus.

Don't forget to stop by the Burnside Crafters Annual Holiday Greens Sale Dec. 4 and 5 to pick up decorations for your home.

With all of the tempting treats to eat from Thanksgiving through the New Year, be sure to keep exercising and burn off those extra pounds. Two events to help keep you motivated to exercise are the 8th Annual Turkey Trot 5K Run and Fitness Walk Nov. 27 and the Peeps Fest 5K Race Dec. 31.

The holiday season will begin winding down with "Peeps Fest" Dec. 29-31, which will include activities like the "Dioramas Galore" competition, an indoor playground, "Delightful Desserts" competition and "Mascot Day"

The holiday season — and the year — concludes with the "Countdown in Downtown" Dec. 31 with a party with Musikkfest favorites, Igor & Red Elvises, in the Christkindlmarkt tent.

Duct tape: warts and all?

Q. Can you get rid of warts with duct tape?

For starters, check with your doctor before beginning self-treatment for warts. You might mistake another kind of skin growth for a wart and hurt yourself.

A recent study showed that duct tape wiped out more warts than conventional freezing did. In this study, warts were covered with duct tape for six days. Then, the warts were soaked in warm water and rubbed with an abrasive such as pumice stone. The treatment was repeated for as long as two months.

Subsequent research has not found duct tape to be significantly effective for treating warts.

You can treat warts at home with medications from the drugstore. Get a patch or solution that contains 17 percent salicylic acid. You have to use these products daily for weeks.

Two of the medications are "Compound W" and "Occlusal-HP." Dr. Scholl makes "Freeze Away," with the claim it removes warts "with as few as one treatment."

Warts are benign skin growths caused by human papillomavirus (HPV). Like other infectious diseases, wart viruses pass from person to person. You can also get the wart virus by touching an object used by someone who has the virus.

Warts are usually rough and skin-colored. They can be dark, flat and smooth.

Warts may grow one at a time or in bunches. They may bleed if picked or cut. They often contain one or more tiny black dots, which are sometimes called wart seeds. These dots are small, clotted blood vessels.

Common warts grow on hands. They are more common where skin has been broken, such as where fingernails are bitten.

Plantar warts are found on the soles, or plantar area, of feet. Walking pushes plantar warts back into the skin. They can be painful. When they grow in clusters, they are known as mosaic warts.

Flat warts are small, smooth and tend to grow in large numbers. They can show up anywhere on the body. They are often found where people shave: the face on men and legs on women. Irritation from shaving probably contributes to the development of flat warts.

Genital warts are sexually transmitted. They can appear externally or internally.

The wart virus affects people differently. Some people get warts; others don't. The likelihood of getting warts is similar to the chances of catching a cold. If your immune system is weak, you will be more prone to getting warts.

Freezing, or cryotherapy, is one method for removing warts. Burning, or electrosurgery, is an alternative. Lasers are used when other therapies fail. There are also surface-peeling preparations such as salicylic acid. Retinoids, which are medications derived from vitamin A, are used to disrupt a wart's skin cell growth.

Another treatment is to inject each wart with an anti-cancer drug called bleomycin. The injections may be painful and can have other side effects. Immunotherapy, which attempts to use the body's own rejection system is an additional treatment method.

New warts should be treated as soon as possible to prevent them from shedding virus into nearby skin and creating additional warts.
