Regrets, they've had a few

Kids aren't the only people who need role models. I think we all need a lot of role models for different phases of our lives: adolescence, adulthood, parenthood and old age.

My role model for being an old guy is my father-in-law.

He was a dentist in Elizabeth, N.J., now retired. He continues keen interests in nature, gardening, history, art and current events.

He's a rather rare political animal — liberal minded with a strong sense of individual responsibility. He's fond of quoting the line of old radio personality Rev. Ike: "The best way to help the poor is to not be one of them."

I've spent hours listening to the stories of his youth; Depression-era America, growing up in New York, summer locomotive trips to the Jersey Shore, his military service in Japan, the joys and heartaches of practicing dentistry in the inner city.

And I've been amazed at the breadth of his life skills, from quieting a colicky baby, to glazing a window to identifying wildflowers.

He's a man with a great interest in the world and an equal willingness to learn about it.

I mention him here because the idea for this week's cover story was indirectly his.

We had been sitting on his porch, talking generally about life when, after a quiet few minutes, he gently offered that if he had his life to live over again he wouldn't alter much, but there was one thing he'd definitely change.

"When I was younger, I wouldn't have let older people push me around so much."

He didn't elaborate much. He said he would have been more of his own person, even if it meant making a few more mistakes.

I realized during that quiet conversation on the porch how much I love that guy.

What he served up as a mild

Gerald Scharf is editor of
The Bethlehem Star

regret was really a subtle, effectively delivered piece of profound advice.

This week, we collected the regrets of 30 seasoned citizens of Bethlehem.

Some are funny and some are intensely sad. Some are as profound as that of my friend and father-in-law, Bill.

Our theme is continued into this week's 15 Questions subject, Francis Knouss, Chamber of Commerce ambassador and tennis champion.

I met Mr. Knouss when, 10 months ago, he strode into the new offices of the Star, welcomed us to the city and made sure he didn't have to sell us on the merits of chamber membership.

During a lull in our conversation it ridiculously occurred to me as I gazed at this vigorous man of nearly eight decades that in the unlikely event we were ever to engage in a fist fight I'd have to lay heavy odds in Mr. Knouss' favor.

If the manufacturers of tennis rackets had any sense at all they'd hire him pronto as a living testimonial of the health benefits of a tennis life.

The First Presbyterian Church has some serious choir power, and it was released last Sunday in an outdoor celebration of the opening of additions to the Center Street church.

A dramatic fall morning of blue skies, gusty breezes and bright sunshine added to the splendor of the choirs, the grand sound of the Philadelphia Brass and the thunder of timpani.

The church community dedicated the opening of its Children Center, a 24-classroom facility, and the Kirk Center, a multipurpose activities facility.

The church built the additions to provide more room for its growing congregation of more than 3,000 adults and 1,000 children.

First Presbyterian is not the only church celebrating an intense commitment to investing in the spiritual growth of our city.

Next door, the Wesley United Methodist Church is continuing construction on its new home and, downtown, the Grace Deliverance Baptist Church last week celebrated paying off the mortgage on its New Street home.

There are some personnel changes at The Bethlehem Star I'd like to share with you:

Tim Laubach, our advertising manager, has moved to a marketing position with Cellular One of the Lehigh Valley.

Tim was a key player in the creation of the Bethlehem Star, and we're going to miss him a great deal. We wish him the best in his new position.

Heidi Fisher, our founding office manager, is also leaving for new challenges. Heidi's calm and friendly demeanor helped us get through the trials of our new computer and telephone systems, and she was one of the sharpest unofficial proofreaders I've ever met.

Heidi is going on to graduate school, and we wish her the best.

At the same time, we welcome Shirley Stewart as our new office manager. Shirley comes from a newspaper and public relations background and has expressed a sincere appreciation for what we're trying to accomplish with The Bethlehem Star.

We're happy to welcome her to the team.

The Sand Island Ice House cometh

It's difficult not to get excited by the proposal to turn the Ice House on Sand Island into a family-oriented performing arts center.

Built in the 1880s, the Ice House was rescued by the city in 1963. Two years ago, the city secured more than $400,000 from the Delaware and Lehigh Canal National Heritage Corridor Commission to stabilize the building and save it as a reminder of a time when the ice man and ice boxes played as important a role in American life as malls and supermarkets do today.

Mineral Spring Ice Company wagons were common sights in the city and the ammonia-compression method the company used to produce ice was part of a significant turn in the Industrial Revolution.

Now that the building is stabilized, city officials have been wondering exactly how it should be incorporated into city plans.

Four non-profit community organizations have stepped forward to form a consortium that, along with the city Recreation Department, would operate the Ice House as a recreation and performing arts center.

The four organizations are crown jewels: Touchstone Theater, Godfrey Daniels, The Pennsylvania Youth Theatre, Mock Turtle Marionette Theater.

Mayor Ken Smith is leading the charge for this proposal and we share his belief that this project would be an important contribution to the city's recreational opportunities and to its cultural enrichment.

The proposal is to install a 425- to 500-seat theater, a second 99-seat theater, classroom and workshop space and a history interpretation area that would teach visitors about the building's historical significance.

The Parks and Recreation Department, which currently has no indoor facilities, could use the Ice House for scheduled programs.

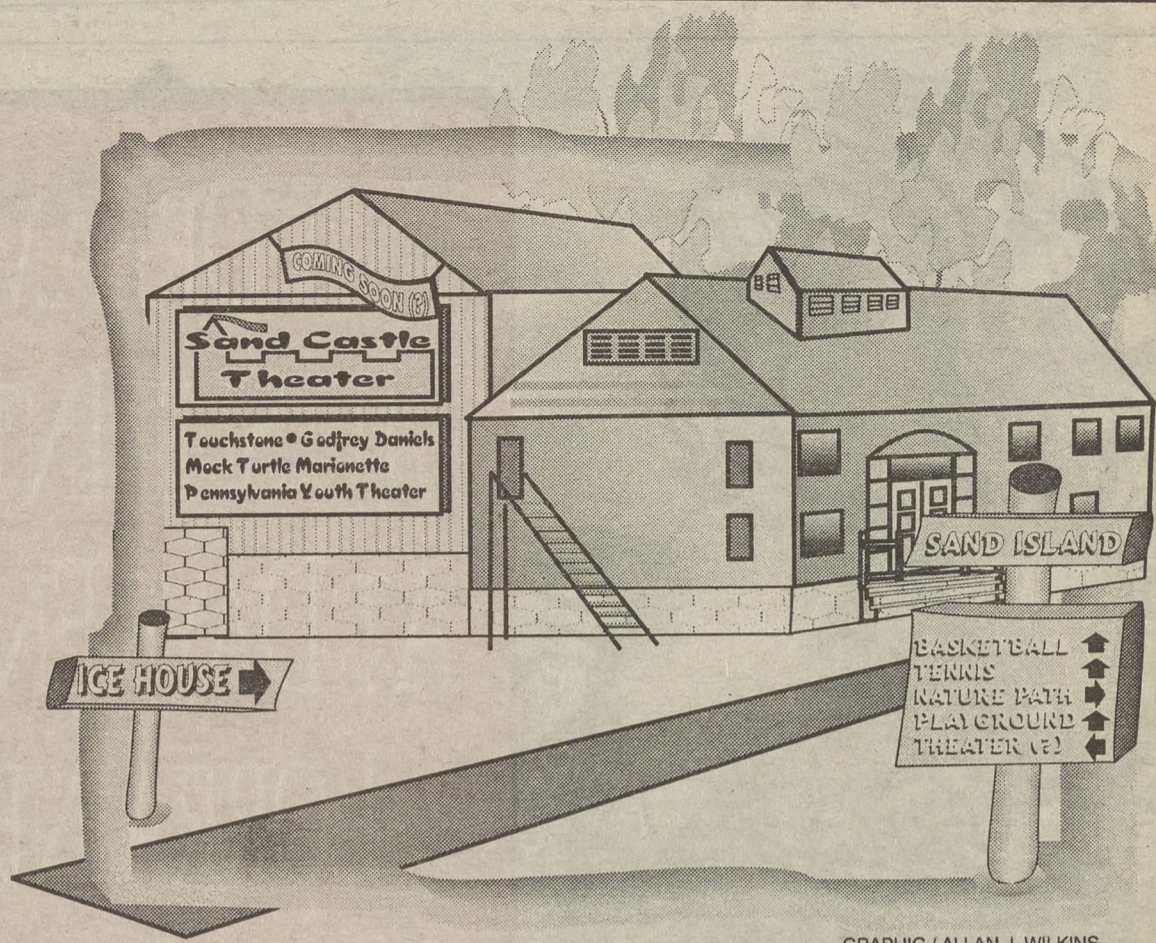

The Ice House would become the permanent home for Pennsylvania Youth Theatre and the Mock Turtle Marionette Theater. Godfrey Daniels and Touchstone would use the facility for productions they otherwise could not accommodate at their South Side facilities.

Initial cost estimates were as high as $3 million, but Mayor Smith said recently that he believes this worthwhile project could be accomplished with a budget of about $1.3 million.

City Council would be asked to provide about $250,000 toward the project. The rest of the money would come from state grants, grants for the National Heritage Corridor and leftover money the city's 250th Anniversary celebration, which provided the financial means for the restoration of Sand Island in the first place.

We believe this is a great idea; great for city residents and great for Sand Island.

We hope City Council sees the tremendous cultural, educational and recreational enrichment it can provide to the city by helping support this idea.

2 views at your service

Dear Mr. Scharf:

Your editorials make frequent references to "misguided defenders of the Constitution," who protest the mandatory community service program in Bethlehem public schools. This persistent habit reveals a peculiar and stubborn resistance to judiciously, carefully weighing many aspects of a complicated issue.

The rational thinker will most likely find valid points on both sides of this argument, even if he or she eventually favors one view over the other. Recognizing these points indicates that one is able to perceive even controversial issues in a balanced manner. Unfortunately, I have not found this characteristic in any of the Bethlehem Star editorials on mandatory community service.

As is often the case, many of the logical travesties committed in these editorials are the result of shortsightedness, and an unhealthy fondness for generalizations, flawed analogies, inaccuracies and huge assumptions which are not borne out by fact.

In a meandering editorial which appeared on September 1, you refer to a "tiny minority" of students who "bellyached" about a new graduation requirement to perform community service.

Criticisms of the sloppy, poorly implemented BASD program which resounded from the community, parents, teachers, students and even members of the school board have been significant. These people certainly represent more than a "tiny minority." The attempt to minimize the number of people who disagree with compulsory community service in government schools blatantly panders to an old logical fallacy: argumentum populum. This is the irrational belief that if a great number of people believe something, it must be true. Surely, if your position has merit, you do not need to stoop to such shabby tactics.

You are quite right, however, when you observe that the courts seem to dismiss our children as citizens with few constitutional rights. What you do not understand is that parents who support community volunteerism may bridle when the government usurps their right to make personal, nonacademic, ethical decisions within the family unit. There may be those who regard this as an infringement of the nonexistent rights of children. However, I regard it as an infringement of my very real rights as a mother and an adult citizen.

On the subject of mandatory community service, I fear that you have fallen victim to the warm, fuzzy notion of young people performing community service, without considering exactly how this might be implemented in a constructive and meaningful way, leaving individual family ethics and student safety intact.

I understand the well-meaning motives of many school districts who want to see students doing "good" things which will help them grow into productive, well-balanced citizens. It is not the ends upon which we disagree, but the means.

There are many facets of this issue which have never been discussed in any of your editorials, or any Star articles. Illuminating the reader on the complex philosophical issues at work here may not lay out the nice, plain answers that people love to hear. It is certainly not as easy to write as the simple fare we have sampled in Lehigh Valley editorials. However, it might give readers the opportunity to consider the ramifications at work once the government is permitted to force private ethics upon those who believe that community service should not be performed by force in return for personal gain.

I have labored for some time on a response to your comment that people "took a wrong turn" when they "extended to children the idea that they have an absolute right to be individual: to express themselves; to decide for themselves what is important and what is not." The variables within this unsubstantiated claim make a reasonable and patient reply difficult.

The key word here is "absolute." Indeed, no one has an "absolute" right to do any of those things, including adults. You make a logic-defying leap if you assume that those who want the government to govern, and parents to parent, also want children to be given exclusive rights that not even adults enjoy. What nonsense. If you make no such assumption, I am hard pressed to understand the purpose of including this extraneous bit of "information" in the body of your piece.

It would help readers if you

Next page, please

'Leaps of logic'

would identify the "movement" responsible for this alleged trend. "We Americans" reportedly avoiding "institutions" doesn't quite cut the mustard. Assuming that such a movement did or does exist, what is its connection to those who oppose compulsory community service? Do you mean to imply that those who disagree with government mandated community service or school uniforms believe that children should be granted "absolute" rights in anything, or did that particular leap fail to land within the article?

There are really too many other holes in your editorial for me to address at the moment.

I will simply conclude by telling you that I find The Bethlehem Star, on the whole, to be a rather good publication. However, many of your editorials, whether or not I agree with the conclusions, tend to be somewhat garbled. When the structure of an editorial is bumpy, and makes gigantic, death-defying leaps which circumvent basic logic and bases in truth, it tends to reflect poor preparation, insufficient research and sloppy thinking skills. Throwing things together haphazardly often makes a wonderful goulash, but seldom results in a well-constructed argument.

It has been my personal observation that editorials which are written in such a way are often the product of editors who, despite the best of intentions, are long on emotion and short on fact. It is my opinion that both sound thinking and good writing demand more of anyone who aspires to be a good writer and/or editor. Surely, the reader has a right to expect it.

Naturally, these skills must be employed before the editors come down from the mountain with their words blasted into stone tablets.

I have enclosed an article from a magazine called "Insight on the News," which just begins to scratch the surface of the underlying issues involved in mandatory community service. Whether or not we can ever agree on this matter in particular, it appears that the larger issues at stake here have flown right over the thick skulls of local newspaper editors and government schools administrators alike.

Sincerely,
Janice K. Galassi
Bethlehem

The editor responds:

Several points and questions in Mrs. Galassi's excellent polemic deserve replies:

1) We publish editorials to start or add to community discussion and to get people thinking. Our editorials are not papal decrees, they're opinions and should be treated as such. Editorial writers neither climb mountains nor carve in stone. They write opinions, and if they do it intelligently enough, they engage readers, who in turn, as Mrs. Galassi has, contribute their own opinions to the mix. When that happens, the community is the better for it.

2) Mrs. Galassi's confusion over several points in a recent editorial apparently stem from the fact that she's forgotten what was the editorial's main topic - our support of an initiative to have students wear uniforms to public schools.

In that editorial we alluded to the fact that, in the 1950s, a generation of Americans went from revering church, school and government to distrusting these institutions and, more significantly, advocating an increased emphasis on individual rights. Somehow, many Americans got the idea that children, too, have individual rights; the right to decide what to wear to school; the right to decide if they'll accept the decisions of school boards. Our editorial pointed out that kids don't have the rights of adults and that giving them such rights amounts to parental malfeasance.

3) Mrs. Galassi's claim that many facets of the community service issue have never been discussed in any of our editorials or any Star articles blatantly panders to faulty reasoning we would call taurus excrementum.

The Bethlehem Star has devoted hundreds of column inches to the issue, including several pages of essays written by area residents, one particularly lengthy one by Mrs. Galassi herself.

Last week

The week's news in review

Sept. 14-20

AROUND THE CITY

Yule tours added

The Bethlehem Tourism Authority announced plans to hold tours of buildings in the 18th Century Industrial Quarter for seven days a week during the holiday season.

The Christkindlmarkt craft market near the Industrial Quarter will be redesigned, and special combination ticket prices will be offered to encourage people to visit both attractions.

Gun holder gives up

Spiro Kounoupis, 25, of Palmer Township was charged with hindering the police investigation of the Sept. 9 fatal shooting of a West Bethlehem woman.

According to police, Jerry M. Valianatos, 24, fired two shots while showing off his father's .380-caliber semiautomatic handgun in a garage off Cambridge Avenue. One of the shots went through a garage wall and struck Patricia Webster while she sat on her back porch, police said.

After learning the woman was shot, Mr. Valianatos passed the gun to Mr. Kounoupis, who gave it to an attorney who, in turn, gave it to police, authorities said.

Good Samaritan I

Two motorists stopped following a Route 512 accident to pull a 68-year-old Bethlehem man from his burning car on Sept. 15.

According to police, a northbound vehicle failed to stop at a red light at Brodhead Road and slammed into the driver's side of Francis J. Molchan's car, which was headed west on Brodhead Road at about 9 p.m.

Brian Undercuffler of Nazareth and Thomas Daly of Danielsville pulled Mr. Molchan from his burning car. Mr. Molchan was treated at Muhlenberg Hospital Center. Two occupants of the first car were also injured.

Good Samaritan II

Kenneth Leister of Kintnersville told police he was at the Getty Mart at 505 Broadway the night of Sept. 15 when two men approached. One asked for a dollar.

As Mr. Leister reached back for his wallet and pulled a dollar bill out, the man hit him on the side of the head. The victim fell to the ground and the assailant took $11 from his wallet, police said.

Econo Lodge fire

Damage was estimated at $600,000, but no guests were injured when fire struck one of five wings of the Econo Lodge motel at Airport Road and Route 22 on Sept. 16.

All 28 rooms of the wing were damaged by the fire; 23 were occupied at the time, fire officials said. Three firefighters reported minor injuries. The fire started in a crawl space, but the exact cause was not determined.

No Hellertown trains

SEPTA, the Philadelphia-area transit agency, suspended negotiations over a proposal to restore passenger train service from Hellertown, through Bucks County, to Philadelphia.

National Interurban Rail Transit — founded by a former Easton resident — did not offer funding that was stable enough, according to a SEPTA spokesman. Bucks County was prepared to sponsor a $31 million bond for capital improvements to the line.

The agency did not rule out reopening talks if the proposal was revised.

New officers

Bethlehem police officers David Kravatz and Jeff Mouer joined the community police program on Tuesday.

Officer Kravatz, 33, joined Officer Scott Parry in the southeast substation, while Officer Mouer, 27, joined Officer David Strawn at the southwest station.

They replace Officer Henry Jonkman, who was promoted to sergeant, and Officer Jeffrey Herzog, who was promoted to the detective division.

IN THE SCHOOLS

Liberty on CNN

CNN made a stop at Liberty High School on Wednesday as part of a man-on-the-street segment about the public's opinions of recent developments in Haiti.

Jeff Flock, Chicago bureau chief, interviewed students and teachers at the school following last-minute negotiations that called off the U.S. invasion of Haiti. An 11th-grade American history class, taught by department chair Philip Fair, was featured in a live segment.

The CNN crew also stopped at Bethlehem Steel and Lehigh University to gauge opinions.

Yom Kippur observed

Last Thursday the Bethlehem Area School District became the first district in the region to recognize the Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur by giving students the day off.

Yom Kippur is the Jewish Day of Atonement. A committee of teachers and administrators suggested the holiday when drafting the district calendar. The school board approved the calendar in February.

Superintendent Thomas Doluisio said the decision was a step towards recognizing religious diversity in the district.

Lehigh dorms WIRED

Lehigh University has begun to put its students on-line with WIRED, World-wide Information Resources in Every Dorm.

WIRED gives students access to the Internet as well as software.

Three of Lehigh's nine dorms have been wired to date, allowing 165 students to collect information, watch videos and send electronic mail around the world.

All dorms, sororities and fraternities are expected to be hooked up within two years, at a cost to Lehigh of $250,000.

Tough on teachers

The state Board of Education endorsed regulations last week calling for tougher certification requirements for teachers.

The proposed regulations require different methods of assessment and more frequent assessment for educators. Teachers would also need 90 hours of new training every five years. The plan coincides with outcome-based education, making teachers demonstrate their proficiency.

The state board also adopted regulations that would require students to put their names on annual state tests. The tests, used to evaluate school districts, have been anonymous in the past. Under the new proposal, students, parents, teachers, principals and guidance counselors will be able to learn test results. The state will not have access to individual test scores.

Weapons policy

The Bethlehem Area School Board continued to review a suspension and expulsion policy at a meeting Monday night, and considered policy changes for young children.

The policy mandates a 10-day mandatory suspension and a formal expulsion hearing for students who bring guns or explosives to school, and a three-day mandatory suspension for students found with any other weapon.

The board changed that to a minimum one-day suspension for children in kindergarten, first or second grade because the child may not understand the danger of bringing a weapon to school. The policy was referred back to committee for further review.

Trolley lines spanned area

One of the commonplace experiences of life in Bethlehem in the 1930s and 1940s was travel by trolley.

The first electric trolley in Bethlehem went into operation in 1891, connecting Bethlehem and Allentown. By 1930, trolley lines – an inexpensive, generally convenient and safe means of transport – had spread throughout the Lehigh Valley. Tracks with overhead power lines were constructed along the main streets of Bethlehem, Allentown and Easton and out to surrounding boroughs and towns – Fountain Hill, Hellertown, Freemansburg, Nazareth, Bath and Center Valley.

Improvement in the design and construction of trolley cars led to greater convenience and safety. Electric heaters replaced coal stoves by 1930. "Leatherette," an imitation leather, replaced woven cane seat covers. I can only remember the red-and-cream (or light yellow) cars on local runs.

Charles G. Hafner is a retired social studies teacher who lives in Bethlehem

Around 1940, a new "Super Limited" was parked on a track adjacent to Farr's on New Street for public viewing. It was a dandy. The Limited ran between Easton and Bethlehem, careening across the countryside along William Penn Highway.

A large pole on either end of the trolley car provided electrical contact with an overhead power line which ran the powerful electric motors. The rear pole was held against the power line by strong springs at the base.

When the trolley reached the end of the route, the motorman (conductor) went out, took down the pole he had been using and connected the one at the other end. He then went back in and reversed the seats, which had flip-backs, took his position at the controls on the opposite end of the car, and was back on the route he had just traversed.

Around 1940, a new "Super Limited" was parked on a track adjacent to Farr's on New Street for public viewing. It was a dandy.

The Limited ran between Easton and Bethlehem, careening across the countryside along William Penn Highway. The Liberty Bell and Easton Limited's trip to Philadelphia from Allentown brought to mind the theme of a then-popular orchestra – "Swing and sway with Sammy Kaye" – because that was just what that cross-country flyer did as it raced over the tracks along rural roads and across open fields at what seemed like unlimited speed.

The Limited lasted longer than routes to outlying communities like Center Valley, Nazareth or Bath. The growing use of automobiles and buses phased out these extensions.

The main routes in Bethlehem ran down Third Street from Hellertown and East Third, and from south Allentown to West Fourth Street via Fountain Hill.

Both of these lines met at Third and New streets and went north across the New Street bridge, then also called "The Penny" bridge because the toll was a cent per pedestrian. The bridge was made of iron and wood. Occasionally train engines parked or moving slowly under the bridge's wooden road surface would shoot hot embers up into the wood and start a smoldering fire. A hose was available for quenching any flames.

The tracks went north to Broad Street and there turned either east out to Linden Street and Liberty High School, or west out to Allentown.

For 15 cents a rider received a one-way fare and a token for a return trip. Often travelers needed a transfer to another trolley or a Lehigh Valley Transit bus. (Lehigh Valley Transit Co. was the utility with the monopoly on bus and trolley operations.) A ticket from the conductor provided the transfer at no extra cost.

Students could purchase books of tickets at reduced cost. Riding a trolley to school, however, was for girls. Up-and-coming he-men walked with their buddies, a practice whereby compatriots were collected along the way to Liberty High. At times this resulted in a sizable entourage.

The trolley stopped at every corner where a rider awaited the car's arrival. The motorman pushed a lever opening the double folding doors and the passenger stepped aboard. Rush hour traffic, special days at Dorney or Willow Parks, or major football games meant standing in the trolley aisle. Men then would rise to give a lady a seat.

The pull of a cord that ran along the side above the windows would signal the motorman to stop at the next corner.

During World War II, gas rationing and other shortages resulted in increased trolley use. Couples commonly used trolleys for transportation on dates, and the young man's departure often had to be timed to make the last trolley home.

The trolleys, however, did have disadvantages that eventually became intolerable as auto traffic increased. In foul weather the tracks were very slippery for cars. The trolley's sheer size in the middle of the street and frequent stops at each corner impeded car traffic.

On June 8, 1955, a flag-bedecked trolley made a ceremonial farewell trip on the run from Allentown to Bethlehem. Although very few vestiges of the old trolleys still exist, the memories remain.

Big lineman raises 'Cane

BY TOM HARPER

Perhaps the most unrecognized and most unflattering position in all of sports is the offensive lineman. The only time their names are ever mentioned during a game is when they're flagged for some kind of penalty.

It seems as if only a select few are ever given their due credit. The position isn't at all a glorious one, so those who have achieved respect and praise in the trenches have done so through extreme hard work.

In Brian Skoff's case, his tremendous size and athletic ability have won him the attention of Division I recruits. The 6-foot-2 inch, 260-pound senior from Liberty is arguably the best lineman in the tough East Penn Conference. Last season he earned first team all-conference honors as both an offensive tackle and defensive tackle.

Coach Dick Ortwein has used Brian more on the offensive line, where his powerful blocks on both the run and pass have been crucial to the Hurricane's 2-1 start this season.

"If we play as well as we did the other night (against Allen last Friday), we could go undefeated the rest of the season," Brian said of his team's potential.

Hesitated to play

It was his potential that made people at Northeast Middle School steer him to play football as a seventh-grader.

"My gym teacher saw my size and talked me into (playing)," said Brian, then 6 feet tall and 180 pounds — as a seventh-grader. "I was shaky; I didn't know if I really wanted to do it. I didn't think I'd be good at playing football."

Coach Ortwein, who has coached Brian since freshman year, knows his lineman's previous hesitation was unnecessary. "He's progressed leaps and bounds. He has very good technique, and combine that with his intelligence and athletic ability and he's become a strong offensive tackle."

Technique is the one word Coach Ortwein constantly mentions when he talks about his lineman and co-captain. Technique more than strength is essential for an offensive lineman's success. And because Brian plays the left offensive tackle slot — a position that many believe is the most important in the sport because it usually is the quarterback's blind side — sound technique is even more necessary.

"Definitely my technique is the best part of my game," Brian said. "Back then, though, I had no idea what I was doing."

He credits his coaches for how he's developed. "My freshman year, the offensive line coach was Ron Wescoe (who retired as a Liberty assistant this year). He drilled us on technique. He had us working on our footing and on hitting the sled."

He prefers playing offense to defense, although he has been credited with two sacks this year in a limited time on the defensive line. "I don't have the defensive mentality, the want-to-kill attitude. I like to protect and control, not get around people."

With his tremendous strength, however, Brian could very easily bullrush an opposing lineman. For the past three years, he has worked religiously to improve his overall strength with a six-day regimen of weightlifting, running and cardiovascular exercises.

His power comes mostly from his legs, the part of the body offensive linemen concentrate on building strength. On the leg press machine (also known as the sled), he can lift 820 pounds. Only two weeks out of the year does he not lift weights: the week after the season and the week before.

All this and brains, too

Before the stereotype enters the mind that says offensive linemen are supposed to be big, strong and dumb, consider Brian's academic resume, then throw that stereotype out the window. He currently ranks near the top 10 percentile of his senior class (50th out of 477 students) and holds a 3.4 cumulative grade point average in his classes.

He also points out that he has a 3.4 average in his science and math classes, specialties of interest he will immerse himself in at college, where he plans to major in chemical engineering.

Academics is his top priority when choosing his college, although a solid football program is undoubtedly on the list as well.

"I take the job seriously," he said. "I try to do the best that I can. Back then, I did what people expected of me. Now I'm out there for me, regardless of what people think."

Each time the Liberty offense takes the field, look for the guy with the jersey bearing number 74. His name may never get singled out, but each time a running back springs for a big gain or quarterback John Lehman enjoys great protection, you know Number 74 is doing his job. That's all he wants to do.

"To me, you win and lose as a team. Backs get the publicity because they're the ones running the ball. As long as people who watch football know who made the holes for people to break records and gain the yards, as long as they see who the work-horses are, that's fine with me."

Bike-a-thon benefits Habitat for Humanity

Habitat for Humanity Lehigh Valley will hold its annual Bike-a-Thon and Family Festival on Sunday, Sept. 25, beginning at noon at Dimmick Park in Hellertown.

Riders have a choice between a leisurely 10-mile route, a scenic 25-mile course, or a more grueling 50-mile ride for the serious cyclist.

Those not participating in the bike-a-thon are welcome at the festival to cheer riders on and enjoy food and entertainment.

The 10-mile ride begins at 1 p.m., with registration at noon at Dimmick Park. Registration begins at 11 a.m. for the 25-mile route and 10:30 a.m. for the 50-mile route. Both of the longer rides begin at noon.

The entrance fee is $10, and participants must raise at least $35 in pledges. Dimmick Park is located on Durham Street, east of Route 412 in Hellertown.

As the racers ride in, the festivities begin. Ruben's Lazer

Show, for children and adults, kicks off the afternoon at 1:15 p.m. At 2:15, the musical duo, White Satin, will perform for children as part of the Child-arama, which features magicians, clowns and family fun. Karaoke for adults will be held from 3 to 3:45 p.m. All activities are free of charge.

Those interested in participating in the bike-a-thon, or in information about working for Habitat for Humanity, should call 976-9960.

Francis Knouss

BY CHRISTOPHER JUDD

Francis Knouss is 79 and has been playing tennis for nearly 70 years. He recruits members for the Bethlehem Area Chamber of Commerce and is president of the Recreation Commission, which added new tennis courts to Sand Island last year. The former Bethlehem Steel finance department employee once played with Billie Jean King in an exhibition match.

What's going on at the Recreation Commission?

We're promoting tennis. We're promoting the Recreation Commission and the people who are involved. We're publicizing our parks, our swimming pools, our golf, Little League, basketball, swimming, the Halloween Parade, that all comes under us.

Why?

Because if you go the street and ask a 100 people, "Do we have any parks? Do we have any recreation? Do we have tennis courts? Do we have playgrounds?" They don't know. People don't realize what is available. And I push tennis because I think it's one of the greatest things that's been helping me. Otherwise, I wouldn't be, at my age, still playing around and going places.

Are the new courts under-used?

I would say they're used a lot, but we could use them a lot more. We have to charge because we have pretty high maintenance. Those courts are called hydro-courts and they're considered some of the best in the country — the best public courts. This is electronically controlled, and the water comes in from the bottom. Other courts, you have to spray. There aren't too many of them in the country. It's easy on the feet.

What was the attraction of tennis for you?

I learned to play when I went away to camp when I was 10 years old. I learned by myself. I played in the city league, high school; I was the champion at Muhlenberg College. It's great exercise. We have a group of us — Doug Trotter, my partner and I — we play down at the island every Monday, then Wednesday and Saturday I play down at Saucon Valley Country Club. I've been a member there a long while.

What about baseball, basketball and football — the sports kids can play on street corners?

My philosophy is, when you're

April Pilz

young you can play football and baseball, but, what do you do when you're out of school? You can't get on a football team or baseball unless you're a pro. But, if you learn to play some good sports, you can play them forever.

What's the strongest part of your game and the weakest?

Well, I've never been a big hitter. I've been an accurate player. Consistent and getting the ball back rather than make big points. Let the other guys make mistakes.

What about golf?

I used to play golf. I have a son who plays golf and I played. But I tell people now that when I'm old enough I'll take up golf.

Are you a member of Saucon Valley Country Club?

Yeah I am. I've been one for 38 years, and it's because they have great recreation down there. The Star had an article that said it was kind of snobbish. But when you belong to something, it costs, see? When Bethlehem Steel had it, it wasn't nearly that costly. When I joined it was $750. Now it's $25,000. But I don't think anybody belongs because of the prestige. They belong because of the facilities.

You are a membership consultant to the Bethlehem Area Chamber of Commerce. What's that?

I've been on the staff since November of 1982. I retired from the steel company in June of 1981.

Years ago, I worked with memberships; I did all of the advertising. I followed new members; followed old members. Now, I'm still with the chamber, but, I don't sit in the office or do all of that stuff. That's why they call me a consultant.

What type of business person refuses to join the chamber? It seems like it would be almost automatic.

Yeah, but a lot of them, you can't tell them, you know? They say they don't have the money to join the chamber. The chamber isn't that expensive. What I tell them is, "Look, you can't afford not to belong to the chamber. It's a business organization. You meet all these people. You know what's going on. We have mixers."

How much does a membership cost?

Well, normal membership is $220 for a year. Then, of course, it depends. The larger businesses pay more money.

Why did we need to change the name of A-B-E to Lehigh Valley International Airport?

That's from Bert Daday, who used to be with the chamber. Do you realize how many people are in the Lehigh Valley now? There's 550,000. That's the third largest population area in the state. So Bert now has been appointed to the state Transportation Committee, which is a very big thing because that means he has an in for doing things for Bethlehem. And the airport I think we have to expand.

Profiles

Faces and places

What do you think of the school for troubled teenagers that's coming to Main Street?

Well, evidently everybody who cleared it said it was good. If it's run correctly, well OK. It's within the zoning. I don't know why they came here, but the fellow said it was a business venture, he's in business, and this is a good location for him. What can you say?

Do you think Americans will support a U.S. military presence in Haiti?

If you do or you don't, it's a losing situation. I don't think you can win on that because someone's going to get killed; somebody's going to be hurt. But we have a Monroe Doctrine, you know? I'm not going to second-guess the people who have all of the information. It's like telling the head of Bethlehem Steel "You should do this and that," and you don't know anything about it.

Is there anything in your life that you would do differently if you could?

That's hard to say. I can say that we've been married 52 years. I have a wonderful marriage with my wife, Alice. We have one child — my son is a doctor, the deputy director of the Pan American Health Organization. I don't have a whole hell of a lot of money or anything like that. I'm happy with my circumstances. You have to be happy with things.

If you could do it all over again

BY CHRISTOPHER JUDD
AND JANET WORSLEY

Lucy Hunyet, 65, Mechanic Street

Mrs. Hunyet says she made the biggest mistake of her life two times.

She smoked her first cigarette when she was growing up in Idar-Oberstein, Germany, during World War II.

"Actually, the way I started was with the American occupation. The Army would come into all of the homes and socialize. They would offer each person a cigarette," Mrs. Hunyet recalled. "I told my father, 'I don't want it.' He said, 'Take it anyway and put it in your pocket.'"

"Then, they started lighting them when they gave them to you, and I started taking puffs. I was 15," she said.

Later, Mrs. Hunyet came to the U.S. and met her husband, John, a radar operator who was killed in the Vietnam War.

She stopped smoking after a 1985 heart attack. She started again two months ago.

April Pilz

"I loved my family and I loved my cooking. I never gave it a thought. I would've liked to go on more vacations. I didn't have the chance. I had the children, and at that time you didn't have the money."

Elva Hahn

Helen Gallo, 76, Fifth Street resident

She worked in Bethlehem Steel's open hearth furnace for 17 years, quit to raise her daughter, and returned 10 years later to work in the employment office. The move cost Ms. Gallo her seniority at the company.

"I would have loved to have kept working at open hearth, watching them make steel. But it just didn't work out that way."

Julius Pammer, 76, Saucon Park

Worked in Bethlehem Steel's open hearth furnace for more than 40 years.

"I would have never got married. I got married three times.

"I always said, 'God never made anything more beautiful than a woman.' That was my problem."

Mr. Pammer is separated from his current wife.

Pearl Orbin, 70, Riegelsville

"I would have got a better education," she said. "When I graduated from high school in 1942, you didn't have many more opportunities. I had to support my mother. My father died when I was 5," she said.

"I don't regret it. I just wish I could have been more knowledgeable — maybe in computers — so I would know what my grandchildren are talking about," she said.

Agnes Tackes, 64, Atlantic Street

Like many others, Ms. Tackes said she would have sought higher education, although her job at the Bethlehem Steel bindery paid well.

"I would have saved my money," she said. "I gave it away to people who said they needed it. Now, I need some and where is it?"

Alice DeBeradinis, 73, Mechanic Street

"I wouldn't have got married as young as I did," she said, 55 years after the fateful walk down the aisle as an 18-year-old.

"You're not mature enough," she said of young couples in her time. "They wanted to get away from their parents."

She divorced after 12 years and four children.

Dorothy Johnson, 73, Stan-ford Road

Mrs. Johnson went after and obtained her college degree late in life, but was still left wanting. First, she said she would have changed majors.

"I graduated with a degree in social work. If I had studied something different, I could have benefited more. More jobs," she said.

She was working at AT&T, which would have paid her tuition to Moravian or Lehigh University.

"I chose Moravian, a smaller school. But, I worked too hard and ended up being a dialysis patient. I graduated in 1979, but then I had to retire. So, I never got off the ground."

Bessie Waddy, 75, Fountain Hill

Born and raised in Philadelphia, Mrs. Waddy moved to Fountain Hill four years ago.

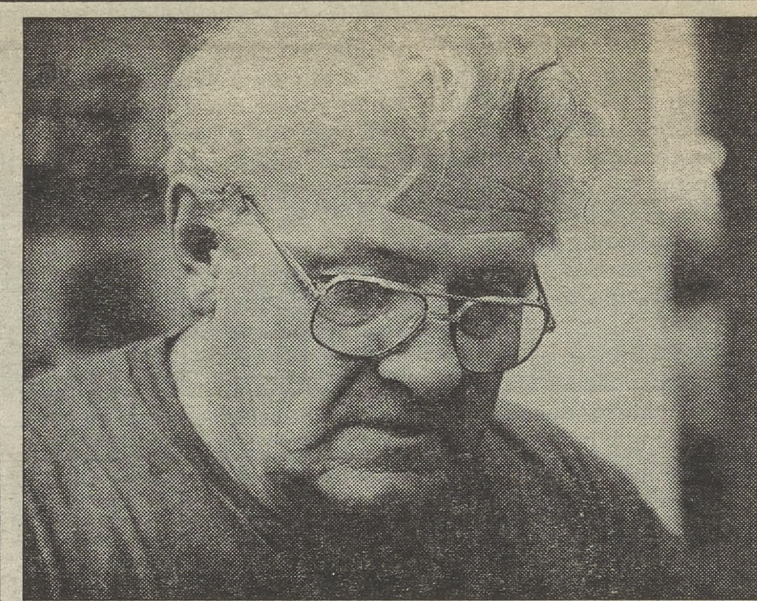

"The only thing I would do differently is listen to my parents and go to college. That was a real boo-boo mistake," she said.

"I ended up going to a trade school. I was a beautician. It was a good life. I'm not complaining. But it would have been better," she said.

Margaret Oravec, 71

The mother of four children and a waitress for 25 years ("I started in a little doggie shop and ended up in a cocktail lounge.")

"I always wished I could have continued my education. I quit in the 10th grade. I was 50-years-old when I got my GED. I got some college credits from somewhere. Some school in Philadelphia. But, I feel like I don't know enough."

Dorothy Sobota, 79, Fountain Hill

Worked in the mold yard in Bethlehem Steel during 1942-45 when World War II had depleted the domestic workforce.

"I wouldn't have worked at Bethlehem Steel. But they said, 'All the men are leaving.'"

"I wouldn't do it again on account of how dirty you get down there. The noise and the dirt."

"My husband was working in the beam yard at the time. I could watch them from where I worked. They sat around half the time."

Adele Delgrosso, 73, Sioux Street

Mrs. Delgrosso was 21 when her mother died. Her mother had encouraged her daughter's interest in singing. Her father did not. She figures she would have pursued a career in music had her mother lived. But, she had no say in her mother's fate.

She did have a say in who she married, and she would have done it differently.

"I would have married a differ-until her husband died. She has been a widow for 16 years.

Violet Kovacs, East Fifth Street

She unloaded trucks for the family beverage business as a child, and grew up playing lots of softball, basketball and volleyball. She never married, but has no regrets.

"No, because I took care of my parents. I never got married, but I had a good life. I did my duty and took care of my parents. If I wasn't obligated — maybe. Maybe it would have worked out. Maybe not."

Steve Serva, 64, Hayes Street

He worked for a steel fabricator company before retiring.

"I would have played the dumb, stupid one. Let somebody else do the work. We had a lot of people who gooted off."

Rose Socker, 80, Goepf Street

She worked as a secretary for several war agencies in Washington, D.C., during World War II. Among her bosses were J.T. Haines, founder of the underwear company; Fred Warren, son-in-law of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's personal physician; and Bill Mikenson, an aviator who barnstormed with Charles Lindbergh.

"I got married too young," said the former 19-year-old bride and 49-year-old widow.

"Don't jump at the first thing," she advises. "My son was 33 when he got married."

"We bought the motel, my husband was a drunk and he died in two years," said Mrs. Lipko, laughing at the hand fate dealt her. She ran the establishment from 1973 to 1979. "It was fun. The only thing that spoiled it was the go-go girls started coming around. We wouldn't hire them and business dropped."

Josephine Carrado, 87, East Fourth Street

Born and raised in New York, she moved to Bethlehem with her sister four years ago.

"I've had a very good life and I have my daughter. My mother had 12 children, I had one. And my daughter had one. I lived in one neighborhood in New York for 62 years. Everyone was my friend."

Her husband died in 1984, six years after being stricken at the couple's 50th wedding anniversary.

"I'll tell you, I wasn't married to a millionaire. But he was a very good person. I wouldn't change anything."

Doris Erb, 78, originally from New Jersey.

A retired registered nurse, she has lived in Bethlehem for 20 years. Mrs. Erb is very active at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, and at the Senior Citizens' Center, where she stuffs envelopes, makes noodles and helps with newsletters and mailings. She said she can't help but get involved. "Once the pie comes down the pike, I stick my finger in," she said.

"About the only thing I ever think of, is I wish I would've taken piano lessons. I just kind of think it would be fun to be able to sit down at any piano and play," she said, "Now, the one thing I'd like to do is the one thing I can't do anymore."

Robert Hannon, 78, Bethlehem Township

He is retired from the Bethlehem Steel, where he worked in the electrical maintenance department for 36 years. He lists his hobbies as painting, ceramics, basketry and his wife, Beatrice. They were married last November, and currently live in Catawauqua. Mr. Hannon is assistant scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop 346 in Bethlehem Township.

"I'd like to go back to school and learn more," he said, "I think you can always learn something new, out here in this world, or in school."

Beatrice Hannon, 80, Senior Citizens' Center's "jack-of-all-trades"

In the 1940s, Mrs. Hannon worked at Roller-Smith Co. in Bethlehem doing soldering and electrical work. The company made light meters and altimeters for airplanes during World War II. In her spare time, she does needlepoint, crochets and reads novels.

"I should have listened to my mother and gotten a better education. In life, there are things you'd like to do, and you need a good job and money to get them," she said, "My mother gave me piano lessons and vocal lessons, and I went to business college for a couple of years, but I dropped out."

Edna Werst, 86, Moravian House II

A Bethlehem native, she was a secretary in a bank, and also worked for Lovelace and Spillman Architects. She graduated from Bethlehem High School in 1926. Mrs. Werst traveled across the United States with her husband, and worked with him in the Bethany United Church of Christ.

"Well, not much, except I did teach church school for many years, and I would've liked to delve deeper into education. There's all sorts of technology and video characters today. I turned on the TV earlier and there were cartoon characters explaining how to say the word 'move.' They didn't have things like that before. But I did get a chance to teach, and I did enjoy it."

Helen Lizik, 65-plus

From Pittsburgh, Mrs. Lizik has been in Bethlehem for 8 years. She has two daughters and two sons.

"I never had a bad life, and I had a very, very good marriage and a very, very good family. I can't say that I ever wanted anything."

Louise Harpel, 71

She and her husband, Edward, have a son and a daughter. They attend Messiah Lutheran Church in Bethlehem, and live at the Moravian House II.

"I would have tried to have been a better person, I guess," she said, "I would've been more tolerant of people. Sometimes I'm too critical."

Ed Altenus, 76

A retired steelworker, he has a wife, Ida, who is in a nursing home, and two sons. His hobbies include gardening and bicycling. "Just cleaning house, shopping and cooking keep me busy enough," he said.

"There's very little I would change. I had a very good life. I can't imagine what I'd change, except for my wife's health."

Morris Murray, 81

He came to the United States from England in 1923, and lived most of his life in Florida, where he worked for 30 years making wicker and rattan furniture. He's been in Bethlehem for about seven years, and has been living at Monocacy Tower for about a year. He also worked in Connecticut at years in Bethlehem. Her husband, Edward, who worked in Bethlehem Steel's division, died 11 years ago.

Mrs. Jones has a daughter and three grandsons. She was never employed and has no regrets.

"I was a housewife all my life. My husband liked a clean house and good food. That's why he didn't want me to work."

a fiberglass boat factory. Mr. Murray has been collecting stamps for 60 years, and also draws, paints and does needlepoint. He has a son and two grandchildren in Florida.

"The only thing I would change, I was married three times, and I lost all of them to cancer, but if I would have known about the second one, I never would have done it. She was a wonderful woman, but I met her in England and brought her over here. Her heart was always in England, you know? If I'd known, I wouldn't have asked her to come over, under those circumstances."

Michael Silvoy, 82, from South Side Bethlehem

He worked in the steel foundry at the Bethlehem Steel for 22 years. He's married, with one daughter, and likes to play cards.

"I think I would've changed my job. I'd work in a cleaner place. There was a lot of dust around, dirt, hard work. ... It affected my baseball, and I had to quit playing (as a pitcher for a local team). ... It was hard work, six days a week."

Caroline Maiorana, 80 in November

She's lived in Bethlehem since May, and is originally from Baltimore. At the Senior Citizens' Center, Mrs. Maiorana stuffs envelopes and helps out as a volunteer. She does ceramics and writes a letter to her granddaughter every week.

"I don't really think I'd do anything differently. ... I always had a good life, but I've had troubles too. I've had a quiet life."

Linford Schaffer, 67

A van driver for the Bethlehem Senior Citizen Center, he retired from Bethlehem Steel after 34 1/2 years, working as the foreman in the blast furnace. He enjoys fishing, and his largest catch was a 5-pound small-mouth bass. He goes to Atlantic City casinos on monthly trips from the center. "I don't like going there," he said, "I lose all the time."

"I don't think I'd change anything ... but, yeah, I'd be a millionaire. No, I think I've had a good life. So far, anyway."

Elva Hahn, 95, from Bethlehem

A retired housewife, she has five children, nine grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandson. She plays pinochle and likes to cook and bake, Pennsylvania Dutch style. Doughnuts are her specialty.

"I loved my family and I loved my cooking. I never gave it a thought. I would've liked to go on more vacations. I didn't have the chance. I had the children, and at that time you didn't have the money."

Stephen Bolen, 66, and his wife, MaryJane

Mr. Bolen, of Bethlehem, was a machinist and a millwright at Bethlehem Steel for 40 years before retiring. They have one son and one daughter.

"I'd get educated. I only have a high school education (Bethlehem High School). I think education is important. You enjoy things better if you're educated. You get some culture, see the finer things in life, and probably enjoy a better quality life. I put both my children through college. I instilled in them the value of an education."

Nature

The Nature of Bethlehem

hornets BY ARLENE KOCH

The buzz on wasps

“Did you see the hornets' nest in the pine tree?” David asked. “No,” I said. “Is it a big one?” “Yeah,” he replied. “One of the biggest we've ever had.”

Arlene Koch is president of the Lehigh Valley Audubon Society.

We walked out to the row of trees along the driveway and looked at the gray, papery nest about 10 feet up.

It was a full 2 feet long and almost as wide, and I wondered why I hadn't noticed it before. However, my brain suddenly kicked in as I remembered that the nest grows proportionately with the size of the colony inside.

By all appearances there were lots of hornets in this nest.

The entrance hole, which starts out at the bottom of the structure but gets constantly built around, was well up on the right side.

And hornets were buzzing back and forth between me, David, and the nest, although none of them seemed the slightest bit interested in us. But their sting, as I and a lot of other people know firsthand, is extremely painful. And they have the ability to sting over and over again while at the same time they release a pheromone attracting other hornets to come and help them.

So David and I didn't linger there too long. Recently I read a newspaper account of a local man who was unfortunate enough to accidentally disturb one of these nests. He was stung 40 or 50 times and didn't react too violently at first, but went to the hospital at a neighbor's urging. It's a good thing he did, because while he was there he went into anaphylactic shock and spent time in the intensive care ward.

Hornets and the equally-as-popular yellowjacket are both members of the social insect group known as wasps. They differ from bees in several ways, but the most obvious is that their bodies aren't hairy like those of the bees. Most people I know use the names hornet and yellowjacket interchangeably because to tell them apart you really have to get a good close look.

Personally I don't think it's worth the risk.

Both insects conduct their comings and goings in the same way, although hornets prefer to build their nests hanging from something while yellowjackets often build in the ground. A new nest is started each spring when a young queen emerges from her underground hibernation. The mated queens are all that remain from the previous year's colony. After they have mated with the males the previous year, they retire to the earth for a cool winter vacation and the males, like all other members of the colony, die.

A newly emerged queen picks a place to start her colony and begins chewing bark and other dead plant material to make the building material. However, as soon as the first eggs that she has deposited in the combs of her chamber develop into “workers,” she no longer does anything but lay eggs. A queen can produce up to 25,000 eggs in a season.

What do you do if you have a wasp's nest somewhere in a place where you'd really like or need to get rid of it? Although I'm normally not one to recommend destroying nature's own, I can understand why this sometimes has to be done. Every expert recommends the same procedure.

Wait until after dark to make sure all the insects are inside. Then carefully dislodge the nest and place it in something that's filled with an appropriate insecticide and patiently let the proper amount of time pass. Be careful not to open up the container to check on it too soon, or you may join the ranks of those about whom wasp stories are told.

Bird notes

The big news this week is the broad-winged hawk migration. On Sept. 15 over 10,000 birds were spotted upridge at hawk lookouts in Boonton and Montclair, N.J. That day and the next tremendous numbers of the birds passed through our area, all the way down to Philadelphia. I saw a lot of them go right over the city of Bethlehem.

Coming events

Wild Birds Unlimited, 4235 Tilghman Street in Allentown, has released a list of some upcoming events. On Saturday, Sept. 24, at 1 p.m., nationally known butterfly expert Rick Mikula will tag and release monarch butterflies. At 2 and 3:30 p.m. that same day, Marcus Schneck, a local backyard wildlife expert, will present two programs on bird feeding.

On Saturday, Oct. 1, at 7:30 a.m., Rick Wiltraut will lead a birding trip to Little Gap above Danielsville for migrating hawks. The trip is free, but people should register ahead of time by calling 366-1725.

Ed Harris is the tentative widower and Melanie Griffith the big-hearted call girl thrust together by the naivete of a child in "Milk Money," opening this week at The Movies in Hellertown.

JURASSIC PARK (PG-13) ★★★

— This re-telling of Michael Crichton's novel does more than just breathe life into the creative story, it actually brings dinosaurs back to life — well, pretty darn close. Steven Spielberg pulls out all the special-effects plugs in this frightening, if at times cloying film about a doomed theme park built around resurrected creatures from the Jurassic era. Stars Sam Neill ("The Piano"), Laura Dern ("Blue Velvet") and Jeff Goldblum ("The Fly"). D.R.
AMC Plaza Theatre, Whitehall Mall

THE LITTLE RASCALS (PG) —

The black-and-white series starring Spanky, Alfalfa, Buckwheat, Darla and the rest of the "Our Gang" kids gets color film and a modern retelling in this movie starring Penelope Spheeris ("Wayne's World II").
AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall

THE MASK (PG-13) —

From the weird hero in "Pet Detective" to an even weirder hero in "The Mask," rubber-faced Jim Carrey plays a mild-mannered bank teller who discovers an ancient mask that turns him into a green-faced, long-toothed evening avenger.
AMC Four, Palmer; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

MILK MONEY (PG) —

In this film by director Richard Benjamin, a trio of pre-pubescent boys pool their milk money to solve the mystery of girls by hiring a hooker. They get robbed, but are taken under the wing of a big-hearted hooker played by Melanie Griffith. One of the boys sees through her rough veneer and decides she'd be perfect for dad, played by Ed Harris. You can bet the last of your cookie jar stash on where "Milk Money" goes from there.
AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; The Movies, Hellertown; United Artists, Allentown; United Artists, Easton

NATURAL BORN KILLERS (R) ★★★★★

— A triumph of contrasts, Oliver Stone's latest cautionary epic mixes chaos with coherence, primal anger with sitcom humor, and TV news violence with soap-opera drama into a disturbingly hypnotic whole. Though it often threatens to disintegrate into a long MTV video, "Killers" emerges as an important film unlike any you've seen before. Exemplary performances throughout, from Woody Harrelson and Juliette Lewis as the image-cluttered serial killers as video heroes, to Robert Downey as the tabloid TV reporter from hell. D.R.
AMC Four, Palmer; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

THE NEXT KARATE KID (PG) —

Ralph Macchio is gone, but this black-belt coming-of-age story keeps on kicking in this, its fourth installment. This time Hillary Swank is the kid and Pat Morita returns to supply the philosophy
United Artists, Allentown

SCHINDLER'S LIST (R) ★★★

— Director Steven Spielberg's three-hour, 15-minute epic about the Holocaust, filmed in black and white. Themes of corruption, greed and unintentional heroism are explored in this story adapted from Thomas Keneally's book of the same name. With frequent use of a moving, hand-held camera, operated by Spielberg for many sequences, the film often resembles a documentary. Starring Liam Neeson ("Dark Man") and Ben Kingsley ("Ghandi").
Lehigh University

TIMECOP (R) —

Kick-boxing box office kicker Claude Van Damme flexes jaw muscles in this time-traveling tale of a cop who sets off across time to save his lovely wife (Mia Sara) from an evil politician (Ron Silver) responsible for her death.
AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; United Artists, Easton

TRUE LIES (R) ★★★★★ —

Arnold Schwarzenegger ("Last Action Hero") and James Cameron ("Terminator") don't ask you to suspend belief to enjoy their latest explosion fest, they sort of put a gun to your head and demand it. So, of course you will, and once you get over the tack-on plot of a man hiding his spying ways from his wife, you become willing victim of some of the best action ever captured on film. D.R.
AMC Plaza Theatre, Whitehall Mall

WOLF (R) ★★★★★ —

"Wolf" proves to be one of Jack Nicholson's greatest performances. Playing an editor for a New York City publishing house, he is bitten by a wolf. Soon after he finds his job, wife and life in jeopardy. As job security dwindles, our hero's senses become keener, everything from smell to business savvy improves. The cunning of the wolf arises. R.H.

A SMALL RED SPACECRAFT BREAKS THROUGH THE CLOUD COVER OF MYSTERIOUS SYSTEM PLANET 6!

AT THE CONTROLS, IT'S NONE OTHER THAN OUR FEARLESS HERO, SPACEMAN SPIFF!

PILOTING OVER THE LIFELESS WORLD, HE REFLECTS ON HIS UNUSUAL MISSION...

QUIZ:
1.  $6+5=$  _____

...TO SOMEHOW "RASH PLANETS 6 AND 5 TOGETHER."

IN A SCIENTIFIC MISSION TO DISCOVER WHAT HAPPENS WHEN TWO PLANETS COLLIDE, SPACEMAN SPIFF DROPS ANCHOR!

THE ANCHOR CATCHES ON A HILLSIDE! SPIFF DOWNSHIFTS AND GUNS THE MOTOR!

IMPERCEPTIBLY AT FIRST, THE PLANET SLOWLY MOVES, TOWED ALONG BY OUR HERO, UNTIL...

...BREAKING ORBIT, PLANET 6 PICKS UP SPEED, HURLING TOWARD PLANET 5!

PULLED BY SPACEMAN SPIFF, PLANET 6 IS ABOUT TO COLLIDE WITH PLANET 5!

WITH NO TIME TO LOSE, OUR HERO CUTS LOOSE THE ANCHOR AND FLIES TO SAFETY!

THE PLANETS CRASH, GRINDING AND SHATTERING WITH ANFUL FORCE! PLANET 5, BEING SMALLER, IS CRUNCHED TO DUST! ONLY 6 REMAINS!

$6+5=$  6 TIME! PASS YOUR PAPERS FORWARD.

TIME?! I JUST FINISHED THE FIRST PROBLEM!

HOW CAN OUR TIME BE UP?! I JUST DID THE FIRST PROBLEM ON THIS QUIZ! WHERE DID THE TIME GO??

GUESS! GUESS! PICK RANDOM NUMBERS! MAYBE A FEW WILL BE RIGHT BY SHEER LUCK! 15! 104! 3! 27!

HAND IT IN, CALVIN. YOUR TIME'S UP.

DON'T FORGET WE HAVE A BET ON WHO GETS THE HIGHER GRADE.

THE BET'S OFF! I DON'T GAMBLE! NO BETS!

I GOT A PERFECT SCORE ON MY QUIZ.

YOU GOT A PERFECT SCORE??

WHAT DID YOU GET? IF YOU MISSED ANY, YOU OWE ME 25 CENTS.

I RAN OUT OF TIME! I'D HAVE HAD A PERFECT SCORE TOO IF I'D HAD A FEW MORE MINUTES!

WHAT DID YOU GET?

IT'S BIOLOGICAL! GIRLS MATURE FASTER THAN BOYS! YOU JUST GOT A BETTER GRADE BECAUSE YOU'RE A GIRL! IT'S NOT FAIR!

PAY UP.

MAYBE IT'S OPPOSITE DAY! MAYBE ALL THESE X'S MEAN MY ANSWERS ARE CORRECT! MAYBE YOUR "A" IS REALLY AN "F"! THAT MUST BE IT! I WIN THE BET!

HOW DID YOU DO ON YOUR MATH QUIZ?

I FLUNKED IT ... BUT ONLY BECAUSE I RAN OUT OF TIME.

THE WORST PART, THOUGH, WAS THAT SUE DERKINS WON OUR BET ON WHO'D GET THE BETTER SCORE. I HAD TO PAY HER 25 CENTS.

BUT GET THIS! I CHEATED HER! I ONLY GAVE HER THREE DIMES! HA!

I THINK YOU'D BETTER STUDY HARDER.

OH, NOW DON'T YOU START ON ME.
