DiLuzio against IDs for illegals

By DAWN NIXON
 Special to the Bethlehem Press

Bethlehem Police Chief Mark DiLuzio addressed city council at the July 2 meeting, voicing his opinion opposing allowing illegal immigrants to obtain identification cards. Easton's City Council recently approved a motion to allow illegal immigrants to be issued identification cards.

In an effort to stop a similar decision in Bethlehem, Chief DiLuzio read from a letter sent to police chiefs throughout the county by Northampton County District Attorney John Morganelli.

"I've always recognized that illegal immigration is a complex issue," read DiLuzio. "I do not make the laws, but only enforce them. I believe providing benefits to illegal immigrants only encourages

Brown hires PR firm

By BERNIE O'HARE

Northampton County's controversial public relations contract with Sahl Communications is back on again. County Executive John Brown issued an executive order right before the Independence Day holiday, agreeing to a $78,600 "communications consulting services" deal with the Bethlehem firm, owned by Kim Plyler.

The contract is for a one-year period. Because it's under $100,000, no approval is needed from county council.

Brown's deal with Plyler was originally an $84,000 no-bid contract, bitterly opposed by all four Democrats on council. They argued that it

CELEBRATING THE FOURTH

Clear skies and cool breezes greeted a crowd of Bethlehem area residents during the evening at Payrow Plaza, who were there for the annual Fourth of July fireworks. The Bethlehem Municipal Band performed a selection of patriotic music prior to the start of the pyrotechnics display which started at about 9:20 p.m. and lasted for about 25 minutes. Oohs and aahs filled the plaza with each succeeding burst over Sand Island. A multitude of bursts lit the night sky of Bethlehem on July 4. More photos appear on page A10.

Bethlehem's Independence Day celebration got off to a rainy start, with the third annual reading of the Declaration of Independence at Payrow Plaza. Some of the approximately 100 people in attendance sought the shelter of the Bethlehem Area Public Library's porch, while others huddled under umbrellas in front of the city's bandshell on the plaza. Ten readers, including Bethlehem Mayor Bob Donchez, Northampton County Court of Common Pleas Judge Emil Giordano, State Representative Steve Samuelson, Northampton County Councilmen Seth Vaughn and Hayden Phillips, Bethlehem Police Chief Mark DiLuzio, Lehigh County Controller Glenn Eckhart, congressional candidate Matthew Dietz, Christine Bongiorno and Lou James participated in the reading. John Cornish of Bethlehem led attendees in the "Star Spangled Banner" and Donna Rovito and Terry Geiger, both from Allentown, led the singing of "America the Beautiful." Bethlehem attorney Tom Carroll emceed the event.

Board to allow recording on buses

By AMY HERZOG
 Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Bethlehem Area School District board June 23 approved turning on the audio capability in the video cameras already installed in the district's school buses in a 6-3 vote.

The district already utilizes video recording on school vehicles in accordance with the state wiretap and electronic surveillance act. This act was changed in February to allow for the use of audio recording in addition to the video recording. The district has revised the policy regarding recording on school buses to include the audio and will send the annual required notices to students' homes.

The use of these recording measures on the buses is to support efforts to maintain discipline and ensure the safety and security of student while traveling on the vehicles.

Some officials voted against the policy, expressing unease about recording students' conversations.

School Director Basilio Bonilla Jr. read an email he received from the ACLU expressing concerns about the changes to the district's policy, indicating the changes to the wiretapping act to allow audio is unconstitutional.

He then followed the See BASD on Page A2 was a professional services contract, requiring competitive proposals. Solicitor Vic Scmillio disagreed, calling it a "nonprofessional service done in a professional way."

The contract was ultimately challenged in court by the county controller, Steve Barron, who filed a declaratory judgment action on April 3. That very day, Brown responded by ending the contract and agreeing to seek proposals from other firms.

In addition to Sahl, the county considered a proposal by Brian Communications, located in Conshohocken.

Brown is the first Northampton County executive to hire an outside PR firm. Historically, that function has been performed as part of the job responsibilities of a director of administration.

Brown's choice for director of administration, Cathy Allen, was rejected by county council on a 6-3 vote in April.

Council offered no response after hearing DiLuzio.

Also at the July 2 meeting, DiLuzio was asked to discuss the safety of the attendees at the recent FIFA World Cup SoccerFF-st at SteelStacks. Thousands viewed the world cup on screens at the outdoor venue.

"A total of only four arrests were made," said DiLuzio. "These arrests were primarily for public drunkenness and one for under-age drinking... This is statistically good. That's what I like to see. People enjoying themselves safely."

As the meeting drew to a close, council unanimously approved the appointment of Michael Conway as the new director of recycling.

email up with his own opinion on the issue.

"It is my opinion that I cannot in good conscience support a policy that takes away rights of students," said Bonilla.

School Board President Michael Facinetto, in response, said, "We are not the first district to approve this since the change came. ACLU - that is their opinion that it would be unconstitutional. The policy we have is vetted by PSPA and their council. I don't think there is a legal issue."

School Director Michele Cann, called the ACLU's position ridiculous and said she does not think the policy is unconstitutional.

In an attempt to ease board members' concern over the policy, BASD Superintendent Dr. Joseph Roy informed the board that the recordings would only be pulled if there were an incident. The recording would be pulled after the incident was reported and it is Roy's hope that the recordings would provide more evidence.

In other news the board also approved a two-year agreement with the Blended Schools Network. The agreement provides a subscription to the Blackboard learning management system at a cost not to exceed $11,425 a year. This agreement is to help the district as it works to expand its two track online learning system.

HEALTHCARE SOLUTIONS FOR SENIORS LIVING AT HOME

Senior LIFE delivers complete healthcare – and great satisfaction.

Members and families give Senior LIFE high ratings.
By Melanie Klein for Senior LIFE

Quality Results
In a recent national survey conducted with LIFE Program participants and caregivers, Senior LIFE's care and services were found to be among the best in the country. Across all of its centers, Senior LIFE's overall satisfaction rating was 93%. This places Senior LIFE in the enviable 88th percentile nationally.

Senior LIFE gets high marks from Caregivers and Members
Senior LIFE can achieve such results because of its commitment to quality — in personnel and in process. "Providing excellent care to our members is our first priority," says Mark Irwin, Chief Operating Officer of Senior LIFE. "Our goal is to exceed expectations. We always want to know how we are doing, and I am very pleased by the high marks our members give us. Senior LIFE members can trust that we will always strive to deliver the highest quality of care."

This member-centered approach does not go unnoticed. Member Anna M. notes, "Before Senior LIFE I was in and out of the hospital and nursing home, but I'm so much better and stronger now. Senior LIFE helped me to walk again."

Among Senior LIFE members, 99% said that they would recommend Senior LIFE to a close friend or relative, and most caregivers agree. "My mother hasn't looked or felt this good in a long time," says the daughter of a member. "Senior LIFE saved her life and mine. She was declining and needing more and more care. I have children in school and I work full time. The entire family did everything we could for mom, but we needed help... a nursing home was out of the question. I was beside myself. Senior LIFE was our savior."

'Glamming up' for SOTA

"Golden threaded-coral denim," "radical free draping," "amethyst-dyed mink vest," all exotic phrases to describe the fabulous couture clothes designed by Pamela Ptak that draped beautiful models at a lunchtime show at the Hotel Bethlehem. The spring show was the Society of the Arts' (SOTA) first fashion show to raise money for the Allentown Art Museum of the Lehigh Valley.

Society of the Arts officers joined forces with well-known Lehigh Valley clothing designer Pamela Ptak, jewelry designer Roy Rover, and Maximilian at Bloomingdale to outfit more than 20 models to show potential clients a great array of Ptak's couture collection for 2014.

Several local celebrities modeled the clothes, furs and jewelry, but they could not be easily distinguished from the professional models. Among the well-known personalities contributing their time and talents were WFMZ-TV (Channel 69) broadcast journalist Eve Tannery.

Mayor holds Southside town hall

By KATYA HRICHAK

Bethlehem Press Intern

A town hall meeting was held at St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church July 2 as a follow-up to the meeting held a few weeks prior. Mayor Robert Donchez invited members of the South Bethlehem community to attend the meeting and voice their concerns.

Topics discussed at the meeting included bridge repairs, the contribution made by the Sands Casino, the pension system and public safety. Concerns were answered by the mayor as well as directed toward the head of the department that was most responsible for dealing with the issue.

"Our next couple of years we're gonna have a lot of bridge work," Donchez said. He continued to speak about the status of Route 412 and the nearby bridges.

The Fahy bridge will undergo a complete reconstruction, costing $30 million and taking 18 months to complete. Then the Lynn Avenue and Hill-to-Hill bridges will undergo construction.

The next topic addressed was the Sands Casino and its contribution to the city. The city currently receives a $9.8 million host fee from the Sands, which pays for the Bethlehem police department.

Donchez told the atten-

Possession

Police arrested a man for possession of 87.5 grams of marijuana the morning of July 1.

The Colonial Regional Police Department, in conjunction with the Northampton County Drug Task Force and the Moore Township Police Department, concluded a yearlong investigation of marijuana importation with the arrest of Kurt Krywonis.

Police successfully purchased from him on two separate occasions in 2013 and obtained a warrant for his arrest.

The search yielded 86.5 grams of marijuana. A search warrant for his vehicle yielded $15,000 in cash and an additional gram.

Krywonis, 28, of West Beersville Road in Bath, was remanded to Northampton County Prison and is charged with possession and possession with intent to deliver.

dees that as of this moment, 78 percent of the pension system is funded and that changes to the budget have been proposed for 2015.

"The city scored some wins in the last round of negotiations," Donchez said. "I would hope Harrisburg makes some changes."

The most prominent issue of the meeting was public safety, including crosswalks and speeding in the residential areas, first addressed by Linda Terrick. She said she felt her granddaughter would be unsafe while staying with her because of the cars that speed down her street.

Several members of the community joined the conversation and mentioned that cars speed through much of the city, drivers not stopping at crosswalks and have no respect for pedestrians. Additionally, Terrick added that she has seen pedestrians not abiding by the walk signs by traffic lights.

"Public safety has to be number one," Donchez said in response to the comments. The mayor and department members agreed to have a traffic and speed study done on a particularly problematic intersection.

Mayor Donchez added that he has an open door policy every second Monday of each month from 9 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m., and that residents are welcome to visit, no appointment necessary.

BP SUMMER INTERN Katya Hrichak Dickinson College

Why that college? I chose Dickinson because I wanted a small liberal arts college that had programs in English, music and writing. The atmosphere was very welcoming each time I visited and that, in combination with the location in a small city, made it a clear decision for where I wanted to spend my time.

Major: English, music history
Why this major? I chose these majors because they are both very important aspects of my life. I have always loved both reading and writing and I have been an active participant in music programs since the fourth grade and find the history behind the music I've played fascinating.

College activities: I participate in the orchestra, clarinet ensemble, The Dickinsonian (newspaper) and I am a member of the Alpha Lambda Delta honor society.

Career goal: I intend to enter a career in journalism or publishing.

Internship goal: My goal is to get firsthand experience working in a career field that I am considering seriously so that I have an even better plan for what I want to do after graduation. Being able to actually work with a paper is so much better than any information that can be obtained in a classroom.

Advice to graduating high school seniors: Explore different options and take chances; don't limit yourself only to what you think is easily attainable. You will never know what you can do if you don't try.

Stellar weekend on deck for locals

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

If there's one summer weekend where you can get a true gauge of what basketball potential a team may have for the winter, it's this week's Stellar Co. Catch a Rising Star Basketball Showcase at Cedar Beach in Allentown.

Bethlehem, Freedom and Liberty will be back at it and should feature their top rosters as the tournament opens up Thursday evening. Liberty faces the toughest challenge to open the tournament as they take on Reading at 7 p.m. on Thursday.

Reading is playing in this year's Cedar Beach Summer League, but Liberty hasn't encountered them yet.

However, Hurricanes' head coach Chad Landis knows it's going to be difficult with what he's seen of Reading so far in the tournament.

"They're a very good team," Landis said. "It's going to be a tough task for us to get out of that opening round, but this is what this tournament is all about. It's about playing the best competition in this tournament and we're looking forward to it."

Freedom is on the same side of the bracket as Liberty and open with Exeter at 5 p.m. in the opening stages of the tournament.

The Patriots, along with Bethlehem Catholic, will be looking for brighter results this weekend following a difficult stretch in the summer league season so far.

Freedom is 1-7, while their other team, Freedom B was 0-8 heading into last week.

Becahi sat at 1-8 as well heading into last week's action, as they open up Stellar with Governor Mifflin at 7 p.m.

Head coach Mike Frew has been playing most of the summer with an inconsistent lineup, which should become better once this weekend rolls around.

"We've had a lot of guys miss time because of conflicts with their schedules this summer," said Frew. "We'll still be missing some guys this weekend, but we'll have guys like Freddie [Simmons] available. Our goal is to compete and stay alive till Sunday. That's what we want to do."

Liberty was holding a 6-3 record in summer league play heading into this week and with Reading on the docket in their opener, Landis wants to see that competitive

Playoffs set to go

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

It'll be a jam-packed week of baseball action in NORCO Legion, as the playoffs officially kicked off last night for the top eight teams in the seedings.

The best-of-three series action includes three Bethlehem teams, as Bath, Freemansburg and the Wanderers qualified for the postseason.

Bath (12-6) earned a third-seed and opened the tournament on Tuesday at home against sixth-seeded Big Pocono (11-7).

Easton (12-6) and the Wanderers (11-7) squared off in a four-five matchup yesterday, while Freemansburg (11-7) will look for the upset bid over second-seeded East Stroudsburg (13-5) in the opening round.

Top-seeded Hellertown (14-4) takes on eighth-seeded Birches (9-8-1) in the final matchup of the first round.

Bath head coach Alex Specht hopes his team can keep their momentum going forward following a double-header sweep over Northampton and Nazareth over the weekend.

"We threw five different pitchers over the weekend and allowed only two runs, so we have momentum heading into the playoffs," said Specht of his team's 14-1 win over Northampton and 2-1 victory over Nazareth. "The players and coaches are confident with what we have going for us right now."

Bath lost to Big Pocono 4-3 during the season in their only encounter, but with Liberty ace Matt Leon scheduled to throw in yesterday's contest, Specht's belief in getting out of the first round was

Epsaro headed to Moravian

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcaldonald@tnonline.com

Liberty High School graduate, Lauren Epsaro, will continue her softball career at Moravian College next year.

The former Hurricane outfielder considered Kutztown University and York College, but in the end, it was Moravian that won her over.

"I really liked Moravian, not only because it's close to home, but it's a small school, and everyone knows each other. I always wanted to do teaching, and they're known for that," Epsaro said.

Epsaro will live on campus with Catsasauqua High School graduate and softball player, Janae Matos.

Epsaro said, "I went to a few games [at Moravian] this year, but it was hard because we had games too."

Greyhound coach, John Byrne, however, attended some of Liberty's games.

"Before I committed, he asked why I play softball and said it's really different compared to high school. He knows I'm an outfielder, but he's going to try us in different positions to see where we fit best," Epsaro said.

The Greyhounds ended the 2014 season with an overall record of 29-8 and a Landmark Conference record of 9-3.

Epsaro's overnight visit included time with the softball team and sitting in on a sports psychology class.

"I'm looking forward to meeting a whole bunch of new people and being more independent, living on my own. College will be a whole new level of competition compared to high school," said Epsaro.

Epsaro will major in early childhood education with a concentration in special ed.

Harewood to attend Monmouth

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcaldonald@tnonline.com

Liberty High School graduate, Casey Harewood, will continue her track and field career in the high jump at Monmouth University this fall.

"Originally, I was very open-minded with schools and took a lot of official visits. The coaches [at Monmouth] were friendly and inviting, I hung out with the team, and everything clicked," Harewood said.

Monmouth's head coach is Joe Compagni. Devon Barry coaches the jumpers.

"I saw the jumps coach right when I got there. He wanted me to experience everything for myself," said Harewood.

With the guidance of a freshman track and field athlete, Harewood got an all-around feel for the Monmouth campus and campus life.

"I went to an English class, I hung out with the team a lot, and I sat in on a practice. It really helped me a lot. It reminded me of the track I do now. Everyone was having fun but being focused," Harewood said.

Track and field workouts will begin in the fall in preparation for indoor track this winter, followed by outdoor track in the spring.

In addition to the high jump, Harewood would like to compete in hurdles, but that will be up to the coaches. In the meantime, Harewood is looking forward to her arrival on campus on Aug. 31.

"I'm most nervous about the academics because it's all up to me. I was in National Honor Society and everything, but no one's there to tell you to do your homework. Overall, I'm really looking forward to a focused track team where everyone is on the same page. I'm looking forward to being able to call myself a Division 1 athlete," she said.

Harewood is planning on majoring in business administration with a concentration in marketing.

Bowfishing could satisfy need for something different

By NICK HROMIAK
Special to the Press

With stream fishing at a virtual standstill now that all trout stockings are over, the next best waters are rivers and lakes. Or, if you want to try something different, try bowfishing for what is termed trash fish like carp and suckers in area lakes and ponds.

Once graduating from those species, you may want to try for some really big fish like stingrays and skates. That's what Bob Danenhower and family did recently on the back bays of Chincoteague Island where wild horses still roam.

Using recurve and compound bows, Danenhower, of Bob's Wildlife Taxidermy in Orefield, and his two sons Bob Jr and Brent, managed to arrow six rays between 60-70 pounds each where in they get four edible fillets from each fish.

"We get two fillets from the top of the ray and two from the bottom," said the senior Danenhower who has been making this trip annually while staying at Randy Birch's outfitting service whose specialty is duck hunting in fall and winter months, and guiding for rays in the summer.

According to Danenhower, the rays they arrowed were in 3-6 feet of crystal clear water from the fore deck of Birch's boat.

"There are skates that also inhabit these waters but most are in the surf that makes them difficult to see and shoot," said Bob Sr.

As both rays and skates make for good eating, circular cut skate wing, with its mild, slightly sweet flavor and firm texture, is sometimes sold as imitation sea scallops and has been fraudulently packaged as real sea scallops according to the U.S. FDA.

Skates are related to sharks and rays but differ in that rays are kite-

Bob Danenhower Jr. of Whitehall, carefully lifts an arrowed stingray aboard their boat being careful not to get stung by the rays venomous barb.

shaped and have streamlined tails with one or more venomous barbs. When a barb pierces a victim, the skin covering the barb ruptures and venom is released. This is important to know when bringing one into a boat or attempting to remove an arrow or fishhook. And since the barb is serrated, it's very difficult to remove without causing more damage.

Danenhower senior said he saves the barbs then cooks them until they're white in color. He eventually plans on making a presentation box to display them in.

Skates on the other hand, don't have barbs but rely instead on thorn-like formations on their backs and tails to deter predators.

Appearance wise, skates tend to be smaller and rounder or triangular in shape than rays with heavier, fleshier tails that have small fins toward the end. Skates commonly found in North America waters have elongated noses. They also differ in that stingrays bear large, plate-like teeth to crush larger fish and prey whereas skates must eat smaller foods than rays as they only have small teeth.

Some ray species can live in brackish waters and freshwater, whereas skates have a tendency to live in marine waters.

Skates are reportedly a bit more tastier than rays and in fact are a common dish in parts of France where the "wing" is called "race." They're becoming increasingly more available in American restaurants such as Gary Henshaw's Landis Store Hotel in upper Berks County where co-chef Scott Fisher puts them on the menu when they become available in summer.

Fisher prepares skate by filleting the wings away from the body as the body contains little usable flesh. "I simply season them with some salt and pepper and dip them in flour then pan cook the fillets in browned butter, lemon juice and capers. They don't need a lot, and it compliments the fish. I have it in the pan for about three minutes per side and they just string apart," Fisher explains.

If you'd like to taste skate, don't delay in making reservations because it's a seasonal entrée and could be off the menu.

strong. "We had Jimmy Downey pitch against them the first time, so we feel good with Matt going out there in game one," Specht said. "It should be an interesting round for us and we're just focused on one game at a time."

All first round games started on Tuesday, which were past Press deadlines. Game two of each series take place on Wednesday and, if necessary, game three would take place Thursday evening.

The semifinal round is scheduled for Friday and Saturday of this weekend, with potential game three's for Sunday.

The finals are then slated for Monday and Tuesday of next week. Game three would take place next Wednesday.

With so much action in a crowded calendar, Specht knows not to look ahead. "All you can really do is look at what's in front of you," he said. "We're not thinking about anything else."

Local football players commit

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Two Bethlehem products recently announced their plans to play college football locally, as Liberty's Lou Cszaszar and Bethlehem Catholic's Donte Lonardo elected to play at Villanova and Lafayette College respectively.

Cszaszar, a star offensive lineman for the Hurricanes, chose Villanova over Lafayette.

Lonardo, a tight end and defensive end for Becahi, decided to stay in the area and committed to Lafayette.

There haven't been any official words coming out of Freedom for commitments at the moment, as Cszaszar and Lonardo are the first two players to make announcements this summer.

Bethlehem Catholic has been a place full of intrigue for college coaches, as the Hawks should have several players on the FBS (Div-I) and FCS (Div-IAA) radar.

Freddie Simmons is likely to be one of the most sought after athletes in the area this season, as he's reportedly received 12 Division-I offers with Rutgers, Virginia, Cal, San Diego State and Wake Forest atop of the list.

With a new offseason under way, Landis has plans to reexamine everything for the program moving forward, with the help of three key seniors in Jaevan Dobbins, Ludwin Gonzalez and Trenton Bishop.

"We just want to change how we go about things and we're going to try a lot of different things,"

Landis said about the plans for the future of the team. "This is primarily a young group, so once the summer is over and we head into fall, we'd like to have a better idea of where we'll be at. Stellar is the first real test for our guys, so we'll see how it goes."

RJ Ryan of Bethlehem has been inducted into Boston College High School's Hall of Fame. The school honored RJ and four other athletes at a dinner at the Hunter-Fahey Commons back on Nov. 26, 2013.

Ryan, class of '95, was chosen for his outstanding basketball and football careers.

Matt Curran, BC High Alumni Director, introduced RJ as "BC High's Gronk."

Sean Cooney, RJ's football teammate, followed: "We had a play that was a Reverse Half-Back Pass. I was the halfback and RJ was the tight end. I would get the ball and not even look to see if he was open ... just throw it as far as I could ... in his general direction. We ran the play maybe eight times and I think he caught it seven. Just throw it near him and he caught it."

"That has always been my experience with RJ. He makes his teammates better. He has a knack for being in the right place at the right time. He has a competitive spirit that is contagious and when all else fails, just throw it close and he'll get it. RJ was a great player and an even better friend. I couldn't think of anyone more deserving of this honor."

"It was a great experience playing alongside RJ for four years on the basketball court," said Paul Donato. "He brought a level of intensity that was unmatched to every practice and game - especially in the locker room at halftime. He was a great mentor to the younger guys on the team - taking the time to make each of them a better basketball player. His athleticism was always on display but was never more evident than when we'd run a play to get him an alley-oop dunk. It always fired up the team and the McNeice crowd and certainly deflated the other team. I knew that I just needed to get the ball near the rim and big guy would go get it as he always did. He was everything you wanted in a teammate - dedicated, hard working and we always knew that he had our backs. However, he was more than just a great teammate - he was a great friend. The players at Lehigh are lucky to have a Leader like RJ Ryan. I am thrilled that he is being honored for his achievements."

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1,600 students from more than 100 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

ARC Red Cross offers free swim app

The American Red Cross recently announced its new free swim app to promote water safety for parents and caregivers of young people learning to swim. The app allows iPhone, Android and Kindle Fire users to track a child's progress in Red Cross swim lessons and help the swimming student learn the key skills and goals for each swim level. Features of the app include a progress tracker for goals achieved in swimming lessons, stroke videos and performance charts to help with proper swimming techniques, activities to do with young swimmers to reinforce what is covered in lessons and water safety and drowning prevention information for parents.

The app is available for free in the Apple App Store, Google Play Store for Android or Amazon Kindle Store by searching for American Red Cross or by going to redcross.org/mobileapps. Spectators cheer as the US team scores its first and only goal of the match. The loss to Belgium ended the team's appearance in the World Cup.

'A lot of soccer fever going on'

By KATYA HRICHAK
Bethlehem Press Intern

Despite the repetitive chants of "USA" and "I believe that we will win" heard at the World Cup SoccerFest and Viewing Party at SteelStacks July 1, the U.S. national soccer team played its last match.

Belgium won 2-1 against the United States in the 120-minute game with the US team not scoring until minute 107. The single goal was made by Julian Green, the youngest player in U.S. history to score in the World Cup, only minutes after being placed in the game.

After Belgium scored its second goal, much of the crowd departed, believing that the US had already lost. The suspense felt by the crowd was palpable in the last few minutes of the game as the U.S. team attempted goals and even blocked more. "It's such an awesome feeling when they score and everyone cheers," Brian McKenzie of Bethlehem said of the U.S. team.

Many fans agreed that the SteelStacks venue was great for watching the World Cup because they got to share in the excitement and support their country with other fans.

"I've been coming to all of them. SteelStacks has been a great venue for the community," Josh McClammy of Bethlehem said.

"I've been to every U.S. game thus far and it's been really fun," Cara Capobianco of Bethlehem agreed.

Although much of the crowd was comprised of local residents, many fans traveled much greater distances to attend the event.

"We're visiting relatives that told us about it," Scott Nelson of North Carolina said. "We wanted to watch the game with other fans." "We've seen it on TV and I looked it up on the Internet and it seemed like a great place to watch the USA," Tim Mein of Rockaway, N.J., said.

Similar to seeing the event on TV, Brenna Stangle of Phillipsburg, N.J., saw the event on social networking sites and decided to attend the US-Belgium game.

The popularity of soccer in the United States has increased during the World Cup, leaving fans to wonder whether it will remain in favor now that the national team is out of the competition.

"It will increase it a lot, there's a lot of soccer fever going on in the U.S.," McKenzie said. Many, such as McKenzie, are feeling optimistic about the sport.

"I think it's already increasing,"

Mein said. "It's nice to see as a lifelong soccer fan. The further they go the more they'll get."

Jon Pelter of Bethlehem agreed, saying it's great for morale and will therefore increase in popularity.

"I'm hoping it starts a more structured youth program geared toward the national team," Nelson said.

Others, such as Rob Thigpen of Durham and Stangle, disagree: "I don't really play or follow, but I think it will have a positive effect but not be that noticeable," Thigpen said.

"I feel like it's only big when the World Cup is happening," Stangle said. Regardless of the loss, everyone who attended the game showed their support with national colors and chanting and had a great time.

The Mike Dugan band is one of many that performed at SteelStacks' town square over Independence Day weekend. The Allentown band entertained hundreds July 4 prior to the fireworks display on Sands Island.

Because freedom is not free, ArtsQuest featured some of the shells manufactured by Bethlehem Steel during World War II. The Steel company also made armor plates that stopped an 8" shell aimed at the USS Forrestal.

Family members: I live with my mom, Hope, my dad, Chris, and my dog, Rosie.

Favorite subject: My favorite subjects are math and chemistry. I like the problem-solving involved with both subjects.

Activities: I was one of the captains of the cheerleading team. I also was a member of the FACT Club, Key Club and National Honor Society.

Next steps: I plan to go to a medium sized college and major in biochemistry.

Career goals: My career goal is to become a pediatrician. I would love to be able to help children for a living.

Getting tails on trails

This spring, the Delaware & Lehigh National Heritage Corridor, St. Luke's University Health Network and Bethlehem Health Bureau joined for the kick-off event of the second year of Get Your Tail on the Trail, an initiative to encourage people of all ages and all activity levels to get outdoors, get active and explore nature by walking, running or biking the D&L Trail.

As part of the Get Your Tail on the Trail 2014 kick-off, nearly 300 students, teachers and chaperones from Calypso, Broughal, Donegan, Fountain Hill, Union Terrace and William Penn schools walked the trail at Sand Island and learned about the history of the trail and plant preservation efforts. The walkers also participated in a zumba class, interacted with animals from Wildlands Conservancy, investigated St. Luke's HealthStar van and met a live mule, an integral part of the lock system on the canals.

St. Luke's will donate $250 and $500 respectively toward fitness equipment or an activity to schools in Leader In Me® program that reach 5,000 miles and for those schools that reach 10,000 miles in the Get Your Tail on the Trail. The initial challenge launched in Spring of 2013 where 2,500 participants logged a total of 255,000 miles. The program continued through the winter of 2014 with 580 participants tracking 44,000 miles during the Winter Mini-Challenge.

To help exercisers log miles, St. Luke's and D&L will be hosting special events throughout the summer and fall near each St. Luke's campus. Details on these events can be found at www.tailonthetrail.org. Registration is encouraged. Please call St. Luke's InfoLink at 1-866-785-8537.

"Good Things" For You!

In Deuteronomy 28:1-14, God enumerated the many blessings of good things He had in store for His people, Israel, if they would obey Him. He promised to make them "plenteous in goods" and open unto them His "good treasure." After God gave them the land He promised, Joshua reminded them "that not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the LORD your God spake concerning you" (Joshua 23:14). Sadly, the Israelites later disobeyed turned away from God and consequently no longer enjoyed the blessings of His good things. They were suffering as captives in another nation when the prophet Jeremiah told them, "your sins have withholden good things from you" (Jeremiah 5:25). God wanted to bless His people, but how could He when they rejected the very conditions He gave for His blessings? How can a just and holy God bless and give "good things" to those who sin by violating His law? God's blessings are for those who obey Him. "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly" (Psalm 84:11). "The upright shall have good things" (Proverbs 28:10).

God has many "good things" for you, but sin will keep them from you. It is my joy to "preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things" (Romans 10:15). Those "glad tidings of good things" are that God has provided a way for our sins to be forgiven through the sacrifice of His Son, Jesus Christ, on the cross. Please see: www.naog.ws/theway.htm I urge you to receive Christ as your Savior from sin now. Jesus promised that God will "give good things to them that ask him" (Matthew 7:11). Just ask Him now to forgive you of your sins. God promises, "They that seek the LORD shall not want (lack) any good thing" (Psalm 34:10). I urge you to humbly seek the Lord now! "He hath filled the hungry with good things" (Luke 1:53). It is the Lord "Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's" (Psalm 103:5).

Appalachian Trail accessible to Lehigh Valley hikers

Lehigh Valley residents are fortunate that the Appalachian Trail passes through the northern section of the region.

People travel from all over the United States, North America and many foreign countries to hike it, one of the longest continuously marked trails in the world, passing through 14 states over mountains and through valleys from Maine to Georgia.

The trail snakes across the Blue Mountain in an east to west direction. This is a peculiarity since the trail stretches approximately 2,180 miles north to south. I have hiked a few miles of the trail from Lehigh Gap, where the Lehigh River cuts through the Kittatinny Ridge, east to Smith Gap, about midway between Little Gap and Wind Gap.

I've read several books written by "through-hikers," those who hike the entire trail in one year. The books' authors did not motivate me to want to duplicate their hiking achievements. I was not even tempted when I was a young man.

Trail stories describe terrible blisters, loss of toenails, ill-fitting boots, horrible weather and other nasty conditions. I'm into day hikes. I don't wish to sleep on the ground.

People are drawn to the Appalachian Trail for different reasons, including: escaping the hustle and bustle of city life, reconnecting with nature, deepening old friendships and making new ones, experiencing a simpler life, and contemplating life changes.

The Appalachian Trail annually attracts three million hikers. About 1,800 attempt through-hikes each year. A low percentage complete the goal.

The Appalachian Trail, part of the National Park System, was completed in 1937. Thousands of volunteers contribute an estimated 220,000 hours each year to maintain the trail.

The trail portion that winds along the top of the northern section of the Lehigh Valley is maintained by the Philadelphia Hiking Club. Hikers use more than 250 three-sided backcountry shelters along the trail. There are hostels and other lodging along and near the trail. A former iron master's mansion is a hostel in Pine Grove Furnace State Park, Cumberland County.

I recently visited the Appalachian Trail Museum in Pine Grove Furnace, about two miles from the midway point of the trail between Georgia and Maine. It is in a former grist mill that dates back more than 200 years.

Exhibits include those about the early founders of the trail: Benton Mackaye and Myron Avery, and some of the first through-hikers:

Gene Espy, Ed Garvey, Grandma Gatewood and Earl Shaffer. One of Shaffer's three-sided shelters has been reconstructed. There is hiking equipment, photos and information. Museum docents Rayne and Roy Debbski volunteered during my visit.

The museum is across the road from Pine Grove General Store. The store is steeped in trail lore. It's said that through-hikers celebrate reaching the midpoint by eating or attempting to eat a half-gallon of ice cream at one sitting.

Three young male through-hikers had hiked eight miles from the Birch Run shelter where they spent the previous night. Each was charging his iPhone at one of the store's outside electric outlets.

Jordan Bowman, of Atlanta, Ga., an English teacher with a Master's in English, began hiking the trail March 8. His trail name is "Yo Teach."

Austin Homkes, a Michigan native majoring in biology and environmental science who graduated from college in January, started hiking the trail March 9. He is a bird enthusiast and recognizes most of the birds and their calls and songs. A yellow flicker feather was stuck in his hat. His trail name is "Birdman."

Conner Powell, of Buffalo, N.Y., a geography and environmental science major who graduated last May from the State University of New York College at Buffalo, began hiking the trail March 12. His trail name is "Light-house."

Although each started on different days, they arrived together at the trail midpoint in Pine Grove State Park.

Said Bowman, "I have not met anyone I did not like. One of my main reasons for hiking the AT [Appalachian Trail] is to meet new people. The people who hike the trail seem to be in transition, looking for the next chapter in their life."

Said Homkes, "After four years of college, it's great to have no worries. I'm just working my way toward Maine. No studying and no tests."

Said Powell, "The trail isn't just walking. It's a traveling community of hikers. You meet new people each day."

Although he had started later than Bowman and Homkes, Powell caught up to the other two hikers. He hoped to complete the trail by late July. On his fastest day, he covered 31.7 miles.

If you have not taken advantage of the proximity to the Appalachian Trail, you may want to ride to one of the trailheads and do some hiking. One day, you even may decide to become through-hiker.

That's the way I see it!

With proper care, annuals rule

Annual flowers include some of the most colorful plants in home gardens. With a little extra care during early and mid-summer, you can keep them attractive right up to frost time.

The first rule in keeping annual flowers blooming is to cut off dead flowers so they won't go to seed. True annuals die after setting seed, and even those plants that don't die will be reduced in vigor.

The second rule is to cut back and fertilize plants when they become tall and leggy. Petunias, pansies, sweet alyssum and ageratum all continue to grow and flower at the tips of their shoots. As a result, plants spread out and after awhile become thin and unattractive. When this starts to happen, you use a knife or shears to cut them back to the small side shoots that occur low on most stems.

At the same time that you cut back plants, give them some fertilizer and a good soaking. Use either a soluble fertilizer and apply it according to the label, or dissolve about one-third or one-fourth cup of garden fertilizer (5-10-10) in three gallons of water. Then give each plant a good soaking. You can use this same treatment for plants in hanging baskets that have become ungainly.

Though these treatments work well for late summer blooms, they won't be effective enough to give you a good fall display of annuals. For fall blooms, it's better to start new plants to replace over-aged specimens.

Petunias started now will be ready to set out in late August or the beginning of September. They will grow vigorously until frost, and the brilliance of their flowers will be unequalled by plants blooming now in the summer heat.

Also consider starting some plants that thrive best in the cool autumn nights. Calendulas, for example, don't like the summer heat, but plants started now will give flowers until frost. Cosmos, both the tall types in mixed colors and the smaller orange and yellow flowered kinds, also bloom best in late summer.

Clumps of bearded iris are the highlight of many early summer gardens. They give a colorful display between spring bulbs and summer annuals.

Best of all, they are nearly maintenance-free if established in a well-drained, sunny location. However, most bearded iris need to be divided about every five years to relieve crowding and improve performance.

Divide them shortly after all blossoms have faded so new plants will have a chance to get established before winter. Here are some basic steps:

Cut leaves to about one-third their height, dig underneath and lift the entire clump. Wash away soil with the hose so you can see the root structure clearly. Using a sharp knife, cut rhizomes into sections so that each has one or two growing points or fans of leaves, a few inches of healthy firm rhizome, and a number of strong feeder roots.

Plant in full sun where soil is well-drained. Add compost or peat moss to improve drainage and a little 5-10-5 fertilizer in poor soils. Mix thoroughly.

Prepare a shallow hole and place each rhizome or clump on a slight cone of soil so that the top of the rhizome is just at or slightly above ground level and roots are spread below and around it. Place clumps about 18 inches apart. Fill the hole and water immediately.

Good people give us all hope

Kathy Nelson wrestles with hope versus despair almost every week of her life.

Hope keeps winning. I'm an optimist, but as I watch Kathy and see how she hangs on, I'm not sure I could be as faithful to convictions as she is.

Kathy and her husband, David, are real estate agents. People come to Southwest Florida wanting a piece of this paradise for their very own. The Nelsons are very happy to help them find the perfect place.

But one thing they learned early on is that some people can't hope to have a piece of paradise. Often, they don't even have a home. Or they lose the home they had.

When the economy collapsed a few years ago, even those who thought they would never be homeless found themselves desperate. You can't pay for a home if you don't have a job.

"We kept seeing people fall into bad circumstance. We thought they just needed a little help to get back on their feet," Kathy says.

That's when they conceived the idea of providing transitional housing to families at risk of homelessness. The Nelsons said they felt called by God to tackle the problem.

They decided to start a foundation, using 10 percent of the gross profits from their realty business. Through good times and bad, they stayed true to that mission.

Finally, they had 14 units of housing to offer to those willing to work the program. They made it clear it wasn't a handout.

Clean, pretty homes would be given to a struggling family for two years, but they had to keep a job and take classes provided to help them better their situation.

Mostly single mothers trying to raise children on their own applied.

We can curse the darkness, or we can light a candle. The Nelsons are lighting candles as fast as they can.

I interview them periodically, and I'm always amazed how they keep plugging away without getting discouraged.

The latest setback happened last week when they had two people vacate the homes that were provided for them.

One woman was asked to leave when she wouldn't follow rules. The final straw came when she was arrested for drugs.

The woman left, all right. But not before she wreaked havoc on the place. She tore out fixtures, pounded large holes in every wall and left behind a legacy of filth.

So much for saying thank you for the chance she was given.

That makes me angry and discouraged.

But Kathy says the one that really broke her heart was the older woman she was helping back to financial security. "She was older, seemed quite reliable, and I thought everything was fine in her house," Kathy said.

Instead, when the woman left, Kathy discovered she had cats that used the entire place as a litter box.

"The smell assaulted anyone as soon as they opened the door," Kathy said.

Now, please know Kathy and her husband get no government funding. They had to pay for all the damage out of their retirement savings — a retirement they postponed so they could continue helping people.

Let me ask you this: Would you be willing to go on helping people after that, or would you rethink your mission?

I guess it depends on your religious convictions. It is her strong faith and her belief in helping others that keeps Kathy in the game.

This week, I interviewed her again. This time her program is being hailed after a success story made everyone happy.

Lynn was a smart, hard-working single woman trying to support her young daughter. She got pregnant in high school and earned her GED after the baby was born. Although she worked at a banking job for six years, Lynn knew she would never be able to have a place of her own if she stayed in the low-paying job.

She applied for a college scholarship and got it. But where could she live while she went to school? And how could she buy groceries and meet her daughter's needs?

In stepped Kathy, who gave Lynn a beautiful new apartment and helped with basic food.

This time, Kathy's faith in people was justified. Lynn graduated with honors, earning a nursing degree as well as a good-paying job that will allow her to finally afford a place of her own.

"I get uplifted by success stories like that," Kathy said. It's those success stories, she adds, that keep her going.

One of the things I absolutely love about my job is being able to rub shoulders with good people like Kathy.

Yesterday I interviewed a woman who works six days a week as a cook. On her day off, she again stands on her feet, cooking at a homeless shelter. She's been doing that volunteer work at the shelter for 15 years.

"I want to give back," she says, explaining there was a time when she, too, struggled for the basics and knows the meaning of hunger.

I sometimes get tears in my eyes when I interview people like that.

Grateful for what they have, they express their gratitude by helping others.

Some go through life only working to have more. Others go through life with grateful hearts determined to give more.

It's those good people who give us all hope as they work to make a better world.

Angina requires medical attention

Q. How serious is angina?

Angina pectoris, or angina, is the medical term for chest pain or discomfort usually caused by coronary artery disease.

Angina is a sign that someone is at increased risk of heart attack, cardiac arrest and sudden cardiac death. If you get angina, you should get medical attention immediately.

Angina (pronounced "an-JI-nuh") hits when the heart doesn't get enough blood. This usually happens when there is a narrowing or blockage in one or more of the vessels that supply blood to the heart.

Angina can come from exertion. It may make you sweat or lose your breath. The pain can strike your arm or neck, too.

"Stable angina" comes on with exertion and then goes away easily. You can have this kind of angina for a long time.

When the pattern of angina changes a lot, it's called "unstable angina." This is a danger sign. Unstable angina may be the first sign of a heart attack.

Then there is "variant angina pectoris" or "Prinzmetal's angina." It usually occurs spontaneously and almost always occurs when a person is at rest. It doesn't follow physical exertion or emotional stress, either. Variant angina is caused by transient coronary artery spasm.

Physicians have a variety of diagnostic tools.

An electrocardiogram (EKG or ECG) can tell a doctor if your heart has been damaged by a heart attack. If the EKG is done while you are having chest pain, it can also show if your angina is caused by a problem with your heart.

A stress test is often done while you walk on a treadmill. Your doctor will look at your EKG to see if it's abnormal when you exercise. Your doctor may also have x-rays of the heart taken before and after you exercise. These pictures can show if an area of the heart is not getting enough blood during exercise.

A cardiac catheterization involves inserting a long, thin tube into an artery in the arm or leg and then guiding it into the heart. Dye is injected into the arteries around the heart. X-rays are taken. The x-rays will show it if any of the arteries that supply the heart are blocked. Most people diagnosed with heart disease have to take medicine. Medicines called beta blockers, calcium channel blockers and nitrates can help relieve angina.

There are surgical options.

Angioplasty uses a tiny balloon to push open blocked arteries around the heart. The balloon is inserted in an artery in the arm or leg. A stent (a small tube) might be put into the artery where the blockage was to hold the artery open.

In bypass surgery, the surgeon uses a healthy blood vessel taken from your leg, arm, chest or abdomen and connects it to the other arteries in your heart so that blood is bypassed around the diseased or blocked area. This increases the blood flow to the heart.

SteelStacks wins major award for adaptive-use architecture

SteelStacks, on the site of the former Bethlehem Steel Corp. southside Bethlehem plant, has been named a winner in the inaugural Urban Land Institute (ULI) Philadelphia Willard G. "Bill" Rouse III Awards for Excellence.

Nine regional projects were honored with Awards for Excellence. Winners announced June 18 during a reception at the Ballroom at the Ben in Philadelphia.

The awards panel called SteelStacks "a truly remarkable and creative adaptive reuse" that transformed the old Bethlehem Steel plant into a state-of-the-art cultural center that "preserves the history of steelmaking while providing open space for events and setting a new course for the city."

"SteelStacks is a shining example of the incredible results that can happen when the community comes together for a common good, in this case revitalizing an old, abandoned steel mill," said Bethlehem Mayor Robert Donchez.

SteelStacks, which opened in 2011, is on one of the largest brownfields under redevelopment in the nation. Public and non-profit partners working together to develop the project include Bethlehem Redevelopment Authority, City of Bethlehem, Bethlehem Area School District, Northampton County, ArtsQuest and PBS39.

The site's master planning was done by Wallace Roberts & Todd. Architecture and landscape architecture were done by Artefact, Spillman Farmer Architects, URS Corporation, USA Architects and Wallace Roberts & Todd. Lighting at SteelStacks was by L'Observatoire International and Speirs +

The eight other projects (listed alphabetically) as being "truly exemplary" are:

Amanda E. Stout Elementary School and Beners Court, Reading

Gateway to Camden, Campbell Soup Company, Camden, N.J.

JBJ Soul Homes, affordable housing project, off North Broad Street corridor, Philadelphia

Lancaster Marriott at Penn Square and the County Convention Center, Lancaster

Lenfest Hall, Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia

Northern Liberties, mixed-use adaptive project, Schmidt's Brewery site, Philadelphia

Paseo Verde, nation's first Platinum LEED-Neighborhood Development project, Eastern North Philadelphia Sister Cities Park, Center City District, Philadelphia

ULI Philadelphia had selected 28 projects in the region for consideration for the Awards of Excellence.

ULI Philadelphia received 57 nominations of projects in Eastern and Central Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware which were completed within the last five years. Each was reviewed by a 14-member panel of ULI members from across the country. The jury selected and announced 28 finalists last month and then voted on the winners.

ULI, established in 1936, has more than 32,000 members around the globe. The Philadelphia District Council encompasses about 850 members throughout Eastern and Central Pennsylvania, the southern half of New Jersey and the State of Delaware.

'Transformers' ages well

"Transformers: Age Of Extinction" is a transformative movie-going experience.

It's one of those movies that make you feel differently after you depart the movie theater.

The fourth installment of "Transformers" (seen in Imax 3D for this review), delivers for fans of the series as this summer's No. 1 blockbuster movie so far.

Whether you like blockbuster special effects science fiction films or not, "Transformers" director Michael Bay (director, "Transformers: Dark Of The Moon," 2011; "Transformers: Revenge Of The Fallen," 2009; "Transformers," 2007; "Pearl Harbor," 2001; "Armageddon," 1998; "Bad Boys I, II," 1995, 2003) deserves respect for creating a franchise that continues to amaze visually and financially ("Transformers 5" is in pre-production).

This time around, the action is bigger, there are more action set pieces and most of the action scenes have an unusual setting.

At the same time, Bay, directing from a screenplay by Ehren Kruger ("Transformers: Revenge Of The Fallen," "Transformers: Dark Of The Moon") creates moments within the action scenes that emphasize the characters' emotional components.

Bay builds a rapport with the movie-goer by taking his time with character development scenes early on in the movie. It's a long-standing cinematic technique, yet one which film-makers sometimes forget, that provides an emotional payoff later on for viewers.

Cade Yeager (Mark Wahlberg) is a backyard inventor (think a much younger, shorter-haired and extremely buff Christopher Lloyd).

His Paris, Texas, barn is filled with all manner of robots, gadgets and electronics and computer gear, much of which he has rescued from the junk pile and refurbishes to make money for Yeager Development.

Cade is a widower, sharing a single bungalow house with his daughter, Tessa (Nicola Peltz), a high school senior graduating with hopes of attending college. She has a boyfriend, Shane (Jack Reynor), unbeknown to her father.

A family friend, Lucas (T.J. Miller), helps Cade with his fix-up projects. Cade tows home a cab-over tractor truck (without the trailer) that was mysteriously housed inside the town's movie palace which closed (because of "sequels and remakes — bunch of crap," grumbles the building's owner).

Cade's daughter is out-
