Reps encourage masking as infections rise

BY NATE JASTRZEMSKI
njastrzmski@tntonline.com

Reopening businesses and public areas has caused a rash of fresh coronavirus outbreaks across the country, especially among states that rushed to reopen early, but others are not immune. Pennsylvania has seen an increase as well, from around 600 new cases per day last month to between 700 and 900 cases per day last week.

Health Secretary Dr. Rachel Levine said last week, "As the entire state is now in the green phase, we must remain committed to protecting against COVID-19 by wearing a mask, practicing social distancing and avoiding large gatherings this holiday weekend," Secretary of Health Dr. Rachel Levine said. "Pennsylvania has been a model for the country on how to reopen effectively using a careful, measured approach. However, the virus has not gone away and we are seeing cases rise, especially in Southwest Pennsylvania."

Governor Tom Wolf is now discouraging travel to highly impacted states. He also says that while the majority of those hospitalized are aged 65 and older, there is a significant increase in the number of COVID-19 cases among younger age groups, particularly 19 to 24-year-olds.

A number of government representatives have joined in the governor's calls for simple yet effective mask-wearing, including U.S. senators Bob Casey and Pat Toomey, state Senator Pam Iovino and state Rep. Melissa Shusterman.

As of Monday, the state has 93,015 confirmed COVID-19 cases and 6,911 deaths. Lehigh County has 4,439 cases and 327 deaths; Northampton County has 3,555 cases and 273 deaths; the city of Bethlehem has 1,098 cases and 79 deaths.

Social engagement resolution passes, but effectiveness gets questioned

BY DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

An effort "for making genuine efforts to engage in the community in a non-confrontational and constructive dialog about racial justice and policing practices" produced a new resolution from the Bethlehem city government last week.

In its final form, a new resolution creates "a public space and forum for the long-term discussion of issues surrounding systemic racism, discrimination, race-based inequities, social justice, mental health, addiction, poverty eradication, inclusionary housing, education and fair policing practices."

Greg Zahm asked Council President Adam Waldron why Latino Councilpersons Olga Negrón and Michael Colon weren't consulted on this proposed initiative.

Paula and Todd Oskam's beloved second son Maxwell James was born on Sept. 18, 2017. The day after Christmas that same year the feisty, joyful little boy was dead.

It was two months before the Oskams learned that their baby had died of an undiagnosed malignant tumor on his stomach that had metastasized. Paula Oskam said she was shocked. "I didn't think kids got cancer," she in a recent interview.

In hindsight, she said, "Max exhibited some symptoms, but they could have been from so many other things. His doctor said that he was healthy. He was just a sweaty baby." The pediatrician also considered his big belly to be a sign of good nourishment, Oskam remembered.

What actually killed Maxwell was neuroblastoma, the most common form of childhood cancer in children under age 5, as Oskam found out later.

"It's unbelievable. Eight hundred cases of neuroblastoma a year."

THE STREETS OF BETHLEHEM

Moravian history downtown

BY JASON REHM
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Part 1 of 7

The streets in Downtown Bethlehem tell quite the story. You can learn much about the Moravians and the early days of Bethlehem just by reading the names. So lace up your sneakers, grab this guide and go explore.

Nitschmann Street – Bishop David Nitschmann (1696-1772), founder of Bethlehem, purchased 500 acres of land at the confluence of the Monocacy Creek and the Lehigh River. His uncle, Father (David) Nitschmann (1676-1758) cut the first tree for the First House of Bethlehem.

Rubel Street – Located behind the Hotel Bethlehem, this was one of the first thoroughfares in the community. In the early days it was simply called the "old alley" and may have been identical to the old "Indian Path." Later it became known as "Rubel's Alley" since tradesman John Rubel had a shop that stood there. This area was the site of the First House of Bethlehem.

Lives Matter activist, spoke in person, saying she was disappointed in the lack of action taken by city officials. Referring to the draft initiative, she also noted council's minority members had not been consulted in its preparation.

Fall said the measure has "no substance" and is "vague" and demanded a public hearing before a vote on the resolution.

"Who are you to decide that the city has made significant advancement on racial issues?" asked Fall.

Council approved the resolution.

The working title of the organization will be "Community Engagement Initiative."

Mayor Robert Donchez is charged with appointing members and organizations to the new advisory board.

In other business, the council voted to urge "its state legislators to work in the Pennsylvania General Assembly to repeal the Fireworks Law, Act 43 of 2017 or to amend the law to allow for appropriate municipal regulation of Consumer Fireworks or otherwise address the problem."

The same resolution urged Donchez to "investigate possible solutions to the widespread nuisance of consumer fireworks in the City of Bethlehem."

The issue of fireworks in Bethlehem also got a resolution from council urging the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to reverse the 2017 fireworks legislation, and to reinstate a ban on the sale and use of the consumer grade fireworks which are causing the dangerous and harmful nuisances described in this resolution throughout the commonwealth; effectively banning firecrackers, Roman Candles, bottle rockets, and similar products.

Council further resolved that the request "be sent to the city's local state government representatives, to the governor and to the Commonwealth House of Representatives and the senate so that the findings and wishes of the city are made clear to all those in [sic] associated with the commonwealth's government who are empowered to grant the necessary relief to the Pennsylvania's residents and pets."

The Lehigh Valley native's reaction to her son's death was not to place blame, or become despondent. Rather, she went looking for information, and what she learned she said drove her to action.

"I was appalled at the level of funding for pediatric cancer; it gets only 4 percent of the national budget for research," Oskam explained. "I thought, 'That can't be true,' but the more I learned, the angrier I got." Her findings are detailed at s.healthnwell.com.

Oskam also learned that there are 12 types of childhood cancer, and more than 100 subtypes. Yet, the FDA has approved only four drugs targeted specifically to children. In comparison, last year the FDA approved more than 100 adult cancer drugs, she said.

"They [children] just get versions of drugs watered down to a pediatric dose."

After what she learned, Oskam said she couldn't go off quietly.

"Once my eyes were open, I could not live with myself and not do anything about it."

So, in 2019, she and her husband launched the Maxwell James Oskam (MJO) Foundation in loving memory of their son. The goals of the foundation are to raise awareness of pediatric cancer and fund research.

"If my son had lived, I would have fought for him, but I didn't have that choice, so I'm fighting this way," Oskam said.

Last year the foundation raised $37,000, much of it at its inaugural fundraiser dinner in April at the Wesley United Methodist Church on Center Street in Bethlehem.

"We started our journey in Bethlehem at the church where my husband and I were married," Oskam explained.

After the event, the foundation went looking for a nonprofit with a bigger footprint to work on research. By June, the Oskams found Beat NB, a research consortium funded mostly by parents. On its website, the nonprofit Beat NB says it has been doing research since 2010, including a clinical trial on a drug named difluoromethylornithine (DFMO) that appears to be effective in keeping children alive and cancer free once they are in remission.

Objectives of the study are to monitor for safety and to find a maximum tolerated dose, as well as to test for efficacy.

Last year, MJO wrote a check for $10,000 to help fund the clinical trial for five children.

Her goal this year, she said, is to fund $20,000. Unfortunately, that is on hold right now. A second annual fundraiser dinner and silent auction was planned for last March with an expected attendance of 200, but the event had to be postponed because of the coronavirus. The new date was tentatively July 18 at the Wesley United Methodist Church but the church is not hosting any event until September.

"With 100 percent certainty we will be having this event - just at a later date," Oskam says optimistically.

Moravian ships "The Little Strength" and "The Irene," on whose voyages brought hundreds of Moravians to the new world.

Ohio Road - This is the road that Moravians like David Zeisberger and John Heckewelder set out from on their missionary journeys out west to the Native Americans. The road to Ohio was laid out in 1745 and wasn't named for the State of Ohio, which didn't exist yet, but for the Ohio River and adjoining territory.

Heckewelder Place - Once called Cedar Street, it was renamed to honor the distinguished Moravian missionary to the Indians, John Heckewelder (1743-1823). After retiring from his missionary work on the Ohio frontier, he moved back to Bethlehem and resided in a house on this street.

Ettwein Street - Named in honor of Bishop John Ettwein (1721-1802), whose strong leadership and non-combative beliefs were essential to Bethlehem during the trying times of the Revolutionary War. Ettwein was the representative of the Moravian Church before the Continental Congress, and with a strong command of English, he was able to preach to troops and minister to the wounded in the hospital.

Captain Nicholas Garrison transported Moravians across the Atlantic on "The Irene."

Pulaski Street - This alley is named in honor of Count Casimir Pulaski (1745-1779), a Polish nobleman who came to America to offer his services for liberty during the Revolutionary War. He came to Bethlehem a number of times and is said to have posted guards at the Sisters' House while his troops passed through. The story continues that the Sisters embroidered him a banner out of appreciation.

Guetter Street - Named for Henry Gotlob Guetter (1797-1847), a Bethlehem businessman and founder of a lumber company. He was a member of the first borough council and active in many civic activities.

Goepp Street - The Rev. Philip Henry Goepp (1798-1872) arrived in Bethlehem from Europe in 1834. As administrator of the church estates, Goepp oversaw the selling of Moravian land south of the Lehigh River in order to pay off heavy debts.

Market Street - The name Market Street was formally adopted in 1819. A proposed name had been Lombard Street, probably on account of the Lombardy poplars along the cemetery planted by Christian Luckenbach. The name Market Street was chosen since it was already in use due to the old market house that stood on the slope of the hill. In 1886, a large group desired to call it Moravian Avenue, but this, too, fell through.

Steinman Street - This small alley south of Church Street receives its name from the Steinman family. George Steinman (1810-1870) was the original owner of the Pennsylvania House Hotel, later called the Keystone House located south of the canal on River Street. He built houses for his daughters Angelina and Amanda at 54 E. Church and 60 E. Church Street respectively.

Monocacy Street - Derived from the Lenape word "menagassi" or "menakessi" meaning a stream with several large bends.

Mauch Chunk Road - This street along the Monocacy Creek is part of the public road that the Moravians appealed for in 1748 so they could travel to their mission station at Gnadenhuetten, near Lehigh. Later its destination was Mauch Chunk (Jim Thorpe), founded in 1818 and named for the Indian word meaning "Bear Place."

PENNSYLVANIA

MASKS: Governor Tom Wolf and Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) Secretary Cindy Adams Dunn reminds Pennsylvanians to wear masks while enjoying the outdoors when they are not able to consistently maintain social distancing from individuals who are not members of their household.

EVICTON PROTECTION: Governor Tom Wolf today signed a new executive order that protects homeowners and renters from eviction or foreclosure until Aug. 31, if they have not received assistance from a new program administered by the Pennsylvania Housing Finance Agency (PHFA) or are not already receiving relief through one of several federal foreclosure moratorium programs or judicial orders. Lenders and property owners that receive funds through the PHFA program agree not pursue foreclosure or eviction actions as a condition of participation in the program.

In almost all circumstances, renters and homeowners are required to continue making monthly payments if they can. Pennsylvanians struggling to make monthly payments should contact their landlord or mortgage servicer immediately. The governor's executive order does not apply to proceedings regarding property damage or illegal activity.

PUBLIC POOLS: The Department of Health today urged all Pennsylvanians to practice social distancing, wear masks and be aware of pool safety concerns as Pennsylvanians enjoy the summer days outside. Face masks should not be worn in the water as a wet face covering may make it difficult to breathe.

Public pools were permitted to reopen in the yellow and green phases of the Governor's phased-in reopening plan, provided they follow CDC guidance.

FOOD ACCESS SUPPORT: Governor Wolf announced that $10 million is now available for Pennsylvania businesses that have worked to maintain access to fresh, healthy food throughout the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Fresh Food Financing Initiative COVID-19 Relief Fund — funded through the CARES Act — is available to for-profit, nonprofit, or cooperative entities impacted by COVID-19, including grocery stores, corner stores, convenience stores, neighborhood markets, bodegas, food hubs, mobile markets, farmers markets, on-farm markets, urban farms, and food aggregation centers with a direct connection to direct-to-consumer retail outlets.

To be eligible, more than 50 percent of sales must be from staple and perishable foods to consumers and the retailer must serve customers that live in a low-to-moderate income area.

For full details on Fresh Food Financing Initiative COVID-19 Relief Fund eligibility, award amounts, additional prioritizations, and criteria visit agriculture.pa.gov/foodsecurity.

UPDATED FAQs: The Wolf Administration today released updated frequently asked questions (FAQs) about summer recreation, camps and pools. The original FAQs were announced May 22 to cover summer camps and recreation. The new FAQs modify those and also add information about pools.

The guidance was updated to reflect the order of the Secretary of the Department of Health Requiring Universal Face Coverings. New sections appear in red text throughout the FAQs. There are also Universal Face Coverings Order FAQs that provide more information on the order.

Highlights of the revised Summer Recreation, Camps and Pools FAQs include:

- Regarding youth sports: Coaches, athletes and spectators must wear face coverings unless they are outdoors and can consistently maintain social distancing of at least 6 feet. Athletes are not required to wear face coverings while actively engaged in workouts and competition that prevent the wearing of face coverings, but must wear face coverings when on the sidelines, in the dugout, etc. and anytime six feet of social distancing is not possible.

- Regarding summer program operations: If a summer program does not have a publicly available website, alternatives must be used to communicate the health and safety plan to parents and caregivers, such as mailing the plan to all registrants or having written information available at drop off and pick up locations.

- Regarding face coverings for staff and participants in summer youth programs: All staff must wear face coverings during child care and summer program operations unless they fit one of the exceptions included in Section 3 of the Secretary of Health's Universal Face Covering Order. Summer programs and staff should consult Department of Health guidance on homemade masks.

- The FAQs cover questions about prioritizing the times of wearing face coverings, particularly for younger children; proper face covering size and fit, and providing children with frequent reminders and education on the importance and proper wearing of cloth face coverings may help address these issues.

- Regarding face coverings at pools: People should not wear cloth face coverings while engaged in activities that may cause the cloth face covering to become wet, like when swimming at the beach or pool. A wet cloth face covering may make it difficult to breathe. For activities like swimming, it is particularly important to maintain physical distance from others when in the water. People must wear face coverings while out of the water and maintain social distancing of at least 6 feet from others who are not a part of their household.

CHILD CARE SUPPORT: Governor Tom Wolf visited the child care center at PSECU headquarters in Harrisburg today to announce $53 million in additional financial support for child care providers that have suffered during COVID-19. In June, the Wolf Administration distributed $51 million in CARES Act Child Care Development Funds to eligible child care providers. The $53 million announced today is also from CARES Act funding and will be distributed this

The Reverend Beth Goudy and Congresswoman Susan Wild discuss the separation of church and state.

MCCLV hosts Susan Wild discussion

BY CHRIS HARING

Special to the Bethlehem Press

The separation of church and state is a concept with which most Americans are at least somewhat familiar, as it has been cited in numerous court cases, but how many of us truly understand what it means and how it came to be? Congresswoman Susan Wild joined The Reverend Beth Goudy from the Metropolitan Community Church of the Lehigh Valley for a discussion addressing these questions and more on a recent Zoom meeting which was also broadcasted on Facebook Live.

Background

Reverend Goudy began the session by sharing some background on the concept, which comes from a letter from Thomas Jefferson to the Danbury (Conn.) Baptist Association, dated Jan. 1 1802: "Believing with you that religion is a matter which lies solely between man and his God, that he owes account to none other for his faith or his worship, that the legislative powers of government reach actions only, and not opinions, I contemplate with sovereign reverence that act of the whole American people which declared that their legislature would 'make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof,' thus building a wall of separation between Church and State."

Church and state

Susan Wild was an appropriate participant for the discussion, as she earned her Juris Doctor from George Washington University Law School in 1982 and practiced law for 30+ years before she ran for congress in 2018. She admitted that although she rarely litigated these types of cases specifically, as a member of the Congressional Free Thought Caucus, she believes "very, very firmly" in separation of church and state.

She said her "belief in this is by no means an attack on religion. It is simply espousing the principle that it is incredibly important to make decisions at the governmental level that are free of religious interference and principle because if we allow those principles to infringe on the governmental rights, we in one way or another are condoning discrimination against large groups of people."

She also noted that this concept not only protects freedom of religion, but "freedom from reli-

"We need to go back to an old-fashioned way of thinking, we are all in this together and are operating for the common good."

gion" for non-religious people as well.

Goudy posited that the Establishment and Free Exercise clauses are important and good for religious groups because they protect those groups from being burdened by governmental issues.

She mentioned that without the oversight of the state in religious matters, religious organizations and denominations don't have to worry about the state imposing taxation or dictating who they can or cannot ordain as a Reverend, for example. Wild also mentioned that in nations that lack the structural protections that the USA does, governments have used religion as a cover to impose oppressive restrictions on its citizens.

She quoted former Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor in saying that she believes religion is "a matter for the individual conscience."

Cake shop/Hobby Lobby

Some of the discussion centered around specifically-related court cases in recent memory. Regarding the highly-publicized Masterpiece Cakeshop Supreme Court case, in which it was ruled that the Colorado bakery was not legally bound to provide services to a same-sex couple, Wild said: "I have a serious problem with the Supreme Court saying that a bakery can hide behind religion to discriminate against potential LGBTQ+ customers."

On the equally famous Hobby Lobby case, in which the court ruled that a privately-owned, for-profit corporation was not in violation of the Affordable Care Act by opting not to cover contraceptives under its insurance plan, she expressed her opinion that going to work at a retail store is not the same as going to work at a Catholic church, for example, thus employees shouldn't be expected to adhere to such standards.

Minority rights

Another query asked what municipalities and communities might do to vigorously protect the rights of religious minorities. Land use is the number one point of contention at the local level, Wild said, and "religious organizations often feel that they are subject to unfair scrutiny."

A Muslim community is often subjected to heightened standards in planning the construction of a mosque, for example, if their fate is being decided by a board which objects to their faith, she said.

When asked about a strategy to impel congress toward anti-discrimination legislation, Wild said "in unity there is strength... concerted, grass-roots lobbying is very important."

Employment discrimination

The issue of employment discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity was decided several weeks ago in the Bostock v Clayton County Summary case, in which courts ruled that an employer cannot discriminate based on LGBTQ+ status. She continued that properly vetting political candidates and motivating people to vote are two things we can do. She also said that she and her fellow lawmakers can "make sure that the text of their (drafted) legislation is strong and that it can withstand legal challenges."

Christian Nationalism

A viewer asked Wild "how big a threat do you perceive the Christian Nationalism movement is to our democracy?" In response, Wild characterized the movement as "a fairly small group of people," saying "(nationalists) don't by and large exhibit Christian values." However, she indicated that they are still a "true threat" to our democracy, as they are attempting to enforce their version of Christianity upon all citizens.

COVID-19

Goudy and Wild also touched on some unrelated topics during the discussion, taking questions from viewers on topics such as COVID-19 and the upcoming Nov. 3 elections. When asked for an update on COVID, Wild said "science is science, we must observe science. Recognizing RELIEF FOR THE ARTS: 309 nonprofit arts organizations will receive grants totaling $2.3 million to help with the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. The funds from the CARES Act support staff salaries, fees for artists or contractual personnel, and facilities costs. The National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) distributed $1.8 million to 36 organizations that will each receive a $50,000 grant. The Pennsylvania Council on the Arts (PCA), a state agency under the office of the Governor, distributed the remaining $527,000 to 273 organizations that will each receive a $1,930 grant.

REMOTE MEETINGS: In response to the COVID-19 pandemic and to help reduce unnecessary in-person contact that can spread the virus, Governor Tom Wolf signed an executive order today authorizing state agencies to conduct administrative proceedings remotely. Several state agencies conduct administrative proceedings including meetings and disciplinary hearings of the 29 occupational licensing boards and commissions under the Department of State.

The executive order takes effect immediately and allows administrative proceedings to occur by phone, video or online. Independent agencies are strongly encouraged to implement this executive order.

COMPLIANCE CHECKS: Pennsylvania State Police Liquor Control Enforcement Officers will again visit licensed liquor establishments throughout the weekend as part of its regular work to ensure customers and employees are abiding by social distancing, masking, and other health and safety requirements.

From July 1-5, liquor control enforcement officers conducted compliance checks at 2,189 licensed liquor establishments and issued 21 warnings for failing to follow COVID-19 requirements. Compliance checks are unannounced and can occur anywhere in the commonwealth, although the focus is on areas experiencing higher coronavirus transmission rates.

Finnigan urges green phase caution

The Hanover Township Board of Supervisors unanimously approved a conditional use application of Faulkner Subaru Inc. for property located at 370 and 380 Stoke Park Road, during a meeting June 23 held via Zoom.

The conditional use, classified as a "Dealer Vehicle Storage Facility," had been in discussions since February, with a hearing taking place June 9. Faulkner Subaru Inc. currently owns a dealership at 330 Stoke Park Road.

The conditional use agreement is contingent that the 370 Stoke Park Road building not be leased to another user requiring on-site parking while Faulkner Subaru Inc. is using the lot for vehicle storage, that all vehicle storage will be located within the fenced areas of the lot or provide for additional screening of storage areas, and that the applicant complies with all comments from the Hanover Engineering review letter.

In addition to the conditional use approval of 370 and 380 Stoke Park Road, the board unanimously approved a revision to the Chapter 185 Zoning Article XII Administration & Penalties, enabling district magistrates or courts to carry out injunctive procedures for zoning violations.

An injunction – a court order requiring a person to cease a specific action – will give the courts more freedom to help stop violators under the article. Previously, the magistrates or courts were only permitted to hand out fines.

The board also unanimously approved a preliminary/record land development plan for 257 Broadhead Road, owned by Broadhead Road Holdings LLC., for parking lot development.

The plan, dated May 8 and revised June 9, waives the requirement for having to obtain preliminary plan approval prior to a record land approval. Broadhead Road Holdings LLC. bought the 33,000-square foot property in April from First Commonwealth Federal Credit Union (FCFCU).

Conditional use hearings were also held for Advanced Health Care and Universal Adler Place, with approval of both being pushed back to the next board meeting scheduled for July 4, according to Hanover Township Manager John Finnigan.

sitional care and rehab facility on a 3.78-acre lot located at 3370 High Point Blvd. The proposed plan consists of two one-story buildings marked as 33,350 and 20,750 square feet, respectively.

Advanced Health Care Chief Executive Officer Joseph Walker said the average age of a patient is 72 years with an average stay of 22 days. Advanced Health Care agreed on the record that the facility would not house drug and alcohol rehabilitation patients but rather is geared toward patients coming from a hospital who need rehab before returning home.

Advanced Health Care also agreed that road access would be solely from High Point Boulevard, land-locking Stoke Park Road. Per ordinary procedure, however, the board did not move to approve the conditional use on Tuesday evening.

"The board in consultation with its professional, Mr. (James) Broughal and Hanover Engineering, will consider and work with the township manager to determine what conditions we will impose, and I believe, we will have this on our next agenda in two weeks," said Supervisor Susan Lawless. "That would be the goal."

Universal Adler Place applied for the reuse of an existing building at 3864 Adler Place – utilizing 10,600 square feet of the building for an adult care facility for individuals recovering from traumatic brain injuries, with the potential to expand to use to the full building of nearly 27,000 square feet.

Universal Adler Place proposed to remove three parking spaces from the lot, reducing it to 91 spaces, in order for an outdoor recreational space for patients.

Aside from the usual proceedings of the meeting, the board discussed policies relating to police force in the wake of the killing of George Floyd. Finnigan also spoke on the reopening of community facilities amidst the COVID-19 pandemic as Northampton County moved to the green phase of reopening June 26.

Chairman John Diacogiannis said the Colonial Regional Police Commission, consisting of two members each from Lower Nazareth Township and Hanover Township, reviewed Colonial Regional Police Department policies in regard to the use of force and issued a statement.

The statement, read by Diacogiannis, said that a few minor changes were made, but that the policy essentially remained unchanged. Changes in policy will be distributed to the township managers.

"We are satisfied with these policies as currently written and do not believe that any changes are necessary," the statement read. "In particular, we determined that the '8 can't wait' police reform principals in the news these days are properly addressed in the existing policies."

In regard to the continued presence of the coronavirus, Finnigan issued caution that while the county may be easing restrictions, the risk of contracting the virus remains prevalent and residents should remain cautious.

Finnigan said that basketball and tennis courts will reopen but that there will be no access to drinking water in parks. The community center will reopen July 7 with limited access and required sign-ups for gym facilities. Field rentals will begin Aug. 3.

An email describing the changes was scheduled to go out to community members on June 25, Finnigan said.

"Red hardly stops people, yellow means they speed up like heck to get through the light, and green just means they continue to do their merry way," Finnigan said. "We cannot do that because we need to practice social distancing, still need to understand the requirements that are in place."

Board extends state of emergency

Lehigh County Commissioners had a quiet time of it July 8 as they held their meeting without the coronavirus related-political drama that they have faced recently. Instead, routine business dominated the meeting.

Commissioners extended the state of emergency related to the coronavirus pandemic until Sept. 15. There were no public objections offered.

LEHIGH COUNTY

Commissioners approved, for $1, the transfer of an easement to the Borough of Catasauqua for the purpose of widening Race Street so that a water line can be relocated.

They also approved an agreement with Skanska Building USA Inc. to provide construction management services associated to the Old Courthouse Building renovations project.

Commissioners also approved a change to the Lehigh County Home Rule Charter to authorize remote meetings using computer technology.

Also approved were the distribution of Community Development Block Grants to several jurisdictions and non-profit organizations.

Among these were Borough of Emmaus which gets $32,000 for Curb Cuts; the Borough of Fountain Hill Rescue gets $200,000 for water pumper replacement of the borough's 26-year-old fire pumper with a 2020 pumper. This may be applied to the estimated cost of new pumper which is $362,950. The Borough of Slatington gets $91,895 for two ramps, curbing, and sidewalks on East Church Street From First Street, 400 feet towards Walnut Street.

State Police welcomes 99 troopers

Colonel Robert Evanchick, commissioner of the Pennsylvania State Police, announced June 25 that 99 cadets graduated from the State Police Academy in Hershey and have been assigned to troops across the commonwealth. The men and women represent the 159th graduating cadet class.

In accordance with statewide measures to mitigate the spread of COVID-19, the graduation ceremony was closed to the public. Friends and family were afforded the opportunity to view the event via live streams on the Academy Facebook page, YouTube Live, and PAcast.

"The support of loved ones, even from afar, is crucial during the rigorous physical and mental training State Police cadets receive at the Academy, and it will remain vital throughout their careers as troopers," said Evanchick. "Although proud parents, siblings, spouses, and others could not attend in person, we are grateful for everything they have done to help these men and women reach the important milestone we are marking today."

Three cadets received special awards and recognition: Nicholas A. Sully, Adam M. Romig and Joseph W. Yarzab. Among the graduates, the following troops have been assigned locally:

Kevin A. Kowalishen

cated mask-wearing. "The reactions we have seen to COVID is one of our greatest threats to democracy... it should be our common goal to want to eradicate this disease," she said, comparing it to drunk driving. "We need to go back to an old-fashioned way of thinking, we are all in this together and are operating for the common good."

Regarding the 2020 election, Wild was asked if this is going to be a "free and fair" election, and what we can do as ordinary citizens to ensure that it is. She called it "a critical issue that federal legislators have to take up" and advocated providing resources to states and municipalities. "Voting by mail is no less a democratic value than showing up at the polling place and voting in person," she said, indicating that she has heard about people feeling disenfranchised from not getting results for weeks or not being able to get into their polling places because of long lines. "That is what distinguishes us from authoritarian countries, we protect the right to vote," she said.

House colors, garage door approved

Headed by Chairman Fred Bonsall, the Historical and Architectural Review Board granted certificates of appropriateness for two proposals at the July 1 online meeting. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this first 'virtual' hearing for the commissioners was conducted through gotomeeting.com. The voting for both home improvement projects were unanimous.

Dr. Beth Careyva received approval for repainting her house and installing metal railings at 51 E. Wall St. Sherwin-Williams "Toile Red" was chosen for the front door and a "Pavestone Gray" for the front door step. The red brick facade would remain unpainted, while the siding on the building would be repainted "Downing Sand."

Although it had been picked from the vendor's historic color palette, the commissioners recommended a darker shade of the blue-green choice for the shutters and garage door.

With the stairs to the front door having only three risers, Vice Chairman Philip Roeder suggested that Careyva could take down the existing wooden railings without replacing them. City code requires railings for stairways with four or more risers. Careyva replied that she wanted to install the black metal railings as a safety measure anyway. She also told the board the existing wooden railings were not original to the house, having been installed in the 1980s.

Dr. Beth Careyva was granted a certificate of appropriateness for repainting her house at 51 E. Wall St. She also received approval for replacing wooden railings with sturdier metal ones.

It was stipulated that Careyva provide historic officer Joseph Phillips with a darker blue-green paint swatch and a product sheet for the new railing.

A COA was granted to Dr. Jack and Lois Clark for a replacement garage door for their home at 24 E. Market St. The detached brick garage, located at the rear of the property, is at the corner of Long and Milton streets. Jack Clark explained the pair of sliding wood doors were deteriorated. He added that the hardware supporting them extends beyond the walls and was damaged multiple times by recycling trucks "cutting the corner."

Clark provided photographs of garages in his neighborhood that had overhead doors like the replacement overhead door he proposed for his property. He chose raised steel panels without outside decorative hardware for security reasons.

Although the garage was erected sometime after the house was built, Beth Starbuck guessed that it is similar in style to garages built in the 1920s. As a "contributing structure," she opined that the generic-looking replacement door proposal was inappropriate. Starbuck and several board members agreed a carriage house style overhead door would be a better fit for that structure.

Roeder suggested the applicants check out Clopay's website for car-

MAMA'S MUSINGS

Face masks & food

So, what is harder than getting my 6-year-old to wear a mask? A lot of stuff!

Maybe it helps that I make his masks, and he gets to choose the fabrics. And he understands that to go to his dad's, or the store, or to grandma's, he has to wear his mask. And the adults in his life all wear one. Whatever the reason, it's been easier than changing his food preferences. And since we — like everyone else — had trouble getting certain foods during the shutdown, food issues created some challenges, and some delightful successes.

More than a year ago, I tried an organic ketchup. It was a total failure. And since the meats James likes are all eaten by him with ketchup, it is a condiment I try to have plenty of. But we hit a snag during the shutdown, and we ran out. I did have lots of tomato paste. So I dug up a homemade ketchup recipe. He hated it.

There is a social media meme circulating, showing a name brand ketchup bottle half full of sugar. I took the time to read the back of the bottle when we had that brand in the house again. No, it is not 50 percent sugar, but it does have two type of corn syrup in it. No, I am not going to try remaking the homemade version with corn syrup. First of all, yuck! Second, some battles just aren't worth fighting.

Still, we have made some progress during the shutdown. I found a tomato sauce recipe that I adapted slightly, and everyone likes it. And thanks to my writing job, I was able to purchase a farm share, and James is trying new vegetables. To my pleased surprise, he likes bok choy! But the pancakes with peach bits were not a hit. He seems to like veggies more than fruits.

Chicken is another challenge, since he prefers it in nugget form. I finally found a recipe for nuggets made with ground chicken and panko crumbs that he enjoyed. And he has even tried a little bit of unbreaded chicken, though it still is not his preference.

He didn't like the homemade toaster pastries at all, but his brother enjoyed them.

I've heard it can take four to eight tastings to acquire a liking for a food. It's not that different from encouraging a child to wear a face mask. Try a little at a time, and maybe different types, until they get used to it.

Stay safe!

Borough parks to remain closed

BY ELI FRAERMAN
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Borough council members continued its fight against the novel coronavirus during its June 6 Facebook Live meeting, unanimously voting to extend the local disaster emergency until Sept. 8 as well as upholding a May decision to keep the Fountain Hill Park closed.

Despite pushback from some community members who said Fountain Hill is one of the only communities in the Lehigh Valley to not open parks, council remained adamant to act in the best interest of its residents to stop the spread of the coronavirus, they said.

Council discussed the possibility of opening the park with "play at your own risk" stipulations as well as other cleaning procedures and regulations to keep members of the community safe. In the end, council decided against opening up the park.

Council President Leo Atkinson said the borough will put snow fencing around equipment to block it off; there will be a sign to indicate the closure of the park and that borough police will keep an eye on the area.

"It might not be the most popular decision, but I think it is in the best interest of our residents," Atkinson said.

Mayor Carolee Gifford and councilwoman Annamarie Davenport Jordan echoed that sentiment, each expressing concern over opening the park in the interest of the health of their residents.

The disaster emergency, on the other hand, was extended without much discussion. Council members all felt that extending the disaster protocol was an easy decision in order to continue its protocols against the coronavirus.

The initial emergency, which was enacted March 20 and signed by Gifford, authorizes the borough to take all appropriate action in the fight against the coronavirus. Such actions may include the restoration of public services, the employment of temporary workers, purchase of supplies and materials, rental of equipment and entering into contracts and agreements for public work that could be required to meet the emergency.

"There's nothing to be lost by continuing it and everything to be gained," Gifford said.

Council also unanimously voted to approve Stew McCandless to take the vacant position on the Stormwater Board, with the exception of councilman Phil Trabel, who abstained from voting.

Trabel had also put his name in the running for the position, but there was concern over having all three Stormwater Board positions being filled by council members. McCandless then became a clear choice.

There was one motion on the night, in which the Board unanimously granted Graver Industries the CDBG contract to reconstruct Stanley Avenue from North Bergen Street to North Hofert Street and North Hoffert Street from Stanley Avenue to Jeter Avenue. The amount approved was for $240,975.

Absent from all decisions was councilwoman Helen Hallemann, who was asked to leave prior to the start of the meeting for refusing to wear a mask. Hallemann serves as the chair of the health and sanitation committee.

FREEMANSBURG

All 2020 public events are canceled

BY ELI FRAERMAN
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Freemansburg Council unanimously voted to cancel all scheduled community events for the remainder of 2020 during its July 7 virtual council meeting.

Citing the uncertainty of the coronavirus pandemic and an inability to plan ahead because of it, members agreed that it would be logistically difficult to execute all major community events — if conditions allowed for them to happen at all.

They mentioned National Night Out, Fall Fest/Bonfire and Christmas Tree Lighting as the three events they were most concerned about. They did not rule out the possibility of planning smaller community events on a whim, such as the hotdog drive-through the borough hosted June 27.

Chief of Police Jonathan Itterly was especially concerned about National Night Out, which had already been canceled nationally.

"It's almost 100 percent donation driven," Itterly said. "I personally don't feel it's appropriate to send donation requests to some of the businesses just because Freemansburg Council members tabled a decision on closing the basketball court at the Municipal Park.

I know for a fact, there are some difficult and challenging times right now financially and through other means. We're also behind the eight ball for planning for that."

Council President Homer Lorrach said he felt similarly, adding that there wouldn't be time to organize anything that needed more than a little planning.

Council also unanimously voted to waive the deadline of late fees for both sewer/sanitation and real estate taxes through the end of 2020.

The late fees were waived in two separate 7-0 votes due to concerns over ongoing widespread financial struggles related to the coronavirus pandemic.

Sewer/sanitation late fees were already not being invoiced due to the pandemic, while the deadline for base rate real estate taxes was coming up on July 15. The board initially considered pushing the sewer/sanitation late fee deadline to Dec. 1, but decided it would be best to delay it back from 2020 altogether.

Due to constant littering and trashing of the Freemansburg Municipal Park, particularly on the basketball courts, as well as broken locks and damaged fencing, the council discussed closing the basketball courts and removing the backboards but ultimately decided to revisit the issue at next month's meeting.

At the recommendation of councilman and Fire Chief Donald Wilcox, the council elected to proceed with a plan of cleaning the courts twice a week to see if littering and destruction alleviates.

Outside of those discussions, the council also decided to push back potential approval of a street excavation ordinance and a zoning ordinance to the Sept. 8 council meeting in

Banks leaves BC in the record books

BY PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Tavion Banks has never been shy about putting in work. Whether it was in the classroom, the practice field, or film sessions, Banks has always been proud of his work ethic.

It's helped build him into a Division I football player and a novice landscaper.

"My dad has a landscaping business and I work with him a couple days a week," said Banks, who will be headed to the University of Maine at the end of this month to start his next football chapter. "We usually work from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. They're long days, but I don't mind it. It keeps me on my feet and keeps me in shape."

While the landscaping side of Banks might be news to many, the football side was a weekly problem for opposing head coaches every week over the past four seasons, as the four-year varsity letter winner was undoubtedly one of the best players in the East Penn Conference his junior and senior seasons.

He leaves Becahi as the school's all-time leader with 68 career touchdowns and is third on the school's rushing list with 3,891 career yards.

He was two-time Pennsylvania 4A all-state selection, as a running back his junior year and defensive back his senior year, as well as garnering first team EPC selections both years at defensive back and second team honors at running back.

Banks, who also was apart of Becahi's wrestling and track programs the past four years, was one of the top athletes in District 11. His accolades on the field make him an easy decision to represent as Bethlehem Catholic's Male Athlete of the Year.

Being the best football player was something that Banks had coveted after coming into the program his freshman year from Easton. He started as a free safety his first season and then continued to be a mainstay on both sides of the ball throughout his four-year career.

"I always had a chip on my shoulder coming into Beca," Banks said. "I always felt like I needed to prove to people what I was capable of after coming into the program. I knew

Taliyah Medina went through it all

BY KATIE MCDONALD
kmcDonald@tnonline.com

The physical, emotional and spiritual course of the high school basketball career of Taliyah Medina, Bethlehem Press's Female Player of the Year from Bethlehem Catholic High School, goes like this: freshman year was magical, sophomore year was good enough, junior year was anything but good, and senior year was her coming out time.

"Definitely freshman year, winning the state championship was my favorite year at Beca because the competition was so great," Medina said. "Every single team had two or three great players. It was never a cakewalk, and there was never an easy game. We set the bar."

Although the Hawks won the district championship in Medina's sophomore year, they lost in the state quarterfinal, but Medina's junior year was only the beginning of a comeback for both her and the Hawks.

Medina tore her ACL well before the basketball season began and it appeared it would threaten the Hawks' future, but instead, it inspired it.

"That year wasn't all sunshine and rainbows," said Medina. "I had weak hips and that's the reason I tore my ACL in the first place. It takes a lot out of you, having to re-learn how to walk and run and not play for months."

There was also an emotional toll on Medina, even when she got back in the gym.

"I'm not making shots. I wish I never got hurt. Where would I be if I never got hurt," were the thoughts running through her head. And even though she was still a team member, not everyone outside the team saw it that way, and it was hurtful.

"But you can only think about striving to where you were before you got injured. Coming back, doing my best, overcoming that injury and that challenge in my life, I knew I could do it."

Medina was always present at practices and games that year despite her injury.

"I stayed on the sidelines, and it allowed me to see games from a different perspective," she said. "Men-

Coca-Cola Park to host local tournament finals

Local high school coaches, umpires and officials have organized a baseball and softball tournament to give senior players an opportunity to end their high school careers as best they can as COVID-19 continues to impact the Lehigh Valley and around the globe.

The Lehigh Valley IronPigs will be doing their part in hosting the semifinals and finals for each respective tournament at Coca-Cola Park.

“The IronPigs are honored to support seniors who have been affected greatly during this unprecedented time,” said IronPigs President and General Manager Kurt Landes.

“To have the opportunity to end their careers at Coca-Cola Park will be special and we are ‘hog-wild’ with the opportunity to support this tournament giving the kids one last swing for the fences. I’m equally excited to be hosting senior recognition ceremonies for both the boys and girls providing one final opportunity to showcase local seniors and their high school careers.”

The high school girls’ semifinals and finals are presented by Lehigh Valley Health Network, MATHESON, and Service Electric Cable Television and will be held on Thursday, July 16. Service Electric will be televising both semifinals and the championship game live from Coca-Cola Park.

“Our softball community is thrilled to have the opportunity to play at Coca-Cola Park,” said Freedom High School head softball coach Michele Laubach. “The amazing people from the IronPigs, Northwest Little League, Lehigh Valley high school softball coaches, and the local media have been incredible to work with to make this event come to fruition. It has been a lot of work to make this event happen and I appreciate all the good people I am surrounded by in the Lehigh Valley. It gives me great hope as we move forward and out of this pandemic.”

The first semifinal game will take place at 2:30 p.m. followed by the second semifinal game at 4:30 p.m. The senior players from each team will receive a special recognition at 6:30 p.m. with the championship game starting at 6:50 p.m.

The high school boys’ semifinals and finals are presented by St. Luke’s Health Network, MATHESON, and Service Electric Cable Television. The semifinals will be held on Sunday, Aug. 9 with the finals to be held on Monday, Aug. 10 at 5 p.m. Service Electric will be televising the finals on Monday, Aug. 10.

“When you think of Lehigh Valley baseball, the first thought that comes to my mind is the IronPigs,” said Assistant Director of Alumni Relations at DeSales University, Daniel Villanti. “The goal of our event has been to provide an absolute first-class and safe experience for the high school baseball players, especially the seniors class, and there is no better venue than Coca-Cola Park. I am truly grateful to our baseball community for coming together and bringing high school baseball back to the Lehigh Valley this August.”

Semifinal game times for Aug. 9 will be determined soon. The senior players will receive a special recognition between the two semifinal games on Aug. 9. The baseball finals on Aug. 10 will begin at 5 p.m.

The entire event will be facilitated using all up-to-date guidance from the Commonwealth of PA and the Allentown Health Bureau. Masks are required of patrons who enter Coca-Cola Park, except while sitting in their assigned seats. More information will follow soon for media availability as well as ticket and gate restrictions. Patrons who are invited to attend will not be charged admission.

tally, I got a lot stronger. Spiritually, I found myself praying a lot more for good results and my relationship with God got stronger.”

Perhaps those are some of the things that allowed Medina to be the Hawks’ biggest cheerleader that season.

“I remember when the girls played Lancaster Catholic, I was screaming at the top of my lungs. My head hurt the entire game. They lost, but I was so proud of them that day,” said Medina. “They hung with that team and proved so many people wrong, and I thought, wow, what if they win states, and they won states. It was bittersweet, but I was so happy for those girls.”

Medina was fortunate in that she still had her senior year to play, but no one could have seen a coronavirus about to cancel PIAA state playoffs when the Hawks were headed to the quarterfinals.

that if I stayed at Easton I could have started at running back right away, but I felt that Beca was just going to make me a better player and person. I came in right away, just looking to compete at the highest level with the rest of the guys.”

Banks walks away with three district championships during his football tenure, coming just shy of a sweep this past season when the Hawks lost to Pottsville 18-13 in the District 11 4A semifinals.

“That was definitely a bitter feeling,” he said. “I think we all knew we could have had that one.”

He also leaves with plenty fond memories, including his record-breaking, 99-yard TD run against Blue Mountain in last year’s or rebound, we’ll have different people to fill that role next year, but I’m pretty sure during the season I’ll be thinking, ‘Man, I miss Talayah right now.’”

Both father and daughter appreciated the opportunity to be coach and player together.

“As a dad, it was a dream to be able to coach my daughter, especially in her first year when the goal was to become a state champion. That was a magical year,” he said. “I’m not going to say it was always easy. We challenged each other, but my assistant coaches did a great job of conveying to her what I tried to.”

Medina leaves Becahi proud of a successful four-year girls’ basketball career.

“It’s been a crazy four years, and I’m proud of everything I’ve accomplished, but I haven’t done it alone. I did it with my teammates and coaches,” she said. “I just wanted to do good this year.”

district quarterfinals to become the schools all-time TD leader.

His favorite game, however, was during the 2017 state playoffs when the Hawks held off Selinsgrove for a 33-32 victory. Banks ran for 176 yards and two touchdowns on 10 carries. He dealt with an ankle injury for six weeks prior to the game and was methodically used in the contest, but that game always stands out as a special afternoon.

“I had a high ankle sprain and missed a lot of games that year,” Banks said, “but I knew my team needed me in that one. I know I made a difference and if it wasn’t for some of the plays I made, I’m not sure we would have won that game. That game always will mean a lot to me.”

As Banks looks back at his time at Beca, he relishes the moments of playing on Friday

Q & A ... with the ‘Canes Mia DelCorso

BY PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Mia DelCorso will be attending Lehigh University and majoring in Prospective Chemistry.

1. Now that the news of the spring season being over has had time to sink in, what are your thoughts or emotions about not being able to play your senior year?
“Although I had a feeling that our senior season might be canceled due to the pandemic, I was still in disbelief that it truly was over. It is beyond upsetting having your senior season being taken away from you. No matter how many days I’ve had to let this new reality sink in, I’m still broken up about it.”
2. What were you looking forward to the most this season?
“This season I was especially looking forward to leading my teammates and being around them the majority of the spring. I was also really looking forward to my senior season’s practices, fundraisers, games, and senior night.”
3. What activity do you find yourself doing the most during quarantine?
“During quarantine I [found] myself spending a lot of time with my family, working out, playing lacrosse, playing with my dogs, and baking.”
4. What do/did you miss most about normal life?
“I miss being able to see my friends all of the time. Although I do love spending time with my family, I also love spending time with my friends. I also miss having a normal life.”

5. If you had the choice to be stuck at home with any teammate(s) during this quarantine, who would they be and why?
“I’d be lucky enough to be stuck at home with any one of my teammates during this quarantine. They never fail to make me laugh and are all so fun to be around.”
6. Can you name your favorite movie, show or series you’ve watched over the past months?
“I’ve been watching a lot of baking shows like Cake Wars, Cupcake Wars, and Chopped. I’ve also watched Joker, the new series called Ozark and Brooklyn Nine-Nine.”
7. What’s the worst part about being stuck at home?
“I would say the hardest part about being home is the lack of structure in my life, but I shouldn’t complain. I’m extremely grateful I have to complain about is boredom. Many people have much more to deal with.”
8. What’s the first thing you want to do once this quarantine is over?
“The first thing I want to do once this quarantine is over would definitely be to spend the day with my friends. It’s crazy how much I miss everyone.”
9. Can you tell your favorite sports story about yourself, your team or your teammates over the years?
“My favorite sports story would be the way in which my confidence in myself grew with the help of some of the most important people in my life. In the beginning of my high school career I struggled a lot with having confidence in myself on and off the lacrosse field. I never thought I was capable of making a difference on the field. With the help of my father, my older sister, Jessica, and my coach, Mrs. Muller, I was eventually able to find confidence within myself junior year. I began to develop qualities of a leader on and off the field and I was finally able to make an impact during the game.”

A few questions we had to ask ourselves

After Cole Custer, who's next to break the seal?

GODSPEAK: I had my money on Tyler Reddick as the break-out rookie, so I'm sticking with my pick all the way to Victory Lane.

KEN'S CALL: Maybe Tyler Reddick or Bubba Wallace at Daytona or Talladega, but other than that, I don't see another first-time winner for a while. Then again, I didn't see Custer winning.

Which Bristol will we get at the All-Star Race?

GODSPEAK: The first two segments will be mild. The last two segments will be wild. This is a good race for drivers to distribute pent-up paybacks.

KEN'S CALL: I'm thinking chaotic Bristol. The guys haven't raced in front of fans in so long, it's bound to jack 'em up.

THROUGH THE GEARS

Busy, busy week of stock-car racing

By Godwin Kelly
godwin.kelly@news-jrnl.com

It's going to be a hectic week for NASCAR. Buckle up.

FIRST GEAR: This is one of those crazy catch-up weeks for the NASCAR Cup Series as it tries to sync up its schedule to end the regular season at Daytona International Speedway on Aug. 29.

Just three days after racing at Kentucky, the stock-car circus heads to Bristol Motor Speedway for Wednesday's All-Star Race, then pushes on to Texas Motor Speedway for a make-up race.

The All-Star Race should be interesting because NASCAR has abandoned its traditional race venue (Charlotte) and opted for the short-track madness of Bristol Motor Speedway.

This race will have a different look. The car numbers will be pushed to the rear quarter panel and the cars will carry glow lights under the body.

The race winner earns $1 million. "It is the All-Star Race. One million dollars!" driver Clint Bowyer said. "It is one of those things where you have been dreaming of the opportunity for a long time, the opportunity to get this All-Star Race to Bristol."

SECOND GEAR: Jimmie Johnson was in the thick of the battle for the win at Kentucky but was punted off the track by Brad Keselowski as both pushed for the checkered flag with six laps left in the race.

Johnson, who had to miss the race at Indianapolis after testing positive for COVID-19, has not won a race since 2017. He says this will be his last year as a full-time Cup Series driver, so his at-bats are dwindling.

Keselowski said he had a run on Johnson on a restart and Johnson tried to block him and there was contact.

"There was kind of unavoidable contact at that time," Keselowski said. "I hate that it ruined his day."

Johnson indicated he will look for Keselowski's rear bumper during the All-Star Race.

THIRD GEAR: Texas Motor Speedway is inviting race fans to come watch its race Sunday.

Spectator attendance varies from state to state. The races at Indy and Kentucky had no fans. Talladega let a limited number into the property. The All-Star Race at Bristol upped the fan ante to 30,000.

According to the TMS website, there is no spectator cap in place for the race.

"Texans are eager for sporting and entertainment events to return, and this is a great step towards that goal," said Texas Gov. Greg Abbott.

FOURTH GEAR: Rookie Cole Custer shocked the world when he emerged from a last-lap scrum to win the Cup Series race at Kentucky.

He became the ninth winner in 17 races staged to date.

And he threw a wrench into the Cup Series points standings. Custer is 20th in points, but the win guarantees him a playoff berth, leaving only seven slots available.

Jimmie Johnson, who is 15th in points, now sits on the points bubble with nine regular-season races left on the schedule.

QUESTIONS & ATTITUDE

Compelling questions ... and maybe a few actual answers

One-and-done for Cole Custer, or more to come this year?

Mr. Hunch suggests there's more burn-outs coming from the 22-year-old Cup Series rookie. Though just two weeks ago, nothing about his 2020 record pointed to Victory Lane approaching. Lack of practice time has to be part of the struggles for Custer and other youngsters. But then two weekends ago he finishes fifth at Indy, and a week later he wins, which means that fifth at Indy should've been our first sign. Second sign, actually.

What was the first sign?

The guy won seven races in the Xfinity Series last year. Sure, there are fewer Haves and a lot more Have Nots in that series, but Custer had some steady competition in 2019, yet won seven times. A guy with a nose for the checkers doesn't lose his sniffer when he moves up in class, and once he and the team put the pieces together to find the lead pack, you saw how brilliantly he zoomed to the front at the end of Kentucky.

Musikfest 5K goes virtual for 2020

Although ArtsQuest, the nonprofit that presents Musikfest, has had to reschedule a series of events due to the pandemic, the staff has found a way to keep its Musikfest 5K alive. By making the race virtual this year, it allows avid runners, as well as Musikfest supporters, to be a part of the unique event and exercise opportunity by simply online at www.musikfest.org/5k/ and making a small donation.

Everyone who signs up receives stylish Musikfest merchandise. Depending on the donation level, items include the cherished glow-in-the-dark Musikfest mug and the new Musikfest gaiter/face covering. All proceeds from the 5K will go to support Musikfest 2020.

Many may be curious as to where this virtual run will take place, but the best part is that it can be done anytime, anywhere. Whether participants decide to run on a local track, a treadmill or around their neighborhood, they can freely choose when and where to complete the 5K. Titles and 'prizes' will go to those who push for triumphs of The Best Official Time, Farthest Distance Ran, Fewest Bathroom Breaks During the Run and more.

Once signed up, participants will be provided with updates on where to share their accomplishments, strange stories and crazy outfits that deserve recognition. There is also the option to sign up as part of a team, with runners having the opportunity to participate with friends, family and co-workers.

The Musikfest virtual 5K is sponsored by Yuengling, Lehigh Valley Health Network, Highmark Blue Shield, Keystone Running Store and Aardvark Sports Shop. To sign up and compete for bragging rights as the fastest runner around, visit www.musikfest.org/5k/.

Musikfest 2020, presented by the nonprofit ArtsQuest, will take place July 31-Aug. 9. This year's festival will include 40 concerts shown via Musikfest.org as part of Virtual Musikfest, nearly 40 performances by bands live from the Service Electric TV studios and then shared via Musikfest.org; an on-site food and beverage experience at SteelStacks that will include at least 10 Musikfest favorite food vendors. Additional details on the festival, including possible in-person events and concerts at SteelStacks, will be announced throughout the summer.

hopes that the meeting could take place in person, per recommendation of solicitor James Kratz.

Although the virtual meetings are public, Kratz felt that waiting until an in-person meeting was most logical in order to allow as many community members as possible the chance to voice their opinions.

With the Northampton County "Hotel Tax Grant" deadline coming up July 17, the council approved the submission of a plan to use grant money for an extension of the Freemansburg Municipal Park parking lot with a 6-1 vote, with councilman Justin LaBar as the only no.

The plan will need to be reviewed by Northampton County and is not guaranteed to be approved.

Itterly also proposed a floorplan and virtual drawing of a potential new public works garage, which was passed 4-3. The approval, however, was not for the construction of the garage but of just the idea itself.

Itterly cited concerns that the old garage was severely decaying and said that if anyone on the board to come down and look at it, they would feel that it is in need of a repair.

"If we don't take action in the next couple of years, I think eventually it is going to be a total teardown," Itterly said.

Several of the colored rocks are hidden in crevices of trees but are bright enough for passing walkers to see them.

Of all the colored rocks out there, this one seemed to be the most unique showing a face with some hair.

This one was put out in time for Easter. Although Easter was not the same this year, the rocks help to put a smile on faces of those taking a walk along the sidewalks.

I also love being the president of our National Honor Society where I have introduced a project to fundraise money to build a well in an underserved part of the world that does not have easy access to clean water.

Next steps: I am planning on earning my undergraduate degree in neuroscience or microbiology. After that I am planning on attending medical school to earn my medical degree.

Career goals: To become a cardiovascular surgeon

Heroes: My parents are my heroes because of their sacrifices to get me to where I am currently.

Hobbies: Some of my hobbies are reading, hanging out with and cooking with my friends.

Current job(s): Occasionally babysitting

Volunteer/community work: I have volunteered over 150 hours at St. Luke's University Hospital, as well as fundraised over $2,000 to build a well in Cameroon, Africa.

Allentown Art Museum sets new portrait unveiling date

Rembrandt van Rijn's "Portrait of a Young Woman" (1632, oil on oak panel, Samuel H. Kress Collection, 1961, 35 1/8 in. x 28 3/4 in. x 5 7/8 in.) returned home Feb. 3 to the Allentown Art Museum after two years of research and restoration at the Conservation Center, Institute of Fine Arts, New York University, New York City.

The restored Rembrandt painting was to have gone on display to the public in June at the Allentown Art Museum.

However, the Allentown Art Museum closed to the public

March 14 because of the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic shutdown.

Chris Potash, Allentown Art Museum Manager of Marketing and Public Relations, in a March 25 press release, stated that the Museum "will remain closed until further notice. The date of the Museum's reopening will be determined when conditions allow."

The Museum's annual fundraising Gala, scheduled for April 4, was canceled, as were dozens of programs, events and talks.

In a July 6 email response to a query from The Press, Potash says that he will make an announcement as soon as possible as to when the Museum will be reopening.

Meanwhile, the Museum launched #AAMATHOME, to "bring the Allentown Art Museum into your home with at-home art activities, educational videos, online tours and more."

The restored and reframed Rembrandt, now safely nestled in the Museum's vault, is scheduled to go on display to the public Sept. 20, says Potash, in the Museum's Kress Gallery.

"This is where we display our European, Renaissance and Baroque art. The majority of it is from the Samuel H. Kress Collection which was a significant collection that contributed to the founding and professionalization of this institution in the early

2020 Allentown Fair, Das Awkscht Fescht join canceled events

BY PAUL WILLISTEIN
pwillistein@tponline.com

The coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic has wiped out yet another 2020 entertainment staple: funnel cakes and all that goes with it at the granddaddy of events in the Lehigh Valley, The Great Allentown Fair, Sept. 1-7.

It's only the third time that the Fair has been canceled in its 169-year history.

The last time the Fair was canceled was in 1917 and 1918 when the 48-acre Allentown Fairgrounds became a staging area and training camp, known as Camp Crane, for the United States Army Ambulance Service during World War I.

Beverly Gruber, president of the nonprofit Lehigh County Agricultural Society that owns and operates the Great Allentown Fair and its base of operations, the Allentown Fairgrounds, bounded by Liberty, Chew and 17th streets in Allentown's West End Theatre District, announced in an 8:30 a.m. July 8 press release that the 2020 edition of The Great Allentown Fair, Sept. 1-7, is canceled.

Gruber said the decision to cancel the Fair was the unanimous decision of the Lehigh County Agricultural Society executive committee.

This year's Grandstand concert headliners are postponed until next year. Toby Keith, with opening acts Matt Stell and Laine Hardy, is rescheduled to Sept. 2, 2021, and Carrie Underwood, is rescheduled to Sept. 3, 2021.

Tickets purchased for the Grandstand concerts will be honored in 2021. Online ticket buyers will be notified concerning their tickets. An announcement about the reopening of the Fair's box office is expected soon, according to Fair officials.

The other 2020 Fair headliner, 5 Seconds of Summer, canceled its concert.

Gruber said the Agricultural Society committee had proceeded cautiously with Fair planning since March, but it became apparent that staging the seven-day event ending on Labor Day "as it is meant to be, with thousands of people enjoying its exciting atmosphere, is no longer feasible.

"We feel it's best to work toward a celebratory 2021 Fair that we will strive to make better than ever," said Gruber.

"We took into account all aspects that go into producing a safe premier event and ultimately the health and welfare of the thousands of local, out-of-town and out-of-state fairgoers, exhibitors, vendors and entertainers was paramount in our decision," Gruber said.

The Fair, one of Pennsylvania's oldest and largest events, started in 1852 as a community celebration of agricultural achievements with entertainment and amusements of the day added. It evolved into a nationally-renowned exposition, with a crowded midway of rides and games, long avenues of eateries, thousands of farm, garden and home exhibits judged and on display and a variety of entertainment venues including its 10,500-seat Grandstand featuring the biggest acts.

According to Fair officials, in 1916 and 1941, the Allentown Fair did not allow children under the ages of 16 to enter the grounds during the Fair to protect them from the Polio epidemic. The 2021 Great Allentown Fair is scheduled for Aug. 31 - Sept. 6.

The COVID-19 pandemic also provided the knockout punch to cancel that trifecta of tourism in the Lehigh Valley the first weekend in August: the 57th annual Das Awkscht Fescht, July 31 - Aug. 2, Macungie Memorial Park; 44rd annual DCI East Drum & Bugle Corps Championship, July 31 - Aug. 2, J. Birney Crum Stadium, Allentown, and 37th annual Musikfest, July 31 - Aug. 9, Bethlehem.

An announcement on the Das Awkscht Fescht website stated:

"It's with heavy hearts that we make the announcement that this year's Fescht has been cancelled.

"It's only after careful consideration and much debate that we have concluded that this decision is the best way to go, in the interest of safety and well-being of our many visitors, participants, vendors and volunteers that make the Fescht possible.

"This cancellation includes the Indoor Toy Show and Outdoor Toy Town.

"We're disappointed as well, but rest assured, we will see you in 2021."

The featured automobile marque for the 2020 Das Awkscht Fescht was to have been Cadillac and LaSalle.

Officials of ArtsQuest, which presents the 10-day music and food extravaganza that attracts an estimated 1 million to the south side, downtown and historic industrial area of Bethlehem, announced that the Wind Creek Steel Stage concert headliners were postponed with one exception, which was a cancellation.

Musikfest joins other Lehigh Valley and national events to go virtual.

According to a June 10 press conference, more than 80 performers and 30 partners will join with ArtsQuest "to keep the music alive and free for the community during Musikfest 2020."

"Virtual Musikfest" will stream 40 concerts live on Musikfest.org. Also, 40 concerts will be broadcast live from Service Electric TV studios.

Food and beverage stands will be set up during Musikfest at SteelStacks with a minimum of 10 Musikfest food vendors.

The Great Allentown Fair joins the parade of pandemic postponements and cancellations in the Lehigh Valley region that includes the 71st annual Kutztown Folk Festival; Levitt Pavilion concerts at SteelStacks, Tunes at Twilight, Godfrey Daniels concerts, 17th annual SouthSide Film Festival; 113th Bethlehem Bach Festival, and Pennsylvania Playhouse season, all Bethlehem; Civic Theatre of Allentown season and film programs, Pride Fest, Blues Brews & Barbecue Festival, Mayfair, Baum School of Art in-person auction, Miller Symphony Hall concerts,

Bach Choir postpones Gala with Yo-Yo Ma

pwilistein@tnonline.com

The Bach Choir of Bethlehem is postponing its annual fundraiser and gala featuring internationally-renowned cellist Yo-Yo Ma.

"Truth, Trust and Service: How Culture Connects Us: Yo-Yo Ma" was to have been presented at 7 p.m. Oct. 16, Parkland High School, 2700 N. Cedar Crest Boulevard, Allentown.

"With profound sadness, coupled with a responsibility for the safety and health of everyone involved, The Bach Choir of Bethlehem announces that the COVID-19 pandemic has resulted in a postponement of this singular event, and the appearance of Yo-Yo Ma in our community," stated a July 7 press release from the Choir.

"After due consideration of all of the circumstances, we remain fully committed to bringing this significant artist and very relevant program to the Lehigh Valley when we are able, and will announce a rescheduled date as soon as it is confirmed," the July 7 press release stated.

The event was "to acknowledge and celebrate Artistic Director and Conductor Greg Funfgeld's final season with The Bach Choir in 2020-21," according to a Feb. 24 press release that had announced the annual fundraiser and gala.

"The event will be a catalyst for an ongoing Lehigh Valley wide conversation about how culture connects us," stated the Feb. 24 announcement.

"Cellist Yo-Yo Ma will explore the role culture can play in helping us to imagine and build a better future, drawing on examples from his own life as a musician and citizen.

"Yo-Yo's presentation is rooted in the belief that at a moment when our world is challenged by the pace of change and the divisions it can create, the values that culture promotes, truth, trust, and service, are essential to our survival," the Feb. 24 press release stated.

According to the July 7 press release from the Choir: "Our goal for this program remains: To combine a pinnacle of musical performance, a deep connection to Bach, and an inspiring message of 'truth, trust and service' that will act as a catalyst for bringing together diverse people of all ages and cultures throughout the Lehigh Valley to experience the music, engage in dialogue on the message, and take creative action."

"On behalf of the Bach Choir of Bethlehem, Greg Funfgeld is honored to welcome Yo-Yo Ma back to the Lehigh Valley," the Feb. 24 press release stated.

"Mr. Ma performed Bach's 'Cello Suites' at The Bach Choir's Centennial celebration in 1998. His return this year to present his program, 'Truth, Trust and Service: How Culture Connects Us,' will be among the highlights of Artistic Director Funfgeld's final season," according to the Feb. 24 press release.

Said Funfgeld in the Feb. 24 press release: "To welcome Yo-Yo Ma back to the Lehigh Valley is a rare privilege and precious opportunity."

"Yo-Yo Ma's artistry is recognized and admired around the world. From 'Sesame Street' to great concert halls everywhere, he has touched lives and inspired countless souls," said Funfgeld.

"Beyond his status as one of the world's greatest artists, Yo-Yo is a profoundly deep thinker. His life, music-making, collaborations with outstanding artists in every discipline, and his interaction with people in every corner of the globe have given him extraordinary insight and wisdom, all of which he will share with us in this incredible program," Funfgeld said.

"This is a singular event, not-to-be missed. Join us for a life-changing, life-enriching, and life-affirming experience," said Funfgeld in the Feb. 24 press release.

'60s," says exhibition curator Elaine Mehalakes, Allentown Art Museum vice president of curatorial affairs.

"Portrait of a Young Woman," a gift from the Kress Foundation in 1961, will be the focal point in the Kress Gallery when it is unveiled and displayed with Rembrandt prints.

"It will really be a celebration of this painting and going in depth about its history, its recent journey, the changes that have happened, and the new attention that has come to it," says Mehalakes.

Several layers of varnish and additional overpainting applied to the painting during past centuries by conservators obscured Rembrandt's telltale delicate brushwork. Researchers from the Rembrandt Research Project examined the work in the 1970s and attributed it to "Studio of Rembrandt."

The varnish had

Shan Kuang, assistant conservator and research scholar in the Samuel H. Kress Program in Paintings Conservation, in New York City, with Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Young Woman."

dulled the colors, details and brushstrokes. The restored painting reveals colors that are truer to what the painting looked like when first painted.

After the painting was cleaned and conserved by Shan Kuang, assistant conservator and research scholar in the Samuel H. Kress Program in Paintings Conservation, experts now believe it was painted by Rembrandt himself, and not by an assistant.

Cherryville, Lehigh Township, born philanthropist Samuel H. Kress (1863-1955) amassed an impressive collection of artwork, then founded the Kress Foundation to distribute the works to the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. and to several museum galleries in smaller cities, including Allentown.

lead sponsors of the event, The Dexter F. & Dorothy H. Baker Foundation and John & Carol Daniel, as well as other sponsors, Bach Choir Executive Director Bridget George announced in the Feb. 24 press release that The Bach Choir was to give away 300 event tickets to students in diverse communities throughout the Lehigh Valley as well as to 60 community leaders in the fields of arts, culture, health, education and the environment.

Said George in the Feb. 24 press release, "A community engagement committee will involve these selected students and community leaders in pre- and post-event activities in the weeks leading up to and following the event."

"The plan is for Yo-Yo Ma's presence with us on October 16 to have a significant and broad impact on a continuing Lehigh Valley conversation about the role of the arts and culture in connecting us. The follow-up will include an on-line exhibition of writing, artwork and video clips inspired by Yo-Yo Ma's presentation," George said in the Feb. 24 press release.

The July 7 press release noted, in addition to the lead sponsors of the event, The Dexter F. & Dorothy H. Baker Foundation, John & Carol Daniel, that of lead sponsor, the Air Products Foundation.

In August 2018, Yo-Yo

Ma set out to perform Johann Sebastian Bach's six suites for solo cello in one sitting in 36 locations around the world.

He established Silkroad, a collective of artists from around the world who create music that engages their many traditions.

Yo-Yo Ma was born in 1955 to Chinese parents living in Paris. He began to study the cello with his father at age four and three years later moved with his family to New York City, where he continued his cello studies with Leonard Rose at the Juilliard School.

He graduated from Harvard University with a degree in anthropology in 1976.

Yo-Yo Ma has received numerous awards, including the Avery Fisher Prize (1978), the Glenn Gould Prize (1999), the National Medal of the Arts (2001), the Dan David Prize (2006), the World Economic Forum's Crystal Award (2008), the Presidential Medal of Freedom (2010), Kennedy Center Honors (2011), the Polar Music Prize (2012) and the J. Paul Getty Medal Award (2016). He has performed for eight American presidents.

Yo-Yo Ma and his wife have two children.

He plays three instruments, a 2003 instrument made by Moes & Moes, a 1733 Montagnana cello from Venice, and a 1712 Davidoff Stradivarius.

Information about the extraordinary event will be posted as it becomes confirmed online at www.bach.org topher Caruso, and Jennifer Lowery).

The works are arranged in three rows of three framed prints each.

"I have been working seasonally with common fly larva," says Lukas as he described how he created "Anatomy," the center print of the grouping.

"It's a way of making a painting or a drawing that can use one line or can use millions of lines that have an intention that's different than a human intention," he adds.

The imagery for the screenprint was created by larvae dragging ink across glass as part of the process.

"My mom is still really an important part of who I am and what I do," says Lukas, "She was very involved with fiber arts." He says that patterns and textures from his mother's projects influenced his abstract work.

Durham Press founder Jean-Paul Russell talks about how he went to work for Rupert Smith, Andy Warhol's printer, in New York City, after graduating high school in New Hope.

"It was a remarkable experience," the master printer said of being able to learn firsthand about the international contemporary art world," says Russell.

partner, Ann Marshall.

Among the groundbreaking artists celebrating their connection to Durham Press in the retrospective exhibit at the Museum are Hurvin Anderson, Polly Apfelbaum, Roland Fischer, Chitra Ganesh, John Giorno, Jacob Hashimoto, Michael Heizer, Beatriz Milhazes, James Nares, Mickalene Thomas and Ray Charles White.

The 12 artists worked with Durham Press in developing unique methods and combinations of technologies to suit each project.

An example of this is Heizer's "Dragged Mass" (2018, etching with aquatint and dry point, Edition 35, Printers: Jean-Paul Russell, Aurora McFee, Christopher Caruso, Hudson Hatfield, Beth Sheehan, Curt Weihz, and Neil Curry).

During the printmaking process, the artist marked the metal plate by having a bulldozer drive over it.

The exhibition is supported by the County of Lehigh, Amaranth Foundation, Joan Miller Moran, Francine Bishop Good and David Horvitz, SOTA (Society of the Arts), Nancy Light, William and Mary Ann Heydt, and Tony and Nancy Odorski.

Additional support is provided by the Harry

C. Trexler Trust, Julius and Kathryn Hommer Foundation, Century Fund, Bernard and Audrey Berman Foundation, Leon C. and June W. Holt Endowment, Pennsylvania Council on the Arts, National Endowment for the Arts, and Friends of the Museum.

'Sustainable Lehigh Valley' lists alternatives

BY DAVE HOWELL
Special to The Press

The print version of "Sustainable Lehigh Valley" was not ready in time for Earth Day, April 22.

It's ironic, in a way. Fewer trees chopped down for the paper product. Less to recycle.

Because of the coronavirus shutdown, the print edition of the Spring 2020 "Sustainable Lehigh Valley" was delayed. The print version is expected to be available after the shutdown ends.

"Sustainable Lehigh Valley" is a directory of nonprofit organizations and businesses who promote sustainable environmental practices.

According to the United Nations World Commission on Environment and Development, sustainable development is "development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs."

The 17th issue of the directory lists 13 restaurants and cafes and more than 100 nonprofit organizations, colleges and universities and watershed associations.

Peter Crownfield, Internship Coordi-

inator of the Alliance for Sustainable Communities Lehigh Valley, says sustainability is "a vision towards a regenerative society, not only sustainable, without exhausting present and future resources."

The Alliance's vision statement looks for "a future characterized by a self-healing environment, honorable and ethical behavior, self-determination, and secure freedoms for a diverse people."

Crownfield says the directory lists "groups moving towards sustainability, to change both the system and the current situation."

Until 2011, the publication was known as Wganizations Promoting Sustainable Communities. The print run has increased to 6,000 copies. This year, for the first time, there are plans to put out a second edition in the fall.

Crownfield says the next edition will draw more attention to writing and art.

The 2020 online edition begins with "Voices of the Valley," a collection of essays and a poem. The essays deal with agriculture, maintaining cultural identity, criminal justice reform, environmental solutions, energy efficiency, and the food system. It includes a call for submissions of essays, poetry, short stories, drawings and photographs.

Last year, Alliance interns released a report, "Climate Action Planning for the Lehigh Valley," which developed guidelines intended for municipalities to create environmentally-sustainable communities.

Crownfield developed a website, "Let's Talk About Climate," at teach-climate.net, that includes teaching guides and resources for educators.

One of the Alliance's goals is "bringing organizations and individuals together and magnifying voices of individual groups," Crownfield says.

"Sustainability is a public health problem, not an environmental one. The World Health Organization says climate change will become the No. 1 one health issue in the coming years," said Crownfield.

TCM: movie-lover's heaven

"That's the press, baby. And there's nothing you can do about it."
-Humphrey Bogart
"Deadline U.S.A."
(1952)

It was August, maybe 13 years ago when I discovered TCM nestled among the hundreds, if not thousands, of channels on Cable TV.

I was late to the game. TCM has its 26th anniversary this year.

Imagine if you could go to the movies all the time in the comfort of your living room.

No, not Netflix, Amazon Prime, Disney+, Apple TV, Hulu or the myriad of streaming services that can add up to a princely sum.

TCM arrives with your Cable TV subscription.

It's Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in lavish musicals. It's Dick Powell in taut crime thrillers. It's James Cagney in a gangster film.

It's a movie-lover's heaven. It's like I died and went to the balcony.

Imagine if you had your own movie curator. That's what TCM is. The July TCM "Special Theme" is "Directed by John Ford," Fridays, including "The Grapes of Wrath" (1940), July 17; "The Battle of Midway" (1942), July 24, and "How the West Was Won" (1962), July 31.

What pulled me in that August more than a decade ago were the movies of Cary Grant. August on TCM is "Summer Under the Stars," whereby movies of an actor are shown for 24 hours on each day of the month. It's a one-day, one-star film festival.

"North by Northwest" (1959), stars Grant stars as Roger Thornhill opposite Eva Marie Saint as Eve Kendall when they end up hanging by a nose from Mt. Rushmore in a delightful suspense thriller from director Alfred Hitchcock.

The Cary Grant catalogue for "Summer Under the Stars" might travel from there to director George Cukor's fizzy comedy, "The Philadelphia Story" (1940), with Grant as C.K. Dexter Haven, opposite Katharine Hepburn as Tracy Lord and James Stewart as Macaulay Connor, in a wedding's eve tête-à-tête that is anything but private when a celebrity magazine reporter and photographer show up.

Or you may follow Cary Grant as Nickie Ferrante and Deborah Kerr as Terry McKay as star-crossed lovers in "An Affair To Remember" (1957), with director Leo McCarey setting just the right tone that will start the tears flowing no matter how often you've seen the film.

TCM connects the dots of cinema. "An Affair to Remember" inevitably leads to "Sleepless in Seattle" (1993), in which Tom Hanks as Sam Baldwin meets Meg Ryan as Annie Reed in a scene and storyline that includes references to the Cary Grant-Deborah Kerr classic. And the tears will start flowing.

"The Philadelphia Story" leads to "High Society" (1956), a musical remake of the 1940 comedy starring Grace Kelly as Tracy Lord, Bing Crosby C.K. Dexter-Haven and Frank Sinatra as Mike Connor, with some delightful warbling by Der Bingle, Old Blue Eyes and the future Princess Grace on Cole Porter classics, including "True Love," "Well, Did You Evah!" and "You're Sensational."

TCM, as in Turner Classic Movies, was the result of Ted Turner purchasing the pre-1986 film library of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. To this were added pre-1950 Warner Bros. movies and RKO Pictures movies. TCM, "Pete Smith Specialties" and "TCM Extras," which may include behind-the-scenes, tributes or thematic pieces.

The superbly-written tributes are especially touching and sometimes unexpected: Paul Newman about Elizabeth Taylor, George Kennedy about James Stewart, Tony Curtis about Cary Grant, and Dennis Hopper about director Nicholas Ray.

Programming runs the gamut, from "TCM Underground," a showcase of cult films, to "31 Days of Oscar," the annual retrospective of Oscar-winning and Oscar-nominated movies.

"The Essentials," 8 p.m. Saturday, has TCM host Ben Mankiewicz with a cohost, such as Brad Bird (director, "The Incredibles," 2004; "Mission: Impossible: Ghost

In the years since the 2017 death of TCM host Robert Osborne, who was with TCM since its inception, several hosts, including Mankiewicz, who joined TCM in 2003 as its second host, have grown comfortably and authoritatively in their roles.

Jacqueline Stewart, a professor of cinema and media studies at the University of Chicago, was named host in fall 2019 of "Silent Sunday Nights," TCM's silent film series, midnight Sundays. Stewart is TCM's first African-American host.

Eddie Muller, founder and president of the Film Noir Foundation, hosts "Noir Alley," TCM's film noir series, midnight Saturdays and 10 a.m. Sundays.

Dave Karger, a correspondent for NBC's "Today Show" and former senior editor, Entertainment Weekly magazine, for 17 years, is a TCM Saturday daytime host.

Alicia Malone, author of "Backwards and in Heels" (2017), about the history of women in Hollywood, is a TCM Sunday and Tuesday host and hosts "TCM Imports," a foreign film series, Sunday nights.

The July "Star of the Month" is Tony Curtis, Mondays, including "Spartacus" (1960), July 20, and "Sex and the Single Girl" (1964), July 27.

The July "TCM Spotlight" is "Feel Good Films," with a full lineup Wednesdays, including "Meet Me in St. Louis" (1944), starring Judy Garland, July 15, "The Shop Around the Corner" (1940), starring James Stewart, July 22, and "Guys and Dolls" (1955), starring Marlon Brando and Frank Sinatra, July 29.

TCM has branched out into many endeavorors, including: Classic Film Festival, launched in 2010 with the April 16-19, 2020, festival canceled because of the coronavirus pandemic (a "Special Home Edition" was substituted); TCM Backlot, a fee-based fan club; Shop TCM, with books, movies and movie-related items for sale, and TCM "Now Playing" Newsletter (free to your email).

Mankiewicz launched the TCM original podcast in April 2020, "The Plot Thickens," in which he interviews director Peter Bogdanovich ("The Last Picture Show," "Paper Moon"). There are more on the TCM website.

TCM was a happy find on a long-ago August night.

In the time of the coronavirus, TCM has become the go-to place for comfort cinema.

Baby shower needs to be online or drive-by

Dear Jacquelyn,
I am in the process of planning a baby shower for my daughter. What are some ways to organize and celebrate a baby shower during social distancing?

RESPECTFULLY YOURS

By Jacquelyn Youst

ing baby shower. You have options, but you need to get creative.

Some families are moving their showers online and others are trying out drive-by parades. Both offer a level of closeness that allows family and friends to participate while protecting everyone's health, especially the mom-to-be.

As with any special event, a baby shower requires lots of preplanning.

Proper invitations should be sent. Be sure to mention on the invitation where she's registered. Be sure to order plenty of decorations. You can mail a pretty backdrop to the expectant mother to decorate the wall behind her while she open gifts. Decorations are an easy way to make the day festive for those that are watching online.

If you decide to have a drive by shower, decorate cars with posters and balloons for extra fun. As with a traditional baby shower, gifts are always welcome. Loved ones can mail gifts ahead of time for the new mother to open during a virtual party.

Families are prioritizing health and safety, but that doesn't mean parents-to-be can't have memorable baby showers.

Celebrations will continue to look quite a bit different for a while, but there is a silver lining. We are becoming very creative and developing new ways of celebrating life's special moments.

Respectfully Yours,
Jacquelyn

Printer's ink in my blood

The day I was hired for my first full-time newspaper job was one of the most exciting days of my life.

I was so excited that I ran all the way home in high heels. I was also wearing little white gloves and a floppy little hat, so that will tell you how long ago it was.

When I waited to be interviewed I was intimidated by another applicant who had her master's degree in journalism.

But I had one thing she didn't have—a book full of my published newspaper stories. Writing those columns while I was still in high school didn't pay much, but it paved the way for landing my first reporter's job on our weekly newspaper.

At the time, so long ago, women weren't being hired for newspaper jobs, unless it was as a society reporter.

During my interview the publisher asked me what I would do if there were a fire on Bunker Hill—the steep mountain at the end of town. I told him I would probably be the first one there because I grew up playing on that mountain. He hired me on the spot.

While I loved everything I did for that newspaper, a favorite time at work was every Thursday when the printing press ran off the week's edition.

I loved the sound of that printing press so much and the smell of printer ink that I volunteered to work on Thursday stuffing inserts, even though it wasn't part of my job.

I remember telling everyone printer's ink was my favorite perfume.

I was strictly a reporter and columnist, but there was an infamous time when I felt compelled to lie about that.

When I was out dancing with my girlfriends, one fellow who liked to tell everyone how rich he was kept asking me to dance.

The guy was so braggadocious that I was sure if one looked up the word "pretentious" in the dictionary his photo would be there.

After he bragged to us about his rich family, he asked what I did for a living.

That's when I lied. I told him I was a newspaper carrier. He didn't believe me so I made the story bigger by telling him I delivered the paper each week to his parents' furniture store.

It was fun bribing the real newspaper carrier, slinging a news bag over my shoulder and walking into the furniture store where the boss' son was waiting.

If he bothered to read the paper he would have seen my photo and column. But he didn't. Instead his face looked like he stepped in dog dirt when he looked at me. To him, I was now far beneath his social status.

I met so many incredible people during my journalism career. He wasn't one.

I had so much fun each day I thought I should have been paying to work there instead of the other way around.

After I moved to another part of the state and started working for the Times News, that job was even more rewarding. Bosses and co-workers were terrific, adding to the enjoyment.

I also liked the fact that the pressroom was beneath our editorial offices because I got to hear the press run every day.

I became great buddies with Lenny, our Times News press foreman, after he came to visit while I was home recovering from neurosurgery. He gave me a pink bubble gum cigar to celebrate the birth of his third child.

Lenny and his wife, RoseAnn, became close friends with my husband and me. Once, when Len's wife asked me what Len and I had in common, I told her we both spoke an obscure language—newspapereze.

We still do. Whenever they come to visit me in Florida, Len and I will lapse into speaking newspapereze as we talk about what's going on in the industry we both love.

The other day The Wall Street Journal ran an article called "Requiem for the Printing Press."

Written by syndicated columnist Bob Greene, it told how printing presses are disappearing from the scene as many papers close and others contract their printing to distant places.

There aren't too many people who love hearing the roar of the printing press, at least not like there used to be.

Like me, Bob Greene loved hearing the presses run.

"When those presses in a newspaper building would start up the reporters and editors upstairs could feel it in their feet. The vibrations from the presses would shoot up through their shoes. It was glorious, part of the romance of newspapering," Greene wrote.

I called my friend Lenny to talk about the article.

Now the Times News plant manager, he has more than 50 years experience running presses.

Len said today's printing presses are not like the ones of old. They no longer sound like a big steam engine because smaller motors and modifications result in a much quieter press.

Lenny also explained there are no longer stuffers adding the inserts to each paper because everything is automated.

I may never hear another printing press, but I'll always be grateful for the memory of hearing the heavy music that was the rumbling of the press.

And when you're young and filled with the glamour of working for a newspaper, getting smeared with printer's ink is just part of the experience.

Limiting teens' late-night phone use debated

Q. Do any of you have advice about bedtime for teens? I work and have to go to bed between 10 and 11 p.m. to be functional the next morning. My 13- and 16-year-olds refuse to go to bed that early in the summer. If I don't control the situation, they will stay up on their devices all night long. We've tried to shut down the Wi-Fi, but they turn their devices into hotspots. We've tried to shut down all apps on phones, but they figure out workarounds. I feel like the parent of a newborn again with all of the middle of the night checks.

At first there were responses from the panel about the teens' behavior.

Panelist Wanda Mercado-Arroyo said, "There need to be ground rules about bedtime and use of devices as long as the teens are living under their parents' roof."

Panelist Denise Continenza said the teens should be given chores

PROJECT

By Carole Gorney

to do so if they sleep all day and don't get their work done, there will be consequences.

"There are rules to living in a house," panelist Pam Wallace agreed, but she also said, "The parents are trying to install rules now and it's too late."

Two basic approaches to dealing with the teens were presented by panelists Mike Daniels and Chad Stefanyak.

"You can try to limit phone time, take the phones away or get service disconnected," Daniels said, "but I never recommend taking a child's phone away because it becomes a fight to the death."

Stefanyak added, "This is normal teenage behavior, and power struggles are a waste of effort."

The second alternative would be to take a more realistic and positive approach.

"Parents need to acknowledge that teens control their own behavior," Daniels said. "Tell them the consequences of what they are doing, provide information and deal with whatever decisions they make without becoming emotional."

"They are teenagers trying to figure out the world and making mistakes, but if the parents get angry, the learning opportunity gets lost in the conflict," said Daniels.

Stefanyak clarified, "We're not saying give up and let the teenagers do whatever they want, but what the parents are doing isn't working."

"This isn't about cell phones or sleep. It's about parents needing to realize that their parenting needs to grow with their kids. It is no longer adequate to just say, 'Do it because I say so,'" said Stefanyak.

This week's panel: Pam Wallace, program coordinator, Project Child, a program of Valley Youth House; Mike Daniels, LCSW, Psychotherapist, Denise Continenza, extension educator; Wanda Mercado-Arroyo, educator and former school administrator; and Chad Stefanyak, school counselor.

Medical family tree, genetic testing, fingernails

Q. What exactly is a medical family tree and is it worth doing?

A medical family tree is like the ones genealogists prepare, but it includes all the maladies suffered by members of the family. A medical tree can reveal patterns and help everyone in a family choose medical tests.

Many of the causes of our illnesses are inherited from our ancestors. Almost one-third of known diseases have family links. These include colon cancer, heart disease, alcoholism and high blood pressure.

The following is important information about each family member, living and dead, that should be included in a health history:

1. Birth and death dates
2. Cause of death
3. All medical conditions with dates and outcomes. Include anything outside the norm, not just serious diseases. Don't forget problems such as allergies, vision and hearing difficulties.

HEALTHY GEEZER

By Fred Cicetti
fred@healthygeez.com

4. Birth defects
5. Mental health problems

6. Lifestyle description. This would include information about smoking, drinking, diet, obesity and exercise.

7. Racial and ethnic background. Some medical conditions are more common in certain groups of people.

Q. Is genetic testing dangerous?

I don't know if I would call it dangerous, but it can be upsetting if you find a medical problem in your DNA.

DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid, is in the genes you get from your parents. DNA guides the cells in your body. If your DNA contains a mutation, you could develop a medical condition.

A test can reveal mutations that raise the risk of developing a disease. Positive results for certain diseases can induce people to take preventive action, such as surgical removal of endangered organs.

Genetic testing should be viewed as a fallible tool. A positive result for a mutation doesn't mean you'll get a disease. And a negative result doesn't mean you are immune.

Multiple mutations can cause a disease. Multiple genes can be responsible for a single disease.

There are gene changes that develop without any link to your ancestors; they happen because you smoke or get too much sun or sometimes for no known reason.

Q. Can you diagnose disease by looking at someone's fingernails?

The condition of your fingernails can tell medical professionals a lot about your health. Most doctors include a nail examination during a physical checkup. Common problems that produce symptoms in the fingernails are the following:

- * White nails - liver diseases
- * Thick, pitted nails - psoriasis
- * Nails that are half-pink and half-white - kidney diseases
- * Red nail beds - heart conditions
- * Thick, yellow nails - lung diseases
- * Pale or concave nail beds - anemia
- * Light yellow nails, with a slight blush at the base - diabetes
