Daddona got slimed

Maybe it's some personal vendetta. Or maybe it's just crankiness brought on by this snowy winter. Or maybe it's just a case of journalistic PMS.

Whatever the cause, former Allentown mayor Joseph Daddona has fallen from grace with Woody Allenlike speed.

The vehicle for his rapid descent was his city's newspaper — The Morning Call.

An aside here: Regular readers of The Bethlehem Star have in the past few weeks seen a lot of critical comments here regarding The Call. Don't read this as some sort of campaign on our part to smear a competitor.

It's not. I believe the Valley's two daily newspapers employ some very fine journalists. The Bethlehem Star certainly is not intended at this point to supplant the news coverage of either newspaper.

But I also think the management of the Valley's daily newspapers lack vision.

And, in the case of the Call, the largest, most muscular newspaper in the Valley, I see a newspaper managed by a team of arrogant, complacent beancounters with a great appetite for the Valley's advertising money and only token interest in its progress.

The Call is the most widely circulated daily newspaper in Bethlehem. It is terrifically powerful.

I take no delight in kicking them in the chops, but I certainly will when I think they deserve it.

Do they deserve it in the case of Mr. Daddona? Consider this:

For 16 years he served his city with dignity, good humor and diligence.

Gerald Scharf is editor of The Bethlehem Star

Like any politician — like any human being — he had his flaws. But his integrity and his work ethic were never questioned.

As he left office, he took a bonus of $13,000 for unused vacation and sickness benefits, and a pension of $2,700 a month.

That's a comfortable retirement, but it certainly doesn't qualify Mr. Daddona as a rich man.

The point of it all, a Call editorial said sanctimoniously, is that Mr. Daddona orchestrated his parting gifts from the city.

In addition, Mr. Daddona took a VCR from his office.

Mr. Daddona explained that the VCR had been a personal gift to him. But, when questioned about it, he returned it nonetheless.

So, over $13,000 and a $100 VCR the Call savaged the reputation of a decent man.

A Call editorial omitted details of the VCR accusation and implied that a red-faced Daddona had been caught burglarizing his office.

In one sentence the Call states that Daddona did nothing illegal, then it damns him as a greedy thief and, incredibly, questions his true motivations as a public servant.

No, the Call editorial was wrong. Here is the real point: The city of Allentown got more than its money's worth out of Joseph Daddona.

Call Publisher Gary Shorts and his toadies on the editorial board know this. But, pretending they're hard-nosed newsmen, they trashed his reputation anyway.

That's the closest thing to a crime that exists in this whole matter.

School district ignored concerns of the people

Please circle one of the following:

A. I believe that community awareness should be inculcated through public education. The implementation of such a program is entirely at the discretion of the school district. Philosophical and/or religious conflicts which may be encountered by Bethlehem-area families should not be of any concern. This should be accomplished as quickly and cheaply as possible, whether or not state laws are observed.

B. I believe that community awareness should be inculcated through public education. A well-planned, voluntary program will instill the true beauty of community spirit most effectively. However, any incorporation of a community service program into the required curriculum should be accomplished with careful adherence to academic and philosophical integrity, as well as state criteria for required courses and student safety.

If a significant portion of the adult population circled option A, it should be no surprise that public education has experienced a steady downward spiral in terms of quality over the past thirty years.

Had the Bethlehem Area School District chosen option B, the controversy which grips our community would probably not exist.

The Bethlehem Area School District failed to study the service question in depth, cultivate numerous approaches and carefully implement a meaningful and instructive program before ramming compulsory community service down the public throat. As a result, it sparked legitimate protest from parents, teachers and concerned citizens, who regard it as an anathema to both volunteerism and sound education.

While school officials may honestly seek to fill the gap created by frazzled, overworked or negligent parents, there is a limit

Readers volunteer their comments

The Bethlehem Star has made clear its support of the Bethlehem Area School District's community service graduation requirement.

We believe the requirement reflects our city's strong sense of community and should be a part of the education of its children.

We also recognize this subject has stirred deeply held feelings, and the expression of those feelings will help all of us resolve this issue personally and as a community.

To that end, two weeks ago, we asked the community to send us their thoughts on the matter.

Here is what we received:

to what schools can do without intruding into the private, moral decisions that families have a right to make, even if such interference is invoked in the name of "education."

In addition, the state education code, which determines guidelines for required courses, is simply ignored by the service mandate. Required curricula must, according to state law, be evaluated and supervised by a teacher certified in the area of instruction. No such supervision takes place in the service program, nor is there any state certification in community service. State law also provides for the physical safety of public school students.

The consternation of those who fear for the physical well-being of student workers was realized last spring, when a district "volunteer" was nearly electrocuted while performing a task for which he was clearly unqualified. Also, state law (Act 34) calls for criminal checks for anyone working with public school children at the district's behest. It is arbitrarily overlooked by the community service mandate. In fact, children have found themselves working at the same sites as criminals who have been sentenced to perform community service for committing crimes, such as driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

Those who are concerned about the potential harm in these and other situations are genuinely alarmed by the apparent indifference of both district administrators and the school board, despite repeated warnings. The concerned fear that only a terrible tragedy will awaken those who should put safety measures into a program before it is implemented, not afterward.

Perhaps the most tragic aspect of this controversy is the fact that with adequate planning and input from community sources, a wonderful service program could have been developed.

Unfortunately, district administrators belligerently dug in their heels when legitimate criticism of the service mandate initially surfaced. Constructive views were smothered rather than incorporated into a program which was in desperate need of helpful advice. The potential of such a program was arrested from the first moment that community input was deliberately discouraged, when the school board tried to slip this program past the public with a minimum of open discussion. Perhaps it was at this crucial moment that the district's true regard for the community was inadvertently, yet most clearly, defined.

It would be difficult to imagine a course of action more devastating to any vision of community spirit and cooperation than the one taken by the BASD just prior to April of 1990. Having needlessly backed itself into a corner, it is now engaged in the age-old process of scrambling to put things right which need never have been wrong. A typical attempt to save administrative face, the prospect of success pales in the shadow of the graduating class of 1994, presently reduced by at least half.

The rocky path taken by the Bethlehem Area School District demonstrates the unhappy result of a good idea gone awry, only because it was rushed recklessly through district channels and rubber stamped by a school board with just enough administrative puppets to push it through. BASD officials need to learn the value of setting aside stubborn pride, admitting to mistakes and going back to the drawing board. Until glaring flaws are corrected, the present program should be discontinued. After all, if community volunteerism is a virtue worth teaching, it is worth teaching correctly.

Let's hear less about rights, more on duty

Dear Mr. Scharf:

Perhaps the problem is less with the program and more with its marketing. Perhaps it should be called "community participation" in order to change the focus from a perceived abrogation of our children's rights, to a more accurate focus of our duty to prepare our kids for a world of problems and challenges that are not confined to the classroom.

Just as a laboratory class improves the chemistry student's understanding of the classroom lessons, so is the value of community service. At a time when our children are more tuned-out than ever before, why would we resist an effort to integrate the community with the classroom?

Students leave school, students enter college, students enter the work force and have been insulated from the needs of their community.

Without adequate exposure to their environment, our children remain close-minded, sheltered and lacking in perspective. They are ill-equipped to meet the demands of adulthood.

Why are we parents ever ready to vindicate our children's rights, while resisting an effort to instill a sense of duty?

Community service should be seen as no more than a community effort to teach our children that the community is their community, and that a community cannot thrive without a broad spectrum of involvement and participation.

Very truly yours,
Philip M. Hof
Easton

Volunteerism is good for child's well-being

Mr. Gerald Scharf: ask and you shall receive

What a subject to argue about! I feel badly for parents who are teaching their children to fight against this subject. They do not have the interest and well-being of their children at heart.

One hundred years ago, I'm sure, a father came out of his house with a shotgun to go after the officer or teacher who wanted to take the child to school for education. That father was narrow-minded and could not see a future for that child in school. It was more important to work on the farm or in the mill.

This is my comparison to the forced volunteerism for graduation.

Doesn't the parent see the long-range mental health and physical well-being for the good of their child? Volunteering helps the student from being self-centered. They learn at an impressionable age what the rest of the world is like. Just ask any adult volunteer how their payless job makes them feel. All this would not be such a ruckus if the 60 hours would be part of school time and on the school bus. Yet there are many parents who think nothing of spending time and money on Parkettes, ice skating toward Olympics, baseball and football for the sake of major league, band, etc. For these programs there are no questions asked!

Thank you,
Clare S. Farrel

Kids need all the help they can get

Dear Mr. Scharf:

I am writing in response to your request for comments regarding the mandatory community service issue. I am in favor of this community service, though I am disappointed that it must be mandatory. Why not make the community service on a credit basis? For every 20 hours completed and documented, one credit goes towards graduation requirements.

However, since the system is set up to be mandatory at this time, I am supportive of it. I feel the kids in today's society need all the help they can get to learn to care for one another, not only within their own peer group but to others outside that group. I don't think many teenagers understand that they are each other's society and must learn to serve one another.

I remember reading in a local middle school newspaper, an article written by a seventh-grade girl. She was responding to a school rule that said something like, we are responsible to care for one another in society. (That is a loose paraphrase.) Her response was that she was not responsible to society for anything. She was responsible to no one but herself and maybe her family. But beyond that, everyone was to look out for themselves! What I don't think she understood was, she is someone else's "society." While she was responsible to and cared for no one, no one would care for her. What a sad and lonely statement! Is it no wonder our world is in the condition it is in?

We as an adult society have only ourselves to blame for our kids feeling this way. Our children act out only what they see and feel from those significant adults around them. So maybe with much prayer, and a little community service, they will learn to care for not only themselves but others also. Perhaps they will also receive the blessings of self-worth and self-esteem that come from caring for another person.

Sincerely,
Trudy R. Ellmore, Parent
Bethlehem

Who asked Big Brother to butt into kid's lives?

He who defines the issue wins the battle. Unfortunately, when it comes to mandatory community service for schoolchildren, the issue to the public is erroneously presented as the benefits of voluntary public service. This particular presentation could itself probably be debated, but this is not a definition of what is involved and what the objections are to the schools demanding services, outside of school hours, as a requirement for graduation. The real issue in the mandatory service debate is: Who has primary responsibility for the children, the educators or the parents?

Mandatory community service, dictated by the schools as to time and place, outside of school hours, is an overt example of "child steal." Some of the approved organizations may be delighted to get free labor. But if we judge from the bad accident to a Bethlehem student, hurt while on the mandatory community service job, neither these organizations nor the school district is held liable for injuries sustained. When Big Brother takes another person's child to promote his social agenda, he does not consider that he, having usurped parental rights, has to shoulder their responsibilities. The big question is: Who asked Big Brother to take over in the first place?

I hope that parents are aware that mandatory community service is one of the goals of the federal education bill, S.1150. Every parent who approves of voluntary, not mandatory, community service can provide this for his own child. Parents have always done so. If parents prefer to hand their children over to Big Brother to use as he sees fit they have only to sit quiet, pay Big Brother's salaries and watch their children be used and perhaps abused as a means to promote yet another government interference in the family.

Principal has good principles

Dear Mr. Roman:

We say "hats off" to you for your courage not only to take a stand against the "poisoning" of our children, but to be brave enough to actually put the whole event in print is beyond courageous!

Enough is enough! You have our full support, and we appreciate the fact that you spoke out. Many of us feel the same, but we are afraid to take a stand, fearing we will be accused of infringing on someone's "rights." We are fortunate to have you as an educational leader. It is absolutely despicable that we let a "liberal" interpretation of the First Amendment take precedence; putting the protection of the "rights" of our children to purchase such trash over the very protection of our children from moral harm is ludicrous. What about their "right" to an education of excellence? No wonder our educational system is going down the tubes when teachers and administrators struggle to teach in such environments. How can we expect you to teach knowledge without wisdom? It's time we gave authority back to our dedicated educators.

The following is a quote (by permission) from the January newsletter of "Focus on the Family" by Dr. James Dobson. He lists the significant events of 1993 that "impacted the family and the moral fiber of the nation":

"November 30: Rap artist Snoop Doggy Dog was due in court to face first-degree murder charges. He had been free on $1 million bail, permitting him to tour the country promoting his new album, which sold 800,000 copies in its first few weeks. Contained in this recording are lyrics describing the murder of a policeman, the killing of a rival, hatred for women, and explicit sexual language. It is, literally, too foul to be aired on radio or television. The artist, whose sneering picture was on the cover of Newsweek (Nov. 29) had already served time for dealing drugs and carrying a concealed weapon, yet his new album was at the top of the best-selling charts, and he had become a role model for millions of teens. Referring to the album, the L.A. Times stated, "Its ideas could inspire rap for years to come."

We have worked with youth groups for many years and raised our own children. It was frustrating to see what these youth were up against just four or five years ago. Now we have two grandchildren, and it concerns us even more as we see things continuing to deteriorate. One disagreement concerning your article: It will take more than "a bit of effort" to get our children's childhood back! We feel it will probably be the hardest struggle that parents will ever have to take on in the history of this society. It may be that we are fighting for the very "soul" of our children!

Some say that our views would be considered "far right" or "religious right," and so be it, if they feel they must label our opinions as "dangerous"! Does that mean that Snoop Doggy Dog's opinions are any less dangerous? Perhaps it's time to cause the "liberal left," who consider themselves to be "enlightened" to do a little trembling in their boots. We are told, "Don't shove your morals down our throats." We say, "Open wide...!" Would we rather be "force-fed" with a few good moral standards that have built this country or "taste" the damaging philosophy of Snoop Doggy Dog. You are right, Mr. Roman! It is time to "draw lines"!

You are in our prayers and we are so grateful that you found the courage to stand up for decency! If we can do anything at all in the future to offer support, just let us know!

With deep gratitude,

Lehigh Valley Bank President C. Andrew Cook has been named chairman of the March of Dimes WalkAmerica 1994 for Lehigh and Northampton counties.

WalkAmerica is the March of Dimes oldest fund-raising event. Mr. Cook will oversee the recruitment on Saturday, April 23, in Bethlehem and Easton and in Allentown on April 24.

Money raised by WalkAmerica helps the March of Dimes and its Campaign for Healthier Babies continue the fight against birth defects and infant mortality.

Other members of the committee include: Laura Long, Bethlehem Area Chamber of Commerce; Ronald Smoll, Jennifer Johns, Carl Maio and Eric Spidel, of Lehigh Valley Bank; Paul Balascki and Suzanne Kupres Stianche, NationsCredit; John Hart, Lehigh Valley Hospital; Jay Barrett, Geiger Beverages; Paul Pierpoint and Laurie Ghostley-Hackett, Northampton Area Community College; Karen Williams, Hospital Central Services; Mike Keenan, Keenan/Nagle Advertising.

Roger P. Penny, director and chief operating officer of Bethlehem Steel Corp., has been elected to St. Luke Hospital board of trustees.

Mr. Penny joined Bethlehem Steel in 1958 as a member of the corporation's management training program. He was assigned to the company's Lackawanna, N.Y., plant.

In 1983, he was named general manager of the company's Burns Harbor, Ind., plant.

In November 1992, Mr. Penny was named to his current position as chief operating officer.

Mr. Penny lives in Bethlehem with his wife, Judith. They have three children and five grandchildren.

Faces changing among city movers and shakers

By Christopher Judd

Take a minute, if you will, to review what has happened in Bethlehem in the past three months.

There have been the appointments of a new police commissioner, a new city council president, and a new school board president; the executive vice president of the Economic Development Corporation departed and the executive director of the Chamber of Commerce announced his retirement. The chamber will also be electing a new president. Also, one of the city's state representatives in Harrisburg is stepping down to run for the state Senate. And the mayor is going after another job.

Bethlehem is a city in change — a community in which many of its movers and shakers are departing, or looking to depart, leaving what might be called a leadership vacuum here.

Expected, unexpected

Some of the changes were expected, such as the reorganizing of city council and the Bethlehem Area School Board.

Some were not, including the resignation of Kerry Wrobel from the Bethlehem Economic Development Corporation and the decision by state Sen. Jeanette Reibman to not run for re-election.

State Rep. Joe Uliana of Bethlehem is giving up his House seat in a bid to succeed Mrs. Reibman.

Throw in the appointment of John Yerk to succeed Thomas Murphy as police commissioner and the result is changes in key posts throughout the city.

"Each of these events have to be looked at on their own merit" said Mayor Ken Smith. "It is coincidental that all of these changes have happened in such a short period of time which would give the appearance of change; in fact there is a lot of change. But, there's no relationship between them. That would be a real stretch."

Mr. Smith said the city has plenty of new faces to fill old jobs.

"I think we're finding that we do," he said. "It's like the old adage: nobody's irreplaceable."

Which isn't to say that all of the changes will go unnoticed. "Whenever you have change like this there are adjustments to be made," he said.

Bert Daday is ending his sec-

ond, one-year term as president of the Bethlehem Area Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber's executive director, Dick Strain, is retiring. The executive director is a full-time post that a chamber search committee hopes to fill by its annual meeting in May.

"We'll find a replacement and go on from there," said Mr. Daday, who will become an ex-officio board member.

"There have been more changes now than in the past," said Councilman Paul Calvo. "I think it's good for the city. It gets some new juice going and brings in new ideas," he said.

Some change happens in regular cycles, such as city council president. Michael Loupos succeeded James Delgrosso in the post, which traditionally changes hands every four years. It's just that this year, said Mr. Loupos, it came at a time when an unusual number of people were either coming or going.

"This was a very unusual year. I can't really think of when there were this many changes," he said. "You almost have to look at the reasons."

Which are?
"There aren't any, really. It just happens," said the retired school principal.

The most noticeable change is the one that might not even happen.

"We'll know more on Saturday," said Mr. Smith, who this weekend will attend the state Republican Committee gathering in Harrisburg where the party will likely endorse a candidate for governor. If it is Tom Ridge, of Erie, the lieutenant governor endorsement could go to one of Mr. Ridge's earliest supporters, the Bethlehem mayor.

The ebb and flow of municipal politics could land Mr. Delgrosso on the top again, but it depends on several "ifs." If Mr. Smith is endorsed and if he wins the lieutenant governor's race in November, then city council would have to appoint an interim mayor.

Nothing unusual

Many people have said Mr. Delgrosso would get the nod, putting him in position a year later to win a special election to serve the remaining two years of Mr. Smith's term.

"I haven't given it much thought at all," said Mr. Delgrosso, although he described a scenario for even more rapid political change.

"If the interim mayor didn't run in the special election we would have three mayors in four years. That would be very unusual," said Mr. Delgrosso.

Unusual for other cities, but not Bethlehem. It went through three chief executives in the 1980s after the courts invalidated Paul Marcincin's election and council appointed Gordon Mower as interim. Mr. Smith then won the special election.

"If Delgrosso gets it, who would consider running? What's the point?" asked Cindy Marakovits, the unsuccessful Democratic mayoral candidate last year.

She said Mr. Delgrosso would become the favorite in the special election. However, the city Democratic chairman disagrees.

"No. Actually not," said James Gregory. There are other Democrats eying the seat, he said. "Ron Heckman is definitely interested," he said of the Northampton County councilman.

"I thought about it the last time around," said Mr. Heckman, who opted to sit out the last mayoral contest. If Mr. Smith continues his campaign for lieutenant governor, Mr. Heckman said he would "absolutely" consider running for mayor.

City Republican chairman Jeff Opp said it is too early to speculate on a race that may not take place. He said any experienced Bethlehem Republican would be a possibility.

To many, these are interesting times in the Christmas City.

To others, including one city hall employee, it's just more of the cycle of old and new.

"When you work in government, it changes all the time," she said.

Gaelic Ball benefits festival

BY JANET WORSLEY

Step dancing, pipers, authentic food and decorations will bring a touch — and a taste — of Ireland to the city when Celtic Fest hosts the first Gaelic Ball and Auction at the Hotel Bethlehem on March 12.

Co-chair Martha Cusimano said the ball committee hopes to convey a sense of the Gaelic culture through the entertainment and creative decorations of the event.

Even the invitation, which borrows gold illuminated artwork from the ancient Irish Book of Kells, is designed to give people a feeling for the Gaelic atmosphere.

"We want our guests to experience a sense of the richness, antiquity and fun of the Gaelic culture on March 12," said Ms. Cusimano.

Several rooms of the hotel will be transformed into a Gaelic environment, highlighting Wales, Scotland and Ireland. Guests will be able to roam freely through the rooms, and down a country lane, designed by Eileen Hayden and her decorating committee.

Entertainment for the ball will include harpist Carol Thompson, pipers, Irish step dancing by the Maureen O'Grady Dancers, The Dave Roper Trio, Timlin and Kane, and The Dave Neith Orchestra.

A silent and live auction, featuring more than 50 items, will also be conducted throughout the evening.

"We are very pleased with the diversity and excellent reputations of the artists we have booked," said ball co-chair Olga Conneen, "Guests will enjoy a variety of ethnic and American foods and beverages and will be encouraged to sample all the different forms of musical entertainment as they move about the hotel throughout the evening."

Tickets to the ball can be purchased by calling the Celtic Classic office at 868-9599. The cost is $65 per person and $125 per couple. Reservations should be made as soon as possible as space is limited.

All proceeds from the ball will benefit Celtic Fest, Inc. for the preservation of the performing Celtic arts and studies. The annual festival of Celtic art and Highland Games will be held in late September.

Bethlehem Police Department and Downtown Bethlehem Association held the Thank You Ticket drawing at the Moravian Book Shop recently, awarding $10 gift certificates to 50 contestants.

The winners, who were chosen from among 448 entries, can redeem the certificates at participating Downtown Bethlehem Association merchants.

The tickets were issued by the police department to random motorists who wore their seat belts while driving through the Downtown. The intent of the campaign was to help the city achieve a higher safety belt use rate.

The Bethlehem Area Public Library's tutor-training program begins March 2 and needs volunteers. For 17 years the library has been sponsoring the tutor program, which helps city residents who do not speak English as well as they need to in their daily lives.

Volunteer tutors meet with English learners once or twice a week, one on one, at whatever time and place is convenient. They spend an hour or so practicing conversational English as well as reading and writing. Last year library tutors donated 3,783 hours of help to their students.

Tutors are not expected to have any background in other languages or any teaching experience. The library provides training and a choice of special books designed just for the tutors and their students.

New tutors attend three weekly workshop sessions, which start on Wednesday evenings, 6:30-9, March 2, 9, and 16, repeated on Saturday afternoons, 1:30-4, March 5, 12, and

19. It is all right to mix Wednesdays and Saturdays, and no pre-registration is required. The sessions are held at the library's South Side branch, corner of Fourth and Webster streets.

For more information, call 867-7853.

The South Bethlehem Historical Society will sponsor a panel discussion, "Nineteenth Century South Side 'Negro' Families," presented by descendants of some of the families, at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 19, at St. John's African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, 718 Pawnee St. The discussion is free.

For more information, call 758-9441.

The Bethlehem-Tondabayashi Sister City Commission is looking for students who are interested in participating in an exchange program with our sister city in Japan.

Five students will be chosen to travel to Tondabayashi for three weeks in the summer of 1995. Students must be at least 16 years old and no more than 20 years old by July 1, 1995 to be eligible. Applications are due March 1, 1994. There are two scholarships available that are based on need.

This summer, five students from Tondabayashi will stay in Bethlehem for three weeks and the commission is looking for host families.

There will be an orientation meeting for any interested students at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 15, in the Tondabayashi Room of the Bethlehem Public Library.

For more information call Gillian Girvin at 691-7305 daytime or 8682525 evenings.

news &amp; notes

Aside from the never-ending reports of common redpolls, unconfirmed sightings of hoary redpolls are coming in. Although some bird experts consider this bird to be just a different form of the common redpoll, the two are still listed as separate species.

According to Frank Haas, editor of Pennsylvania Birds, there has never been a documented record of a hoary redpoll in Pennsylvania, but this year that could change. If you think you may have a hoary redpoll in with a flock of commons, call the bird line at 252-3455 immediately. Try to get pictures of the bird because that is the only way an official record can be established. Feeders are still busy because of the cold weather. Seven different species of sparrows are showing up — house, song, white-throated, white-crowned, tree, field, and fox.

Carolina wrens, which had been frequenting feeding areas when the cold snap began, are now noticeably absent. These birds cannot take the extreme cold, and it is feared that they will probably suffer a tremendous population reduction as a result. The woods surrounding the headquarters building at the Green Lane Reservoir west of Quakertown is still a good place to find red-headed woodpeckers. Rough-legged hawks are also reported along Church Road. Nearby Upper Perkiomen

Park is hosting a lot of waterfowl, including common and hooded mergansers, gadwalls, common goldeneyes, and a northern shoveler. Yellow-bellied sapsuckers are still showing up at various places on a regular basis, as are snow buntings and horned larks at the usual spots such as Grim Road in Fogelsville and Oberly Road in Alpha, N.J.

With so much snow cover, these birds can also be found feeding along the edges of roads and have even resorted to coming to some feeders.

A really unusual report surfaced this week of a European goldfinch coming to a feeder in Slatington. Unfortunately a bird like this is not a countable species, although it certainly is interesting to see. It's probably an escaped or released bird, as was a yellow-fronted canary found in the wild on the Hamburg Christmas Count.

American robins are being seen frequently in the trees surrounding the grounds of the Bethlehem Public Library. Even though most of these thrushes go south for the winter, some always manage to survive the cold in sheltered areas where they can find food.

Honeysuckle thickets are good spots to find them, along with eastern bluebirds and a hermit thrush or two.

uncommon redpoll

Stranger from North alights

If you're one of those people who checks the bird sightings every week you already know that common redpolls are showing up at feeders everywhere in the area. I've mentioned them several times in the hotline reports and given short descriptions of how to recognize a redpoll if you see one. But, at the risk of overdoing a good thing, I'd like to elaborate a little more on these visitors from the far North.

The first time I ever laid eyes on a common redpoll was back in 1976. I was trying to comfort a crying 1-year-old and, in exasperation, looked out the window onto our small front porch. It was covered with birds, little streaked brown things with red on their heads and black patches around their bills. I really wasn't a birder at the time; I had just begun to notice that there were more kinds around than just blackbirds and cardinals, and I still didn't have the nerve to tell anyone I was interested in them.

Needless to say, at that time I didn't know what a redpoll was or that it was so unusual, but I learned fast.

The next time I saw common redpolls was many years later in the mid-'80's. By then I was addicted to listing bird species and taking trips in pursuit of new ones. I was now officially a "birder," the refined term now used by birdwatchers everywhere to help erase the myth of little old ladies in pith helmets.

In early April one year we had a late snowstorm that dumped around a foot of unwanted snow on us, and when I opened the blinds to our deck the morning after the storm I found it covered with redpolls. Similar reports surfaced from all around the area that day.

Valley
Audubon Society.

Apparently large flocks of the little birds had been migrating north and were forced down by the intensity of the storm.

It's easy to identify a common redpoll. The best place to find one when there's an invasion like we're having this year is around alder or birch trees in the wild or at thistle feeders in somebody's back yard. Look for goldfinches and that's where you'll most likely find the redpolls. Almost everybody, even people not particularly interested in birds, knows what a goldfinch look like.

It's even easy to identify in its winter plumage, when its yellow coat has turned mostly brown. The redpolls are about the same size as the goldfinches but from a distance are darker.

Up close the streaking on the back and the red and black head markings are unmistakable. This little northern finch breeds in extreme northern Canada and Alaska. Even in winter it doesn't usually stray much farther south than the northern half of the Canadian provinces, but every so often conditions exist that force these birds to travel great distances to survive. This year, incredibly, they have been reported as far away from their breeding grounds as Dallas, Texas.

Usually rare, redpolls are a common sight around area birdfeeders this year.

Rick Wiltraut

Whenever I've looked out my window this year at the redpolls at my feeders, I think of a birding trip I took to Churchill, Manitoba, three years back. This is the town on the shore of Hudson's Bay that's famous for its September influx of polar bears.

To birders it's also a place to see many unusual kinds of birds breeding on the tundra during its intensely short summer season. It's thousands of miles away from beautiful downtown Bethlehem and you can't drive there from here. The last leg of the trip has to be made by plane or train.

I was there in mid-June when temperatures can still dip to zero and the icebergs are still breaking up for the brief summer.

We didn't have a lot of difficulty finding common redpolls up there because common is indeed what they are up on their breeding grounds. They nest in the scrub willows on the outskirts of this isolated town along roads with names like Launch, Eastern, Coast, and Goose Creek. Up there the taiga, the subarctic coniferous zone, merges with the even more desolate high arctic tundra. The icebergs don't melt until July and they start forming again in late August.

The brutal weather we've been having around here this year is just business as usual for the redpolls. They thrive in cold temperatures. I'm reminded of that every time I put on three layers of clothing and my boots and head out onto the skating rink that is my driveway.

Although I was thrilled to see them weeks ago, now I just wish these little finches would go away and take the snow and ice with them. The prolonged whitish glare from the accumulated snow and ice is really getting to me. Staring at my bird feeders the other day from a house that is now beginning to feel like a prison cell, I think I started to hallucinate. I almost imagined I saw a polar bear.

Soccer puts its best foot forward

BY TOM HARPER

Soccer is to the world what Santa Claus is to children: adored, revered, and treasured.

All over Europe and Asia, millions of worshipping fans swarm to the stadiums to cheer their beloved country passionately and with unabashed pride.

The athletes are hailed as heroes and idols; the elite stars are considered gods.

But in the United States, the sport doesn't come close to the magnitude of popularity it enjoys overseas. There is no definitive pro league that athletes can strive for to achieve fame and glory in this country.

If Ed Csongradi had his way, however, all that would change.

Mr. Csongradi is the president of the Lehigh Valley Soccer League, an affiliate of the United States Soccer Federation in its 20th season this year. He is also the coach of Sunburst Soccer Club, one of 12 teams in the league.

"Soccer should be played year-round; that's the purpose of our league," Mr. Csongradi said. "We have provided a framework for athletes to do that."

Soccer is the world's favorite pasttime, but it hasn't caught on professionally in the United States ... yet.

He truly has, for he also runs a recreational summer league, along with a local soccer legend, Kal Sarkosy Sr.

The number of teams in the league has fluctuated over the years from as many as 16 to as few as eight. For the second half of this season, two new squads have been added: an under-19 select team and an under-17 select team.

A kick out of life

BY TOM HARPER

At 17, nothing much interested Keith Quelet.

"In high school, I lacked self-confidence and missed out on a lot of things," he recalled. "I was a bit of a wallflower and a loner. I didn't play sports, and I didn't participate in school activities."

Until one fall afternoon when Keith Quelet found karate.

He heard about a program at the local YMCA introducing the sport and brought along two of his brothers.

Twenty-three years later, Mr. Quelet hasn't lost interest. Now a third-degree black belt, he has been an instructor of the art of Chung Do Kwon, the oldest variation of Tae Kwon Do which centers around the heel kick, for more than 15 years, seven of them at Bethlehem's YMCA.

He has most recently brought karate to the campus of Moravian College, where he is also a full-time student majoring in music education. Although he is not considered an official staff member of the school, he is grateful for the chance to teach karate on the college level.

"With the rise in crime and violence, especially on college campuses, it's good for adults to learn self-defense. I've spent a tremendous amount of time thinking about different ways to teach it, because 20 years ago it wasn't a major problem."

While teaching the art of self-defense to adults is rewarding, Mr. Quelet finds the most satisfaction cultivating his younger students.

"Our best success has been with the young ones. When they come to class, we try to make them take on personal responsibility. It's up to them to advance."

But first they have to get one thing straight: karate is not what you see in the movies.

"In the movies and on TV, karate looks neat, but all it is is hype. We're teaching a sport that can be violent but is a means to a peaceful end. Through karate, you learn to control aggression and enhance the positive side of human nature."

Another thing that never makes it to the big screen is that karate demands constant practice, self-discipline and, above all else, mental strength.

"Ninety percent is mental," Mr. Quelet said. "There's a certain level of proficiency that has to be maintained. And I am committed to teach kids to be mentally strong and to make a positive difference in this world."

"We want to make them realize that karate is not to be taken lightly. We want them to take pride in themselves and develop a need to improve always."

Now, Mr. Quelet teaches his 50 or so pupils at the Ys of Allentown and Easton. Some of his students are as young as four years old, which can be a challenge even for the most patient of teachers.

"He's really great with the little kids; he's very patient," said John Dally, who has been an assistant for Mr. Quelet since last year, along with fellow aide Warren Freeby.

Mr. Dally and his young son Andrew joined Mr. Quelet's program three years ago. Today, both are brown belts, two belts shy of black.

Putting best foot forward

"We wanted to have these teams in the league to give them better competition so that they will become better players," Mr. Csongradi explained.

"We offer athletes the opportunity to play at the best amateur level the region offers. There is good competition here."

The level of play was raised Sunday when Mr. Csongradi's team along with several others in the league participated in an indoor tournament at Moravian College's Timothy E. Breidegam Athletic Recreational Center.

Teams came from all across the state to play. Vereinigung Erzgebirge, simply known as VE, and the United German-Hungarian Soccer Club arrived from the Philadelphia area, while the Lancaster Spartans came from Lancaster County.

Sunburst won the nine-hour tournament, holding off VE 3-2. The team also captured one of four individual awards, as Kevin Babyak received the Sportsmanship MVP award. Allentown Sports Club, which placed fifth, had its goalie, Lee Speers, named Goalkeeper MVP.

Both teams are accustomed to fighting for top honors. While Sunburst has been the team to beat the past couple of years — the club has won the past two league titles — Allentown has been the historical favorite. Under former head coach Joseph Dueh, Sr. and current skipper Greg Dueh, Allentown won 13 straight league championships before Sunburst's current reign, and 14 overall.

"We dominated for 13 years," said Greg Dueh, who took over the coaching reins for his father three years ago and is also the league's publicity chairperson, "but the league has been leveling out and the teams are getting better."

But while the talent pool has increased, the financial backing and media exposure haven't. Mr. Csongradi estimated that a team's operating expenses run about $1,500 a season.

While some teams he said are self-sufficient, others have the backing of local businesses or hold fund-raisers to help minimize costs.

One of the biggest monetary problems has been the availability of field space, especially in Bethlehem. As of now, Saucon Park's three fields and Monocacy Park are the main sites of home games for four teams: America S.C., Portuguese American S.C., Bethlehem Jeffs S.C. and Lusitano S.C.

Andrew Shumack

Sunburst plays most of its home games at East Hills Middle School.

But there is talk of a soccer complex that would be built on land owned by Lehigh County at the intersection of Hamilton Avenue and Route 309. Mr. Csongradi said the complex, which would include six to 10 soccer fields, is somewhere in the designing stages.

As for media exposure, the sport's biggest event may change all of that, as well as the league's financial outlook. The World Cup comes to the United States for the first time ever in mid-June. Some of the biggest stadiums will play host to the games, such as Soldier Field in Chicago and the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

Both Mr. Csongradi and Mr. Dueh agree that the World Cup could prove to be the best forum to bring soccer into the nation's limelight.

"The World Cup will help to promote the sport, because the games will be on TV and people will have to watch. That will help them to understand soccer," Mr. Dueh said.

Perhaps even more significant will be the formation of a new professional soccer league, which has been in the talking stages for several years.

"Establishing a pro league is not an easy situation because it would have to attract millions of dollars to play in large stadiums and would have to be marketed properly," said Mr. Csongradi.

"I am hopeful that the World Cup will help establish a professional league."

Having a pro league would have immeasurable consequences for soccer players who have aspirations of making a career out of the sport. Many athletes who have wished to continue their soccer playing days were forced to go to different countries.

But with the establishment of such a league, those athletes could stay within the United States to play. In addition, the sport could attract both the younger athletes and a larger audience once unfamiliar with the sport.

"It has to start at the youth levels," Mr. Dueh said. "In Europe, kids are born with soccer balls in their hands. Here, kids have nowhere to go after they're finished school. A professional league would change that."

Until then, however, amateur leagues like the Lehigh Valley Soccer League will continue to foster the best young talent. Mr. Csongradi is hopeful that his league, given the proper means, will generate greater interest in the sport of soccer in the Valley.

"If we capture more young players, we can establish a link, informal as it may be, with the older players. Then we can expand the league with these new players."

"The quality of soccer increases, and that would attract people to the Valley."

HEADACHE SUFFERER? READ THIS

Some recently published facts about headaches in Newsweek include:

- An estimated 45 million Americans suffer from chronic, recurring headaches.
- They make more than 50 million office visits a year to doctors and spend more than $400 million on over-the-counter pain relievers.
- Industry loses at least $55 million a year due to absenteeism and medical expenses caused by headaches.

If you suffer from recurring headaches, these facts may confirm what you already know. What you may not know is that Chiropractic care has proven itself effective in the treatment of headaches, without the use of drugs or therapy. Their success is simple, they treat the CAUSE of many headaches, a misalignment of the spine, usually in the area of the neck, which irritates or places pressure on the nerves in that area. Once this irritation or pressure is relieved, proper nerve flow is restored. The difference between Chiropractic and other treatments is this: If the cause of your headache is due to irritation to the nerves then Chiropractic is the only health care profession that could correct the SOURCE of the problem. If the source can be corrected, the headaches do not usually return. Proof of this is found in the Chiropractic in New Zealand Report, in which people who suffer from chronic, recurring headaches were found to have one or more misalignments of the cervical (neck) area. Of those people, 85% of the females and 50% of the males were relieved of their headaches or their condition was improved through Chiropractic care.

We are not saying that all headaches are a result of these misalignments. Headaches can have other causes including disease, stress, eye trouble or alcohol abuse. What is obvious though is that headaches are NOT caused by an aspirin deficiency. If you suffer from headaches on a regular basis, you owe it to yourself to call Dr. Kirshner at (215) 435-9300 immediately. We may be able to help you.

Karate game Keith Quelet "a second chance on life." Andrew Shumack

Andrew Shumack

Karate as seen in movies and on TV "is hype" says Keith Quelet, here teaching a class of youngsters at Easton YWCA.

Getting his kicks out of life

"Keith can deal with the younger students on their own level," Mr. Dally said. "He can become a kid himself, but at the same time he treats them with respect."

Andrew agreed in his own simple way: "He's fun."

The same patience and discipline he teaches helped bring Mr. Quelet through difficult times outside his classroom.

Coming off a painful divorce to his first wife, he fractured his back while moving furniture into his new residence. He worked for several years as a salesman for different companies, but none gave him much satisfaction.

What kept him going, he said, was the inner strength that karate gave him.

"It definitely helped me. I learned how to balance my mental and physical self, how to appreciate what's good in life. And that has made me happier; it has made me stronger."

"It gave me a second chance on life."

And Mr. Quelet took full advantage of his newfound opportunity. He met his second wife Kathy, with whom he raises their two sons, Todd, from his first marriage, and Michael.

He credits their unfaltering support as the reason for his success. "I'm so grateful for their support. They've sacrificed so much for me that I couldn't be as successful as I am today without them."

His good fortune has allowed him to pursue his passion for music. In addition to his music classes at Moravian, he is a member of a three-person band appropriately called Keith, John & Sue.

But still, Mr. Quelet returns to karate.

"What's important in martial arts and karate isn't the kicks and punches. I want them to apply the principles of martial arts in their lives, for their self esteem, their character. That way, they can stand on their own two feet, they can take on personal responsibility — even at a young age — and they can be leaders."

"That's martial arts. That's karate."

Warm-ups reduce aches

For just about all of us, New Year's Day was an occasion to kick off the shoes, recline on the couch, and watch more than 12 hours of uninterrupted college football on television.

Ah, such bliss.

Unfortunately, for many people, this kind of an experience has become a way of life.

Can you say "Couch Potato"? We thought you could.

Ok, but this year it's going to be different, you say. This year you really, really intend to start an exercise program and stick with it.

Only, that's exactly what you

Frank Claps works for Sports Medicine Lehigh Valley/Pocono

said last year. And the year before. And the year before that. The problem was, after a few sessions, your muscles were so sore that the only movement you could perform was to return to the couch, never to be heard from again.

There are many theories as to why the muscles get sore. Common sense tells us that soreness is a likely endproduct when muscles are not accustomed to the type and amount of work suddenly required of them. It's what can happen when you finally decide to roll off the couch and begin an exercise program.

But the good news is that muscle soreness can be reduced significantly by taking the time to warm up before you exercise and cool down when you're finished. In both cases, proper stretching will help decrease the subsequent soreness and make the next session less painful and, perhaps, more inviting.

A proper warm-up elevates your body temperature and gets some blood flowing to the muscles. This prepares the muscles, tendons and ligaments for exercise.

It's just like warming up your car on a cold day. If you "cold start" your body, you're almost guaranteed to get some sore muscles — especially if you haven't used them for a while.

You should also temper your initial enthusiasm. In other words, start out slowly. You're not going to reverse a decade of neglect to your body in one afternoon. That would do more harm than good.

Some ways to warm up include riding a stationary bike, walking on a treadmill, or, if no equipment is available, simply walking in place. Then, begin some gentle stretching to further prepare the muscles for exercise, increase range of motion, and prevent injury.

The same stretching program should be incorporated after you work out as well. Often, your best stretching is done post-exercise simply because your muscles and tendons are warmer and more supple.

This is the stretching session that will increase your flexibility, reduce the soreness you might experience the following day, and make you less likely to resume permanent residence on your couch.

Remember, flexibility is as important a component in an overall fitness program as strength and endurance.

A description of the various stretches you should perform will be the subject of a subsequent article.

"HOW CAN WE GIVE PEOPLE A BETTER CHANCE AGAINST CANCER?"

With the research being done by today's scientists, the chances of beating cancer are getting better all the time.

We wanted to bring the benefits of that research closer to the people of the Lehigh Valley. That's why we created the St. Luke's Regional Cancer Center right here on the campus of St. Luke's Hospital.

The St. Luke's Regional Cancer Center is a unique partnership between St. Luke's Hospital and Fox Chase Cancer Center, one of only twenty eight institutions designated by the National Cancer Institute as a comprehensive cancer center.

Through this partnership, local doctors now have immediate access to the newest and most advanced methods of cancer detection, diagnosis and treatment. And patients can receive this kind of care without having to travel far from home.

The St. Luke's Regional Cancer Center offers a full range of treatments for all types of cancer, with the caring touch that our community facility can provide.

For excellence in cancer care closer to home, call the St. Luke's Regional Cancer Center at (215) 954-3800.

"We are participating in a national study using a drug that may prevent breast cancer. To learn more about this study, or to find out if you are eligible to participate, call 954-3800."

The week's news in review

Feb. 2-9

Bethlehem's water bills increase

The average quarterly city water bill increased this week from $114 to $127.

That reflects a 4.6 percent increase the state Public Utilities Commission approved for the city water department.

If you're a residential customer and use less than 6,000 gallons of water per quarter (about 67 gallons a day) your bill will remain the same.

City officials say they will ask for another water-rate increase this summer to help pay for the new $21.4 million water filtration plant in Lehigh Township.

Church suffers growing pains

The First Presbyterian Church of Bethlehem's Center Street campus is the site of considerable construction to help contain the church's explosive growth in recent years.

But a 1993 shortfall of nearly $150,000 in pledged income and a shortage of pledges for 1994 has put the church in considerable financial difficulty.

Church leaders have announced cuts of up to 50 percent in various programs and services and have asked members to reassess their support of the church.

With more than 3,000 members, the church is one of the city's largest.

Uliana receives endorsement

State Rep. Joseph Uliana has been endorsed by the city Republican committee for his bid for the state Senate seat being vacated by Jeanette Reibman.

Uliana will face Northampton County Councilwoman Peg Ferraro in the May 10 primary election.

The county Republican committee has already endorsed Uliana.

City wins more federal money

U.S. Rep. Paul McHale announced Bethlehem will receive $1,957,000 in federal Community Development Block Grants this year.

That's about $177,000 more than city officials were anticipating.

The money is to be used for projects that benefit low- or moderate-income areas of the city.

If you have a suggestion on how the city might spend the extra money, contact the city's Community and Economic Development Department or a member of the city council.

DA Morganelli gets a surprise

Northampton County District Attorney John Morganelli received the Bethlehem Area Jaycees' annual Distinguished Service Award.

Mr. Morganelli was nominated by city Councilman Paul Calvo.

Mr. Calvo cited the prosecutor's work in establishing a child abuse prevention unit, considerable volunteer work, law enforcement initiatives and efforts to enforce the state's death penalty.

The award has been given each year since 1950, when then-Mayor Gordon Payrow received it.

School board taught a lesson

The Pennsylvania School Boards Association offered its first training conference for school board members at the Holiday Inn in Fogelsville last Tuesday. The session was the first of eight in a two year plan to instruct board members on the topic of "Roles, Responsibilities and Relationships" — called by the association "the 3 Rs".

This week, the state House Education Committee will be debating a bill that could require school board members to learn their lessons well.

If the proposed bill is passed, the state Board of Education would require the sessions for school board training. Members that have not been through the program would be removed from office.

Thirty-seven of the new school board members in the Lehigh Valley area, including Bethlehem, attended the conference. Twenty-nine did not.

Critics still attack overhauled SAT

Although the Scholastic Aptitude Test has undergone its first major revision since 1974, critics say the assessment test still has a built-in bias.

Critics of the test say that the changes are inadequate, and do not address the problem of a bias against women and minorities, as they see it.

The new version of the SAT is expected to better test higher critical-thinking skills. There will be fewer reading passages in the verbal section, though they will be longer. In addition, the test will ask students to compare passages on similar subjects. The traditional section on antonyms has also been removed.

In another major change, students will be allowed to use calculators for the mathematical section. The new test will have 10 math problems, without multiple choice answers, for students to solve.

The new version of the SAT will be available to high school students beginning March 19. In the meantime, SATs will be held at Liberty High School Saturday at 8 a.m.

Sororities pay for formal damages

Lehigh University sorority Alpha Phi was put on probation by administrators this past week for doing $800 worth of damage to the Candlelight Inn during a formal in November.

The sisters of the sorority will not be allowed to serve alcohol at their parties for the rest of the semester, and they are discouraged from inviting men they don't know to functions.

The Delta Gamma sorority may also be facing probation for damages caused at the Radisson Hotel in Allentown in November. According to Hotel Operations Manager Stanley Flak, the sorority left behind $2,500 worth of damage, including broken glass, torn-out sinks and women's undergarments. The hearing on the matter will be held soon.

'Able' Mable kicks off celebration

Mable Thomas, a Georgia state legislator, encouraged the youth of today to become the leaders of the future at a lecture at Lehigh University Feb. 3.

Ms. Thomas said students should take advantage of the power of possibilities and try their best to achieve their goals, letting nothing stop them. Although she said entrepreneurship, money and jobs are all important things that will help blacks, she felt that leadership skills were the most valuable tool.

The speech, held in the University Center, was sponsored by Lehigh's Black Student Union and the Office of Multicultural Affairs.

Based on an ancient custom of exchanging tokens of love, this hardy holiday had its beginnings in Rome close to 1700 years ago.
 Love ribbons, hearts, sprigs of myrtle—these were the first tokens given on this day named for a third century
 Christian martyr. Through the years gifts became costlier and celebration of the holiday more festive.

A day for broken hearts?

All right, with some light theological study and several viewings of the Charlie Brown special, I feel that I've got the whole Christmas thing down pretty well. The direct connection between Easter, and a cute, artistic rabbit still eludes me a bit, but I'm willing to accept it. But Valentine's Day? What is this all about? What is the true meaning of Valentine's Day?

Turning to the history books,

Rex Huppke is the entertainment writer for The Bethlehem Star

we learn that Valentine's Day dates back to the Middle Ages. The day was established in honor of two Christian martyrs, both named Valentine, who were soundly beaten and beheaded by the Roman Emperor Claudius II. The two gentleman, and their heads, were buried on the Flaminian Way and a church was built over their graves in the fourth century.

A-ha. That explains everything.

Somehow, we, as a society, have decided that two guys getting their melons lopped off is a great excuse to exchange lacy, heartfelt expressions of the amorous variety. I suppose a box of chocolate martyrs would pose a slight marketing problem, but wouldn't it be a bit more realistic? (Most likely, the history books are missing the part about Claudius' second cousin, Hallmarkus Opportunus, who knew damn well that there was a lira to be made out there.)

Obviously the true meaning of this holiday does not lie in its historical background, so let us examine what it means today. For Valentine's Day, all of humanity can be broken down into three groups: People in love, people not in love, and people who own flower, card, or candy shops. The latter can be ruled out immediately. Asking a florist if they like Valentine's Day is like asking a politician if he likes children. No need to waste the breath.

Let us look first at people who

Celebrating gifts of black heritage

The month of February has become Black History Month, a month in which we acknowledge the achievements and contributions made by African-Americans and highlight African-American history. The Lehigh Valley has a rather extensive list of events planned in observance of this month, events which will entertain, stimulate, and educate us all on America's greatest resource: our diversity.

The majority of the events are sponsored by Lehigh University and Lafayette College.

The theme for Black History Month at Lehigh this year is "Celebrating Diversity Through Our Unity." Earlier this month, Georgia state Rep. Mable "Able" Thomas got the ball rolling with a lecture entitled "You Can Make A Difference." Author LaFrances Rodgers Rose also lectured at Lehigh, speaking on topics dealing with the struggle of African-American people, particularly women and youth. Books by Rose include "The Black Women" and "Health Awareness: Black Women In Crisis."

This Friday, at 8 p.m. in Room 308 of the University Center, Synapse Productions (formerly the Boston Arts Group Theatre Company) will present "The Meeting," a play by Jeff Stetson. In "The Meeting," the audience witnesses an imaginary clandestine meeting between Martin Luther King, Jr. and Malcolm X. The meeting occurs in a shabby Harlem hotel room and the viewers become privy to what might have been.

Coming up on Tuesday, Feb. 15 in Room 306 of the University Center, there will be a poetry reading, featuring local poet Billie Scott-Lindo. Ms. Scott-Lindo will, through her readings, present a historical perspective of African-American poetry, ranging from Phyllis Wheatley, the first African-American poet published in the United States, to Langston Hughes and contemporary poets like Ruby Dee. Billie will also read some of her own works, like "The Way" and "Weekend In New York City." The reading will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Truly one of the highlights of the month will be the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra performing at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 26, in the Broughal Middle School

Valentine's Day has its traditional gifts, but what do the unloved give?

Why not a holiday for broken hearts?

are not in love. Locally, the most poignant comment I received was from an Allentown resident: "I loathe Valentine's Day."

For people like this, the 14th of February only serves to highlight one's loneliness. We go from "Happy New Year!" (gee, this year's going to be great), to Happy Groundhog's Day (well, six more weeks of winter, but things are bound to shape up), to Happy Valentine's Day (my God, I'm unloved and alone in a cold, heartless world!) and the rest of the year is pretty much downhill from there. This is a day when there's always one kid in grade school who doesn't get a Valentine. This is a day when Charlie Brown never receives a card from the little red-haired girl. This is a holiday?

And what about the lucky folk who are in love? Neil Young once sang that "love is a rose." From talking to people, I think he meant love is a rose on any day except Valentine's Day, when it becomes a rose, dinner, and possibly a movie. Many people, who claimed to be in love expressed to me that the holiday in question was pure commercialism; another hamster on the treadmill of capitalism. Others, such as this guy from Bethlehem, who felt a bit stronger about things: "Valentine's Day is a holiday made up entirely by chicks (that's male chauvinist for "women"). Men don't even know what month it's in."

A certain young Allentown woman said, "Valentine's Day is for people who are in love." I followed this by asking the fate of people who are not in love. "Well," she replied, "I don't know." Do you think that, perhaps, a St. Miserable's Day might be in order, say maybe on the 15th of February? "Well, no, I suppose not."

A number of people in love said that they like the idea of Valentine's Day, but that it often turned into just another shopping dilemma, an eventual thorn in the side.

So why do we have this holiday? It's commercial, it bothers people, whether in love or not, it's historical significance is suspect, and it promotes a rather anatomically incorrect picture of the heart. I can get a lot of negative feedback, but no one seems to know the true meaning of this day.

It was at this point that I had planned to drive a stake through Valentine's Day and cheerfully chalk one up for cynicism. But something happened.

At the last minute I broke down and contacted a card shop, hoping to get some general information: is Valentine's Day your busiest holiday, do you feel it's a sincere holiday, etc.? I spoke with Julie Sanders, the manager of a Bethlehem card shop, and she very politely answered my rather pragmatic questions. Feeling a bit daring, I then asked her about the true meaning of Valentine's Day.

She seemed rather excited about this question, and asked that I look back a couple of years to about the time of the Gulf War. That Valentine's Day was like none she had ever seen. All of the yellow ribbons, the care and concern that she saw, "it was a genuine outpouring of love." It is for reasons like this that Mrs. Sanders really does enjoy Valentine's Day.

"It's a time when you can take that extra minute, pick up the phone and tell someone you care," she said.

Even though it may trouble some people and may be as tainted by commercialism as other holidays, February 14, for Julie Sanders, is that one day out of the year when love and friendship are celebrated. I would be hard pressed to find anything wrong with that.

And so, in the most unlikely of places, I found my answer. Once you sift through the nonsense and get past the advertisements, there is a meaning to this holiday. And it's a good meaning at that.

Thank you, Julie Sanders. Happy Valentine's Day.

Yeagers served God, U.S.

For more than 150 years the tall, slender, white steeple of Friedens Evangelical Lutheran Church has stood out prominently amid the scenic landscape of Saucon Valley. The lovely church located in the village of Friedensville, a picturesque rural setting just west of Route 378, has long been an attractive landmark. Although long familiar with Friedens church (my father's name is on a bronze plaque honoring veterans of "The Great War," and he and my mother are buried in the church cemetery), I knew little of the church's history. During a visit to the church for one of those wonderful church dinners, I was impressed with the history related in a series of paintings and plaques in the church social hall, especially the vitally important role and contributions of the Yeager family.

With congregational roots dating back, albeit a bit tenuously, to 1763, the first Friedens Church building was dedicated Nov. 23, 1793, the first year of President Washington's second term. The Union (Lutheran and Reformed) Church services were led by Rev. Hoffmier, Reformed pastor, and Rev. John C. Yeager, Lutheran pastor. Rev. Klingsohr, Moravian pastor, also participated and dedicated the building "to the service of the Triune God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit," naming it the Evangelical Friedens Church. More than 700 people attended the two-day event. The present building was erected in 1839, adjacent to the site of that original structure, which had been enlarged in 1817.

The first Lutheran pastor, Rev. John Conrad Yeager, who organized the Saucon congregation, served the church until his death in 1832, when his son, Rev. Joshua Yeager succeeded him. Joshua served as pastor from 1832 to 1885, 53 years. Father and son served the congregation of Friedens Church a total of 92 years, a remarkable, probably unique, record of service. To better appreciate the distinction to be accorded these pastors, and to put their service in perspective, consider the following: "The circuit riding Yeagers founded or served at least 12 congregations extending from Lehigh Church in Macungie to Hecktown and Williams Township in Northampton County. While suffering incredible hardships, covering the vast territory on horseback, in fair weather and foul, they did not lose a Sunday."

Rev. Joshua Yeager married Maria Grim of Friedensville. Her father, Jacob, was a lieutenant in the Berks Militia in 1777, and quite possibly was among those Pennsylvania Militiamen who encamped around Bethlehem that year. Joshua served churches in Allentown, Schoenersville and Hecktown as well as Friedensville.

Another family member, William Yeager (1822-1897), was a prominent Republican abolitionist and civil rights activist who operated a pre-Civil War underground railroad haven (safe house) in Bingen for escaping slaves.

Thomas Yeager, nephew of Joshua Yeager, was baptized in Friedens Church and became a communicant member. An oil painting in the church social hall depicts the scene in the unfinished rotunda of the Capitol building when President Lincoln greeted Capt. Thomas Yeager and his unit, the Allen Division. The Allen Division was among the first to respond to President Lincoln's call for volunteers to defend Washington, thus their title, "The First Defenders." The caption under the painting reads: "Artist Arthur has captured a grateful Lincoln in the rotunda of the Capitol, thanking Captain Yeager and promoting him to major."

During Gen. McClellan's Peninsula Campaign to capture Richmond, Gen. Longstreet's Confederate forces attacked a Union force at Fair Oaks (Seven Pines), Va. In the ensuing battle from May 31 to June 1, 1862, the Union force repulsed the attack. On June 1, Maj. Yeager was killed leading the charge. He and his horse perished amid a hail of bullets that day, the same day President Lincoln promoted him to brigadier general.

The history of the Yeager family of Friedens Evangelical Lutheran Church is clearly a noteworthy legacy of service to God and country, an inspiration to all who share their high ideals and value their admirable commitment to duty.

FEBRUARY 10

The police last night raided the stone house east of the New Street Bridge, and along the Lehigh and Susquehanna Rail Road, arresting five women and four men. The police say the house is the worst in seven counties. It is the scene of nightly orgies and brawls. The raid is expected to break up the nuisance.

FEBRUARY 12

A valuable dog belonging to George Manson was struck by an electric car at Third and Locust streets, South Bethlehem, on Saturday afternoon. Later in the day the same car struck a cat at Third and Oak streets and succeeded in disposing of every one of the feline's nine lives. The car appears to be a hoodoo to pet animals.

FEBRUARY 13

Despite the inclement weather of last night, the members of Capt. O. A. Luckenbach Camp No. 182 turned out in large numbers to help celebrate the 85th birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln, in G.A.R. Hall, Main Street, Bethlehem.

• • •

The South Bethlehem teachers met in regular semi-monthly session last evening with Supt. O.R. Wilt presiding. The superintendent inquired into the vaccination reports which each teacher is requested to finish. It appears that but a few parents will not have complied with the regulations concerning vaccination as ordered by the state board of health.

FEBRUARY 14

In pursuance of notice given in the papers, a meeting of the stock holders of the Bethlehem Iron Company was held this morning to vote for or against an increase of the capital stock of the company. There were represented personally or by proxy 88,178 shares of stock. The resolution authorizing the board of directors to increase the capital stock from $5 million to $10 million was adopted.

FEBRUARY 15

So many fast horses on the Market Street Boulevard as were there yesterday afternoon resulted, as was expected, in brushes of speed. It was another instance of the Bethlehem horse carrying off the laurels.

FEBRUARY 16

At a meeting, held last evening, of the executive officers of the West Bethlehem Relief Association it was decided that tomorrow (Saturday) the rooms would be open for the last time, the resources being exhausted. The association helped thirty families since its organization.

FEBRUARY 10

America and her Allies must not make the same mistakes after this war when the peace is under consideration that were made in the post-war World War I days, declared James J. Davis, senior Senator from Pennsylvania, in a stirring address this noon before the Bethlehem Kiwanis Club.

FEBRUARY 11

With the stage all set for a mental examination of Michael Soss, accused wife-slayer of Bethlehem, counsel for defense today was successful in having the examination deferred at least until after Soss faces a jury on a murder charge at the courthouse in Easton on Wednesday.

FEBRUARY 12

The 37th Bach Festival will be held May 19 and 20 in Packer Memorial Church on the campus of Lehigh University. Dr. Ifor Jones, conductor, announced today. Any concern over limitations of war upon the historic festival were dissipated last year when the usual throng of Bach devotees was on hand.

FEBRUARY 14

Once again, the call to purchase "E" denomination War Bonds has been sounded as F. G. Radley, city chairman of the Fourth War Loan Drive, admitted today that the area is still $250,000 short of its goal in this classification.

FEBRUARY 15

Purchase from Paul R. Klotz of all land between Genos and Gary streets and Ninth and Tenth avenues, and also all land between Randall and Gary streets and Eighth and Ninth avenues for $4,480, was authorized by the city school board at its monthly meeting last evening. The land is to become part of the playground at Nitschmann Junior High School.

FEBRUARY 16

A little man nearing the three score mark, and visibly subdued in spirit, is in Northampton County court today charged with plunging a butcher knife into the back of his helpmate of years. The state is asking for his life. Jury selection in the Mike Soss murder trial got underway in Easton.

NEW THIS WEEK

My Girl 2 (PG)

AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall Township; United Artists Allentown; United Artists, Easton

The inevitable sequel is here, with the continuing story of Vada Sultenfuss (Anna Chlumsky). Her dad (Dan Aykroyd) is remarried to Jamie Lee Curtis, and due to the impending birth of their baby, Vada's bedroom is turned into a nursery.

She pursues a dream and heads off to California in search of clues about her deceased mother. Along the way she explores first love with Austin O'Brien, who's around in a role similar to the one performed by Macaulay Culkin in the first film. Howard Zieff ("Slither," "Private Benjamin") directs.

The Getaway (R)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; AMC Four, Easton

Real life husband and wife Alec Baldwin and Kim Basinger play big-screen husband and wife as they assume the roles originally played in 1972 by Steve McQueen and Ali McGraw (Steve left his wife of 15 years and the two Mc's became an item during the film's production). This remake of the film noir classic, directed with slow-motion shoot 'em ups and a groundbreaking ending (the criminals getaway without punishment) by Sam Peckinpah, is co-written by writer-director Walter Hill ("48 Hours," "The Warriors"), who also wrote the screenplay for Peckinpah's version.

The story, based on the novel by Jim Thompson, finds Baldwin being released from jail without a whole lot of rehabilitation going on — he robs a bank but has to hightail it out of there when the plan screws up.

An interesting supporting cast includes James Woods, Michael Masden ("Reservoir Dogs") and Jennifer Tilly. Roger Donaldson, best known for his political thrillers, such as 1987's "No Way Out," directs.

Six Degrees of Separation (R)

United Artists, Allentown

This screen adaptation of John Guare's award-winning stage hit, an examination of artifice, is a story within a story as told by Ouisa and Flan Kittredge, played by Donald Sutherland and Stockard Channing. They tell the tale of a young black man who comes to their upscale Fifth Avenue doorstep one evening, bleeding, apparently the victim of a mugging.

Claiming to be Paul (Will Smith), the son of actor Sidney Poitier and a friend and classmate of their children at Harvard, he proves to be such a charmer that the Kittredges insist he stay for the evening. But the next morning Paul is found with a male prostitute.

Turns out that some friends

By MICHAEL LUNNEY

had the exact same experience. Adding insult to injury, when the police are called the Kittredges are informed that taking advantage of their gullibility is not a felony.

As a result of their experience, the Kittredges feel compelled to find out why anyone would pull such an elaborate stunt without stealing anything. In the process they begin to question their own goals and values.

Australian Fred Schepisi ("Roxanne," "Barbarosa") directs from a screenplay written by Guare. The title comes from the theory that the connection between any two people in the world is no farther than six human associations away.

CONTINUING

Blank Check (PG)

AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall Township; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; United Artists Easton

When 11-year-old Preston Waters' bicycle is run over by a mobster (Miguel Ferrer of "Twin Peaks" fame) who's in a hurry, the kid is compensated with money in the form of a blank check. Preston goes with the opportunity and makes the check out for $11 million.

Among other things, he goes on a shopping spree in this wish fulfillment fantasy, but the cops and bad guys are not far behind.

This Disney film, which looks to be a crowd pleaser, also features Brian Bonsall and Tone "Funky Cold Medina" Loc in the cast.

My Father, The Hero (PG)

AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall Township; United Artists Allentown; AMC Four, Easton

Steve Miner, who, believe it or not directed the second and third installments of the "Friday the 13th" film series, serves up this fluffy confection about a 14-year-old teen angel (Katherine Heigl) on the brink of romantic awakening. The young lady sets up the premise for laughs when she tries to pass off her papa (Gerard Depardieu) as her lover to impress the true object of her affections. Miner directs for Touchstone, an arm of Disney Studios.

I'll Do Anything (PG-13)

United Artists, Allentown; United Artists, Easton

James L. Brooks, the man who created such classic TV series as "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "Taxi," and wrote and directed the films "Broadcast News" and the Academy Award winner for Best Picture of 1993, "Terms of Endearment," is back with this romantic comedy. Nick Nolte stars as an out-of-work Hollywood actor who is saddled with caring for his 6-year-old daughter, who he doesn't really know as a person. Former comedian as a person. Former comedian Albert Brooks, who made an impression as a talented journalist with no luck in "Broadcast News" rounds out the cast along with Tracey Ullman, Julie Kavner and Joely Richardson.

Ace Ventura: Pet Detective (PG)

AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall Township; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; AMC Four, Easton

Standup comic, turned supporting movie actor, turned TV series star Jim Carrey, the goofy, rubber-limbed white-guy star of "In Living Color" whose running routines have included Fire Marshal Bill, is back on the big screen as the star and title character of this whacked-out comedy.

When the Miami Dolphins' mascot and quarterback mysteriously disappear only a week before the team is slated to play in the Super Bowl, Ace Ventura (Carrey) is put on the case. This will hopefully be better than Damon Wayans' ("Color's" Homey the Clown) attempt at big screen stardom in his woefully misguided star vehicle, "Mo Money." Carrey co-wrote the story, which also stars Courteney Cox, Sean Young and Tone Loc.

Intersection (R)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; United Artists, Easton

Oy, to have such a difficult decision. Handsome Richard Gere plays an architect who must choose between sharing his life with his beautiful wife, Sharon Stone, and his equally beautiful but more seductively alluring mistress, Lolita Davidovich. This time Sharon leaves the "Stone"-fox moves to Lolita. Mark Rydell ("On Golden Pond," "The Rose") directs from a script co-written by Marshall Brickman, who co-wrote two of Woody Allen's most admired films, "Annie Hall" and "Manhattan."

Philadelphia (PG-13)

The Movies, Hellertown; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall Township; United Artists, Allentown; United Artists, Easton

Jonathan Demme, the director of the Academy Award winner for best picture of 1991, "Silence of the Lambs," returns with, believe it or not, the first mainstream Hollywood film to deal with the touchy subject of AIDS. It's been over 10 years since the disease first began claiming its victims.

The story explores both the isolation AIDS sufferers feel, and suggests that if homophobic hysteria didn't surround the disease then AIDS discrimination might not exist.

In the City of Brotherly Love, Tom Hanks portrays hard-working gay lawyer Andrew Beckett who is fired from the firm where he works after being diagnosed with AIDS. Beckett decides to sue the law firm that wrongfully discriminates against him.

After nine lawyers refuse to take his case, Beckett finally hires Joe Miller, a heterosexual, homophobic personal injury lawyer played by Denzel Washington. Jason Robards, Mary Steenburgen and Antonio Banderas also star.

Schindler's List (R)

AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall Township; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

Director Steven Spielberg once again turns his creative eye toward making a serious, mature film. By some accounts, it looks like he's finally gotten it right with this three hour, 15 minute epic about the Holocaust, filmed in black and white. Themes of corruption, greed and unintentional heroism are explored in this story adapted from Thomas Keneally's book of the same name. With frequent use of a moving, hand-held camera, operated by Spielberg for many sequences, the film often resembles a documentary. After the Nazis blitzkrieg their way to victory in 1939 Poland, registered Jews began entering Krakow at the rate of 10,000 per week. Oskar Schindler (Liam Neeson), a member of the Nazi Party, makes arrangements to run a company to be staffed by Jewish slaves.

In an unsympathetic portrayal, Schindler's actions are motivated primarily by profit. Itzhak Stern (Ben Kingsley) is his Jewish accountant and right-hand man. In great detail Spielberg examines the descent of Jews from refugee status in Krakow to their confinement in a ghetto by 1941, the creation of a forced labor camp in 1942, and the extermination of the ghetto dwellers in 1943.

Schindler is allowed to continue operating his factory as a "sub-camp." The factory becomes a safe place for Jews because it's almost assured that no one will die there. By 1944, Schindler, growing weary of rampant carnage, uses his war profits in an attempt to prevent Jews from being shipped to their death at Auschwitz.

Will Spielberg finally win the Academy Award for Best Picture for this complex, true tale of a Nazi collaborator who went on to save the lives of 1,300 Jews?

BY MICHAEL LUNNEY

East meets Beast in "Hard Target"

During the latter part of the summer of 1993, moviegoers were invited to witness the dream team-up of gifted Hong Kong action-with-an-edge film director John Woo and karate ace turned actor Jean-Claude Van Damme.

The result, "Hard Target," now available on video, is a quintessential B-movie with very familiar plotting — a down-on-his-luck loner is forced to confront the forces of evil in the form of a bad guy and his minions. But it's a super-charged macho fantasy that is without question a must-see for action film fans.

Woo's highly stylized, intricately choreographed gunplay and dreamily kinetic camera-work, coupled with Van Damme's customary karate-kick-in-the-face, good guy presence, is a marriage made in movie heaven. While the plot, a takeoff on the old 1932 classic "The Most Dangerous Game" in which a maniac hunts down human prey on his remote island, won't win any kudos for originality, the film's success lies in its recklessness and controlled chaos.

Michael Lunney is the movie writer for The Bethlehem Star

Admittedly, I was never a big fan of Van Damme, the "Muscles from Brussels," who just seemed to be one more in a long line of former martial arts champs turned wooden Indian ... I mean actor. In "Hard Target," Van Damme won't win me over with his limited acting range, but he does possess impressive grace and power and a commanding screen presence.

The appeal of "Hard Target" has more to do with Woo than with Van Damme. While Woo made his American filmmaking debut with "Target," he has developed a small but faithful cult following that is growing thanks to the release of another of his films, "The Killer," (1989) to video and cable.

I first became a big fan of Woo's after seeing "The Killer," which was released to video in 1992. The story involves a hit man who develops a bizarre relationship with a nightclub singer and accidentally blinds her during a blazing gun battle. The film is distinguished by Woo's stunning and intelligent sense of action, which is evident in "Hard Target," but on an less intense level.

Woo's most obvious cinematic influences include: Sam Peckinpah, who specialized in slow-motion cathartic violence in such controversial, trend-setting pictures as "The Wild Bunch" (1969), "Straw Dogs" (1971) and "The Getaway" (1972); Sergio Leone, who popularized the ultraviolent spaghetti western genre; Martin Scorsese, who often punctuates his action scenes with sweeping, rapturous camera movement that heightens the involvement of the viewer; and of course, master Japanese filmmaker Akira Kurosawa ("Seven Samurai," "Rashomon") whose influence is apparent in the works of all these directors.

But ultimately Woo has a distinctive style all his own, replete with black humor and occasional slapstick.

Born in 1946, Woo, like Spielberg, began shooting little films in 16mm and Super 8 when he was a school boy. Fresh out of college in Hong Kong, his professional cinematic career began at the age of 19 when he joined the Chinese Students' Weekly Theatre Company, where he made experimental films. In his early 20s he became a script supervisor at Hong Kong's Cathay Film Company, where he apprenticed with a martial-arts-film master. In 1973 he switched to the larger Golden Harvest Studio, where he began directing his own low-budget kung fu features, which included Jackie Chan in his first starring role.

Initially, the violence in Woo's films was not taken seriously. It was enjoyed by critics, but often down-graded as camp. But Woo, who once considered entering the priesthood, as did Scorsese, sees the violence in his films as a battle between good and evil in the theological sense, further influenced by ancient rites of chivalry.

In the U.S., where violence in films (and TV) is suddenly being taken very seriously as the blame for all society's ills, Woo had his share of troubles with the Motion Picture Association of America's rating board. After viewing "Hard Target" the board branded it NC-17 (no one under 17 admitted), a rating that hinders the financial possibilities for a major Hollywood release.

According to Woo, Hong Kong government censors tell him which scenes should be cut. Not so in the U.S.; Woo had to cut frames from scenes in "Hard Target," guessing at what they wanted toned down, because the MPAA is not specific with their objections. After seven attempts at paring objectionable material, it finally received its present R rating.

Despite the trimming of about three minutes, "Hard Target" still manages to put across a powerful, if somewhat diluted, version of Woo's intricate internal action rhythms that are so admired by his filmmaking peers and audiences hip to his attitude.

Reportedly Woo, who has relocated to California's San Fernando Valley with his family, is planning to direct a suspense film about terrorists and cops called "Shadow War," and a remake of "The Killer" is in development with Richard Gere as the assassin and Denzel Washington as the cop on his trail.

If you have yet to discover the slam-bang pleasures of John Woo's infectiously appealing films, "Hard Target" and "The Killer" would make for a helluva impressive double feature to show to your action-fan friends. If you have questions or comments about anything in the world of video, please write to Michael Lunney, c/o Video Vault, 533 Main Street, P.O. Box 229, Bethlehem PA, 18016-0229.

The appeal of "Hard Target" has more to do with Hong Kong director John Woo than with karate ace Jean-Claude Van Damme.

Mrs. Doubtfire (PG-13)

AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall Township; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; United Artists, Easton

Every couple of years some major film star has to do it. This time it's Robin Williams' turn to don wig and dress and do the drag thing.

Williams plays an unhappy, unemployed father going through a divorce who disguises himself as a 60-year-old Scottish nanny in order to spend more time with his three children than visitation rights permit. Sally Field appears as the wife who can no longer deal with her husband's unstable antics. Turns out that Williams makes a better father as a disciplinarian woman than he did as an unstructured man.

Directed by Chris Columbus ("Home Alone"), this comedy drama also features appearances by Harvey Fierstein as Williams' makeup artist brother and Pierce Brosnan as a rich man who chases after Field.

Grumpy Old Men (PG-13)

AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall Township; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; AMC Four, Easton

If you like crusty curmudgeons along with your ice and snow, then here's a holiday film for you.

Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau, two of Hollywood's finest character actors, who teamed up for such classics as "The Fortune Cookie" and "The Odd Couple," are reunited in this light slapstick romp that also has its bittersweet moments. With a story that takes place from Thanksgiving to Christmas, John (Lemmon) and Max (Matthau) play aging, widowed Wabasha, Minn., neighbors in their 60s who have enjoyed playing pranks on each other throughout their lives. Their mischievous ways are rekindled when Ariel, a free-spirited widow played by Ann-Margaret, moves in across the street. She puts some spark back into the old boys' lives and soon they are a fussin' and a feudin' for her affections.

Subplots abound. John's daughter (Daryl Hannah), estranged from her husband, is the object of affection for Max's son (Kevin Pollak). And John, besides trading crude insults with Max, faces the threat of foreclosure on his house by an IRS agent (Buck Henry). Burgess Meredith also appears as John's senile but still lustful 94-year-old father who dispenses inappropriate romantic advice to his son. Directed by Daniel Petrie, who did "Mystic Pizza," from a script by newcomer Mark Steven Johnson.

Gettysburg (PG)

The Roxy, Northampton Originally designed as a miniseries for Ted Turner's TNT cable channel, this 4-hour and 8-minute-long film is based on Michael Shaara's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, "The Killer Angels." This epic recounts the Civil War's three-day battle in 1863 that claimed 53,000 casualties. Tom Berenger stars as Confederate officer James Longstreet and Jeff Daniels as Union officer Joshua Lawrence Chamberlain.

Turner reportedly decided on the running length because he wanted a film that ran longer than the longest film he knew of, 1963's "Cleopatra," starring Elizabeth Taylor. "Cleopatra" — 243 minutes, "Gettysburg" — 248 minutes. If you, like Turner, equate quality with length, then this should prove satisfying.

Dazed and Confused (R)

The County Theater, Doylestown

"Slacker" writer-director Richard Linklater's second feature film is in a class all its own. This finely observed film seems aimless, but hey, life's often like that, isn't it?

Remember high school? Linklater offers us a refreshing view of the humorous, edge-of-adulthood antics of high school students that is set in 1976 on the last day of school and the first night of summer vacation.

"Dazed and Confused" is a slice-of-life comedy that is full of sequences that will ring true to anyone who lived through the '70s, whether you were the intellectual nerd, the sports hero or the motorhead. Remember just hanging out, looking for something to do, and all you end up doing is driving around with friends, looking for something to do?

Characters in this film ironically look forward to the '80s as a time that they hope will be more exciting and even freer — imagine the Reagan years as a return to the '60s they all missed and not as the "1984" lurking just around the corner.

Blink (R)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

When a blind violinist (Madeleine Stowe) has her sight surgically restored, she becomes an eyewitness to a murder in this steamy thriller. Aidan Quinn plays the Chicago police detective assigned to investigate the case.

In time-honored Hollywood tradition, Stowe and Quinn initially mix like oil and water, but eventually get involved in a romantic relationship. Michael Apted ("Coal Miner's Daughter," "Gorky Park," "Gorillas in the Mist") directs, from a story by Dana Stevens.

She's probably expecting another bottle of perfume.

But this year, I'm giving her butterflies.

The Earthtones

The sounds of Jamaica will raise the roof of the Sterling Hotel in Allentown Saturday. The Earthtones, a six-man reggae band out of State College, will bring their boisterous blend of reggae to town, fronted by their charismatic lead singer R.T.

The Earthtones play throughout the Northeast and have developed quite a following in the area, particularly at the Sterling. Manager Tim Bridy says that the band always ensures that everyone will have fun.

Even the bartenders and waitresses look forward to it. Playing a mix of original tunes and classic reggae, the Earthtones are an act that, for nine years, has made music that R.T. says "encompasses all ages" and "really brings people together, people of different cultures, different races, the young and the old." The band has 2 cassette recordings available, one of which captures them live at the 1992 Central Pennsylvania Festival of the Arts.

When asked to sum up what reggae music means to him, the Marley-influenced R.T. simply stated: "Spiritual rejuvenation. It makes people feel really good."

Trombones played from the Central Moravian Church belfry herald the start of festivals and the deaths of church members.

Central Moravian Church belfry

The distinctive belfry of Central Moravian Church has become an unofficial symbol of Bethlehem.

But there is a lot more to the belfry than meets the eye.

Designed by John Cunius, of Reading, the belfry, which houses the church bell and clock, assumed an important part of the church's heritage shortly after its construction was completed in 1805.

The church's tradition of using a trombone ensemble to announce the start of festivals and the deaths of church members continues today beneath the belfry dome.

Why trombones? Church Sexton Robin Butterfield explains that the Moravian music tradition goes back further than the invention of valved brass instruments. In colonial times, trombones were the only brass instruments available that could be played outdoors in freezing temperatures.

The belfry has an identical twin atop a Moravian Church in Downey, Calif.

In 1971, a Catsauqua steeplejack, while working on the roof of the nearby Hotel Bethlehem, noticed that the belfry seemed to be leaning.

Sure enough, instruments determined that the belfry was leaning about a foot toward the southwest. In 1972, it was straightened and fortified.

Some vital statistics:

The ball on the steeple is 40 inches in diameter and weighs 403 pounds. The weather vane is 8 feet long and 2 feet high. There are 100 steps from the first floor to bell. From the base of the belfry to the tip of the steeple is 83 feet 4 inches.

15 questions

Dick Strain

By CHRISTOPHER JUDD

In each issue, The Bethlehem Star uses this space to ask a notable resident 15 questions. This week, we spoke to Bethlehem Area Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Dick Strain. The Hanover Township resident is retiring this summer after eight years with the chamber.

Usually, the chamber is in the news when it holds a special luncheon or dinner. What does it do between these gatherings?

We try to do the work of the chamber. We assist local businesses in doing whatever they need to succeed.

Why do they call them "chambers?"

I guess I don't know, exactly. A chamber is a hall — a gathering.

If you could live anywhere else, where would it be?

How about Durango, Colorado? Because I'm from (Lamar,) Colorado.

What are the criteria for joining the chamber?

Anybody who has an interest in improving the business climate of the community.

Can newspapers join?

Of course. "The Morning Call," "The Express-Times" are members. "The Bethlehem Star" is also a member.

Does the phrase "I wouldn't want to join a club that would have me as a member" mean anything to you?

No, no, I don't think so. I've been very proud of all of the clubs I've belonged to.

Outside of the Lehigh Valley, is Bethlehem viewed as a dying steel town?

I think that the name Bethlehem to somebody who has never been here but knows Bethlehem Steel probably conjures up an image of a steel town. We're working hard to change that image.

What did you tell state lawmakers last year when you testified on legislation concerning the use of former industrial sites?

I said that business is a function of managing risk and that any law that they pass regulating the new use of industrial sites has to protect the buying company from environmental problems that may turn up years down the road.

Andrew Shumack

Don't ask Dick Strain, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, to choose between Coke and Pepsi.

Do you drink Coke or Pepsi?

Yes. Both. I have to say that because they're both members. (Mr. Strain is a former vice president and general manager of the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of the Lehigh Valley.)

Is there any special moment you'll remember from your years with the chamber?

The key thing that I'll take away is working with people who have a real interest in improving the community.

What's the concern most frequently voiced by businesses considering a site in Bethlehem?

Regulation. The business climate generally and the state's attitude towards business.

Has the city done a good job plowing the streets?

I think the city has done a good job opening and maintaining the major streets in town. Obviously, they have not restored the side streets to summertime conditions.

Has the chamber held discussions on the effects of the proposed tourism plan?

Sure. The chamber has had a special interest since the 1930s when it operated city tourism, before the formation of the tourism authority in the 1980s. Tourism is a big development opportunity.

Like many fields, the business world can be tough. How much back-stabbing goes on in Bethlehem's business circles?

I think that it's not as bad as it may have been at one time. In this era when everybody is talking about quality and employee involvement, I think people have to work together.

Who is the nicest person you know?

I would say the guy I replaced at Coca-Cola, Laury Bibighaus.
