What's the next stop for Union Station?

There is a plan to turn it into office space. This man has other ideas.

BY CHRISTOPHER JUDD

Its steel and concrete frame and tiled floor were the first thing immigrants saw upon their arrival from Ellis Island in their search for employment at Bethlehem Steel.

Built in 1925, Union Station's location provided Lehigh Valley Railroad owner Asa Packer with a steady stream of students for the school he founded, Lehigh University.

Now the station, which was once lined with decorative ceramic tiles and housed a lion's head brass water fountain, is suffering from years of disuse. It has been vacant since 1981. Windows are shattered, copper wiring has been torn out.

The city's chief zoning officer said he wants to check the roof to see if it's in danger of collapsing under the weight of record snowfall.

Despite its ramshackle condition, the building has attracted the attention of developers who see it as possible office space.

Michael Burg, a Bethlehem travel agent and founding member of the local chapter of KARP, the Keystone Association of Railroad Passengers, has a vision – an expensive vision – concerning the station.

It goes like this:

Railroad passengers make departures and arrivals on a restored Lehigh Valley-to-Philadelphia line. Others do the same on a Lehigh Valley-to-New York route.

The old station, nestled along the Lehigh River between the Fahy and Hill-to-Hill bridges, is refurbished. Outside, the masonry is repaired and broken windows are replaced.

Inside, there is a newsstand, a snack bar and a coffee shop. A ticket agent books seats on a connecting train ride or the buses outside. Also parked outside the train station/bus terminal are local LANTA buses and taxis.

Star survey: Keep it up

A little over five months ago when The Bethlehem Star was but a twinkle in the eyes of a small group of people, we took a rather bold first step.

We had already decided that in order to combat the newspaper competition from Allentown and Easton, our paper would have to be noticed quickly by readers and, just as importantly, be taken seriously by advertisers, the life blood of any newspaper.

What we decided to do was to not only give our newspaper away, but to mail it to as many households as we could possibly afford and for as long as we could afford.

That way, we would know that our new newspaper would get in the hands of readers.

There were two problems with our plan. One, we wanted wide circulation — 25,000 homes — and that costs us several thousand dollars each week in postage costs alone.

We're willing to accept that loss so that readers can get a long look at our newspaper as it grows and evolves.

The second problem was more worrisome. We realized that there is a well-deserved stigma attached to giveaway newspapers. Most free newspapers are worthless to readers and cheap, though highly ineffective advertising vehicles for businesses.

We were afraid that some people would pull The Bethlehem Star out of their mailboxes and toss it directly into the trash with the junk mail.

Our paper's design is not just for the benefit of readers. It is also designed to make advertising stand out.

Gerald Scharf is editor of The Bethlehem Star

We sincerely believe that advertisers will get results in our paper.

But, if readers were not reading it, we knew advertisers wouldn't be getting their money's worth.

So, late last month, we had a scientific survey conducted.

More than 240 households were surveyed.

The survey asked a lot of questions, but the one I was most interested in measured the percentage of people who tossed our newspaper without reading it.

The answer: an astonishingly low 3 percent.

Here are some other results from the survey:

- Two-thirds of the surveyed homes said they receive The Bethlehem Star in the mail. That agrees with our plan. We mail copies of the paper to 65 percent of Bethlehem area households.

- More than half of the households that do not get The Bethlehem Star in the mail said they have purchased it or picked it up elsewhere. A full 95 percent of the Bethlehem area's readers have read our paper.

- Of those who get it in the mail, 97 percent said they read it; 25 percent said they were so impressed they read the paper cover to cover.

All this may strike you as self-serving.

It is.

But, only 15 weeks old, our newspaper is still very new. It's only natural for people to wonder how it's doing — to wonder if it's going to stick.

The survey said, we're sticking.

The Pennsylvania Housing Finance Agency has developed a new program offering low-interest loans to first time home buyers.

The program offers a 6.8 percent fixed rate with the payment of one percent of the loan amount plus $300. The agency also operates a program for low-income families who can afford a home, but are not able to set aside enough money for down payments and closing costs. According to state Rep. T-J Rooney, (D-133rd), the agency has financed 50,000 homes to date. For more information call 1-800-822-1174.

Muhlenberg Hospital Center's new Jacob S. Kolb Ambulatory Center will officially open on March 14. The 62,000 square foot facility is named after one of the hospital's original founders.

Upon entering, patients will be seen by a triage nurse who will determine the type and severity of their illness or injury. Patients will then be sent to the proper section for the treatment they need. A Fast Track area will quickly treat minor injuries and separate Code/Trauma rooms will be on hand for emergencies. A helipad is located nearby.

On the Kolb Center's upper floor, the ambulatory surgery unit is made up of 12 private and eight semi-private rooms for individuals requiring outpatient procedures.

The Kolb Center is located on the north end of the hospital adjacent to the existing emergency department.

Invitations to the 82nd St. Luke's Hospital Charity Ball will be mailed on March 28. Deadline to R.S.V.P. is April 21.

The ball, the primary fundraising event for the hospital and its auxiliary, will be held on May 6 at the Saucon Valley Country Club. Last year's event attracted more than 1,000 guests and raised $69,000 towards the auxiliary $1 million pledge for the Hospital Campaign. This year, money will again go to the Hospital Campaign and will be directed towards the Parent-Child Health Center in the new South Wing Addition and the Education Pavilion.

The Health Center will offer such services as prenatal testing, a prepartum high-risk unit, a labor/delivery/recovery unit, a surgical delivery suite, neonatal intensive care unit, and a nursery and pediatric unit. The Education Pavilion will include classrooms and research space to be used by the School of Nursing, hospital physicians, residency programs and community education.

Bethlehem Steel Corp. has announced the retirement of Henry Von Spreckelsen, manager of corporate communications, effective March 31.

Mr. Von Spreckelsen joined the company in 1959 as a writer in its public relations department. He advanced through the years and was given broader supervisory responsibilities in developing and providing corporate media material. He was named manager of corporate communications in 1982.

Born and educated in New York City, Mr. Von Spreckelsen began his career as a civil engineer, graduating from The Cooper Union with a bachelor of civil engineering degree.

J. Michael Zaia has been elected president of subsidiary railroads of Bethlehem Steel Corp., effective April 1.

Mr. Zaia, currently vice president of operations at Bethlehem Structural Products Corp., succeeds Carl W. Eckenrode who is retiring March 31. Mr. Zaia will run the corporation's six railroads serving operations in Bethlehem, Ebensburg, Johnstown and Steelton, Pa., Sparrows Point, Md., and Lackawanna, N.Y. He joined Bethlehem Steel in 1965.

The Newcomers Club of Bethlehem will hold its next meeting on March 17, 7:30 p.m., at the Epworth Methodist Church, 3245 Oakland Road. New Bethany has been serving the poor, the homeless and the mentally ill in the Lehigh Valley since 1985. Other fund-raisers planned for 1994 are the Ice Cream Festival on June 11 and the Souper Day Luncheon on November 15. For more information or to volunteer, call Diane Nolan at 691-5602.

This is your big chance

The problem with our schools is that YOU aren't in there, sharing your ideas, dreams, problems and real life experiences with students.

You know your business. You've been around the block a few times. You remember your youthful aspirations and how they meshed with the real world after school.

You have knowledge and advice that could enrich the lives of young people.

You could make a difference — a real, positive difference — in someone's life.

Here's how:

On May 3, hundreds of people from dozens of trades, businesses and professions will take over classes in the Bethlehem Area School District.

The program, called First Step, is sponsored by the Bethlehem Area Chamber of Commerce, Bethlehem Area Jaycees, Bethlehem Education Association and the school district.

Chamber President Bert Daday said the program's goal is to enlist the help of 500 people to share information about their jobs, work ethic and values with middle school and high school students.

The idea arose from the results of yearlong study on how the community can help our school system better educate our children.

One of the key findings, Mr. Daday points out, is that the entire community must get involved to help enrich the district's academic curricula.

That's where you come in. All you have to do now is contact the chamber and say you will help.

You can spend a half day or a whole day. Once you sign up, you'll be sent a packet of information to help you prepare and you'll be assigned to the teacher and class with which you'll be working.

As of early this week, more than 280 people have offered their support.

The list includes some of the Valley's most successful people. Among them are Walt Dealtrey, entrepreneur and civic leader; Andrew Cook, CEO of Lehigh Valley Bank; Bill Brackbill, Northampton County executive; Gary Shorts, publisher of The Morning Call;

David McCollum, general manager of The Express-Times; and Mayor Ken Smith.

The lousy weather of late has put nearly everyone behind at work, so some people may have delayed joining this important project.

Chamber officials report there is a special need for trades people, plumbers, carpenters, electricians and the like, to share their work.

We applaud the organizations that are sponsoring this program and the people who are participating.

It's good for our students and its good for our community.

To join, contact the chamber at 867-3788, or by fax at 758-9533.

We hope to see you there in May.

Taxpayers wait in Bethlehem Twp.

To the Editor:

Citizens who attend the Bethlehem Township Commissioners meetings should be aware of the change in their format. If you want to talk during the courtesy of the floor segment, you will have to now wait until all the developers are done with their business first.

At the beginning of the meeting, you may only speak about items that are on the agenda. If you have a complaint or want to offer advice, or even compliment, you will then have to wait until all other business is concluded. This means that citizens (taxpayers) have to wait until 9 or 10 p.m. or even later, depending how much our commissioners rattle on about some minor subjects, and some of our commissioners are very good at orating.

Is this new format adopted to discourage citizens from their input and attendance at meetings? Most residents are home at that time, tending to their families or retiring for the evening.

The commissioners have forgotten who elected them to office. Most developers are not taxpayers or citizens. I hope our citizens (electorate) remember this at election time.

I urge all residents of the township to come to the meetings. You don't have to get there till approximately 9 p.m.; by that time the developers and their lawyers will have left and then the commissioners will be ready to hear from us taxpayers, who voted them in. Citizens are last with these guys. I know that I'll remember.

Sincerely,
Edith Seip

Uliana criticized on abortion stand

Dear Mr. Scharf:

My wife recently received a pamphlet in the mail from State Rep. Joe Uliana on the importance of breast cancer screening. While I am glad that Mr. Uliana is concerned about the lives of women who are at risk from this dread disease, I wish that he was also concerned about the women and teenage girls who will die as a result of the Pennsylvania Abortion Control Act. At a 1993 town meeting, Mr. Uliana indicated that not only does he support this discriminatory and simple-minded law but that he also favors a ban on all abortions except for cases of rape or incest. These views should be kept in mind by all voters who believe that personal decisions such as abortion are best made by individuals without the interference of big government. As a matter of fact, the last people that I would want advising my 33 year old, college educated wife on the matter of abortion would be the faceless bureaucrats of the state Health Department.

Student supports community service

To the Editor:

First of all, I want to tell you how much I enjoy your newspaper. It does a true service to Bethlehem by picking up on some of the news that larger papers miss. I have been especially interested in all the coverage you have given the mandatory community service program in the BASD. And I really enjoyed hearing Tisha Melendez's view on the program because I am also a BASD student who supports the community service program.

Like Tisha, I was a little wary of the program at first. But I knew that I would have to do it, so I began volunteering in the ICU at Muhlenberg Hospital Center the summer after my freshman year at Freedom High School. To be honest, I thought I would serve my 60 hours and then say good-bye. However, that was not the case.

After I completed 60 hours of service at MHC, I decided to continue working there. And I can honestly say it is one of the best decisions I have ever made. Working at MHC has taught me a lot about helping others, communicating with other people, and working with other people. And most of all, it has helped me decide to pursue a career as a physician.

When I receive my diploma from Freedom, I hope it will be with all my classmates. But if some of them decide not to fulfill their community service requirement, I hope the school district stays true to the program and denies them graduation. I will be able to receive my diploma with pride, knowing that I did more than just study to earn it; I also helped my community, thanks to the BASD mandatory community service program.

Sincerely,
Mary Thomas

A Bedlam of pronunciations

Toe-mate-toe or toe-mot-toe has nothing on the daily battle (OK, it's more of a passing interest than a battle) of how to pronounce the name of the city we live in.

People in and around the Lehigh Valley are truly hooked on phonics, squeezing every possible variation out of nine letters: Beth-li-hem, Beth-la-hem, Beth-lee-hem, Beth-lee-em, Beth-lum and even Bet-lum.

Count Zinzendorf, the guy who christened this town on Christmas Eve 1741, was a German who spoke no English. His official utterance that historic night probably would have been Bait-le (short "e")-hem with the accent on the first syllable and no "h" sound.

A Frenchman, Gen. Lafayette, would have passed through looking for the town of Bait-le-hem with the accent on the last syllable. It was the British who brought the "th" sound with them.

The Hebrew pronunciation of the original town in Israel would have been Bait-lechem where the "ch" is a hard guttural sound like the "ch" in Chanukah. There was no German or English equivalent of that sound, so it literally got lost in the translation.

A telephone call to the present-day town in Israel connected me with a young Arabic named Sammy, who happened to be the only English-speaking person in the vicinity of the switchboard at the University of Bethlehem.

While he didn't understand why anyone would make an overseas call about it, he said that an Arab would say he lived in Bet-li (short "i")-hem with the accent on the last syllable.

Rob Gerth is a free-lance television producer, director and writer who gives his place of residence as — the Christmas City.

"Unless," Sammy told me, "you spoke Arabic with the British accent, then it would sound just like I said, except with a British accent." Thanks Sammy.

How did some versions lose a whole syllable?

St. Mary of Bethlehem in London, England, was founded in 1247 as a monastery. Over time, some local Londoners (writings hint the less educated) were pronouncing Bethlehem as "Bedlem." Two hundred years later the monastery had become a hospital and St. Mary of Bethlehem was being used mainly as a lunatic asylum.

Bedlem (or "bedlam") became synonymous to "confusion and noise like one would expect to find in a group of maniacs."

Someone from St. Mary's was considered a Bedlam or Bedlamite as in, "The Duke, imagining him to be a fool or a Bedlamite, let him go."

The Steel has always shaped our area. There is actual film footage from 1945 of longtime Chairman Eugene Grace referring to the place he ran as the Beth-li (short "i")-hem Steel Corp. Twenty years before that, the Wall Street crowd was trading one of the best blue chip stocks around calling it "Bessie" Steel (probably as in, "Come on Bessie give, baby's got to live.")

Where po-tay-toe and po-tah-toe really counts is on the air waves, right? The news/talk radio in the valley, WAEB-AM, doesn't have rules for this sort of thing (although most agree that it's long "e"-may-us). Brian Downs, who is originally from outside our town, says he prefers Beth-li (short "i")-hem. News director Matt Kerr, who was born and raised in Phillipsburg says, "Beth-lee-hem."

TV news anchor Rob Vaughn has lived here six years, "I've always said Beth-li-hem." According to Rob, at Channel 69 that pronunciation is an unwritten rule for all news reporters.

What does the ultimate authority, the dictionary, say? Bad news. Take your pick: Beth-li-hem, Beth-lee-hem, and even Beth-lee-em.

Sorry, no two syllable versions in any of the unabridged editions at the Bet, ah, Beth, Bait, la, lee, li, le, ummm, lum, heim, Library.

What-da-ya-say we call da whole ting uff now?

cover story

Big plans on track for station

Andrew Shumack

A developer envisions a revival of the bustling transportation hub at the abandoned Union Station on the city's South Side. The station would not only serve rail passengers, but would replace the present bus terminal, shown below.

From the cover

In the building next to the station is a visitors center. Tour buses make regular departures.

KARP has applied for a $320,000 federal grant to acquire the parcels and buildings.

An unidentified potential buyer is reportedly working on a deal with Donald Goodman, of Bethlehem Furniture Manufacturing Company, owner of the buildings and property.

The site hasn't been used since the last passenger train to Philadelphia departed the station in 1981. By then it was a stop on the SEPTA line. The Lehigh Valley Railroad's Black Diamond service to New York ended in 1961.

The Lehigh Valley and Reading Railroads sold the property to Conrail in 1976. Conrail later sold it to the city of Bethlehem, for $1,000. Mr. Goodman purchased the building for $2,000 with the understanding that he would turn it into a restaurant and shops.

Those plans were never realized.

This is not the first time a railroad enthusiast has dreamed of bringing passenger trains back to the Lehigh Valley.

About three miles south of Union Station, Rodney Fisk's vision is chugging closer to reality.

The former Easton resident, who has for years tried unsuccessfully to convince people that the Lehigh Valley needs passenger rail service, began seriously pitching Bethlehem-to-Philadelphia service to SEPTA last year. SEPTA, the Philadelphia area transit authority and owner of the tracks, is still listening.

Bucks County commissioners are expected to vote on a non-binding bond resolution backing the $36 million project. SEPTA's board of directors could vote in late April or early May. If approved the first train could depart from a station just north of Hellertown in the summer of 1995. A park-and-ride for potential passengers is located in the borough, off of Interstate 78.

The two things that Mr. Fisk has going for him that Mr. Burg does not is a funding plan and time.

On March 16, the state Transportation Department, which administers the Transportation Enhancement Program, will review local funding sources and KARP hasn't secured any.

The cost to acquire the 6.3 acres is $400,000. The grant only covers 80 percent, or $320,000. The remainder could be covered by the city of Bethlehem, Northampton County or LANTA, but none have signed on.

As a result, the Joint Planning Commission of Lehigh and Northampton Counties, which graded eight local grant applications, lists Union Station as a low priority.

The city has not been formally approached by KARP. There hasn't been time. Mr. Burg spotted the Re/Max Real Estate banner on the property in October 1993.

The group learned about the availability of a grant a little more than a month before the Jan. 14 deadline to file, he said.

The application requires detailed information. With the help of state Rep. T. J. Rooney, (D-133rd), the paperwork was filled out and hand-delivered to PennDOT about five hours before deadline.

"My concern is to see the site put to its best use," said Mr. Rooney.

Mr. Rooney met with the potential buyer, identified only as the owner of a Bethlehem computer software firm.

Mr. Rooney said he found out about the firm "really by accident." He had been working with KARP when the owner of the firm came into his district office on unrelated business, noticed a drawing of Union Station, and said he was looking to buy it.

He declined to name the company, but said he saw drawings of the site plan.

"It's gorgeous," he said, adding that it retains its exterior design. "They would re-do the station. You could have commercial, or high-tech firms there."

There are hopes that the site could accommodate both the business and an intermodal facility. However, Mr. Rooney said that doesn't appear likely at this time.

"That's not something that they could benefit by. And if they're ready to proceed, I don't want to stand in their way," he said.

City Business Administrator Robert Wilkins has been trying to facilitate a deal in the absence of a Bethlehem Economic Devel-

He plans to soon meet with members of KARP.

Without providing details, he said the software firm is not the only party interested in the station.

Mayor Ken Smith said he also hopes to meet with a KARP representative, but he harbors no illusions about Union Station and the restoration of passenger rail service.

"I'm all in favor of that. But I'd like to see a demonstration that that will happen," said Mr. Smith.

The mayor and the JPC said there are two reasons why east-west passenger trains will continue to bypass the Lehigh Valley: Trans Bridge and Bieber, two charter bus lines that service Bethlehem.

"Trans Bridge and Bieber do well to New York," said Mr. Smith. "Could rail compete with the buses? And I can't imagine the buses would let trains be subsidized while they have to work with private funds," he said.

Then there's the current Bethlehem bus terminal. It's actually a white trailer located between Third and Fourth streets near Lehigh University.

Mr. Burg, 36, a travel agent and Night Light Christmas tour guide, said the terminal/trailer is not the first sight visitors should see.

Mr. Smith said its location is good for students who make up 70 percent of terminal traffic.

"At best, it's temporary. Everybody would like to see a new terminal on South Side," the mayor said.

JPC Executive Director Michael Kaiser said KARP's grant application deserved it received when measured by factors including "scenic or historic highway programs," "historic preservation," and landscaping and other scenic beautification.

"Frankly, I think some of the rail people have yet to prove their case" about demand and cost of passenger rail, he said.

"You have to get down to the nuts and bolts and practicality," said Mr. Kaiser. "That does not rate high on the list of transportation problems in the area," he said.

Three projects that received "high priority" grades were Delaware Canal wall restoration in Easton and Williams Township, Ironton Railroad right-of-way acquisition in Whitehall Township, and repair to Lehigh Canal locks in Walnutport Borough.

A request for $16,000 for bicycle racks in Bethlehem's parks and $8,000 to put bicycle lockers in city parking lots were graded "low priorities."

Mr. Burg said he can answer some of the criticism.

Buses are not directly subsidized, he said, but roads and bridges, which they use, are paid for with tax dollars. And trains don't cause as much pollution.

Mr. Burg said he is not a railroad romantic, although KARP is full of them statewide. He said he can't really tell one type of engine from another.

One of KARP's allies has been

Amtrak, the passenger rail carrier. In 1991, Congress directed Amtrak to come up with a list of areas that it did not serve, but would like to. The Lehigh Valley made the list.

Amtrak was supposed to study the service this year. A spokesman now says there are no plans for such a study because the cost of the service would be too prohibitive.

City officer wounds suspect

A Bethlehem man was shot by a city police officer late Monday night on East Fourth Street on the South Side.

Nigel Monroe Harvey, whose last known address is 2418 Henderson Place, was taken to Lehigh Valley Hospital with a gunshot wound after an encounter with a patrolman.

Bethlehem police said that the officer had been called out to investigate people throwing snowballs when he heard shots fired at 8 p.m. When the officer arrived at the intersection, a pedestrian pointed to the moving car from which the shot apparently were being fired. The officer followed the car, stopping it in the 1200 block of East Fourth Street, with the help of another patrolman.

Mr. Harvey, Rafael Perez of 610 Fiot St. and Michael James Mills of 3011 East Blvd. were identified as the individuals in the car. They got out of the car and an encounter occurred, police said. One officer fired his weapon, wounding Mr. Harvey. No one else was injured.

Charges are pending against Mr. Harvey, police said. Mr. Perez and Mr. Mills were charged with receiving stolen property and carrying firearms without a license.

Bethlehem police would not release the name of the officers involved. The information was not available from state police sources.

Northampton County District Attorney John Morganelli will appoint a deputy attorney to take charge of the matter, since the patrolman has been a client of Meanwhile, Union Station continues to age rather ungracefully, making its next stop a matter of considerable question.

John Rohal, executive director of the Bethlehem Redevelopment Authority, said Mr. Goodman has been in default of an agreement to turn the building into commercial space.

Under state law, Mr. Goodman can sell the building for what he paid for it, plus whatever money he put into the building's maintenance, Mr. Rohal said.

Correction

William Gombocz of Bethlehem has not been charged in connection with the holdup of a city jewelry store. A story in the Last Week section of the March 3 issue of The Bethlehem Star incorrectly reported Mr. Gombocz connection with the crime.

Playing with pain

By TOM HARPER

Before, the 1993-94 the Moravian College wrestling program had just four All-Americans.

Now, thanks to Andy Koch, they have five.

At the NCAA Division III Wrestling Championships at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point on Saturday, Mr. Koch, a senior, earned the elite status by placing seventh overall in the 150-pound weight bracket. The top eight finishers receive All-America honors.

Mr. Koch's accomplishment is magnified by the fact that, before February, the only the thing he could wrestle with was pain. In a pre-Thanksgiving tournament at Ohio State University that featured Division I wrestlers, he dislocated a rib on his right side in his second match.

"In the beginning I couldn't even sit down. I stood for the whole tournament," said the 23-year-old who posted 84 wins while wrestling for Saucon Valley High School.

"The doctor at the tournament told me that I wouldn't be able to come back. I was really depressed. I didn't want to have anything to do with wrestling after that."

But he had heard the voices of doubt linger before. In the week before the Middle Atlantic Conference playoffs in his freshman season, he learned he had a congenital condition in both hips. He went on to wrestle in the tournament, placing second, but then was red-shirted his sophomore year, sitting out the next 22 months away from the sport he has enjoyed since age 7.

"I went to nine doctors and underwent two hip surgeries, one in February and in November," Mr. Koch recalled. "After the second operation, I didn't think I would wrestle ever again."

He returned — he still has to take an anti-inflammatory drug for his condition every day during the wrestling season — to begin his second year of eligibility.

With the past serving as a reminder of his rehabilitation and recovery he was determined to make yet another return to the mat. "I wanted to prove to myself that I could come back, that I would compete again."

Compounding the problem was the knee injury that kept his older brother Tom, who wrestles for Lehigh, out of action. A big fan of his older brother, Andy couldn't even go see him wrestle while recuperating. That, he said, made for a lousy Christmas.

To aid his own return he rode a stationary bike to give his lungs a solid workout. He also wore a rib brace when he was able to start drilling again — thanks to his dad, who had a brace especially made for his son.

His comeback proved successful. He returned in February in time for a match against Albright, the second-to-last meet of the season. Admittedly, he wasn't in the best of shape, having just practiced four days. But as he said, "I was so enthusiastic to wrestle. I was very pumped up, maybe too pumped up."

He ended up victorious in his debut match, and won his final two matches of the regular season as well, all by decision.

At the MAC Championships at Juniata College on Feb. 19, Mr. Koch showed no signs of atrophy against the league's best, winning his second straight conference title at 150 pounds. Teammate Eric August joined him as conference champion at 158 pounds.

"It felt good for me, but it definitely helped him a lot," said Mr. August. "When he won, I think he Freedom High School diver Jonathan Cotton does his Patriotic best during a warm-up dive at the District XI championships last Friday at Allen High School. Mr. Cotton missed first place by just 6 points to Parkland's Scott Ricci. Among the girls, Freedom's Tara Tokarczyk placed fourth, the best finish for a local swimmer. Allen's Cortney Stauffer won the competition with a district-record 435.95 points. The overall team championship was decided the next day, when the Freedom girls placed third (203, behind Emmaus and champion Parkland). Liberty was fifth. But the Hurricane, behind Kevin Bueheler's first-place awards in the 200 freestyle (1:45.43) and the 500 freestyle (4:46.09), finished in fourth place overall (139), one position higher than the Patriots (134). Freedom's Jim Broughal broke the record for the 100 butterfly with a time of 52.08, and also won the 100 freestyle (47.64).

All-American plays with pain realized that he had the ability to win again." One week later he captured first place at the NCAA Division III Eastern Regional Wrestling Qualifier at Elizabethtown College. And then came Nationals. After losing his first match to Mike Palesky of Brockport State 7-3, he won a decision over Ohio Northern's Tom Mokros 9-5 in the seventh/eighth place round to cap off his remarkable comeback. "I was so thrilled. I started jumping up and down all over the mat," Mr. Koch said of his accomplishment. "I knew the next day that I was going to be an All-American. But it's just starting to sink in now." "He deserves winning at Nationals," said Mr. August. "He's worked so hard."

"I went to nine doctors and underwent two hip surgeries, one in February and in November. After the second operation, I didn't think I would wrestle ever again."

Andy Koch

But while he savors the glory, the realization that his collegiate career is now over has also crept in. But he says "there is no way I'm getting away from wrestling." He thinks he could see himself helping out somewhere as an assistant coach, perhaps at Liberty, where his good friend Jody Karam is the coach. "I don't know how much more my body can take," Mr. Koch said when asked about the possibility of continuing to wrestle. Although he doesn't rule out participating in an open tournament somewhere, he won't miss a certain razzing of Mr. August and his teammates. "I fold up my warm-up clothes before every practice and meet. People say I'm too fastidious, too anal retentive."

Aside from his future in the sport Mr. Koch will continue to pursue his career in medical technology. A double major in both that field and biology, along with a minor in chemistry at Moravian, he currently interns at Sacred Heart Hospital as a medical technician. Should he decide not to follow a career in either wrestling or science, he still has one passion to venture into - bicycling. He did manage to place sixth overall at the Latin Festival Criterium in Reading over the summer. But, as he is quick to admit, "I'm not as good at bicycling as I am at wrestling." Looking back, Mr. Koch considers himself quite fortunate, despite the serious injuries that plagued him. "I've had a lot of people to help me get through it all. My family pushed me on. Keri (his girlfriend of four years) helped me a lot. "I finally did it (earn All-American status), and on the last week-end of my competitive career. I couldn't be happier."

Keeping the beat with easy formula

For all of my childhood and almost all of my adult life, the term "simple math" has represented a contradiction in terms. "Oxymoron" is, I believe, the word used in literature to describe such a condition. The last five letters of that word capably describe the efficiency and enthusiasm with which I attacked things numerical.

So you can imagine the panic that set in when I returned to college for a master's degree in health and physical education, and was told much of what I was going to learn would involve those dreaded words "simple math."

Well, I survived. And along the way I learned a formula that would help me determine whether the cardiovascular exercise I was undertaking was of sufficient intensity to benefit me. It was a formula that, yes, involved simple math.

I know what you're thinking, but if I can do it, you can do it.

The formula was created sometime in the 1950s by a Scandinavian named Dr. M.J. Karvonen. Unfortunately for the good professor, he lived prior to the exercise explosion, and never got to cash in with a best-selling book, an exercise video, or a multimillion dollar endorsement contract.

What Dr. Karvonen devised was a method to calculate one's "target heart rate," the heart rate one should seek to attain during cardiovascular exercise if the activity is to offer any health benefits.

The way he chose to identify target heart rate (THR) was to first take a person's maximum heart rate (MHR) and from that subtract his or her resting heart rate (RHR). That figure becomes your "heart rate reserve" (HRR), or the number of heart beats you can call upon for activity — the range between resting and maximum.

So far, our formula reads $MHR - RHR = HRR$. Not too hard, right?

You would then calculate a percentage of that HRR depending upon how intensely you wanted to work out. For instance, if you were just starting to exercise, you would use maybe 50 percent of heart-rate reserve, or multiply times .50. If you were more experienced, or training for an event, you could go as high as 85 percent or .85.

Now, our formula reads $MHR - RHR \times .50$ or $.85$. Again, not too hard. This tells us how many beats of our heart rate reserve we want to use during exercise. To translate that into beats-per-minute, we must add our resting heart rate. So our formula reads $THR = MHR - RHR \times .50 + RHR$.

Let me use myself as an example. For most of the population, the maximum heart rate is determined by subtracting your age from the figure 220. I will soon turn 49 years old, so my maximum heart rate is $220 - 49$ or 171 beats per minute. That's the ballpark figure beyond which I dare not venture. (And unless something large and nasty is chasing me, it won't be a problem.)

To calculate my resting heart rate, I used the average of three pulse readings taken first thing in the morning on three successive days.

To take your pulse, sit up straight and relax. Turn your right hand palm up, and place the first two fingers of your left hand over your wrist at the base of the thumb. There, you should find your pulse. Trust me, it's there. It's most accurate first thing in the morning.

Count the number of pulse beats for 15 seconds and multiply by four. Do that three mornings in a row, take the average figure, and that is your resting rate.

My resting heart rate is 65 beats per minute. I should never go lower than that if I want to benefit from cardiovascular exercise. Also, as I said above, I never want to go above my maximum of 171 beats per minute. So the range between those two figures ($171 - 65$) gives me 106 beats of heart rate reserve.

But I don't want to use all 106 beats of my heart rate reserve because that gets dangerously close to my maximum. Let's say I want to use just 70 percent. So I multiply my heart rate reserve by .70, and get the figure 74 ($106 \times .70 = 74$).

This figure represents a fraction (70 percent) of my heart-rate reserve. To give me a proper measure of exercise intensity, therefore, I must add my resting heart rate (65 beats per minute) back into the equation. Now I'm exercising at 139 beats per minute.

So whenever I complete a cardiovascular workout, I immediately will take my pulse and see how close I came to that figure.

Try it yourself. Your should find the math quite simple.

Comets place in playoff

By TOM HARPER

You can call them squirts as much as you like.

But, please, also call them champions.

The Lehigh Valley Comets Squirt "A" youth ice hockey team captured the silver medal in Saturday's Atlantic Regional District Championships held at the American Hockey and Ice Skating Center in Farmingdale, N.J.

The feat accentuated the fact that no A level team in the 15-year history of the Comets had ever reached the playoffs.

Not bad for a group of 10- and 11-year-olds.

The squad, a member of the 15-team Delaware Valley Hockey League (DVHL), finished the regular season with an 18-3 record in the Olympic Division. Along with National Division nemesis Valley Forge, they represented the DVHL in the three-day tournament, facing off against two New Jersey champions, the American Eagles and the Pennsauken Thunderbirds.

What makes the team's accomplishment all the more impressive is their roster size — or lack of it. While other teams in the league can produce as many as three lines of 14 to 16 skaters with two goalies, the Comets have just 11 players on their roster (10 boys and one girl) with just one goalie.

Despite the lack of bench strength, the team lost just once in the tournament, a 3-2 setback to the Thunderbirds in the medal round. The team had previously knocked off Valley Forge 2-1 and tied the Eagles 3-3.

"The kids have earned the respect of their opponents from Washington to New York," said head coach Pete MacGregor in his first year at the helm. "They may not fully appreciate what they've accomplished until their college years. It's remarkable for such a small team to pull off what they did."

While they will enjoy their success for now, there's still plenty of hockey left to play. The Lehigh Valley Comets Invitational Tournament begins on Friday and runs through Sunday. The games will be played at the Lehigh Valley Ice Arena in Whitehall, the team's home ice. Game times have not yet been announced.

Even the Easter Bunny will provide hockey action for the team, with a Canadian twist. Coach MacGregor and his players have been invited to serve as United States representatives in the Toronto Invitational over the holiday weekend.

The deli Goosey Gander on Fourth Street in Bethlehem is the team's major sponsor for the Toronto tournament.

"I consider myself very lucky to be part of such a successful program," Mr. MacGregor said, smiling. "We've had a good year."

It's hard to dispute that. In addition to coaching the successful Squirt "A"s, he is also project coordinator for Merck Pharmaceutical, a company voted by Fortune 500 magazine as the Most Admired Company in America for the seventh straight year.

Coach MacGregor previously coached championship football, ice hockey and lacrosse programs at the high school level at Haverford and Episcopal Academy. While attending Haverford he, with the support of his uncle, Joe Scott, established the first ice hockey program at the high school.

Mr. Scott knows something

What makes the team's accomplishment all the more impressive is their roster size — or lack of it. While other teams in the league can produce as many as three lines of 14 to 16 skaters with two goalies, the Comets have just 11 players on their roster (10 boys and one girl) with just one goalie.

about hockey. He is an original owner of the Philadelphia Flyers during the Stanley Cup years and is enshrined in the franchise's Hall of Fame. His son Greg presently runs Hockey Central for the organization.

Although he has enjoyed personal prosperity, Mr. MacGregor says the success of this year's squad belongs to his athletes. "To have the kids of this caliber at such a young age, it's phenomenal. What they've accomplished is truly remarkable."

He is equally quick to praise the dedicated efforts of his assistant coaches. "Communication among coaches has contributed greatly to the success of this year's team. Jim Lovering, Tom Tomasic and Larry Young, along with manager Bernie Fuhrmann, have volunteered their time, free of charge, to help these children reach their status as district silver medal champions."

The Squirt "A"s have had to work hard all season long on the ice — and just to play on it as well. Due to the costs of rink time, the team has been forced on numerous occasions to practice outside in the snow and freezing rain on the rink at Bethlehem Municipal City Park to try and keep up with the other teams.

To avoid such alternatives, the athletes, coaches and parents organized fund-raisers, such as hoagie and pizza sales and raffle drawings for tickets to Flyers' games and weekend trips to the Poconos.

"The parents have sacrificed so much of their time and money with hotel bills and tournament costs," Mr. MacGregor said. "We can't thank them enough."

But he can thank his players for their contributions on the ice. Captain Shady Young, who has been chosen to carry the American flag for the team in Toronto, is who Mr. MacGregor calls "without a doubt, the cornerstone of our success, a catalyst on the team." Shady leads the team with 50 goals and 40 assists.

Then there is goalie Kevin Fuhrmann, whose father Bernie serves as team manager. Nicknamed "Stonewall Furball" by his teammates, he has an outstanding goals-against average of 1.81 and saves over 90 percent of his opponents' shots.

"Kevin never missed a game, sick or healthy. He was there when we needed him," said Mr. MacGregor. "His presence in the net has enabled us to reach the District silver medal championship."

You could talk about each one of these players at length. There is the team's second-leading scorer Nick Matto, who is complemented by the offensive play of Mark Tomasic, Tom Leuber, Josh Lovering and Russell Heidler.

Then there is the skills of defenseman — er, defensewoman — Jen Fischl, who along with teammates Craig Headman, Peter MacGregor and Taylor Cameron, held opposing offenses to just five power-play goals all season long. "This defensive group turned in a sterling performance at the District playoffs," Coach MacGregor said.

Next season some players will move up to the Comets' Pee Wee level (for ages 12 and 13). But the trophy for this season will always read the same: "Atlantic Amateur Hockey Association Second Place."

Not bad for a bunch of Squirts.

Hotline connects teachers, parents

BY JANET WORSLEY

The days of lost report cards and forgotten homework assignments are coming to an end. There will be no more confusion about when grades are sent home, or what time the parent-teacher conferences are. No longer will parents have to wonder if their child honestly has no homework, or is just saying that because a favorite TV show is on.

All because of the Donegan Elementary School's Homework Hotline or the new Farmersville Elementary School's Parent-Teacher Communication Line.

Through the hotlines, callers can get information about school closings, class assignments, upcoming events and even lunch menus, 24 hours a day.

The system, which is made up of voice mailboxes, is intended to provide closer communication between teachers and parents, and allow parents to become more involved in their child's education.

"When I was in elementary school, teachers were always giving kids papers to take home," said Ron Alberti, a partner in A.C. Computers, which set up the system at Farmersville. "A lot gets lost on the way, and parents can get lost, too."

Not anymore. For example, on Donegan's Homework Hotline, one third-grade teacher reminds her students to practice their times tables, and have a spelling test signed by their parents. Another option tells parents the time of the PTA meeting, and the date report cards are being sent home.

The Donegan Homework Hotline, officially known as the Class Hotline Information Program, or CHIP, has been in operation for about a year. Principal Ron Szabo said the system is great. "It's nice to be able to use the latest technology," he said.

CHIP is provided to Donegan free of charge by the Personal Touch Answering Service. Vince Ross, owner and president of A Personal Touch, said that such hotlines will become a necessity in the future.

"Everything you hear these days, even Clinton's speeches, stresses the importance of communication in education, making sure that kids are going to school and getting their homework done," he said.

Beverly Martin, assistant principal at Donegan, said the hotline makes for greater parent-teacher communication, and gives the parent a way of checking up on their child. "There's no out for the child who doesn't want to do his homework," she said.

The system also cuts down on nonemergency phone calls to the school office, freeing staff members for other work. Mr. Ross reports that between Jan. 20 and Feb. 2 of this year, CHIP answered almost 30,000 calls.

Farmersville Elementary School is the first to follow in Donegan's footsteps. Their system, provided at no cost by A.C. Computers, just went into effect last month.

Unlike CHIPS, the Farmersville communication line also allows parents to leave messages for teachers or the principal. Parents can report an absent child or keep teachers posted on student progress.

So far, Mr. Alberti of A.C. Computers said, the hotline receives about 50 calls a day. He, too, is searching for sponsors for the project.

Dr. David Ongiri, principal at Farmersville, said he feels the new communication line is a "powerful tool."

"We can stop problems before they start," said Dr. Ongiri, because parents can express concerns directly to the teacher or principal without the hassle of unreturned phone calls or busy signals. "A parent can call over the weekend, and get a response before school starts on Monday," he said.

In a written statement, Bethlehem's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Curtis H. Barnette said the company will use the estimated $309 million in net proceeds from the offering to fund a portion of its recorded liabilities to its benefit pension plans.

Mr. Barnette said the sale will improve the company's capital structure and overall financial position and reduce its annual pension expense by improving pension fund earnings.

BEDCO finds new executive

Donna Taggart, director of administration at Lehigh Valley Industrial Park Inc., was named the new executive vice president of the Bethlehem Economic Development Corporation.

She will assume the post on April 1, succeeding Kerry Wrobel, who left in January to take a position at Binney & Smith in Forks Township. Mrs. Taggart was chosen from 60 applicants and six finalists.

Gutter ball for bowling center

The Bethlehem Zoning Hearing Board voted 3-0 against plans for a $3 million bowling alley, restaurant, and bowling supply center in Lehigh Valley Industrial Park I.

Terry Brenneman, owner of Town and Country Lanes in Bethlehem and the new Parkway Lanes in Allentown, wanted to locate the center in the former UPS building in the park. Many LVIP businesses were against the plan.

Rooney faces Republican challenge

A Republican from Hanover Township beat last week's filing deadline to create a race in the 133rd state House District.

Andrew Roman, a Federal Express courier, is seeking the seat held by T.J. Rooney, of Fountain Hill. Mr. Rooney is in his first term representing a district that includes part of Bethlehem. He has no Democratic opposition.

A Republican race for McHale's seat

A second Republican entered the race for the seat held by U.S. Rep. Paul McHale (D-15th) of Bethlehem.

Robert D. Kilbanks, an Easton realtor, will face Allentown business owner James Yeager in the GOP primary. Mr. McHale has no Democratic primary opposition. Victor Mazziotti is the Patriot Party candidate.

Judge rules against accused killer

Northampton County Judge William F. Moran has refused to suppress statements made by the man charged with killing the owner of the La Casa Blanca bar on South Side Bethlehem.

Judge Moran ruled that there is no evidence that Charles E. Rinker, 19, of Allentown, asked for an attorney during videotaped questioning by Bethlehem police after his Jan. 25, 1993 arrest.

Police allege that Mr. Rinker shot Carlos Gonzalez, 47, of 1012 E. 3rd St., and two bar patrons on Jan. 9, 1993. Mr. Gonzalez was shot as he tried to clear a party from the bar on Evans Street.

Police: Man pointed gun at officer

Rudolfo Villanueva, 36, of Allentown was charged with criminal attempt to commit homicide after a struggle near Bethlehem Steel on Saturday.

Police said Mr. Villanueva was the passenger of a car that was stopped on Evans Street during a shooting probe. The suspect allegedly grabbed the gun of a company security guard who arrived to assist police. Before he could be subdued, police said Mr. Villanueva pointed the gun at the head of Patrolman Edward Swartley. He was also charged with possession of cocaine and resisting arrest.

City man, 1 — muggers, 0

A city man was injured when he fought off four would-be muggers in Bethlehem last Thursday night.

Rodney Hunsicker told police four men jumped from behind a bush on the 700 block of Linden Street at around 11 p.m. One punched him in the eye. Police said the victim was able to land a kick before he fell to the icy sidewalk and was set upon. The attackers punched and kicked Mr. Hunsicker and demanded money. He absorbed the blows and eventually they gave up, fleeing west on Garrison Street. Mr. Hunsicker refused medical treatment.

Officer buried

The funeral for Bethlehem police officer William Kinch was held Saturday at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Catasauqua. Mr. Kinch, 43, died of cancer on March 2. Fellow officers served as pallbearers.

IN THE SCHOOLS

Enrollment drops at vo-tech

Officials at the Bethlehem Area Vocational-Technical School reported an 11 percent drop in enrollment this year as more students opted for traditional high school programs. 209 fewer students attended this year than last.

Director Donald Foellner said that this was the first drop in five years, and that many of the students who planned to attend vo-tech changed their minds due to scheduling conflicts.

Other students said they were dissatisfied with the vo-tech program, and some said they had changed their career goals.

In the future, Mr. Foellner said, vo-tech's ethnic, cultural and academic diversity will be stressed as a strength of the school. He also said that officials will begin holding exit interviews to discover why students leave the program.

Army Reserve School to be closed

The U.S. Army Reserve Force School, on Airport Road in Bethlehem, is scheduled to be closed under a plan from the Pentagon.

The Pentagon's plan calls for the elimination of 55,100 positions from the National Guard and reserves by the end of September this year. Bethlehem reservists were primarily instructors who taught leadership and training skills required for promotion.

The Bethlehem school employed 110 reservists, most of whom will be reassigned. The four other units at the Bethlehem center will not be affected by the change. There is no date set for the closing.

Packet of powder was Tylenol

A packet of white powder found at Nitschmann Middle School two weeks ago and believed to have been methamphetamine turned out to be Tylenol, police said.

Edward J. Crawford, assistant principal, found the packet on the floor near the auditorium while on his way to talk with two sixth-grade students who may have been planning on bringing drugs into the school.

When questioned, one boy said he was given the packet by the other boy, and it must have fallen out of his pocket.

The packet tested positive for methamphetamine and cocaine, yet when it was taken to the state crime lab to be identified, it was found to be Tylenol.

Mr. Crawford will meet with Patrolman Joseph Gross to determine what charges, if any, will be filed against the boys.

NCC projects approved

Bethlehem Township Commissioners gave conditional final approval to an addition to Northampton Community College's conference training center Monday night.

The 35,000-square-foot addition, located off of Green Pond Road, will house five laboratories, five classrooms and an electro-technology application center. Construction is planned for May.

Also, NCC trustees approved a 10-year agreement with Pennsylvania Entertainment Network, a wireless cable network.

Vista Vision Inc., parent company of the network, has agreed to pay the application fee and provide the school with equipment to transmit and receive broadcasts. In return, NCC would lease all but a few of the channels to Vista Vision to broadcast commercial stations.

PSEA's president ready to mobilize

The Pennsylvania State Education Association is ready to fight for eroding support as political attitudes in Harrisburg are changing.

Annette Palutis, president of PSEA, sent a memo to group leaders in January, warning them about possible legislation that may restrict union bargaining, push vouchers that would allow parents to use public money to send children to private school and set up mandates that the communities be given the right to vote on school budgets and taxes.

She encouraged union leaders to get involved by contacting legislators and gubernatorial candidates.

Dinosaur Days

Lehigh Valley Mall, Whitehall
 Monday-Saturday 10 a.m.-2:30 p.m., Sunday 11 a.m.-6 p.m.

Here's a stupid question: Do your kids like dinosaurs? Here's a good answer: Then take them to the Lehigh Valley Mall starting Monday, when the giant beasts from the past take over the shopping center, crushing escalators like tin foil and mauling indoor trees like asparagus stalks.

OK, they're only fiberglass and clay, and they're really quite friendly, really. Hand fashioned by a noted museum sculptor, Buddy Davis of Utica, Ohio, the reptilian menagerie includes Struthiomimus, a 13-foot monster that could run as fast as a horse; Compsognathus, the smallest of the extinct creatures at 24 inches; and the ever-popular if feared Velociraptor, as tall as a man but bristling with sickle claws and one nasty disposition.

Twenty-eight other lifesize dinosaurs flesh out the brutish troupe. For those desiring more cuddly extinct species this Easter season, the costumed-character "Bunni-Saurus" will be at mall on March 18 and 19, presumably handing out painted prehistoric eggs.

Irish Soda Bread & Soap Carving Contest

Donegal Square, Bethlehem
 Saturday, 1 p.m.

Donegal Square on Main Street is giving you a chance to turn flour, soda and maybe a few raisins into glory this weekend.

Getting an early jump on St. Patty's Day, the Irish gift shop is sponsoring a soda bread-baking contest on Saturday. As if compelling lumps of baked dough weren't enough, you can also try your whittling skills in a soap carving contest.

Just bring in your soda bread or Irish figure carved in soap (use Irish Spring soap, or your entry will go out with the bath water), by 1 p.m. Saturday. Judging starts at 2 p.m. and live entertainment and refreshments will keep you busy in the meantime. Prizes range from a Cadbury Easter egg to a $25 gift certificate.

OBT is back in business

Over the last five months, if it seemed as if there were more people wandering around, a little depressed, looking bored and kind of hungry, you can blame the Old Brewery Tavern.

Since the popular watering hole and gathering place caught fire last October, there's been one less place to go for a whole bunch of people who relied on its Old World charm and hearty food to keep them nourished through the week.

At last, relief came last week.

After extensive renovations and de-smoking, the bar and restaurant on West Union Boulevard is back in business filling foaming mugs and overflowing platters.

The decor may be a little too brand, spanking new and the place still smells a bit of fresh paint, but the beer is just as cold and the food just as hot as it was back before disaster struck.

Owners Jack Collins and his wife, Theresa, have been running the Old Brewery Tavern since 1970, and have returned with a second debut that may even top the first.

Serving both lunch and dinner, the kitchen is open from 11:30 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday to Thursday, 11:30 a.m.-11 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 4 p.m.-8:30 p.m. Sunday. Bar is open from 1-10 p.m. every day. Call 865-3358.

Musicians from Marlboro

Foy Concert Hall, Moravian College
 Friday, 8 p.m. $12 adults, $8 seniors,
 $4 students and children, 868-4702

The word Marlboro usually evokes images of leather-faced, lantern-jawed cowboys puffing on manly cigarettes. On Friday, the image will be a bit more refined, and certainly much better for your lungs.

The Musicians from Marlboro are mozyin' on in to town to Moravian College's Foy Concert Hall, Church and Main, in a performance of Mozart, Webern, Beethoven and Brahms. The program is sponsored by the Chamber Music Society of Bethlehem.

If the name seems familiar for reasons other than smoky, then it is because of the Marlboro Music Festival, the namesake of the tiny town in Vermont, where thousands gather for the best of classical music.

For three decades, the Musicians from Marlboro has been the traveling version of the big show, featuring dozens of outstanding artists who take time from their regular playing to tour cities and small venues across the country.

Bethlehem is next on the list, playing host to Jean Goihen Queyras, cello; David Jolley, horn; Zheng-Rong Wang and Isidore Cohen, violin; Carla-Maria Rodriques, viola; Hsin-Yun Huang, viola; and Ignat Solzhenitsyn, piano.

Together they offer a rare opportunity to enjoy seldom-heard chamber music works.

The Musicians of Marlboro journey to Moravian College this Friday.

Red Molly

By golly, Red Molly is busy this week.

The duo starts the week today (Thursday, that is) at the cozy environs of Porter's Pub on Northampton Street in Easton. Then, two days later (Saturday, that is) Red Molly opens for Jennifer Kalison (formerly of the Eaves, that is) at The Scoop on South Eighth Street in Allentown.

Whew.

Who we'll be seeing a lot of this week is Jane Wellington (on electric and acoustic guitar, and vocals) and Scott Fogel (on lead guitar and other rhythmic necessities).

They describe themselves and "spirited & soulful," and indeed they are — as well as infectious, funny, touching and toe-tapping. Their original material is augmented by covers from the Beatles, Shawn Colvin, John Hiatt and Crowded House, all of whom, we're sure, approve.

So just get out this week. You're sure to bump into Red Molly.

Knife and Fork Band

The Knife and Fork Band from Philadelphia will set the table this Friday at The Four G's on South Side Bethlehem, with the Rolling Hayseeds as a side dish. Unpretentious and free-wheeling, the K&F's carve into energetic folk, bluegrass and rock equipped with fiddle, washboard, concertina, harmonica, cello and lap steel guitar. Playing together since 1991, the sextet blends a comfortable, straightforward sound that both rock and folk audiences find accessible and fresh.

As for the second serving during Friday's country rock meal, Here's what the Philly press had to say about The Rolling Hayseeds: "...delivered a thoroughly impressive set of modern country and old style honkytonk music, covering the last fifty years of the genre from Gene Autry to John Anderson."

Front Range

Where is the Front Range? It lies somewhere west of bluegrass and east of country; a few latitude lines north of traditional and south of contemporary.
 This Saturday you'll find Front Range on the stage of Godfrey Daniels on East Fourth Street in Bethlehem. Populating the range are Ron Lynam on banjo, Bob Amos on guitar, Mike Lantz on mandolin, and Bob Dick on bass. Tickets are $9:50.

Front Range is bluegrass; it is western; it is hard-driving instrumentals; it is soulful ballads; it's flawless vocals.

It is also one of the most promising bands on its way to the upper echelon of bluegrass. Dave Ross

Short Cuts

19th Street Theater, Allentown;
County Theater, Doylestown
On the surface, this more than 3-hour-long movie is an consistently entertaining look into seven Los Angeles households, all wildly different and yet all firmly connected.
Beyond sheer entertainment, it offers rich evidence of modern life's absurdities, the immense power of coincidence and the tools we employ to survive it all.
Directed by Robert Altman and based on the writing of the late Raymond Carver, "Short Cuts" stars Tim Robbins,
Madeleine Stowe, Andy Mac-
Dowell, Bruce Davison, Matthew
Modine, Jack Lemmon, Jennifer
Jason Leigh, Lily Tomlin, Peter
Gallagher, Lyle Lovett and Tom Waits.
If you can, see this movie with a group of friends. It will fuel hours of discussion.

Angie (R)

AMC Four, 25th Street Shopping Center, Easton; United Artists,
Allentown; AMC Tilghman 8,
South Whitehall
Geena Davis stars as the title character (in a role originally written for Madonna by screenwriter Todd Graff) in what is being touted as her career topping performance in this comedy-drama.
Abandoned by her mother and raised by a well-meaning father and stepmother, Angie is a woman from the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn who has the soul of an artist. But she finds herself impregnated by her longtime boyfriend, an Irish yuppie lawyer played by Stephen Rea
(The Crying Game) whom she has no desire to marry. Bouncing through life trying on different identities and relationships, Angie yearns to be valued for who she is - unfortunately she doesn't really know who that is.
Martha Coolidge ("Rambling Rose") directs.

Six Degrees of Separation (R)

United Artists, Easton
This screen adaptation of John Guare's award-winning stage hit, an examination of artifice, is a story within a story as told by Oisa and Flan Kittredge, played by Donald Sutherland and Stockard Channing. They tell the of a young black man who comes to their upscale Fifth Avenue doorstep one evening, bleeding, apparently the victim of a mugging.
Claiming to be Paul (Will Smith), the son of actor Sidney Poitier and a friend and classmate of their children at Harvard, he proves to be such a charmer that the Kittredges insist he stay for the evening.
But the next morning Paul is found with a male prostitute.

Turns out that some friends had the exact same experience.
Adding insult to injury, when the police are called the Kittredges are informed that taking advantage of their gullibility is not a felony.
As a result of their experience, the Kittredges feel compelled to find out why anyone would pull such an elaborate stunt without stealing anything.
In the process they begin to question their own goals and values.
Australian Fred Schepisi
("Roxanne," "Barabarosa") directs from a screenplay written by Guare. The title comes from the theory that the connection between any two people in the world is no farther than six human associations away.

The Chase

United Artists, Easton; AMC
Tilghman 8, South Whitehall;
General Cinema, Lehigh Valley
Mall
Charlie Sheen ("Hot Shots") stars as a man falsely accused of a bank robbery who escapes from prison and heads for the Mexican border. Along the way he kidnaps an heiress played by Kristy Swanson ("Buffy the Vampire Slayer"). Giving chase, (hence the clever title, get it?) is a cop played by punk rocker
Henry Rollins. Josh Mostel, son of Zero also appears in a film written and directed by Adam Rifkin.

Greedy (PG-13)

United Artists, Allentown; United Artists, Easton; The Movies,
Hellertown
The writing team of Lowell
Ganz and Babaloo Mandel ("Parenthood," "City Slickers") have concocted this comedy about a rich old man (Kirk Douglas) who falls for a sexy pizza delivery girl. Members of the family enlist relative Michael J.
Fox to knock some sense back into the old coot so he doesn't squander his fortune on the seductive dish. Nancy Travis, Ed
Begley, Jr. ("St. Elsewhere"),
Phil Hartman ("Saturday Night Live"), Colleen Camp and Olivia
D'Abo round out a cast directed by Jonathan Lynn ("My Cousin Vinny").

What's Eating
Gilbert Grape?
(PG-13)

United Artists, Easton; General
Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall
Peter Hedges adaptation of his own 1991 novel casts Johnny Depp as the title character, the binding member of an oddball, dysfunctional family living in a tiny rural town in Iowa. Dad killed himself in the basement a few years ago, Momma (novice actress Darlene Cates) weighs 500 pounds and hasn't left the house or her living room couch in seven years, and 17-year-old brother Arnie (Leonardo DiCaprio) is mentally handicapped with unpredictable behavior that has him requiring constant supervision.

Gilbert, who works at the local grocery store, is having a discreet affair with an older woman and never thinks about leaving home because of how much his family depends on him. When Becky (Juliette Lewis) arrives on the scene with her grandmother, she begins a tentative romance with Gilbert just as his older lover moves away.

The center of Gilbert's life remains his unselfish, fatherly bond with erratic Arnie, who likes to climb water towers so that the cops have to retrieve him. Arnie is also the center of attention as a big party is planned for his 18th birthday. Sven Nykvist, who collaborated on many Ingmar Bergman films photographed this comedy-drama directed by Lasse Halstrom ("My Life as a Dog").

Sugar Hill (R)

United Artists Allentown

Two drug-dealing brothers, played by Wesley Snipes and Michael Wright, build an empire in the legendary Sugar Hill neighborhood in New York's Harlem. Their game of death, drugs and profit changes dramatically (or in this case, melodramatically) when brother Snipes decides to go on the straight and narrow path rather than one of self-destruction.

Theresa Randle and Clarence ("Mod Squad") Williams III also star in this film directed by Leon Ichaso.

The Piano (R)

The Boyd, Bethlehem

Nominated for an impressive eight Academy Awards, including best picture and best director (Jane Campion), the buzz is that Holly Hunter's performance here as a mute mail-order bride has made her a shoo-in to receive the Oscar for best actress.

Hunter portrays strong-willed Ada, who, along with her 9-year-old daughter (Anna Paquin), arrives in a remote harbor in 19th century New Zealand to fulfill the terms of an arranged marriage. They plan to begin a new life in the home of a white colonialist, a repressed and racist landowner (Sam Neill). He has her possessions carried from the boat to his house, except for her piano, which he trades for some property with another Englishman (Harvey Keitel). Her new husband's narrow views and cold-as-ice demeanor pushes Ada into the arms of Keitel, who offers her an arrangement in which she can earn back her piano from him.

New Zealand native Campion, who also directed "Sweetie" and "An Angel at My Table," has created a tale of a woman swept away by her passions and emotions in a film that shared top honors with "Farewell My Concubine" at last year's Cannes Film Festival.

The Fugitive (PG-13)

AMC Plaza Theatre, Whitehall Mall; The Roxy

Harrison Ford and Tommy Lee Jones give great chase as hunted and hunter in this classic movie remake of the classic '60s TV series.

From the opening train crash (don't worry we're not giving anything away) to a stunning scene involving lots of water and a dam, there's hardly a moment to chomp your popcorn.

United Artists, Allentown

Nick Nolte, who is also currently starring in James L. Brooks radically retooled non-musical musical "I'll Do Anything," appears here as a college basketball coach who places his career in jeopardy after being tempted by unethical recruiting methods.

William Friedkin ("The French Connection," "The Exorcist") directs a script by writer-director Ron Shelton ("Bull Durham," "Blaze").

Mary McDonnell ("Dances With Wolves") Ed O'Neill ("Married With Children"), J. T. Walsh and Alfre Woodard ("Cross Creek," "Miss Firecracker") and NBA star Shaquille O'Neal round out the cast.

On Deadly Ground (R)

AMC Four, 25th Street Shopping Center, Easton; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

Action film star Steven Seagal returns to the silver screen after his last commercial success, "Under Siege," in another big budget action blockbuster. Seagal, in his directorial debut, casts himself as an oil-rig worker who winds up fighting with his bad guy ex-boss (A greasy-looking, dark-haired Michael Caine) who's messing up the Alaskan wilderness.

Our hero teams up with environmentalist Joan Chen ("The Last Emperor," "Twin Peaks") to protect the area's people. Expect lots of gunplay and things that blow up real good amidst the consciousness raising.

Reality Bites (PG-13)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

Ben Stiller, the son of comic-actor Jerry Stiller who won an Emmy for his tres hip '92-'93 Fox Network TV series despite its unceremoniously premature cancellation, directs and stars in this comedy about contemporary youth and love in the '90s.

The story concerns four recent Texas college graduates: Winona Ryder, playing an aspiring filmmaker who has a job as an intern on a TV talk show, her roommate Janeane Garofalo ("Larry Sanders Show") who manages a denim store, and Ethan Hawke ("Dead Poets Society") and Steve Zahn, who are unemployed.

The story's focus switches from our angst-ridden quartet looking for direction in life to romance when Winona has a fender bender with Stiller, who plays an edgy workaholic executive for a music video cable channel. A romantic triangle develops with Hawke added to the mix.

Swoosie Kurtz and Joe Don Baker are on hand for comic relief as Winona's estranged parents. John Mahoney appears as a two-faced talk show host who gets what he deserves. The pop music soundtrack includes songs by U2, Lenny Kravitz, Dinosaur Junior and World Party.

Blank Check (PG)

United Artists, Easton; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

When 11-year-old Preston Waters' bicycle is run over by a mobster (Miguel Ferrer of "Twin Peaks" fame) who's in a hurry, the kid is compensated with money in the form of a blank check. Preston goes with the opportunity and makes the check out for $11 million.

Among other things, he goes on a shopping spree in this wish-fulfillment fantasy, but the cops and bad guys are not far behind.

This Disney film, which looks to be a crowd pleaser, also features Brian Bonsall and Tone "Funky Cold Medina" Loc in the cast.

My Father, The Hero (PG)

AMC Four, 25th Street Shopping Center, Easton; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall

Steve Miner, who believe it or not directed the second and third installments of the "Friday the 13th" film series, serves up this fluffy confection about a 14-year-old teen angel (Katherine Heigl) on the brink of romantic awakening. The young lady sets up the premise for laughs when she tries to pass off her papa (Gerard Depardieu) as her lover to impress the true object of her affections. Miner directs for Touchstone, an arm of Disney Studios.

Ace Ventura: Pet Detective (PG)

AMC Four, 25th Street Shopping Center, Easton; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

Standup-comic-turned-movie actor-turned-TV-series-star Jim Carrey, the goofy, rubber-limbed white-guy of "In Living Color" whose running routines have included Fire Marshal Bill, is back on the big screen as the star and title character of this whacked-out comedy.

When the Miami Dolphins' mascot and quarterback mysteriously disappear only a week before the team is slated to play in the Super Bowl, Ace Ventura

(Carrey) is put on the case. This will hopefully be better than Damon Wayans', ("Color's" Homey the Clown) attempt at big screen stardom in his woefully misguided star vehicle, "Mo Money."

Philadelphia (PG-13)

United Artists, Easton; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall

Jonathan Demme, the director of the Academy Award winner for best picture of 1991, "Silence of the Lambs," returns with, believe it or not, the first mainstream Hollywood film to deal with the touchy subject of AIDS. It's been over 10 years since the disease first began claiming its victims.

In the City of Brotherly Love, Tom Hanks portrays hard-working gay lawyer Andrew Beckett who is fired from the firm where he works after being diagnosed with AIDS. Beckett decides to sue the law firm that wrongfully discriminates against him.

After nine lawyers refuse to take his case, Beckett finally hires Joe Miller, a heterosexual, homophobic personal injury lawyer played by Denzel Washington. Jason Robards, Mary Steenburgen and Antonio Banderas also star.

Schindler's List (R)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

Director Steven Spielberg once again turns his creative eye toward making a serious, mature film. By some accounts, it looks like he's finally gotten it right with this three hour, 15 minute epic about the Holocaust, filmed in black and white. Themes of corruption, greed and unintentional heroism are explored in this story adapted from Thomas Keneally's book of the same name. With frequent use of a moving, hand-held camera, operated by Spielberg for many sequences, the film often resembles a documentary.

After the Nazis blitzkrieg their way to victory in 1939 Poland, registered Jews began entering Krakow at the rate of 10,000 per week. Oskar Schindler (Liam Neeson), a member of the Nazi Party, makes arrangements to run a company to be staffed by Jewish slaves.

In an unsympathetic portrayal, Schindler's actions are motivated primarily by profit. Itzhak Stern (Ben Kingsley) is his Jewish accountant and right-hand man. In great detail Spielberg examines the descent of Jews from refugee status in Krakow to their confinement in a ghetto by 1941, the creation of a forced labor camp in 1942, and the extermination of the ghetto dwellers in 1943.

Schindler is allowed to continue operating his factory as a "sub-camp." The factory becomes a safe place for Jews because it's almost assured that no one will die there. By 1944, Schindler, growing weary of rampant carnage, uses his war profits in an attempt to prevent Jews from being shipped to their death at Auschwitz.

news & notes

Bird hotline

The big news this week is the verification of Pennsylvania's first hoary redpoll after weeks of reports that didn't pan out.

And the ironic thing is the bird, found in a flock of common redpolls that now numbers more than 100, showed up at the feeders of Frank and Barbara Haas, editors of PA Birds and the two most well-known birders in the state.

They live in Narvon, a small community just north of Route 23 in Lancaster County, near the Berks county border. Getting back to the local reports, killdeer are beginning to show up in small numbers. At this time of the year birders would normally be looking to the sky around dusk, checking for the telltale calls of American woodcocks doing their mating displays. However, the snow and ice cover will probably keep these birds farther south longer than usual.

Both turkey vulture and black vultures are coming back in steady progression, the more common turkeys outnumbering the blacks substantially. These large birds are nature's garbage cans, feeding on carcasses of whatever they can find. Contrary to a completely misleading and disturbingly erroneous Washington Post story, there is nothing to fear from them. They go about their own business and do not attack or carry away horses, dogs, small pets, or children.

Oberly Road in Alpha, N.J., continues to host a mixed flock of horned larks and snow buntings. An unusual sighting for this area was that of a snow bunting in full breeding plumage in with that flock. A light-phase rough-legged hawk is also present in that vicinity.

Even nonbirders will notice that blackbirds are beginning to arrive in greater numbers. Common grackles and red-winged blackbirds are being reported from all over the area. Large flocks of brown-headed cowbirds are most assuredly not far behind.

Farther afield again in Pennsylvania, a gray-phase gyrfalcon, an extremely rare falcon far from its normal tundra home, has been seen off and on for the last two weeks near the town of Red Lion in York County. Another gyrfalcon has been relatively easy to see near Frederick, Md.

pulling the wool

BY ARLENE KOCH

Nature's little tease

If you live in the Bethlehem area you've probably driven by teasel numerous times and never even noticed it. Or, if you did notice it, you probably didn't know what it was.

Teasel is a big plant, standing tall and erect, sometimes as high as 6 feet. You're most likely to find it along roadsides, in ditches, or on the edges of fields. Although I'm now aware that this plant is widely distributed locally, the first place I remember seeing it was along Route 22 (which is now Interstate 78) between Hamburg and Harrisburg many years ago.

I mistakenly figured it had to be some sort of thistle because of its height, the lavender flowers, and its overall appearance.

It wasn't until months later on a trip over the same stretch of road in late fall that I realized my identification of the plant was probably wrong. The dried flower heads at the ends of the long stems were definitely not those of a thistle. These flower heads are precisely what caused this plant, which has been used since the time of the Romans, to get its common name.

Spiny bracts grow out between individual flowers and remain and harden up after the petals are gone. Similar, but much larger, bracts also grow at the base of the flower head.

When completely dried, the oval or egg-shaped heads are placed on the ends of spindles or rods and slowly rotated over woolen cloth to raise its nap or to "tease" it. The process of using the teasel heads on the cloth is known as fulling the cloth, and these terms were used as far back as 12th century England.

Just how this plant of European origin got to North American shores is a matter of some disagreement. Some sources claim it migrated over the Atlantic as seeds in hay that the settlers had shipped in because they couldn't grow their own until they had cleared a lot of fields.

Others feel the teasel seeds were specifically brought over by wool growers. But regardless of how the plant got here, it is a matter of record that it has been and still is cultivated in our country specifically for use in the wool industry. Even if you think you've never seen this plant in the wild, you've probably still seen it someplace else. Today it's widely used in dried flower arrangements, either in its natural state or sprayed a variety of colors. The heads are anywhere from 1 to 4 inches long and are extremely long lasting, although also extremely prickly to the touch.

If you're inclined in that direction and want to try your hand at using them in such a way, make sure you wear gloves when you're doing it. The pointed ends of the bracts are very painful if they become embedded under your skin, and they're very hard to get out. I speak from personal experience. Teasel is a biennial, technically meaning that it takes the plant two years to go from seed to seed. But once a patch is established, there's usually enough variation in seed drop that some plants will come up every year, although they may be very sparse.

Almost as interesting as the teasel's flower heads is the manner in which the flowers on them open. Rather than opening from top to bottom or vice versa, as is usually the case, these flowers start opening in a band around the middle of the spike. Then they progressively open daily in both directions, causing two distinct bands of blossoms to appear and giving the flower head a truly unique appearance.

If you'd like to start some teasel in your garden, you can probably get the seeds from gardening catalogs, although I can't specifically recall seeing them advertised anywhere. I spend hours and hours looking through those things, but perhaps I just missed them.

Anyway, I prefer gathering my seeds from wild plants when I can find them and trying my hand at getting them to germinate in my own ground. Teasel will grow in any basic or neutral soil, so starting your own plants shouldn't be hard to do. If anyone knows of a really accessible teasel patch — one that's not on private property or dangerously close to the edge of an interstate — I'd be interested in knowing about it.

I've got my teasel spot all picked out in my garden; now I just need the seeds.

I'll trade you that information for a future crop of dried flower heads, but you'll have to wait at least two years to get it. It'll take that long before I have one.

Rev. David DeRemer, executive director of New Bethany Ministries, says people shouldn't give homeless people money — they should give them the help by contacting Valleywide Help.

BY CHRISTOPHER JUDD

Rev. David DeRemer is executive director of New Bethany Ministries, 337 Wyandotte St. His wife, Kathy, and children, Amy, 10, and Christopher, 7, live in Lower Saucon Township.

What is the most common misconception about what New Bethany does?

People assume that we are primarily engaged in emergency or crisis intervention. We do very little crisis intervention. We address long term solutions to a person's homelessness. About three-quarters of our clients are in permanent housing.

What are your operating expenses and where do you get your money?

Our operating costs are three-quarters of a million dollars this year, and we get our money anywhere we can. About one-third comes from rent or room-and-board fees. About one-third comes county, state, and some federal government. About one-third comes from donations.

Is it accurate to say that most of the homeless in Bethlehem have some sort of drug or alcohol problem?

No, it is not. The top two reasons are domestic-related problems; a relation breakup. Or, there is an unemployable person at the head of the household.

What was your major in college?

Psychology, at Ursinus College. I received my masters in divinity from Princeton.

Would you rather your children make some money when they grow up?

My preference is that my children do something that they love, which is what I am doing. Money is not the most important thing.

Why are there so many social service facilities on South Side?

I think that there are more outside of South Side Bethlehem. To a great extent, we are here because real estate prices allow us to be here, not because the need is more dominant.

If you bring recovering drug addicts together in one place for an extended period of time there is going to be more drug-related crime in that neighborhood, right?

Your question presupposes something that is not correct. When someone comes to New Bethany they come here to change their lives. Most have already been through treatment when they arrive. We have more problems with people at the bars in the neighborhood than our residents.

Where do homeless families go after New Bethany?

Usually, they move into some form of subsidized housing. Not the projects. The majority is Section 8 housing. They pay one-third of the rent and HUD picks up the rest. The projects are a societal failure.

What else could be done to deal with homelessness?

The issue is poverty. There are four ways to deal with it. One, education. Two, affordable child care so women can find work. Three, expanded Section 8, because it works. Four, transportation, because a lot of people can't afford to buy a car, and the bus doesn't go to their work.

Why do some women on the brink of homelessness have more children?

The studies I have seen indicate that women on welfare do not have more children than anyone else in society. Of the 281 families that we have housed through the years, 15 percent were pregnant when they arrived.

Would welfare reform increase the number of people turning to New Bethany for help?

In the short term, yes, it would increase if we are talking about "two years on welfare and then you have to get off."

Why can't some people get off of welfare?

The biggest reason is health care costs. Many people would get off of welfare today if they could get health care coverage. They can make a little more flipping burgers than being on welfare. But, after the first dollar they receive, they lose their health care. What mother would do that?

What's it like when you've helped someone move into an apartment?

They can't wait to get there. It is the most exciting time for them. Every year at Christmas time we invite everyone back.

What should one do if approached by a homeless person asking for money?

Don't give them money. Anybody needing any kind of help can call HELP-1-1-1, the number for Valleywide Help.

Did you watch the Grammys last week?

No we didn't. Actually we did flip by it and watch Billy Joel sing "River of Dreams."

The Goundie House

At 501 Main Street, there is a building made of beer.

The Goundie House, now a museum and gift shop, was the home of John Sebastian Goundie, master brewer and all-around Moravian big-wig.

Born in 1773, Goundie joined the Moravian Church and learned to make beer as a young man in Germany. Soon after he crossed the Atlantic to set up a brewery in the Moravian settlement at Salem, N.C., and eventually came to Bethlehem, where he took charge of the Single Brethren brewery under what is now the Hill-to-Hill Bridge.

As the beer flowed, so did the cash into Goundie's pockets, and by 1814 he had built his own brewery in Bethlehem, eventually opening another in Easton.

In 1810 he built what was perhaps the first Federal-style brick townhouse in Bethlehem, including symmetrical windows on each floor, a fan light over the front door flanked by Doric pilasters, dormer windows and a slate roof.

Twenty years later, Goundie added a building to the north side of his home to accommodate a grocery store for his eldest son.

Throughout his tenure, Goundie pushed to have the private ownership of Bethlehem's land, most of which at that time was owned by the Moravian Church. By 1844 that wish came true, and Goundie bought the land under his home for $70.

Goundie died soon after, but his home remained standing, becoming over the years the site of a doctor's house and offices, the U.S. Express Co., a boarding house, a restaurant and various small businesses.

In 1968 it was bought by Historic Bethlehem Inc. and was fully restored in the 1980s. It is now a popular part of the historic tours winding through town each day.

Joseph Shosh, teacher at Freedom high school, and Nelson Rosario, student at Moravian, act out a drama portraying common prejudices.

José Rosado, director of peer counseling at Liberty High School, discusses practical ways to defuse racism once students return to the school.

The experiences of Latino and African-American students in Lehigh Valley schools were the focus of a Monday conference at Moravian College.

The program, called "The Promise of the Rainbow," was designed to give students a better understanding of cultural diversity by giving them a chance to openly discuss issues and problems in their schools. More than 200 people from 10 area high schools attended.

"If bigotry can be learned, tolerance, respect and justice can be learned as well," said Moravian professor John Reynolds, creator and organizer of the conference.

To spark discussion, the conference began with a socio-drama prepared by psychologist Dana E. Lightman, in which Moravian students acted out situations often seen in schools, including inter-racial dating, prejudiced friends and biased teachers.

Discussion even spilled outside, center photograph, as Mark Gonzalez and Joel Colman (in A's hat), both from Lehigh County Community College, figure out how to get more people involved.

After the drama, students broke up into small groups to discuss prejudice in their own lives. In the confidential setting, students talked about their own experiences with racism, and the expectations and stereotypes people judge others by.

The conference ended with meetings of the schools, to discuss how the ideas presented during the day could be brought back into the classroom. Both Liberty and Freedom High School students discussed presenting a socio-drama to their own classmates, enhancing peer-tutoring programs encouraging better teacher/student communication.

The conference was sponsored by Moravian College and First Fidelity Bank.

MARCH 10

Burglars have again taken advantage of the South Side's total darkness after midnight and in the early hours of this morning broke into the residences of three prominent citizens. On Wednesday night, Refowich's London & Liverpool Clothing House window was smashed with a piece of wood or large implement in a very bungling manner.

MARCH 12

Senator Wm. E. Chandler, of New Hampshire, ex-secretary of the navy, visited the works of the Bethlehem Iron Company today accompanied by Mr. Linderman, president of the company, and others. He expressed great satisfaction with the extent and perfection of the plant and was deeply interested all the operations.

MARCH 13

Three coal "jimmies" were thrown into the canal and four others were derailed in a wreck on the Jersey Central Rail Road below the New Street Bridge, Bethlehem, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The wreck occurred only a few minutes after the east-bound 4 p.m. passenger train passed, and only a second or two after fast freight No. 418 passed, which followed the passenger time.

MARCH 16

The funeral of the late Augustus M. Rayeur, this morning, was very largely attended. High mass was celebrated at the Church of the Holy Infancy, at 10 o'clock by the Rev. Father McEnroe, who preached a feeling sermon. The dead policeman's fellow officer's were active pall bearers. Among the final tributes was a handsome pillow of natural flowers from the South Side police bearing the inscription "Our brother officer."

MARCH 10

The Federal Communications Commission disclosed today that the Associated Broadcasters, Inc., has filed an application seeking authorization for construction of a new high frequency radio station at Bethlehem. The application stated that the broadcasting firm planned the new high frequency "FM" unit to operate at 48,500 kilocycles with a range of 2800 square miles. Associated Broadcasters, Inc., operates station WEST at Easton.

MARCH 13

Two employees of the New-Way Laundry, 13th Avenue and West Union Boulevard, are in St. Luke's Hospital today in critical condition as the result of third-degree burns received when a hot water boiler burst, showering them with steam and hot water. They are Frank Wuscher, Greenleaf Street, Allentown, and Alfred Wright, Easton Avenue, Bethlehem.

MARCH 14

Meeting last evening, the Bethlehem School Board engaged Lovelace and Spillman to make a survey for revision of the lighting system of the gymnasium and auditorium at Broughal Junior High School, and to plan for a skating rink at Washington Junior High School. A bid for electrical work in the Broughal building was unanimously rejected.

MARCH 15

Frank Wuscher, 529 Greenleaf St., Allentown, foreman at the New Way Laundry, 13th Avenue and West Union Boulevard, Bethlehem, scalded in a hot water boiler explosion Monday morning, died today at 3:45 a.m. in St. Luke's Hospital. Wuscher and Alfred E. Wright, fireman, who died of his injuries yesterday, were reportedly testing the boiler, a new one installed Saturday and never used, when it blew up.

MARCH 16

Five-year prison sentences were meted out in Federal Court today to five self-styled "ministers" of Jehovah's Witnesses for their refusal to report to conscientious objectors' camps. The draft violators included Steve Balint, 18, Bethlehem. The defendants said they were "wrongly classified" as conscientious objectors, asserting that they were ministers and entitled to draft exemption. Balint, the Nazareth draft board says, is a resident of Miller Heights.

Lehigh's 1889 football team was the Pennsylvania champion, but couldn't quite beat Wesleyan.

in days gone by

BY CHARLES G. HAFNER

Lehigh foiled by future president

1889 was an eventful year of significant historical import. President Benjamin Harrison was inaugurated after a noteworthy election in which he won the electoral vote 233-168, but lost the popular vote to Democrat Grover Cleveland. North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Washington were admitted to statehood. The Department of Agriculture was given Cabinet status.

However, as autumn turned to winter on the campus of Lehigh University and a successful football season reached its climax, the minds of most students on Thanksgiving Day, November 22, were on the holiday feasts with their families and (or) the climactic and crucial game that day with Wesleyan University at Hampden Park, Springfield, Mass.

One of the coaches of the Wesleyan team was Professor of History and Political Economics, Thomas Woodrow Wilson. As a student at Princeton University, he had been a "director" of its very successful football team. At Wesleyan he was assisted by H.D. Slayback, team captain.

Wesleyan had had an impressively successful season, defeating the University of Pennsylvania 10-2, Amherst 39-0, Williams 20-17, Rutgers 58-4, and Trinity 6-0. There were, of course, a few losses, Princeton among them. Lehigh had garnered victories over Haverford 60-0, Lafayette 16-10, Columbia 51-6, State College (Penn State) 106-0 (That's right!), Pennsylvania 8-0, losing to Princeton 16-0 and 16-4, and to Penn 6-4. Lehigh proudly flew the Champion of Pennsylvania banner, and later finished out the season defeating Navy, Johns Hopkins and the University of Virginia.

C.F. Price, author of "When Woodrow Wilson Was at Wesleyan," The Christian Advocate, August 1919, included in the anthology, "Woodrow Wilson, A Profile," by Professor Arthur Link, the pre-eminent Wilson scholar and authority, described the game and its importance. Wesleyan had clearly established "its primacy among the smaller colleges of New England; and as Lehigh had gained a similar ascendancy in her section, a great importance was attached in the football world to the Wesleyan-Lehigh game. In fact Lehigh supporters boasted that in case victory came their way, they would insist on demanding Wesleyan's coveted place in the old Inter-collegiate Football Association which included Harvard, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Wesleyan and Yale."

The playing field that day was a sea of mud, a condition the players, however, did not necessarily regret. They played without helmets and with minimal, if any, padding, in a game that emphasized grind-it-out power with the flying wedge in common use and the forward pass unknown. Injuries were so common President Theodore Roosevelt a few years later advocated serious consideration of outlawing the game.

Lehigh scored two quick and easy touchdowns. The momentum seemed to be building to a potential rout when a man dressed in boots and raincoat strode out in front of the Wesleyan stands, and using his umbrella much as a modern cheerleader would use a pom-pom, led the fans in the Wesleyan yell. "This he continued violently until the Wesleyan cheers heartened Slayback's men — and the tide of the game turned." Wesleyan scored two goals to tie the score. The dynamic and inspiring cheerleader was Professor Woodrow Wilson.

Twenty-four years later, almost to the day, on November 25, 1913, Francis B. Sayre of South Bethlehem married President Woodrow Wilson's daughter, Jessie, in the White House. One can surmise with a fair degree of realistic certainty that the Lehigh-Wesleyan game of 1889 was recalled in conversation between the President and his Bethlehem guests, with a recounting of some version of his part in the outcome.
