Globe-Times Brings About Meeting Of Two Soldiers

SEP 23 1943

Sometime ago, "somewhere in the North Africa theater of war, Pfc. William Daggett, of 511 Sioux Street, Bethlehem, who hasn't missed many of the major scraps in that section, took time out to read the Bethlehem Globe-Times.

Sensing that somebody or something was near him, he turned his head and discovered that another soldier was helping him read the paper.

Looking at the soldier, "Billy" said: "I know you." The soldier replied: "And I know you." Private William "Fats" Kirvin, of Wydnor, and Pfc. Daggett shook hands. Neither of them knew that the other was in North Africa until they began reading the Bethlehem Globe-Times at the same time. Since then they are pals.
