COVID-19 PANDEMIC

Mr. Edgars loved airplanes

I wondered every day as we fought so hard to save the thousands at home, did we fail the few in our care?

BY DR. A. REEMA KAR,
MD, FACS
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Mr. Edgars loved airplanes, ham radios, and, most of all, his daughter Annie. At a spry 84 years old, he was a proud New Englander: fiercely independent and frustratingly stubborn. A diabetic foot infection brought him to the Emergency Department just a few weeks after COVID struck. If not for the pandemic, Mr. Edgars would have had a small procedure in the OR, completed a course of IV antibiotics, and gone home in time for his weekly dinner with Annie. In March of 2020, however, nothing was quite that simple. Despite a successful operation, Mr. Edgars had been in the hospital for over a week, and showed little hope for a meaningful recovery.

In his dark single room, Mr. Edgars' six-foot frame was awkwardly folded into a chair facing the window.

As I entered, he turned with difficulty, squinting through his glasses. I watched him search for something familiar about my appearance. There was no recognition even though we had gone through this ritual every morning and afternoon for nine days. With mild authority, he stated, "I'm waiting for my daughter. Is she coming today?" I shook my head, explaining to him again that the hospital was not allowing visitors due to the COVID pandemic. I promised to call Annie and update her on his progress, just like every day. He blinked slowly and turned back to the window. I changed his surgical dressing and reassured him that he was recovering well. He nodded wordlessly. The grandfatherly chatter had stopped days ago. I knew, despite the healing wound and normalizing lab values, the real Mr. Edgars was slowly disappearing with every passing moment. When I reached for the door, he looked up and asked, as if the past twenty minutes hadn't happened, "Do you know when my Annie is coming?"

Four days later, Mr. Edgars was dead.

My colleagues offered their analysis at the following week's Morbidity and Mortality conference. Mr. Edgars' unexpected death had to be explained. What was the reason for his respiratory arrest? Had I considered a PE? Did his antibiotics cover hospital-acquired pneu-

Ben Franklin grants include $400K to city-launched businesses

The Ben Franklin Technology Partners of Northeastern Pennsylvania, a technology incubator which creates and retains highly paid, sustainable jobs by investing in and linking companies with experts, universities, follow-on funding, and other resources to help them prosper through innovation. (BFTP/NEP) Board of Directors has approved the investment of $400,000 in support of regional economic development. Two early-stage companies received funding.

* Grovara, LLC, www.grovara.com, Philadelphia; launched in Ben Franklin TechVentures, Bethlehem, Northampton County
Ben Franklin Investment: $200,000

Continue to expand a web-based marketplace platform that connects "Made in USA" natural foods, beverages, and other health and wellness retail brands with international wholesalers and retailers. Grovara provides end-to-end foreign market distribution and international brand management solutions, lowering the barriers to entry for smaller U.S.-based manufacturers to engage in global trade. The portal makes international trade faster and significantly more cost-effective and efficient, while giving brands and buyers more options and flexibility. Starting with two founders and leveraging a total of $200,000 in previous BFTP/NEP investments, the company now represents more than 80 brands in 30 countries, employs 23, and is growing rapidly.

* Vessel Health, Inc., <https://vesselhealth.com/>, Ben Franklin TechVentures, Bethlehem, Northampton County
Ben Franklin Investment: $200,000

Continue to develop Vessel Health's in-home wellness tracker that measures key chemistries from the user's urine, and then provides recommendations to users to improve their health. Using the results of a test strip, the Vessel Health mobile app provides results for 10 chemistry tests that measure vitamin and mineral levels, and ketones and pH levels. The app makes recommendations to users to improve results, and also provides wellness coaching as part of its subscription-based service. The demand for in-home diagnostics is growing rapidly because of the pandemic and other factors.

monia? I didn't need decades of experience to know that none of those usual suspects had taken Mr. Edgars' life. He never tested positive, but it was COVID that killed him. He was collateral damage. Deaths like his were not meticulously tracked by the CDC, but the numbers were just as tragic. However optimized and independent he had been prior to admission, once in the hospital, Mr. Edgars deteriorated rapidly without the familiarity of his routine, and the therapeutic presence of his daughter. Like countless other COVID-negative patients, he was sequestered purposefully from the virus, and inadvertently from everything he knew and everyone he loved. It was the isolation of COVID that unmasked his age, comorbidities, and, most significantly, the dementia that had been lurking just under the surface.

In hindsight, Mr. Edgars didn't need antibiotics. He needed Annie. She was the glue that held his life together.

er. Without her, he fell apart. At first, his mild disorientation manifested itself in repetitive questioning. Next came nightly sundowning that devolved to florid delirium. Finally, the creeping dementia held at bay by a devoted daughter was fully revealed: the unintended consequence of a viral infection that he did not even have. Mr. Edgars likely aspirated, arrested, and died alone in his hospital room, scared and struggling to break through a fog of antipsychotics and the firm grip of physical restraints.

As medical students, we were always taught, "Treat the patient, not the disease." Unfortunately, there was never a corollary to modify this mantra to a pandemic. What if everyone were a potential patient? Should we extrapolate to, "Treat a hundred patients, not just one?" In a matter of days, medicine went from patient-centered to population-focused. The health of the wider community had to be weighed in every clinical decision for an individual patient. Physicians everywhere faced the daily moral distress of placing the needs of the public over those of their patients. I wondered every day as we fought so hard to save the thousands at home, did we fail the few in our care?

The sad reality was that in a pandemic, I was almost as powerless as Mr. Edgars. The greatest ethical challenge I encountered in the COVID era was knowing exactly what my patients needed and not being able to provide it. I could not wholly fulfill my Hippocratic duty of doing no harm to Mr. Edgars when I knew that his cure could be our community's curse. Even if it had been within my purview to allow Annie to visit the hospital, could I risk the inevitable chain reaction of exposures that might trigger? In a pandemic, with whom did my professional responsibility lie? Mr. Edgars? Annie? All of their extended family, friends, and neighbors? Could I disregard the greater good to heal one man?

Of course not. Instead, I became the medical mercenary that COVID required. I could not heal, nor could I comfort. My only weapon against the raging pandemic was quarantine. I kept patients, with COVID and without, away from their families, severing the most basic of human connections in their time of greatest need. I did everything I could as a physician and surgeon to help Mr. Edgars, except the one thing that I knew would save him. I told Mr. Edgars every day that he would see Annie soon, knowing how unlikely that was. I held his hand, realizing that I was just another anonymous automaton under layers of impersonal PPE, a poor substitute for the daughter he desperately needed. I heard Annie's voice break over the phone every evening, crushed by the realization that she would never hug her father again. I watched father and daughter, and so many others, say goodbye over FaceTime, deprived of the human contact they so deserved in their dying hours. I hated that there was nothing else I could do.

The world called us "heroes." What they didn't know is that we were just helpless.

ANOTHER VIEWS - ED'S WORLD

Graphic commentary by Ed Courier

Home for the holidays - again

If the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks precipitated a crack in the veneer of 'safety' Americans have been conditioned to enjoy, COVID has caused a full collapse.

BY CHRIS HARING

Special to the Bethlehem Press

Thankfully, I've never been to jail, but a recent period of 10 days - aside from the ability to have a beer with my dinner and the consistent presence of my cats, of course - is the closest I think I've come so far.

If somebody had asked me this time last year, I'd have said we'd be well on our way to emerging from the COVID-19 pandemic by now. As I write this on my 10th and - hopefully - final day of quarantining myself from my household's positive cases, I'm not sure whether to laugh, cry or scream at my apparent naiveté.

My partner and I are triple-vaccinated and that, I vehemently stress, is surely why, almost two years in, we still have yet to contract the virus. Still, when we learned of our housemates' positive COVID test results, we immediately implemented the various mitigation measures we'd discussed so often over the past 22 months.

We immediately placed cleaning supplies and personal protective equipment (PPE), like N95 masks, in multiple rooms. Common areas such as the kitchen and full bathroom have mostly remained ventilated, as an unintended consequence of climate change had allowed us to keep windows cracked open with minimal impact on our

The parking lot at Wegmans on Rt. 512 in Bethlehem shows its usual holiday season volume of shoppers' cars. We learned in the early days of the pandemic that no matter what restrictions the government tries to implement, you can't stop people from doing what they generally want - even if that results in spreading a deadly virus.

heating bill.

'Comings and goings' now have to be communicated ahead of time to avoid any unnecessary contact between our respective pairings. My partner and I have both worked from home for the duration of the pandemic - a privilege I must acknowledge, as so many have not been afforded that additional layer of safety.

Even the most gracious person would have to admit that the constant distraction of being in the same room with your partner, especially during business hours, has been nerve-racking. We're both used to our own spaces during the day, and the added stress of trying not to encumber the other person has triggered impatience and even some 'snappiness' at times.

Since our housemates were also vaccinated, their symptoms were quite mild - more like an annoying cold than anything else, they said. But some people who never reported serious symptoms upon infection still suffer from after-effects ranging from inconvenient to debilitating. Due to the apparent randomness of 'Long COVID' symptoms, however, we'd prefer to avoid the virus completely, if possible.

Of course, "if possible" doesn't mean what it once did. In 2020, everybody was urged to, at minimum, drastically scaledown holiday gatherings and celebrations, and for the most part, we did. Less technologically-inclined family members got a crash course in video conferencing and our Zoom

Christmases were, to us, a one-year stopgap that was good enough at the time.

2021 came and went in a strange blur. Looking back, I don't think most of us appreciated how relatively safe we were in the spring and summer. Vaccines were hot off the presses and after what at the time seemed to be an unimaginable (but receding) winter of mass suffering and death, people were once again enjoying (mostly outdoor) dining, sports and concerts - the activities that, for many, make life worth living.

When we received the news that members of my partner's extended family tested positive for COVID the week before Christmas, it was disappointing

NORCO PRISON INSPECTION: Director of Corrections James Kostura announced that Northampton County Prison (NCP) earned full compliance during its 2021 inspection period. The Pennsylvania Department of Corrections and the Office of County Inspection Services conducted the inspection in November.

Receiving full compliance is a distinction earned when a facility and staff have met or exceeded Title 37, Chapter 95 expectations. Due to this status, the Department of Corrections is exempt from the normal one-year inspection cycle. Its next inspection will be conducted in 2023.

- and scary. While we were upset that, due to her father's exposure, we would not be able to celebrate her mother's birthday in person (she's a Christmas baby) for the second consecutive year, our greatest concern was for her elderly grandparents, who became quite sick.

I felt extremely guilty that my partner's side of the family was suffering from the effects of this awful, never-ending pandemic since I was still going to be able to be with my (vaccinated) family. This changed, however, when we were notified of our housemates' positive tests on Christmas Eve.

I'd be a liar if I didn't admit that upon receiving both sets of news so close to one another, I didn't react primarily with anger - especially at first. My partner and I had gone above and beyond for the past 21 months, even taking extra steps beyond CDC and local health officials' recommendations to prevent not only contracting but spreading COVID. That's what '15 Days to Flatten the Curve' was supposed to be all about in March 2020 in the first place, right?

It's been hard not to look around us for the past year especially and not feel like part of a shrinking minority. When President Biden was inaugurated last January, it seemed to guarantee we finally had a federal government with a national strategy to defeat COVID.

Biden took the opportunity to deliver a July 4 speech, ostensibly meant to declare our 'independence' from the virus. It seemed a bit premature, but there was still plenty of reason for optimism and hope. Unfortunately, I'd be a liar if I didn't admit that it feels like much of that hope has faded, replaced by frustration and anger.

It's admittedly difficult not to stew in those negative feelings when you're stuck in not just your house, but your bedroom, for the majority of the holidays for the second consecutive year due to no fault of your own.

In fairness, to simply place blame on Biden or Trump for this unprecedented situation we're in now - with hospitals filling up at a pace not seen since before the vaccines were available but life seeming to, otherwise, go on as normal - is an inherently partisan and unproductive way of viewing things.

We learned in the early days of the pandemic that no matter what restrictions the government tries to implement, you can't stop people from doing what they generally want - even if that results in spreading a deadly virus. It seems to me that something we haven't learned - but might yet gain an understanding of the 'hard way' - is that eventually, people and systems break down due to sheer fatigue.

Our nation's caretakers - teachers, doctors, nurses and myriad others - are exhausted. Even the most nimble at avoidance surely can't escape that fact. Our country - and in fairness, the entire globe

- faces the conundrum of having no choice but to keep going.

It's increasingly clear that the federal government's policy is now that of unchecked spread while hoping vaccines can mitigate the most severe consequences for those who've received them. The recent return to in-person classes after the holiday break was nearly immediately followed in some districts by a return to remote learning due to a lack of staff.

For many parents who still have to report to work, knowing that districts are making these difficult choices due to a combination of safety fears and sheer necessity doesn't do much to lessen the hardships of suddenly having to find and pay for babysitters or daycares, which are also short-staffed.

Ultimately, I don't have the answers to this situation. I don't know of anybody who does. Even the most well-intentioned local and state officials and leaders have encountered multiple roadblocks attempting to mitigate the worst consequences of the disease. They must be feeling burnt-out, as well.

Ultimately, it seems 22 months of ever-changing guidelines, conflict, fear, severe illness and 800,000 plus deaths have been so much worse than we ever could have imagined. I don't know if we'll ever collectively come to terms with the fallout.

If the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks precipitated a crack in the veneer of 'safety' Americans have been conditioned to enjoy, COVID has caused a full collapse. And the wheels of capitalism apparently must continue to spin, no matter how many people fall ill or die as a consequence.

People will continue to lose whatever hope remains that one day, "like a miracle, it'll just disappear" (Trump's words) and/or "I will end this" (Biden's). A theoretical 'endemic' phase of COVID, where most areas see spread reduced to that similar to the seasonal flu, still seems a far-off pipe-dream.

And yet, stadiums and arenas will continue to gather humans in numbers approaching six figures. Restaurants and bars and social clubs will still continue to operate as best as they can. Some school districts will continue to fight the demands of fervent, yet ill-informed, parents who demand 'freedom' for their children to contract COVID, while others will acquiesce to the vocal, and sometimes violent, minority.

Folks who need immediate care for reasons not related to COVID will continue to wait for hours upon end in emergency rooms, some dying of treatable conditions that just weren't caught in time. Places like movie theaters, nursing homes and senior centers will continue to carry an inherent level of heightened risk, especially to the elderly and immunocompromised, including those who, for whatever reason, can't get vaccinated - COVID's truly forgotten population.

As for me? I think I'm just going to keep staying home.

AT HOME HELPING OTHERS

Tom Carson grew up a huge Penn State football fan, which partly informed his decision to attend Penn State Lehigh Valley.

The Allentown resident and Air Force veteran left PSU-LV in 2015 an enthusiastic supporter of the campus, where he earned a bachelor's degree in Rehabilitation and Human Services (RHS) that would provide him with the foundation to pursue a career helping others.

Today, Carson serves as the associate executive director of Victory House of Lehigh Valley, a nonprofit organization that provides shelter and transitional services to homeless men.

Carson first started working at Victory House while doing his RHS internship. Since then, he's been promoted from case manager to program director to his current position. A transition is now underway for him to become the shelter's executive director in May.

In addition to overseeing the day-to-day operations of the organization, Carson meets with funders, donors and various partners, and assists in writing grants and contracts.

Getting Victory House's clientele back on the road to independence is incredibly challenging yet deeply gratifying work that requires ample reserves of compassion and empathy, said Carson, 36.

"My RHS coursework helped me a lot in the beginning. It prepared me well to understand the various issues our clients struggle with."

"Based on years working with this population, I know the world can come crashing down on anyone. I've worked with lawyers, doctors, engineers and people that had the same job title as me -- all who became homeless," Carson said. "This field introduces you to the real issues no one likes to talk about -- issues such as mental health, substance abuse, trauma, health. These are all issues our staff and partners are trying to help people cope with."

"That's not an easy task, and it can become frustrating," he added. "However, when a client comes back to the facility to tell staff he has been clean and housed for the last three years, that's a proud moment for all those who were involved in their comeback. I believe the ability to make a comeback is one of the greatest gifts we have on this earth. You can fail, fail again, and fail again, but then become the person you were always meant to be."

Carson enrolled at PSU-LV as an adult learner, picking RHS as a major because it seemed to provide an entryway to numerous careers in the human services field.

"I was very interested in helping people get themselves on their feet," he said. "The coursework and facility at PSU-LV were excellent -- it's a great location for a local college. And the RHS program was small enough to provide mentoring from the faculty, which was a huge help for me since I was out of school for close to 10 years prior."

Carson's RHS coursework eventually led him to Victory House.

"I was preparing for my internship with one of my professors and we Googled 'veterans' and 'homelessness.' Victory House was the first place that showed up," he said. "I interviewed and fell in love with the program there. And my RHS coursework helped me a lot in the beginning. It prepared me well to understand the various issues our clients struggle with."

"I am very proud of the new programs and partnerships we've developed since I arrived," Carson continued. "And I really enjoy helping and seeing others grow."

Penn State Lehigh Valley's Rehabilitation and Human Services (RHS) program provides students with the tools to pursue a worthwhile career in a number of in-demand settings, including hospitals, rehabilitation centers, public welfare agencies, and mental health facilities.

Students enrolled in the RHS program gain a broad range of professional skills, from advocating for others to assessing client needs to managing client caseloads to resolving conflicts. Before graduating, seniors complete a semester-long internship that gives them valuable real-world experience -- and sometimes leads to a job offer!

All 13 nominees were appointed or reappointed to their respective boards.

appointed as the council liaison to the Lehigh Valley Planning Commission for a one year term.

Appointments to the election commission were another story. Those nominated include: Margie DeRenzis; Selina Winchester, Daniel Lopresti, Scott Hough and Vicki Evert.

Winchester's appointment to the election commission was tabled by a 6-3 vote. Winchester is employed by Congresswoman Susan Wild, and many council members felt that this could be a major conflict of interest.

Hough, on the other hand, travels back and forth between Las Vegas and Northampton County for work. Council was concerned about his commitment to the election commission, but after talking with him, his appointment was approved.

In other business, council discussed a few different resolutions.

One resolution, the American Rescue Plan small business grants, proposes to divide $863,076 among 67 small businesses in the county. This resolution was passed by council with a vote of 9-0.

Another resolution concerned hazard pay at Gracedale Nursing Home.

This motion proposes to compensate Gracedale employees working directly with residents who have contracted COVID-19. Qualifying shifts and employees, as determined by Gracedale administration, will receive hazard pay at 25 percent effective until April 30. This motion was also passed unanimously.

The Northampton County Council will meet next on Thursday, Feb. 3 at 6:30 p.m.; the meeting will be held in-person at 669 Washington Street and streamed on the county's YouTube page.

Grant will fund domestic violence task force

LEHIGH COUNTY

Lehigh County District Attorney Jim Martin has announced details of a STOP Violence Against Women grant that will be used to help fund domestic violence prevention efforts.

The grant is for a three-year period totaling $375,000 providing $125,000 in funding each year.

The $125,000 per year is equally divided between law enforcement, prosecutors, Turning Point of Lehigh Valley Inc. and the Crime Victims Council of the Lehigh Valley ($31,250 to each).

Of the grant funds available to the district attorney's office, it will be used to partially fund two Domestic Violence Task Force prosecutors, two investigators with the task force and to partially fund the Victim/Witness Unit headed by Kimberly Silvestri.

The funding is made available to support a multidisciplinary approach to improve criminal, civil and juvenile justice systems' response to violence against women and to enhance advocacy and services available to victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking and dating violence.

The emphasis on the STOP program is the implementation of comprehensive victim services, health care, law enforcement and prosecutorial strategies addressing violence against women sensitive to the needs and safety of victims and holding offenders accountable for their crimes.

"Members of the district attorney's office work together in order to help these victims of domestic violence by providing continuity throughout the investigation and being aware of these victims' special needs and endeavoring to meet them," Martin said.

Yesterday: A look at the 60s, 70s & 80s

It is a day of infamy in Phillies' history, as one of their most lopsided trades in all of baseball occurred.

The transitioning Phillies sent aging shortstop Larry Bowa and a 22-year-old infield prospect named Ryne

Yesterday

By Jeff Moeller

Sanberg to the Chicago Cubs for shortstop Ivan DeJesus. At the time, ex-Phillies skipper Dallas Green was pulling the strings for the Cubs in the front office, and realized Sanberg's potential.

This latest installment of my look back at YESTERDAY -- a trip back in time to the late 1960s, '70s and sometimes dipping into the early 80s -- is a recollection of some of the more memorable events from 1982 involving events, pop-culture situations and items.

As we know, Sandberg had a stellar 15-year career in Chicago that resulted in Hall of Fame induction. DeJesus spent three years with the Phillies, and his best season was in 1984 when he hit .257. Bowa spent four seasons with the Cubs before he ended his career with the Mets in 1985.

The Phillies finished the 1982 season with an 89-73 record under Pat Corrales. Remember him? However, Corrales was fired at the All-Star break the following season with a 43-42-1 record due to numerous lineup changes and platooning. He was replaced by GM Paul Owens, and Owens led them to the 1983 World Series.

The veteran "Wheez Kids," led by Pete Rose, Joe Morgan, and Tony Perez lost to the Baltimore Orioles in five games. John Denny posted a 19-6 record with a 2.37 ERA. Thirty-eight-year-old Steve Carlton had a 15-16 mark with a 3.11 ERA and a league-high 275 strikeouts. Carlton had one more effective season before he began to struggle.

At the Box Office and On the Air Waves: During the week of Jan. 27, 1982, "On Golden Pond" a sentimental piece featuring Henry Fonda and Katherine Hepburn became the top film at the box office after eight weeks, and it would stay in the top slot for the next seven weeks.

A week prior, "Absence of Malice," a true forgotten masterpiece starring Paul Newman, held the top spot.

Hall and Oates' "I Can't Go For That (No Can Do)," Foreigner's "Waiting for a Girl Like You," and J. Geils Band's "Centerfold" were atop the Billboard charts.

Sizzling Sixers: On Jan. 28, the Sixers defeated the Dallas Mavericks, 99-86, behind Julius Erving's 18 points and Lionel Hollins 13. See DAY on Page A8

Becahi captured the EPC wrestling title with a 30-24 win over Nazareth.

PRESS PHOTOS BY DON HERB

BC wins EPC team title

BY PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Bethlehem Catholic took round one of the series against Nazareth, but the rivalry will certainly see a round two this weekend at the District 11 wrestling championships.

The Hawks outlasted Nazareth in last week's EPC Championship 30-24 and both teams are surely on a collision course to meet again this Saturday at 5:30 p.m. in the District 11 3A championship at Freedom.

Both teams have to post victories in their respective quarterfinal and semifinal matches this week, but those are nothing more than a formality, as the two kinds of Lehigh Valley wrestling only have themselves to truly compete against.

"I think it's special because we both want the same end goals year after year," said Hawks' head coach Jeff Karam on the rivalry and facing Nazareth for a second time in a matter of seven days. "They are always well prepared for us and wrestle six hard minutes."

Becahi (9-0) won eight of the 13 bouts in last week's league final, but gave up pins at 189, 215 and heavyweight to keep Nazareth within striking distance.

Meanwhile, Nazareth (12-1) only gave up bonus points in three of their eight losses. With round two coming up, both coaches will look to make some changes on Saturday to grab the coveted district title.

"A big key to winning again is building on what we did last Saturday and making the adjustments to widen the gap in matches we won," Karam said. "We also need to turn around some of the close losses. Every time you compete against a team of that caliber, bonus points are rare to come by. We need to get them where Cael McIntyre and the Hawks will likely see Nazareth again.

Jack Evans won his match but the Hurricanes fell.

we can and limit Nazareth from doing the same."

Freedom (17-3) took care of business in the fifth-place match at the EPC Championships, as they handled Emmaus 39-28.

The Pates come into the district tournament as the fourth-seed and will most likely see Easton (13-5) in Thursday's quarterfinal round, where they hope to reverse a 38-18 defeat from earlier this season.

"We lost to Easton 7-6 in bouts a couple weeks ago, so the goal is to win eight this time because that's the only realistic way we can beat them," said head coach Dante Terenzio. "This is an opportunity to show how much we've improved since the last time we wrestled them."

In those seven losses, Easton recorded bonus points in six of them, including five pins. Eliminating those bonus points will be crucial and also a sign of where the team is at the moment.

With Freedom clearly becoming a tough out for most teams, being able to knock off Easton and make a push on Saturday at district duals would be another building step for the program.

"Now that we've accomplished our initial goal of becoming a top five dual team in the district, it's time to crack the top three," said Terenzio. "Anything less than wins over See MAT on Page A8

D-11 wrestling tourney set for this week

BY PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

The District 11 wrestling tournament gets underway on Thursday afternoon with Liberty's Memorial Gymnasium being the epic center of most of the 3A action before all competition from both classes heads to Freedom on Saturday.

Top-seeded Bethlehem Catholic is the only top 3A team not wrestling at Liberty on Thursday, as they'll be at Catasauqua waiting to take on the winner of Pottsville (eighth-seed) and Stroudsburg (ninth-seed) in the 7:30 p.m. quarterfinals.

All other 3A wrestling will be at Liberty with preliminary rounds set for 6 p.m.

Joining Becahi in the top bracket is fourth-seeded Freedom, who meet the winner of Easton (fifth-seed) and Southern Lehigh (twelfth-seed).

In the bottom bracket, sixth-seeded Parkland battles eleventh-seeded Liberty, with the winner facing Northampton (third-seed).

The action rounds out with Emmaus (seventh-seed) and Whitehall (tenth-seed) battling before their matchup with second-seeded Nazareth.

Thursday night's winners move to Saturday's 10:45 a.m. semifinals with the championship, presumably pitting Bethlehem Catholic and Nazareth back at it, at 5:30 p.m.

In 2A, top-seeded Saucon Valley will be at Memorial Gymnasium as well, as they'll take on the winner of Jim Thorpe (eighth-seed) and Wilson (ninth-seed).

Fourth-seeded Catasauqua will be at home waiting to take on either Tri-Valley (fifth-seed) or Palisades (twelfth-seed).

Third-seeded North Schuylkill will be at home as well, taking on either Lehigh (sixth-seed) or Palmerton (eleventh-seed).

The final 2A action is at Northern Lehigh, as second-seeded Notre Dame awaits the winner of Tamaqua (seventh-seed) and Schuylkill Haven (tenth-seed).

Semifinal action shifts to Freedom on Saturday taking place at 10:45 a.m. as well, with the finals slated for 5:30 p.m.

Winter Classic event February 5

BY KATIE MCDONALD
kmcDonald@tnonline.com

The Ninth Annual Lehigh Valley Winter Classic, an all-day ice hockey celebration, will take place Feb. 5 at Bethlehem Municipal Ice Rink, 345 Illick's Mill Rd.

Saturday's event will feature ice hockey games, raffles, silent auctions, food, merchandise to purchase, and an autograph session by NHL Flyers alumni Bill Clement, Mark Howe, and John LeClair, with all proceeds going to Special Hockey of the Lehigh Valley (SHLV).

SHLV is a recreational ice hockey program for children and young adults with autism, Down syndrome, and other cognitive challenges. The program is run by volunteers, adapting traditional ice hockey rules to make the game safer and more enjoyable for participants.

"It's incredibly important," said SHLV president Joe Guellnitz, who, along with his wife Nicole, co-founded SHLV in 2015. "We could run [the program] on the proceeds from the day. The cool part is it's also a fun day, whether it's the adult league games or the Polar Bears, everyone is 'growing out their beards' for the day."

The Lehigh Valley Winter Classic will begin at 8 a.m. with four adult hockey games, followed by the Special Hockey Game at 2 p.m. starring the Lehigh Valley Polar Bears taking on the Bucks County Admirals. There will be four more adult hockey games throughout the late afternoon and evening with raffle drawings closing out the event by 10 p.m.

Guellnitz is a former Pleasant Valley High School ice hockey coach, and when he heard about the same type of program elsewhere, it stuck with him.

"It resonated with me, what it does for the players, so I decided to give it a try," he said.

Also on Saturday, the Lehigh Valley Winter Classic will be honoring and memorializing junior coach and former Parkland player Gus Schwartz, who was killed in a car accident in December when he was rear-ended on his way home from Penn State where he went to college.

Schwartz's mother Jodi, sisters Natalie and Larissa, who is also a coach, and girlfriend Maddy will drop the puck for the Polar Bears versus Bucks County Admiral game.

"We'll be thinking of him and honoring him on Saturday," Guellnitz said. "He touched a lot of lives."

Guellnitz invites family, friends, and fans to come out and be part of the day, to like and share things on social media, and provide SHLV Polar Bears with the opportunity to continue playing their favorite game: ice hockey.

SWIMMING

Pate boys win two

Freedom swimmer AJ Black knew it was going to be a good day after he swam the breaststroke in the 200 medley relay on Tuesday; after all, the Patriot sophomore swam a good leg, ahead of a bigger challenge in the 100 breast, going against East Stroudsburg North's Jacob Cruz near meet's end that afternoon at Freedom.

"Breaststroke is what I swim, and I knew that they had a good breaststroker who had a better time than me, so going up, I was thinking, I gotta go fast, I gotta go fast," Black said.

Black and Cruz raced side-by-side for the first 75 yards with Cruz leading as they approached the last turn.

"And then on that last 25 where he happened to be in front of me, all I was thinking was, you gotta go faster, so that's basically what I did," said Black. "Coach Alexa was telling us about an Olympian who, in the last 15 meters, knew he'd been behind, so at that point, put his head down, working hard, and that's all that was going through my mind."

Black touched the wall in 1:12.54. Cruz touched in 1:13.62.

"It was exhilarating, realizing I hit the wall, and then I turn and look, and I saw that [Cruz] had just hit the wall, and I realized, oh my God, I did it. It was very intense," said Black, who was congratulated by teammates before he walked to the other side of the deck to chat with Cruz. "I was just telling him he's amazing at breaststroke. He's a junior, so it's going to be a great matchup next year."

It was a good day, indeed, for Black, and for the Patriot boys who won their meet against East Stroudsburg North, 80-61.

Black was joined by Andrew Ehret, Luke McClure, and Ryan Rummel in the medley relay, taking first place in 1:49.68, and winning the 200 free relay in 1:41.96.

Rummel went on to lead the Pates to a one, two, three finish in the 100 freestyle with a time of 56.90, followed by Black, and Drew Harvey.

Ehret also led the Pates to a one, two, three finish in the 100 backstroke with a time of 1:00.40, followed by Somak Roy and Harvey.

Rummel took first place in the 50 free in 25.12, and McClure was the winner in the 100 butterfly in 59.30.

On Friday, Freedom's boys visited neighbor Moravian Academy, defeating the Lions, 108-65, and the Patriot medley relay foursome placed first and bettered Tuesday's time by four seconds.

Rummel dropped one second in the 100 free, and close to one second in the 50 free, while McClure dropped almost two seconds in the 100 fly.

Freedom's next swim meet is scheduled for Thursday when they will host Southern Lehigh.

FHS girls top ESN

Last Tuesday, Freedom's swimmers were eying their last few meets of the season, when the Patriot girls defeated East Stroudsburg North, 110-43, at Freedom.

"Some of the more experienced kids are definitely where they should be. We have kids who aren't as experienced and are right on their heels, and I have a couple kids who are just starting out and everything's clicked. They've started to drop time. Things are looking up," said Freedom coach Aliha Roscioli.

Two Patriot veterans, seniors Deb Belen and Aliah Corrado, won two individual events and two relay events apiece.

"I'm so proud of everyone," said Belen, who sprinted to first place in the 50 freestyle in 27.39 and the 100 free in 1:03.67. "I went a good time (in the 50) but not what I was looking for. In the 100, I was kind of conserving my energy for the 200 free relay because we're aiming for the district cut in faster heats. Other than that, I feel my swims were very good."

Any energy Belen was able to conserve went to anchor the 200 free relay, winning the event along with Lilly Anderson, Alexia Ragab, and Corrado in 1:50.52.

Belen anchored the same threesome to score an opening-meet victory in the 200 medley relay in 2:05.17.

Corrado took first place in the 100 butterfly in 1:07.79 and the 100 breaststroke in 1:17.52.

Anderson was the 200 IM winner with a time of 2:46.92, and Ragab's endurance won her a first place finish in the 500 free with a time of 6:13.53.

Zara Martin took first in the 200 free for the Patriots in 2:33.20.

The Patriot girls closed out the meet against the Timberwolves with a 400 free relay victory swum by Anaya Velez, Martin, Katie Twigger, and Maggie Marshaleck in 3:53.51.

Said Belen, "It's such a great season, probably my favorite, probably because everyone's so tight-knit. Everyone's working super hard, and it's paying off. I'm really proud of the dedication here. We're gonna go big or go home."

Freedom is scheduled to host Southern Lehigh on Thursday.

The race to the postseason will come down to the stretch for two of Bethlehem's teams, as Liberty and Freedom are in the hunt for district spots.

The Hurricanes (9-9) have four games left and need two wins to clinch districts.

Liberty has lost three out of their last four games to put them in a precarious position, including a 58-56 defeat to a struggling Dieruff (4-15) squad last week, that could prove to be a massive loss in the end if Liberty can't close out the season with two wins.

The 'Canes take on Bethlehem Catholic, Freedom and Muhlenberg this week before closing out the season next week against Easton.

Freedom (8-10) has a tougher task in their last four games, needing to go 3-1 in order to clinch a district berth.

The Hawks finish with Liberty, Dieruff and Nazareth with an opportunity to improve their conference standings, as they're only two games back of top-seeded Pocono Mountain West (13-4, 12-1) and a game behind both Central Catholic (15-3, 11-2) and Parkland (13-5, 11-2).

Liberty (10-9) lost to Whitehall in last Saturday's EPC Championships 39-30 in the ninth place match. The Hurricanes face an uphill climb this Thursday when they take on a heavily-favored Parkland team in the preliminary round of the District 11 3A tournament. DAY

It was their 30th win of the season. Bobby Jones and Andrew Toney came off the bench that season, and it marked the final season for fan favorite Steve "The Mayor of Mixville" Mix.

Billy Cunningham led the team to an overall 58-24 season record, and a hard-fought, seven-game series win over the Boston Celtics. Toney gained the nickname "The Boston Strangler" for his continued dominance over the Celtics in different series.

The Sixers lost in six games to the Lakers in the finals. That would help spark them to sign center Moses Malone, who helped lead them to basketball's Promised Land the following season.

The Commodore; In early January of that year, the Commodore 64 computer went on sale.

It was the eight-bit home computer. It has been listed as the highest-selling single computer model of all time, selling between 12.5 and 17 million units.

It's hard to believe that some of us worked on those big, block-type computers of the early 1980s.

Flying Low; For the first time since 1971, the Flyers would fail to make it past the first round of the playoffs. They also were experiencing a transition period with a 32-year-old Bobby Clarke. They did acquire former Maple Leafs' standout Darry Sittler, and Pete Peeters emerged as a steady netminder. Head coach Pat Quinn was fired during the season, and longtime minor league coach Bob McCammon, who had a successful two-year run, took over. McCammon passed away Dec. 23.

Painting for beginners

Jen's teaching is direct and hands-on

BY DENNIS GLEW

Special to the Bethlehem Press

If you ever thought it would be fun to try your hand at painting, the Bethlehem Township Community Center is an excellent place to start. For seven years Jen Avitabile has been at the center teaching beginners the elements of painting with acrylics. Each month she offers a class for adults and another for kids. The classes resumed recently after a long hiatus due to COVID. Three adults and eight children are enrolled.

Everything needed to paint a picture is provided: acrylic paints (which dry faster than oils and produce brilliant colors), an 11 by 14-inch canvas, and a table-top easel. Classes meet in a brightly lit room.

Jen's teaching is direct and hands-on. Class begins by examining a painting by Jen that the students will reproduce. At the January session for adults, the subject was a Snowy Owl set against a wintry scene. Then Jen talks the students step by step through the process of producing their own paintings – first the background, then the owl's perch and its head followed by its body and finally its wings. Jen distributes paints and brushes as needed for each step. Throughout the class, she circulates among the students, offering tips and encouragement.

The students' painting might not be museum-ready, but for beginners' work, it was outstanding. All agreed that the class was fun and that they now had a much better idea of how to produce a painting on their own.

Karen Mintz finishes outlining the composition: the owl's head at the top, the base on which it stands at the bottom, its body in the middle of the central section, and its wings on the sides of the body. The bill and eyes will be the final elements.

After Marilyn Wilner has outlined the three parts of the owl (head, body and wings), Jen Avitabile offers a tip to the class about adding feathers so that the bird looks like an owl, not a chicken, as one of the painters jokes.

Lillian Cerullo adds streaks of gray to the breast feathers to make them stand out against the rest of the owl's body. The next class will be held Feb. 11. The theme for Valentine's day: LOVE. Register by calling 610-332-1900. There are fees.

Communications

My late uncle, Barry Mill, used to say to my cousin Heather, "Open mouth, insert foot," when she spoke before thinking. Beyond the amusing visual that it inspired, it is a good description of what sometimes happens when I speak. I am absolutely not trying to be ambiguous. But I am not a skilled conversationalist, and, too often, it seems like I am misunderstood.

Masking does not help with this. I don't mumble, but I am generally soft spoken (my boys would disagree), and with a mask on, it seems some of what I say gets lost. I have noticed others have the same issue with masks muffling their words. That's a small price to pay for some protection from COVID.

It seems this is in part an introvert issue. Other introverts have agreed with me that it is just easier to communicate clearly when writing versus speaking. Of course, thoughtful writing does not have the same pace as conversation. When I write, I can read it over and make adjustments.

At home, the problem is not as apparent. If my kids don't respond to my words, they are likely ignoring me. Although Erick sometimes listens to my tone instead of my words. That drives me nuts. As any mom knows, at home you will find you have to repeat yourself a lot.

My communication outside of home is quite limited. My family members know I don't like to make phone calls. If I do, it's likely an emergency. I mainly text the people closest to me. Sometimes they even text me back.

Then there's Covid brain fog. Thankfully, it seems to have passed. Brain fog left me struggling to find words, frustrating because sometimes I knew what I wanted to say, but the words were just lost.

My ex used to get frustrated with me when I responded slowly. He did not understand I was counting to 10 in my head, while looking for words that would not upset him.

So verbal communication is not my forte. I don't really mind much. I would much rather write than speak. And speaking less means I listen more. I learn a lot that way. So here's to the introverts: know I am smiling with you.

U.S. SENATE RACE

Special to the Bethlehem Press

Smiling and speaking with a familiar Texas twang, Sen. Ted Cruz (R) used his political star power to help launch Senate candidate David McCormick's campaign to win retiring Pat Toomey's soon-to-be vacated Senate seat. Cruz spoke to an enthusiastic and energized crowd of several hundred supporters at a rally at the Lehigh Valley Sporting Clays in Coplay Jan. 25.

Speaking after McCormick, Cruz emphasized the crucial role that Pennsylvania will play in the mid-term elections.

"I gotta say that Pennsylvania could very well decide this entire election," Cruz said. "The Senate is in the balance."

Cruz spoke with a sense of urgency and conviction about the need to elect a highly qualified candidate to the Senate who would defend American values, the Constitution and the American free enterprise system.

"I want someone who understands the miracle of our free enterprise system and who will stand up to the socialist left that wants to tear it down," Cruz said. "Let me tell you the characteristic that I want more than anything else: backbone."

Cruz said senators from both parties want to do good when they first get elected, but often fail because they end up making too many compromises.

Referencing his long friendship with the candidate, Cruz voiced his confidence in McCormick's ability to avoid compromise and fend off corrupt political influences.

"I believe that he (McCormick) will have the guts to say, 'No, I work for the people of Pennsylvania, not the corrupt lobbyists of Washington,'" Cruz said.

McCormick, 56, moved from Connecticut to Pittsburgh upon deciding to run for the Senate. On Jan. 3, McCormick resigned from his position as CEO of Bridgewater Associates, the world's largest hedge fund with more than $140 billion in assets. McCormick served as Bridgewater CEO from 2020 to 2022 after holding other positions at the Connecticut-based firm beginning in 2009.

While McCormick spent much of his adult life in Connecticut, he was born and raised in Pennsylvania. McCormick hails from Bloomsburg, where his parents owned a Christmas tree farm.

A graduate of West Point and the Army Ranger School, McCormick won a Bronze Star while serving in the first Gulf War. He went on to earn a Ph.D. from Princeton's School of Public and International Affairs, and then worked at two Pittsburgh-based firms: McKinsey & Co, a consulting company, and at FreeMarkets, a global software and services provider.

In addition to his work in the private sector, McCormick also has significant government experience. He served in senior positions at the Treasury Department during President George W. Bush's administration.

McCormick will face tough competition from as many as 10 other Senate candidates in the Republican primary on May 17. TV personality, Dr. Mehmet Oz, is the best known of these candidates. Others include: Carla Sands, who served on former President Trump's Economic Advisory Council and as ambassador to Denmark in 2017; Jeff Bartos, a Berks County businessman who started a non-profit, the Pennsylvania 30-Day Fund, that gave forgivable loans to businesses affected by COVID-19; Kathy Barnette, a veteran, former professor and conservative political commentator. If elected, Barnette would be Pennsylvania's first Black female senator.

HELLERTOWN COUNCIL

Borough native Zimpfer honored

BY CHRIS HARING
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Jan. 18 Hellertown Council meeting was eventful, with several notable pieces of business being handled.

Before official business could begin, however, council approved an official proclamation in honor of Hellertown native and New York City firefighter Matt Zimpfer. Zimpfer, who currently lives in the Bronx, was the subject of a photograph that went viral in the wake of the deadly Jan. 10 inferno that killed at least 17 people and was described as the city's deadliest fire in three decades.

Mayor David Heintzelman presented Zimpfer - who's been firefighting in the Bronx for two decades - with a certificate in his honor, saying, "you made the newspapers, and you looked really good! But you're a hero, and that's why you're here today."

Also, Pa. House candidate Kevin Branco spoke briefly about a proposed redistricting plan that would directly affect the borough. The current owner of Main Street Gym in the borough expressed his desire to represent the residents of Hellertown and provided some basic information on his campaign.

The proposal sees Hellertown's representation transition from the 136th district - a seat held by longtime delegate Robert meeting. 131st, in which Branco was defeated in 2020 by Milou Mackenzie. Shortly after the plan became public, Branco, a Democrat, announced his intent to again challenge the Republican Mackenzie this November.

Heintzelman released a public statement earlier in the day criticizing the proposal, which has yet to be ratified. In the letter, which he read aloud at the meeting, the mayor said the plan "has positively no benefit to Hellertown at all." The council unanimously adopted a resolution expressing a similar sentiment at the Jan. 3 meeting.

The other major topic of discussion was in relation to a price adjustment on the ongoing construction of a new Public Works facility. The building, which is being constructed on the former site of the Reinhard School on Northampton Street, is on track to cost significantly more than was approved in summer 2021, borough engineer Bryan Smith said.

Several council members expressed their concern and disappointment with the news, as it was suggested by council member Gil Stauffer that somebody "screwed up" the initial estimate. Council member Andrew Hughes agreed, saying it was as much about "principle" as it was the underestimate.

Ultimately, the council voted to table the discussion, as many agreed that it should be the contractor's responsibility to make good on the error. Council President Thomas Rieger said, "Don't charge us the whole darn thing. We're willing to talk, but we're not willing to foot the bill for their mistake."

Kenju Murakami (center) met with students, faculty and staff over an informative luncheon at the college's restaurant, Hampton Winds.

Northampton Community College Deputy Consul General of U.S.-Japan Council visits

In 1995, Japan was the number one choice of students wanting to study abroad. Today, it is the eighth most popular destination for international students.

Deputy Consul General and Director of the Japan Information Center Kenju Murakami of the Consulate General of Japan in New York is looking to change that and is eager not only for more students to come to Japan, but for Japanese students to experience studying abroad in other countries, too.

"When you see Japanese students, please encourage them," he said on a visit to Northampton Community College (NCC) Nov. 22. "Many students struggle a lot the first few months; learning English at the same time they are adjusting. That was the case for me."

After receiving his bachelor of law degree at the University of Tokyo, Murakami came to the United States to study law and political science at the University of Michigan. His career has spanned working for the government of Japan and the United Nations in various roles. Today, in his position as director of the Japan Information Center at the Consulate, his goal is to bring awareness to Japanese college student exchange programs as well as helping increase the public's understanding of Japanese culture.

One of the reasons NCC was selected for a visit is because of the college's initiatives related to Japanese arts and culture, hosting high-profile Japanese artists, dancers, and choreographers to work with and teach students, faculty and staff. In addition, NCC established a study abroad program for communication design majors to study in Japan. It was held in 2018 and 2019 with hopes to resume soon.

"I was thrilled to hear that Deputy Consul Murakami would be visiting the Lehigh Valley and I wanted to be sure he had an opportunity to visit our campus, meet our president, and talk with Northampton students," said Nathan Carpenter, NCC director of global education and international services. "I am so very proud of the work that NCC faculty and students have undertaken to support Japanese cultural and academic exchange over the years. That students can come to Northampton and study abroad in Japan, learn with world-renowned Japanese artists such as Hana Takehiro, Tomoka Asada and Shuho Kondo on our own campuses, and to host a Japanese diplomat right here in Bethlehem is heartwarming. We are truly a globally engaged campus right here in the Lehigh Valley."

Murakami and Miki Sankary, development manager of the U.S.-Japan Council and founding member of the Lehigh Valley JAJAJA, also toured other facilities in the Lehigh Valley.

"This visit was a culmination of a myriad of individuals and institutions in the Lehigh Valley representing the breadth and depth of art culture including Northampton Community College, Allentown Art Museum, Lafayette College, Lehigh University and their art galleries. In a time when traveling abroad is a challenge, connecting with people from different countries can create a sense of worldliness. This is localized diplomacy," said Sankary. "As a Japanese American in the Lehigh Valley, I am thankful to be part of a community that celebrates cross-cultural exchange with my heritage country. This visit was inspired by the Japanese expression, 'geijutsu no aki' meaning 'Autumn is for the Arts,' the time of year where creatives are inspired by art in nature and patrons enjoy institutions displaying art as a window to other lands."

NCC hosted a luncheon at the college's Hampton Winds restaurant with students from NCC's Global Studies program, students from Japan, alumni, faculty staff and representatives from Lehigh and Lafayette. Attendees listened to a presentation from Murakami about contemporary Japanese culture and society and asked questions about his career, Japanese responses to global challenges and study abroad opportunities for US students.

The menu, presented by Chef Francine Marz and NCC culinary students, consisted of locally inspired dishes that represented the themes of thanksgiving and Pennsylvania hospitality. After lunch, Tom Shillea, NCC's director of art programs, gave a tour of the Communications Hall Gallery exhibit of beloved NCC artist Walter Heath.

"I am happy to be able to come back to Lehigh Valley after COVID-19 had prevented in-person gatherings. I really enjoyed the discussion with the students and faculty of NCC and was impressed by the awareness and interest of students in foreign affairs," Murakami said. "The partnership between Japan and the United States, key allies in the Indo-Pacific region, bound by the shared values of freedom, democracy, human rights and the rule of law, is more important than ever. This alliance is made possible only by the trust built between the Japanese and American people, in people-to-people exchanges, especially at the grassroots and local levels. I commend the efforts of NCC to promote its students' understanding of world affairs by providing opportunities like today's event."

The Japanese Consulate would like to further promote exchanges between Japan and educational institutions in Pennsylvania."

HELLERTOWN

Council supports library against Lower Saucon Township disregard

BY CHRIS HARING

Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Hellertown Borough Council called a special meeting the evening of Jan. 26 to discuss recent developments out of Lower Saucon Township and their affects on the shared Hellertown Area Library.

Council President Thomas Rieger read a statement which he later posted on his campaign's official Facebook page, explaining the history of the agreement between Hellertown and Lower Saucon on the library's funding and use.

Rieger said the library is a nonprofit organization initially founded in 1989 by borough residents, eventually moving to its current site on Constitution Avenue in 1993. Lower Saucon was brought in as a result of a 2010 task force which was initially put together to investigate the possibility of ex-

Food bank benefits from 'Giving' event

The Lehigh Valley Wine Trail recently presented Second Harvest Food Bank of the Lehigh Valley in Nazareth with a donation of $600 as the result of its November event, "Giving Before Thanks." The third annual event invited wine lovers to bring a nonperishable food donation to each winery on the trail (five wineries) and in return receive a complimentary three-wine tasting at each winery. The food was donated to the food pantry at New Bethany Ministries and the Portland Upper Mount Bethel Food Pantry in the Slate Belt. Also as part of the event, the wine trail offered to donate $1 per pound of donated food to Second Harvest. The total weight of this year's donated food items was approximately 600 lbs., so the Wine Trail made this $600 donation to Second Harvest. The members of the wine trail are Black River Farms, Blue Mountain Vineyards, Franklin Hill Vineyards, Tolino Vineyards, and Vynecrest. Above: Khushboo Jain, Nutrition Educator at Second Harvest, and LVWT Board President Andrew Warner of Black River Farms in Bethlehem.

by 50 percent was due to what their council, led by a half-hour statement by President Jason Banonis at its contentious Jan. 19 meeting, characterized as being consistently shut out of decision-making by the library board of directors.

In addition to the now-$50,000 donation to the HAL, Lower Saucon Council also voted to donate the other $50,000 to the Southern Lehigh Public Library and asked officials to pursue potential agreements with other local libraries. Banonis has since claimed that the subsequent donation was unrelated to the quarrel with Hellertown.

In another motion on Jan. 19, Lower Saucon Council also pre-emptively voted to pursue legal action if the library attempted to bar township residents from library patronage. Despite this, the Hellertown Area Library Board voted at its Jan. 25 meeting to reject the halved donation and revoke library privileges from all Lower Saucon residents.

Mayor David Heintzelman, who has also shared public statements on the matter in opposition to Banonis and the Lower Saucon Council's position, also spoke in support of Rieger, and the rest of council and attendees - Hellertown and Lower Saucon residents alike - largely supported his and Rieger's positions through the remainder of the meeting.

Rieger also suggested that the relationship between the borough and Lower Saucon should be reconsidered on all levels. "It is my opinion that our community vision is no longer shared with Lower Saucon Township Council and that must be addressed," he said.

The council ultimately voted to renegotiate a five-year agreement with the library before the current one expires at the end of January. When a new deal commences, Rieger also suggested the council consider an additional $75,000 donation from American Rescue Plan funds, with action on the matter set for a special meeting Jan. 31.

Colin Quinn 'Best Hope'
for laughs, keen insight

BY DAVE HOWELL
Special to The Press

It might be hard to get laughs about the state of the nation, but on the other hand, we need them more than ever.

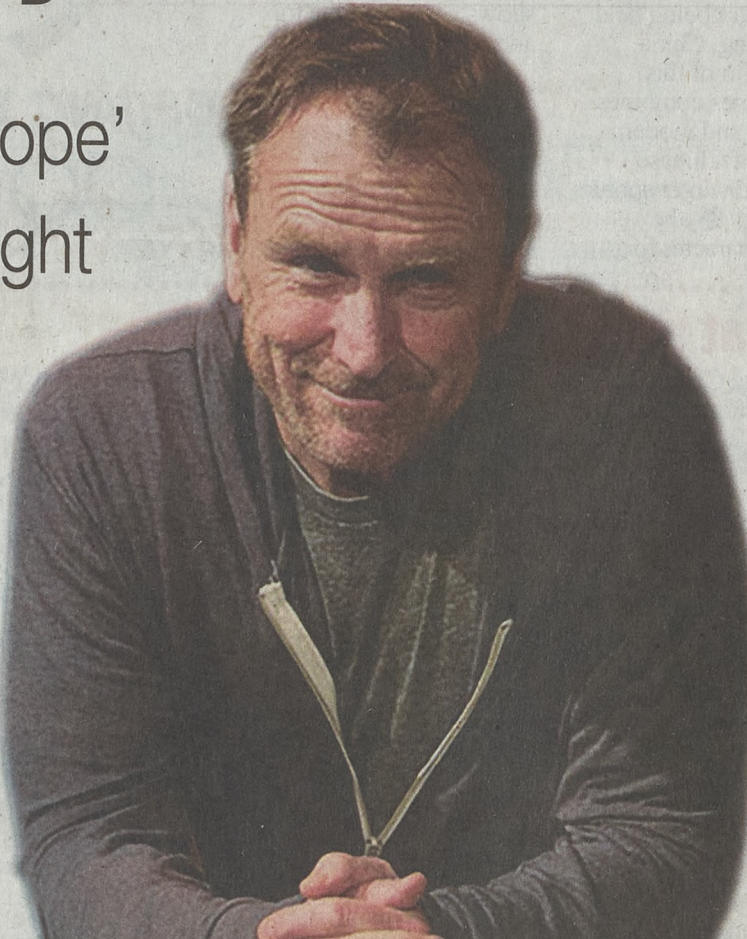

Colin Quinn, who always gets laughs about United States' culture, politics and history, is making his third visit to Bethlehem's Musikfest Café with his latest tour after performing there in 2019 and 2014.

"Colin Quinn: The Last Best Hope" is 7:30 p.m. Feb. 3, Musikfest Café presented by Yuengling, ArtsQuest Center, SteelStacks, 101 Founders Way, Bethlehem. Opening act is comedian Tim Gage. Doors open at 6 p.m.

Quinn's comedy takes insightful looks at the nation. He remembers Musikfest Café for its location on the site of the former Bethlehem Steel Corp. southside plant.

"I appreciate history," he says in a phone interview, speaking from Boston while on tour. "I imagine what it [the steel plant] was like in its heyday, what it meant and what America meant."

In Mandarin Chinese (the official dialect of China), "Bing" has several meanings, the most common being ice. "Dwen Dwen" means lively. Olympic mascot Bing Dwen Dwen is a panda who wears a body "shell" made out of ice, which looks like an astronaut suit. This represents new technologies for a future with infinite possibilities. The shell also allows the panda to skate, snowboard and ski alongside the Olympic athletes!

Shuey Rhon Rhon is a Chinese lantern that represents warmth and happiness. Shuey Rhon Rhon is the mascot of the Winter Paralympic Games in Beijing, an international event where athletes with physical disabilities compete. These Games are held every four years, directly following the Winter Olympic Games.

The Winter Olympic Games are being held in Beijing, China. The emblem of this year's Games combines traditional and modern elements of Chinese culture and winter sports. Inspired by the Chinese character for "winter," the emblem shows a skater at the top and a skier at the bottom.

The blue represents dreams, the future and the purity of ice and snow. The red and yellow are the colors of China's national flag.

Nicole Kidman (Lucille Ball), Javier Bardem (Desi Arnaz), "Being the Ricardos."

We love 'the Ricardos'

AT THE MOVIES

By Paul Willistein
pwillistein@tnonline.com

If you are expecting a regular laugh riot with "Being the Ricardos," think again.

"I Love Lucy" it is not. Yes, there are some laughs. And there is humor. There is much more. There is sadness, sobering reality, tragedy and triumph. You come away with a deeper understanding of Lucille Ball and her husband, Desi Arnaz.

"Being the Ricardos" plays like a reality TV show as we get a behind-the-scenes look at one week in the production of an episode of the "I Love Lucy" (1951-1957) TV show.

Significantly, the film is titled "Being the Ricardos," not "Lucy and Desi" or "Being Lucy" or "We Love Lucy." The film is about Lucy (Nicole Kidman) and Desi (Javier Bardem) as a married couple, actors and TV show producers.

"I Love Lucy" starred Lucille Ball as a housewife, Lucy Ricardo, and her husband, Desi Arnaz, as band leader Ricky Ricardo. Vivian Vance and William Frawley co-starred as New York City neighbors Ethel and Fred Mertz.

"Being the Ricardos" references "I Love Lucy" TV show innovations: shot on 35mm film, three-camera setup, first ensemble cast, and first scripted television show shot in front of a studio audience.

When it first aired, "I Love Lucy" was the top-rated TV show in the United States. In a 2012 survey by ABC News and People magazine, "I Love Lucy" was voted the "Best TV Show of All Time."

"Being the Ricardos" by writer-director Aaron Sorkin (Oscar, adapted screenplay, "The Social Network," 2010; director, "The Trial of the Chicago 7," 2020; creator, TV's "The West Wing," 1999-2006; creator TV's "The Newsroom," 2012-2014; screenplay, "Steve Jobs," 2015; "Moneyball," 2011; "The Social Network," 2010; "Charlie Wilson's War," 2007; playwright, screenwriter, "A Few Good Men," 1992) is a primer on Lucy and Desi.

Through fictionalized flashbacks and flashforwards, we learn about Lucille Ball being accused of being a Communist sympathizer (she was exonerated by the House Un-American Activities Committee), her demand that real-life husband, Desi, play her husband on "I Love Lucy" at a time when marriages between a caucasian woman (by the way, Lucy was a native of Jamestown, N.Y., in the vicinity of Erie, Pa.) and a Latin male (Arnaz was a native of Cuba) were not represented on mainstream national TV shows, and allegations by Lucy of Desi having extramarital affairs. Sorkin shuffles the chronological deck to good effect. The film builds precipitously to two crucial scenes with Kidman and Bardem.

Kidman (Oscar, actress, "The Hours," 2002) is note-perfect as Lucille Ball and as Lucy the TV character. Kidman not only replicates the mannerisms and voice, she conveys Lucille Ball's inner life, as well. Look for an Oscar actress nomination for Kidman.

Bardem (Oscar, supporting actor, "No Country for Old Men," 2007) is excellent as Desi. Also noteworthy: J.K. Simmons (Oscar, supporting actor, "Whiplash," 2014) as William Frawley, as well as Nina Arianda as Vivian Vance.

Some of the "I Love Lucy" TV show scenes are shown in black and white. The Lucy and Desi marriage was not black and white.

"Being the Ricardos" compares favorably to other TV topic movies: "Good Night, and Good Luck" (2005), "Soap Dish" (1991), "Broadcast News" (1987) and "Network" (1976).

Lucille Ball and her TV persona as Lucy Ricardo on the "I Love Lucy" situation-comedy lives on in perpetuity in reruns on streaming services, TV channels and DVDs.

If you're a fan of "I Love Lucy," then "Being the Ricardos" is a must-see. After you see the film, watch an episode of "I Love Lucy." You will have a renewed appreciation of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz.

"Being the Ricardos," MPAA rated R (Restricted Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian. Contains some adult material. Parents are urged to learn more about the film before taking their young children with them.) for language Genre: Biography, Drama, History; Run time: 2 hours, 11 minutes. Distributed by Amazon Studios.

Credit Readers Anonymous: The scene where Ricky Ricardo (Javier Bardem) is performing in a nightclub was filmed on the RMS Queen Mary, docked in Long Beach, Calif., as a hotel. Desi Arnaz Jr. and Lucie Arnaz are executive producers of "Being the Ricardos."

At The Movies: "Being the Ricardos" was seen at the Frank Banko Cinemas, ArtsQuest Center, SteelStacks, Bethlehem. Face masks are recommended.

TCM Lucy podcast: TCM has an excellent 10-part series, "Lucy," for its third season of "The Plot Thickens" podcast, hosted by Ben Mankiewicz. If you love Lucy, don't miss this sure to be award-winning series, which gives an in-depth, well-researched and entertaining profile of Lucy, plus three bonus episodes about Lucie Arnaz, Aaron Sorkin and Carol Burnett, Kate Flannery and Kate Micucci. tour, "Red State Blue State," can be seen on Netflix, does not take political sides.

"I'm naturally in the middle. That's how I feel," he says. "People can be derogatory about being neutral, but without it there is no compromise. You can't change the minds of 150 million people."

"Best Hope" is in the same vein as "Red State Blue State" (2019).

"We have the same society with the same issues. This show takes things to a deeper place."

The show changes throughout its run, at times influenced by events.

"I write every day," Quinn says.

Quinn became a writer and featured player on "Saturday Night Live" in 1996. He anchored the "Weekend Update" segment (1998-2000).

He was host of Comedy Central's talk show, "Tough Crowd with Colin Quinn" (2002-2004).

Quinn's movie roles include "A Night at the Roxbury" (1998); opposite Adam Sandler in "Grown Ups" (2010) and "Grown Ups 2" (2013), and Amy Schumer's film debut "Trainwreck" (2015).

Quinn made his Broadway debut in a one-man show, "Colin Quinn: An Irish Wake" (1998). His second one-man show was "My Two Cents" (2009). His third one-man show, "Colin Quinn Long Story Short" (2010) on Broadway was directed by Jerry Seinfeld. He premiered another one-man show, "Unconstitutional" (2013), about the United States Constitution, its creation and impact on the American psyche.

HBO Max aired "Colin Quinn & Friends: A Parking Lot Comedy Show" in 2020. "Colin Quinn: Red State Blue State" was CNN's first comedy special, broadcast in 2019.

Quinn's earlier standup comedy was often biographical. Now he focuses more on social issues. "I'm interested in human behavior," he says.

His first book, "The Coloring Book: A Comedian Solves Race Relations in America" (2015), describes his multicultural childhood, while "Overstated: A Coast-to-Coast Roast of the 50 States" (2020) has observations about each of the 50 states and Washington, D.C.

Quinn did a residency in a New York City theater with "Best Hope" before taking it on the road. This is the fifth one-man show he has done with extensive touring. He says since the 1990s he has done seven or eight altogether.

Although Quinn still performs in comedy clubs, the tours are designed for theaters. "Comedy clubs are bad for having a lot of things going on," says Quinn. Comics have to deal with drink orders, conversations and occasional hecklers. "You have to do that lion-taming thing," he says.

However, the clubs are good for tightening up an act. Says Quinn: "You've got to get to your jokes right away. You can't screw around. You have to get right to your point."

Theaters are better for listening, which can be especially helpful for a comedian talking about politics. "I tell people, 'Don't yell your opinions out.' These are my opinions. It's a comedy show. I don't want them to debate each other."

He admits that he is in difficult times. "I get very sad sometimes. Nobody is ever really in a good mood."

Quinn has an active Twitter account, but he says, "Anything I say on Twitter should be taken with a grain of salt. I think I'm the only non-sincere person there." He has a skeptical view of the Internet. "Social media makes us think that we are an intelligent country. We are not."

When I mention that he is considered one of the country's most intelligent comics, he replies, "That proves my point."

According to the ArtsQuest website, the Musikfest Cafe show by Colin Quinn will contain adult language and/or situations. Anyone attending between the ages of 13 and 17 must be accompanied by a parent or guardian. No child 12 or under will be admitted.

runs Feb. 4-6 in the New Hope theater.

"That'll Be The Day" tells the story of performers Andy Christopher and Esther Stilwell, who met and fell in love while performing in the musical "Buddy: The Buddy Holly Story."

The musical features songs by Buddy Holly, Adele, Hank Williams, The Beatles and Elvis.

It was at Lancaster's Fulton Playhouse in 2014 when Christopher met Stilwell, who was performing in the show for the first time as Buddy Holly's wife, Maria Elena Holly.

The couple fell in love, married and now live in New York City.

In the show, they share songs and tales from their musical theater careers as well as their time falling in love while performing together in "Buddy."

Proof of vaccination and face masks are required at the theater at 70 S. Main St., New Hope.

The "Jurors" are out: Nazareth Center for the Arts, 30 E. Belvidere St., Nazareth, was to present "Twelve Angry Jurors," Jan. 14-16, but rescheduled performances April 29-May 1. "Jurors" director Paul Gerber stated on social media that "due to the continuing rise in COVID cases in our community as well as our cast, we will have to postpone our production of 'Twelve Angry Jurors.'" Gerber is Artistic Theater Director of Nazareth Center for the Arts.

"Twelve Angry Jurors," written by Reginald Rose for the Emmy-winning 1954 teleplay, "Twelve Angry Men," was originally written for men. The Nazareth production has an all-gender cast.

Proof of vaccination or a negative COVID-19 test 48 hours prior to a performance is required. Face masks are optional.

No "Sweat": Northampton Community College Theatre Department is postponing its Feb. 17-20 performances of "Sweat" until the college's 2022-2023 school year, according to NCC Theatre Department Head Bill Mutimer.

"With the temporary delay of NCC students returning to class, we did not feel we could do justice to this amazing play with an abbreviated rehearsal time," says Mutimer.

Although NCC spring semester classes began Jan. 18 as planned, many classes were held online for the first two weeks out of an abundance of caution about COVID-19. Theater students and some other students were unable to be on campus.

NCC's productions of "Cloud 9," March 3-7, and "Xanadu," April 21-24, are to be presented as planned.

The craft category winner is Sue Marin, of Barto, who entered a jelly roll rug. This year's challenge theme was "How Bright Can You Go?" Guild members voted on their favorites among the 29 entries.

Be proactive with sons, 11, 13; Use acetaminophen products with caution; consult doctor

Q: How do I talk to my 11- and 13-year-old sons about not doing things that are bad for them? I am afraid that if I mention things like drinking or vaping, I will put ideas in their heads. Do I talk about these things, or should I leave well enough alone?

You should definitely talk to your sons about anything about which you are concerned, recommended the Family Project panel.

"Talking about things does not put ideas into a child's head. Rather it gives them permission to talk to you about it. If this is your first time bringing up drugs and alcohol with them, that's unfortunate," said panelist Mike Daniels.

"They already know about this stuff," agreed panelist Pam Wallace.

"If you don't talk about these things from the proper perspective, someone else will talk about it with them from the wrong perspective," added panelist Denise Continenza.

The panel agreed that your sons likely are seeing things about these topics on television, in movies and from the news and that can be a perfect lead-in for a discussion.

"Don't demonize kids because they know more than we think they know. It's all about communication. It's not out of bounds to use examples from your own childhood that were risky. We need to use our kids' language," Daniels said.

"Just talk about what you see on TV. Explain how horrible you would feel if something like that ever happened and say, 'Maybe should talk about it,'" suggested panelist Joanne Raftas.

There are too many dumb things in which a child can get involved to discuss them all, so it is important to keep the communication open, said panelist Chad Stefanyak.

"At this age, kids' brain are not yet fully developed and they think they are invincible," Raftas added.

"Tell them they are going to be faced with decisions and you won't be there. They will have to make decisions based on your family values. Give them the power," Raftas said.

"Teach them that if they get in a situation, to slow down, take three seconds and ask themselves 'is this smart?'" Stefanyak said.

"Make them aware of the consequences to help them make better choices. Say, 'Always text me and ask me questions.' You need to be available," Raftas added.

This week's panel: Pam Wallace, program coordinator, Project Child, a program of Valley Youth House; Chad Stefanyak, school counselor; Denise Continenza, extension educator; Joanne T. Raftas, registered play therapist and counselor, and Mike Daniels, LCSW, Psychotherapist.

Q: What is acetaminophen and why do I see it listed on so many products in my medicine cabinet?

Acetaminophen is the most widely-used pain-reliever and fever-reducer in the world.

It is contained in more than 100 products. Tylenol is the best known over-the-counter (OTC) acetaminophen product. It is also a component of well-known prescription drugs such as Darvocet and Percocet.

Acetaminophen also is known as paracetamol and N-acetyl-p-aminophenol (APAP).

Acetaminophen is available without a prescription. Follow the directions on the package label carefully. If your doctor prescribes it for you, the prescription label will tell you how often to take it.

Taking too much acetaminophen can lead to liver damage. The risk for liver damage may increase if you drink three or more alcoholic drinks while using medicine that contain acetaminophen.

When dose recommendations are followed, the risk of liver toxicity is extremely small.

Adults should not take more than 3,000 mg of acetaminophen a day. You should take less if you are more than 65-years-old. Taking more can lead to a severe overdose problems. If you have liver or kidney disease, you should discuss the use of this drug with your health care provider.

Acetaminophen is one of the most common pharmaceutical agents involved in overdose, as reported to the American Association of Poison Control Centers.

One of the problems with acetaminophen is its widespread use. You have to check your medicine cabinet to see what products contain acetaminophen. Then, if you're taking more than one medication, be sure you don't exceed the maximum daily dose.

Acetaminophen should not be taken for high fever, for fever lasting more than three days, or for recurrent fever without a doctor's supervision.

There are two types of Over-The-Counter

(OTC) pain-relievers. Some contain acetaminophen and others contain non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs). Examples of OTC NSAIDs are: aspirin, ibuprofen (Advil) and naproxen sodium (Aleve).

NSAIDs are associated with stomach distress. You should talk to your doctor before using NSAIDs if you are more than age 60, taking prescription blood thinners, have stomach ulcers or other bleeding problems.

NSAIDs can also cause damage to the kidneys. The risk of kidney damage may increase in people who are more than age 60, have high blood pressure, heart disease or pre-existing kidney disease, and people who are taking a diuretic.

You should talk with a healthcare professional if you have questions about using an OTC medicine before using it in combination with other medicine, either OTC or prescription medicine. Combining prescription medicines and OTC medicines can lead to problematic drug

RESPECTFULLY YOURS

Enjoy food at the party

BY JACQUELYN YOUST
Special to The Press

Dear Jacquelyn, I was shocked to see a guest arrive at a dinner party with food. The person brought food because of being a picky eater, not because of a dietary restriction or allergy. The host was gracious and did not say anything. What are your thoughts about bringing your own food to a dinner party?

Dear Reader, Being invited to a dinner party is a wonderful gift and a host will go through a lot of trouble planning and preparing a meal.

Not mentioning ahead of time that you are bringing a casserole will seem like an insult. The right thing to do is to ask the host ahead of time if there's anything you can bring for the meal.

Your host may say, "No, just bring yourselves!" Then you should bring a little gift for the host such as a bottle of wine or flowers. If she says, "Sure, you can bring dessert." Then by all means bring along a treat.

Bravo to the host who did not make a scene and embarrass the picky eater.

Ultimately, dinner parties are about everyone sharing time together which trumps pointing out a faux pas. The host obviously is aware of rule No. 1 for manners: Never point out someone else's lack of manners.

Now, to address the picky eater. It's never, ever acceptable to offend your host by arriving with your own brown bagged meal.

Remember, anything you bring to a dinner party is meant for the enjoyment of everyone there, not just you. The solution: Fill up at home first.

If you can't bring yourself to try something new, eating before a dinner party is half your battle. This way you aren't starving when dinner is served.

As an added bonus, it provides you with an opportunity to be brave and perhaps sample smaller portions of the meal that's served. You should eat something on your plate without complaining. It's the polite thing to do.

Respectfully Yours, Jacquelyn

Divorcing without raging war

There's an intriguing story in The New York Times modern love essays called "Love doesn't have to mean war."

Writer Jordana Jacobs detailed the way she and her ex-husband continue to live in the same house, with each living on separate floors.

Their 8-year-old son runs freely from one parent to another.

"Our marriage didn't work out but we have made the most of it," she says.

Her ex-husband's new partner lives there, too.

Jacobs says the girlfriend is a nice woman who has had to reconcile herself to their unusual form of co-parenting.

She admits it doesn't always run smoothly.

When Jacobs was downstairs in her husband's part of the house she entered their bedroom to deliver their freshly washed clothes. (Imagine that — divorced and she still does his laundry.)

She ran into the dripping wet girlfriend who had just stepped out of the shower.

That pointed out their need to establish firm boundaries and stick to them.

Jacobs says it's sometimes difficult but they all have gained by choosing love over hate.

I was especially interested in that subject because all around me I'm seeing divorced couples that are forging new positive relationships, sometimes after years of hostility.

One woman I know tried that one-house, two-floor solution after she and her husband got a contentious divorce, causing their 10-year-old daughter to say she was being torn apart by the ugly divorce.

Her ex-husband didn't take into account that by trying to hurt his ex-wife he was hurting his daughter, too.

For the sake of their only child, they began living on separate floors of their house.

It didn't work because there were no boundaries. Her ex-husband came into her bedroom at 2 a.m. to scream at her, venting the anger that was still consuming him.

When she and her daughter worked together in the garage to paint a desk for the child, her ex-husband exploded in violent rage because she got paint on the garage floor.

The violence kept escalating and they had to end their joint living arrangement.

Here's the interesting part of their story.

Time has a way of healing some hurts and angry feelings have a way of settling down — or, at least not leading to more hostility.

Ten years after the divorce both began to soften, somewhat. They did it for their daughter, not for themselves.

"It was awkward at first but we began to be able to talk to each other nicely," said my friend.

What helped everyone was her ex-husband's new wife. "She's a warm and loving person and was responsible for some of the healing we all had," said my friend.

This past Thanksgiving when she would have been spending the holiday alone she was invited to join her ex-husband, his wife and extended family.

"We honestly all got along and enjoyed being with each other," she says. "Even my former in-laws were nice to me."

It's something that could not have happened during the early, contentious years of the divorce.

My friend said she learned to see her ex-husband in a new light, appreciating the good things about him. They now can chat together like two people who care about each other.

"It's a heck of a lot better than divorce warfare," she says.

I call it spreading love, not hate.

In my own family there are two other cases of divorced couples that have opted for taking the high road and allowing a positive relationship to overtake hatred and hostility.

I am so proud of Ricky for being able to do that. He was crushed when his wife of 35 years left him for another man. To make matters worse, she admitted she was having an affair with the guy for the past year.

When he realized divorce was inevitable, he told her he wanted to follow the example of another family couple that stayed friends through their divorce.

"We had many years together," he said. "It's not necessary to hate each other or to do spite work."

True, but isn't that what happens much of the time?

Ricky also told family members not to say anything that would hurt his ex-wife.

Their lawyer said he never saw a divorcing couple treat each other so well.

Perhaps the strangest living arrangement of divorced couples is that of my new acquaintance Vanessa.

After she married for the second time, she stayed friends with her first husband.

She convinced her husband that he should allow her first husband to live with them. It's been more than five years and now all three bought a home together.

I met them on a boat when she introduced me to her first husband and her second husband.

I laughed when she said it but it's no joke. All three of them do everything together.

I think that's called "can you top this?"

My dear friend Jeanne cried a lot when her husband of 36 years told her he was getting a divorce because he wanted to go on dating sites like his friends were doing.

After their divorce they continued to treat each other well.

Jeanne says she forgave him, not for his sake but for hers. "That leaves me a beautiful peace," she says. "I want my heart filled with love, not bitterness."

Anyone smart enough to know that deserves all the goodness it brings.

All older adults should consult their doctors before taking any OTC medication or herbal.

Often, older adults use many drugs at the same time, including prescription and OTC drugs. They also process drugs differently than younger adults. This is why older adults need to be especially careful about drug-drug interactions.

If you're a senior, talk with your doctor about all of the drugs and herbal health products you take. He or she can tell you whether you are at risk for having a bad reaction from taking an OTC drug.
