The batter steps from the dugout under the glaring lights.

He listens only to the dull roar rumbling from the red and blue filled bleachers and smells only freshly cut grass. But he sees everything; the diamond is a blank page sprawling before him, waiting for this final inning to close the book on his past four seasons. With the whip of the pitcher's arm and the slice of his bat through the blanketing heat, he will write the final, climatic words. Hit or miss, these will be the last few swings he ever takes as a high school baseball player. Just as the baseball player, each of us in our own way will experience our final moments as we journey into new adventures in life. As you turn the pages in this book, may you vividly remember all the "last times" you experienced. However, may it truly not be the last time, but that these memories replay in your mind over and over again.

Just as the shrill echo of the 2:21 bell fades to silence, bodies bound out every door at record speed, all moving with a spring in their steps, inspired by last-day-of-school joy. The Old Gym is empty, save the poised flat football star who makes his home on the back wall. A bittersweet breeze blows through the open windows, across the wooden track, and fills the space with nostalgia, laced with the sadness of finality. Not another sweaty student will chuck a bombardment ball, pummel a shot into a floor hockey goal, or dance an energetic step routine. The Glagolas have cooked their last heartfelt hot dog behind the snack stand. A straggler detours through the gym, pausing to take it all in. As she reluctantly walks out, the slam of the door echoes behind her.

Slowly, Stabler Arena fills with teachers, aunts, siblings, students, proud parents. Mr. Burkhardt takes a few deep breaths as he awaits the entrance of the class of 2005; his hands feel unsteady with nerves, aware of the near impossible task of keeping all his emotions and feelings together. At the crescendo of the herald trumpets and bagpipes, he recalls his own graduation, exactly forty years before, and the dozens of other commencement ceremonies he has attended, from the overcrowded Memorial Gym and the beautiful district stadium, to the expansive space he stands in now. Mr. Burkhardt widens his eyes as the procession of soon-to-be graduates walk before him, and as he recognizes individual faces, his thoughts turn to the importance of relationships in our school. Liberty is not about an architectural structure, but about personal connections. By the time chorus members begin singing, "The Journey," Mr. Burkhardt can no longer hold back tears. But these are tears of recollecting a beautiful history that will remain with him throughout his retirement, just as our memories will remain with us.

You are preparing to witness the work of wrecking balls as they knock down the walls that almost quantify this school. Sacred black floorboards from the stage will splinter from the heart of Liberty Theater. Plaster and paint, covered with decades of graffiti, will crumble the scrawled legacies of so many Liberty students. History will be sent back to dust. But that sounds depressing, and I'm not trying to upset anyone. If you think about it, the process of destroying only to rebuild has a beautiful phoenix-like quality. Whatever our school means to each individual student or alumnus, it will be reborn with a new luster. Diversity will be polished; tradition will sparkle with a fresh coat of paint. So as the dump trucks pull up to 1115 Linden Street, just keep in mind: in Liberty's end is its beginning.

Memories that Last

Bagpipes and Liberty will forever be synonymous in my mind. I remember going to my first Bethlehem Halloween parade when I was about six. I sat on the side of Broad Street, with a chill wind swirling red and brown leaves around me. All of a sudden, my mom got this look on her face; it was like she wasn't even there. She pulled me over to her and told me to listen. I could hear the bagpipes starting in the distance, before I even saw the tall bearskins towering behind or the proud red coats. As they marched past us, both sides of the street erupted into wild cheers, and I couldn't understand why. Now after four long years of football games, spirit weeks, and countless pep rallies, the bagpipers have changed, but their songs have been a constant. I could always count on hearing "Scotland the Brave." As an underclassman, it was cool to hate the bagpipes, to pretend to be annoyed by them. But now as a senior, I catch myself bragging to friends from other schools — "Well, we have a bagpipe corps in our band!" I realized how lucky we are to have something special to boast about. And I know now that when my mom gets that look, listening to the bagpipes, she really isn't there; she's back in Liberty High School again. I for one can't wait to come back, even if it is just for a few fleeting seconds in the chill October air, sitting on the side of Broad Street....

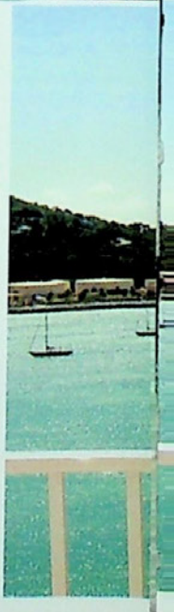
LEVITATION? NO PROBLEM!
Against the bitter cold, sophomore breakdancer Johnny Zayas performed a windmill as teammates Willie Smith, Homero Ortiz, and Paul Bernard cheer him on. Despite their seemingly perfect routines, the breakdancing team actually doesn't need to practice before a performance. "We just go out there and do whatever, and have fun," explained junior "popper" Willie Smith. Photo [christmas city studio]

Boarding Pass

Liberty students trek across the globe, gaining exposure to the world's wonders.

[rachel lushinsky & kali koutsoumbis]

Flying, driving, sailing out of reality. However travel is approached, it is always a path diverging off the road of the daily grind. The boarding pass becomes a ticket to a mental escape, relieving some of the stress of Dr. Kreiger's final or the District track meet. Senior Emily Edinger took a few days off from school in April to attend her sister's graduation at the University of Florida. Emily admitted, "Celebrating with my sister, who she hadn't seen since December, was a refreshing break from the same old routine of classes. And an excellent way to warm up." Junior Anthony Johnson took a very surreal trip during summer 2004 to California to see his brother, whom he had never met prior to the trip. "We visited Yosemite National Park and Monterrey Aquarium together. It was a pretty amazing way to get to know a family member," Anthony said. Whatever the reason for getting away, from special occasions to monumental reunions, student travel is always a nice ride into another world.



Pigeon Pranks
Talya Colasante, a senior who participated in a foreign exchange program in Italy, feeds the pigeons at San Giovanni. Or does she? "I tricked the birds into thinking I had food for them and they ended up attacking me," commented Talya.

Leaves of Grass
Senior Jamie VanArtsdalen cuts grass to make a thatched roof for an aids orphan rescue unit in Dedza, Malawi. "The orphans would stand and watch us work. When we finished for the day the volunteers would hang out with the children. They were so grateful that they would sing and dance while we watched them," said Jamie.

Been around the World
Senior Caitlin Stilin-Rooney travels frequently to foreign countries with her father. Here, she appreciates the coastal scenery in Naples. "Traveling to other parts of the world showed me that we need to appreciate the things we have in the States," Caitlin explained.

View of the Virgin Islands
Senior Melissa Hunter-Perelli gazes out at Charlotte Amola Bay in St. Thomas. "The Virgin Islands were so beautiful. I've never seen anything like them. The atmosphere was very relaxed and there was music playing always. It was also really cool when I met DJ Sway from MTV News," commented Melissa.

RIDING LIKE THE WIND

At a horseshow in Quakertown, sophomore Kristy Conti rides her Quarter horse Jac in a jumping competition. "I have been riding since I was two. My aunt owns a barn, so growing up I spent a lot of time riding there," she explained.

A TOWN OF HIS OWN

One of senior Isaac Southard's favorite hobbies is building tree houses. Along with seniors Andrew Kester and Mike Eckert, he spends much time perfecting his tree house which is in the Poconos. "I actually put an ad in the paper to build tree houses for people. I have had a couple jobs so far," he said.

FLAME CRAFTED ART

Glass blowing is a skill that requires much time and practice. At Topton Glass Works, senior James Wehden constructs his latest piece of work. "I started about two years ago when I saw someone doing it. My favorite thing I've made was a mug that was all different colors. It took me about a half hour to make," James commented.

EXPRESS yOURSELF

Exceptional talents and simple pleasures spice up free time and set students apart from their peers.

[allyssa sirb]

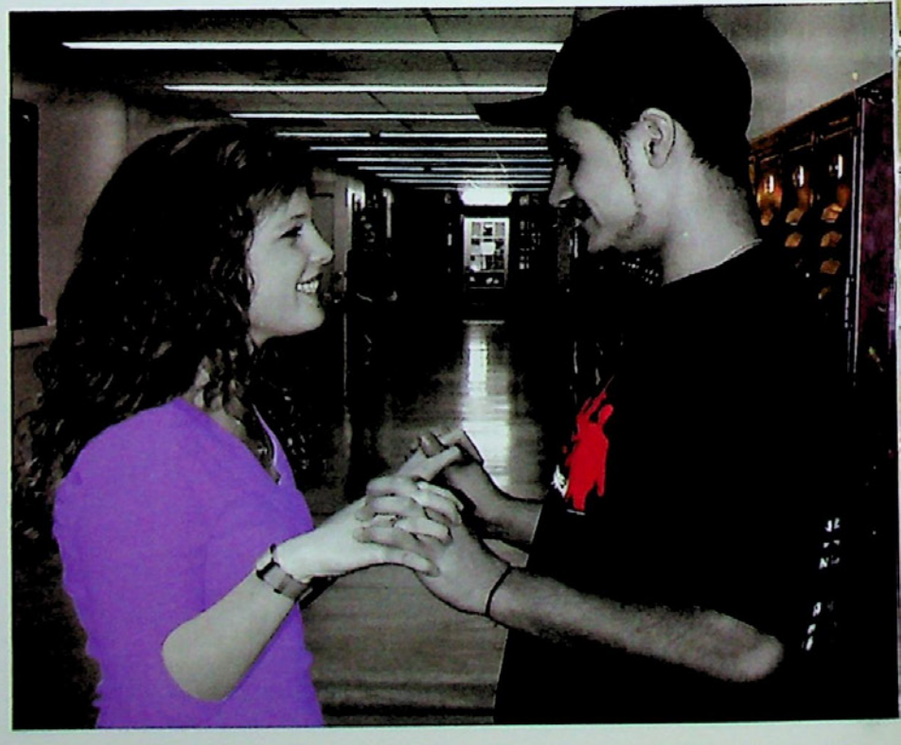
Sitting in your room, you sort through hundreds of baseball cards, wondering what got you so intrigued with them to begin with. There are many cards: the one your dad got you for your 10th birthday, the one signed by your favorite player, the one you got out of a 25-cent machine. Yet each card evokes its own memory. Many times, that's what hobbies do; they create memories and allow you to express yourself doing something that you truly enjoy. Some people share common hobbies, while others have hobbies that are very unique. "Most people probably don't know that I collect girl's phone numbers," senior Brendan Van Ackeren joked. "Seriously though, I do collect college t-shirts and sweatshirts. My dad got me hooked. We probably have clothing from over 60 different colleges." Hobbies are a great way to express yourself. Whether you build tree houses, play a sport, or secretly collect coins, your hobbies are just another way to set yourself apart from everyone else.

DANCING PARTNERS
Senior Jocelyn Lomas and sophomore Angela Urbano have been dancing together at the Art of Dance for 6 years. Through dance they have become very close friends. "I met so many people through dancing, it's so much fun taking dance classes with good friends," Jocelyn remarked. Photo submitted [angela urbano]

A perfect rose
Junior Jarrett McGeehan knows that the best way to surprise his girlfriend is with flowers. As he scavenges through the bouquets for the perfect one, he commented, "Roses are the most romantic flower, but they are also the most expensive. Just for Valentine's Day I spent over 50 dollars on roses." Photo [alix mcgeehan]

Just chillin'
Juniors Sean Martin and Leeann Searfoss spend an eventful afternoon together at the Illick's Mill Chili Cook Off. "Sean is sensitive and nice. If I have a problem, he is the first person I turn to," Leeann explained. Photo [andrew byrne]

Pre-meet jitters
As junior Jeanmarie Virgone prepares to swim an event at the Liberty-Freedom swim meet, her boyfriend, senior Matt Sterner, gives her words of encouragement. "Matt is always there for me and really calms me down before big meets. He is reassuring me and helping me focus. I'm glad to have someone be so supportive of me," Jeanmarie said. Photo [andrew byrne]



Opposites attract
Emily Hooper and Jovan Hernandez are only sophomores, but they have been together for over a year. "Jovan and I are total opposites, but when we're together we complete each other and make a perfect person. He is so organized and keeps me in check and I am bubbly and lighten him up," commented Emily. Photo [andrew byrne]

HEART FELT

True love can't be denied; it is possible anytime in life, high school or otherwise.

[laura ricles]

As you nervously wait at your door, palms sweating, heart racing, you put the final touches on your makeup and prepare yourself to step out the into the cool night air. Your reservations are put aside as you spot your date walking toward the door with a bouquet of flowers in hand. If you have ever been in this scenario, then you, along with 45% of Liberty students, spend the weekend dating. Most couples enjoy going out to dinner or to a movie, but other couples like to spend a heart felt evening at home... or the neighborhood park. Senior Desiree Smith explained that she and her boyfriend "have a park we love to go to so we can be alone. It's so beautiful and romantic." Couples can be spotted throughout the halls showing affection for one another, but some are skeptical as to the legitimacy of high school love. Sophomore Colleen Brodbeck thinks that "love in high school is rare, but it can happen." Another student, however, feels that high school romance "is ridiculous. There are so many other things to experience and being obligated to someone takes too much time and energy." Whether or not so-called puppy love makes you scowl or swoon, the hand-holding, cuddling, and kissing cannot be avoided, from the gym lobby to the line for popcorn at Carmike.

YOUR OWN soundtrack

When contending with a rigorous schedule, entertainment is essential to break the monotony of the daily grind.

[emily bunten]

In between school, work, and other activities, there lies the frantic search for fun. When you have downtime, you take advantage of it. Whether you are catching the latest blockbuster or rocking out with your favorite local band, there is something for everyone. This year, themes of social order, politics and health surfaced in movies like Napoleon Dynamite, Fahrenheit 911, and Super Size Me, and everyone's favorite yellow sponge explored the seas with David Hasselhoff. Others use free time to plaster themselves in front of the old XBox, gaming thumb conditioned and toned for hours of video game bliss. Players can become football all-stars, or genetically enhanced super-soldiers fighting aliens for the good of mankind. After a prolonged hiatus, rock veterans Green Day debuted their first single in years, "American Idiot" on "Madden NFL 2005." Their album of the same name went on to be the most successful rock album of 2004. Mp3 players, and in particular the iPod, made enjoying your favorite songs even easier. With their portability and capacity to store thousands of songs, you can plug in to your own soundtrack. With the hectic schedules teenagers face today, entertainment offers an escape of reality and time to just enjoy ourselves.

Thanks to the opening of The Globe Cafe in South Bethlehem, local bands have a venue to play at. A particular favorite of many, Capgun Showdown, spend many weekend nights playing a set of their unique blend of ska and rock. Photo [carla dintinger]

wild card

First Friday, a popular event held in South Bethlehem on the first Friday of every month, is when many students end up at the Wildflower Cafe, such as sophomore Diana Correia. There they often play games like Apples to Apples. "Playing 'Apples to Apples' is so fun and interesting, and you even learn new words... like woebegone!" Diana exclaimed. Photo [emily burtner]

CAN I HELP YOU?

POCKET CHANGE

What are you willing to do for a few extra bucks? With financial independence on the brain, many are ready for almost any task.

[rachel lushinsky]

A smile stems from each corner of senior Kara Kahler's mouth as she leaves the bank with money in her hand; cashing her check after a week of hard work at Atria Retirement Community is very rewarding. Kara, like many of her peers, will spend this paycheck within a week or two. "Most of my money goes for car insurance and gas. I try to save the rest of it, but I usually end up spending it on clothes, and, more importantly, food," Kara said. Besides spending paychecks on responsibilities such as car insurance, high school students splurge on clothes, concert tickets and various other activities. To pay for everything that we need and enjoy, we need money, and getting money means having a job. Sophomore Megan Halkins enjoys working at the Moravian Book Shop because, "It allows me to be more independent. If I want something I can go and get it and I don't have to depend on my parents. It's nice to have some pocket change." Money makes the world go round, but one lesson that everyone learns quickly is that money goes out faster than it comes in.

EATING ON THE JOB
Junior Kyle Oberly has been employed at the Bethlehem Dairy Store for the past 6 months, and is thoroughly enjoying the delicious benefits. "We get to eat whatever we want, so I have gained a couple of pounds while working here!" Kyle confessed. Photo [andrew byrne]

SUIT YOUR STYLE

With students strutting down the hallways, every day is a fashion show.

CASUAL

Due to the popularity of stores like Hollister and Abercrombie & Fitch, "California-style" jeans and graphic tees are worn by many of the students on Linden Street. Senior Angela Bucuzzi loves this casual style and usually spends about $150 on clothes per shopping trip. She is also a fan of thrift stores for cheap, unique finds. Photo [alix mcgeehan]

SKATER

No longer just a sport, skating has inspired its own style. Senior Nate Logue gets most of his clothing from the skate shop Amateur Athlete, where he works. But when he is trying to emulate the style of actor Johnny Depp, Nate sometimes likes to shop at Express for Men. Photo [allyssa sirb]

SPORTY

Track suits are an especially popular trend this year, as modeled by freshman Tricia Hypolite. Though comfortable enough to sleep in, these track suits are still a stylish option for school. Tricia doesn't like to shop at any particular store. Instead, she buys whatever she likes on the spot. Photo [allyssa sirb]

HIP-HOP

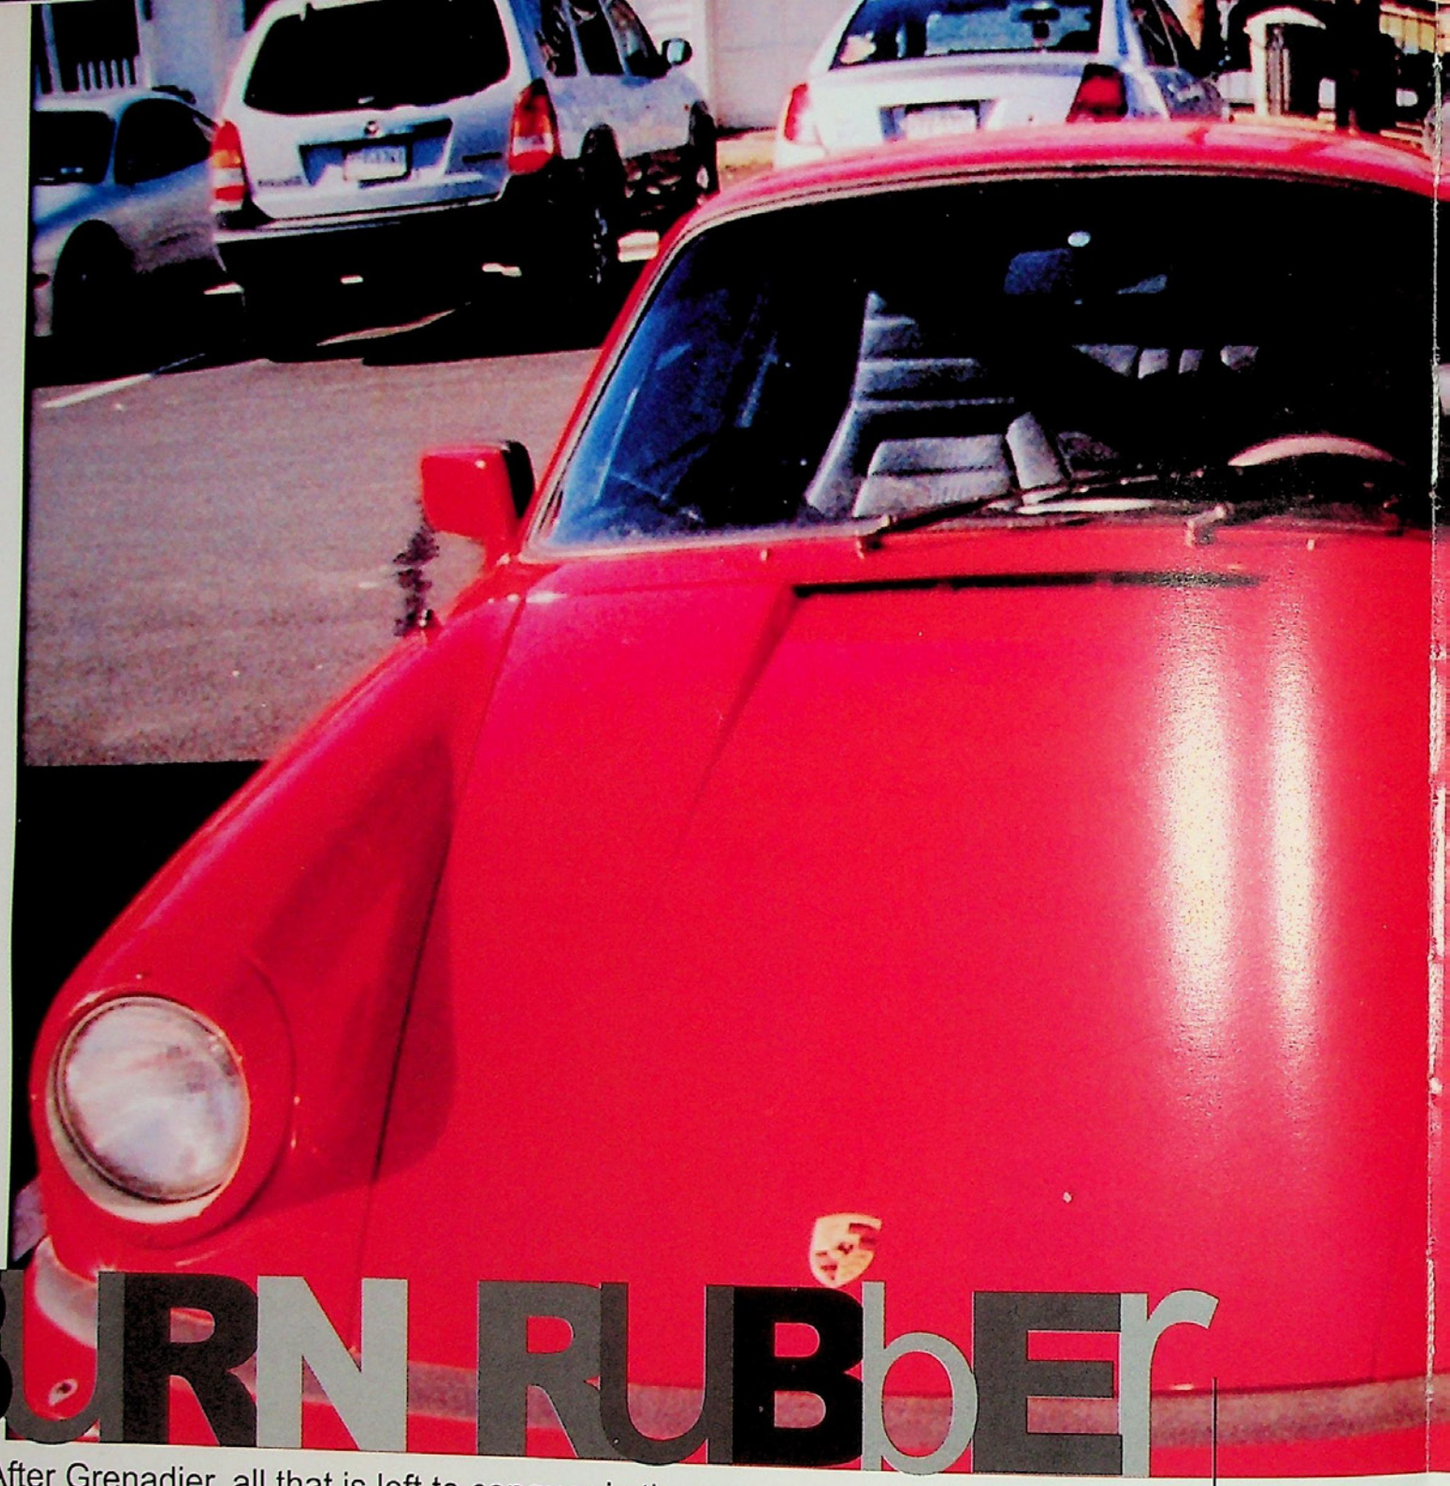
Jersey shirts, extra large jeans, and expensive sneakers are just a few clothing items associated with the hip-hop style. Once spending over $100 on just one jersey, freshman Francisco Serrano tries to dress like actor Will Smith and shops at stores such as Foot Locker. "If I could retire one trend, it would be those West Coast Chopper shirts," Francisco added. Photo [allyssa sirb]

eclectic

For a style in which anything goes, a store like Boot Girl is the place to go for sophomore Julia Haskell. She usually spends around $200 on each trip there. Despite her usually expensive clothing, Julia found her favorite pair of shoes for only $20. Photo [allyssa sirb]

RETRO

Bringing back what used to be in style, retro clothing is favored by freshman Alex Russo. He often shops at thrift stores, where the clothing is cheaper than most designer or department stores. "I won't spend over $30 of my own money for clothes, ever," Alex claimed. Photo [alix mcgeehan]



BURN RUBBER

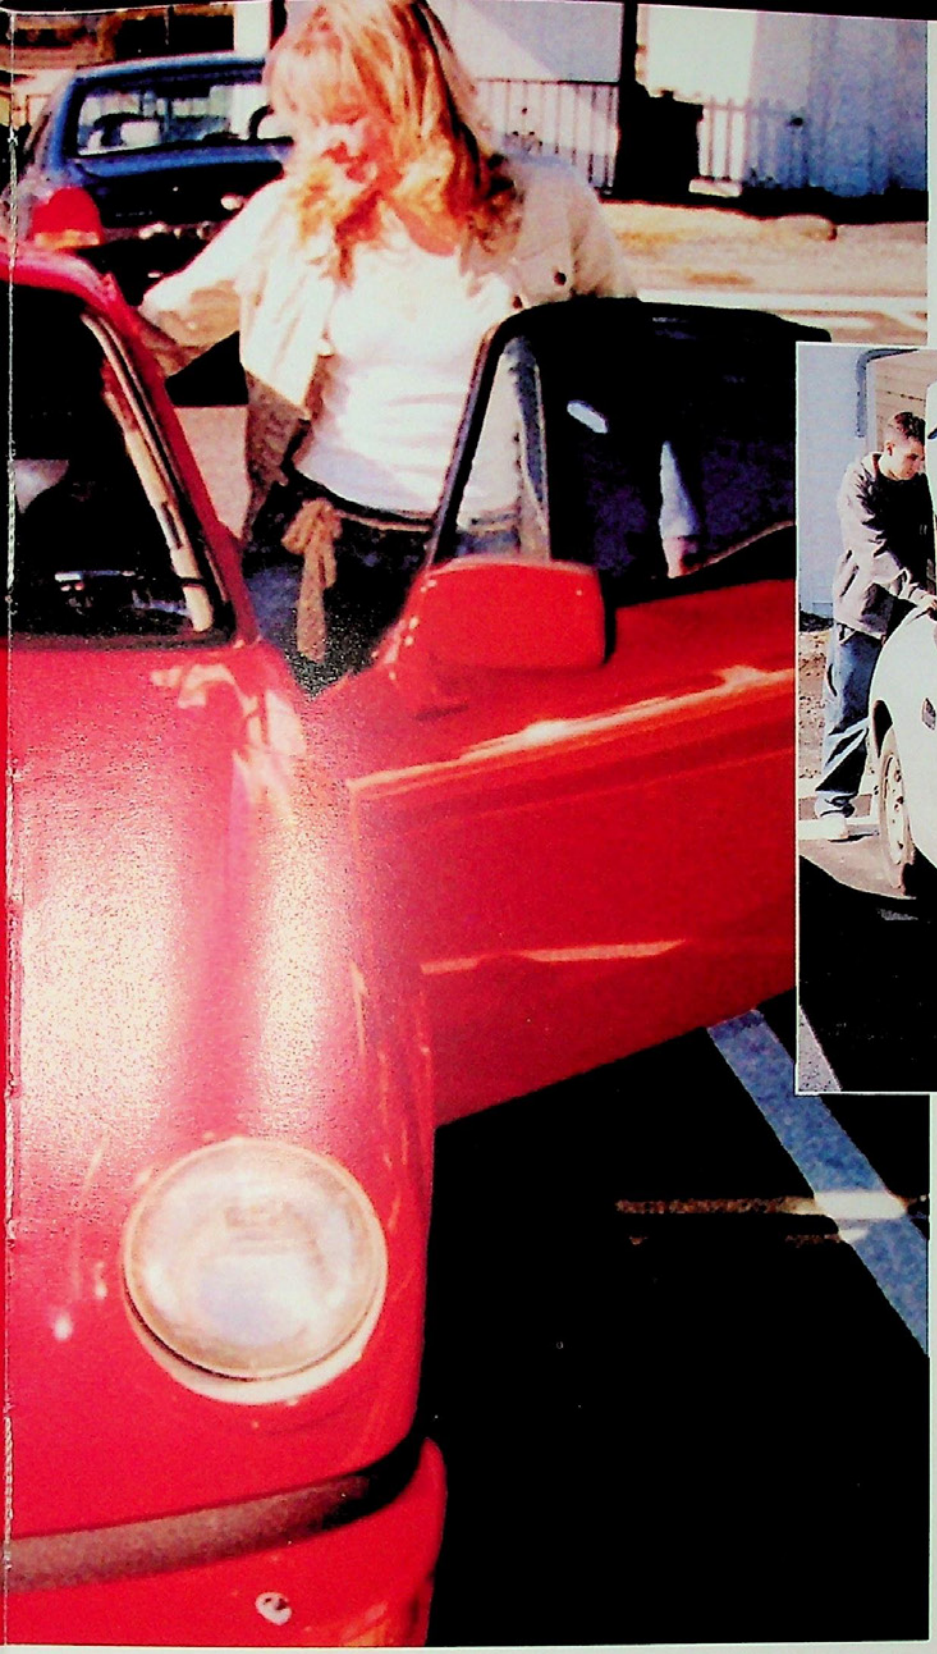
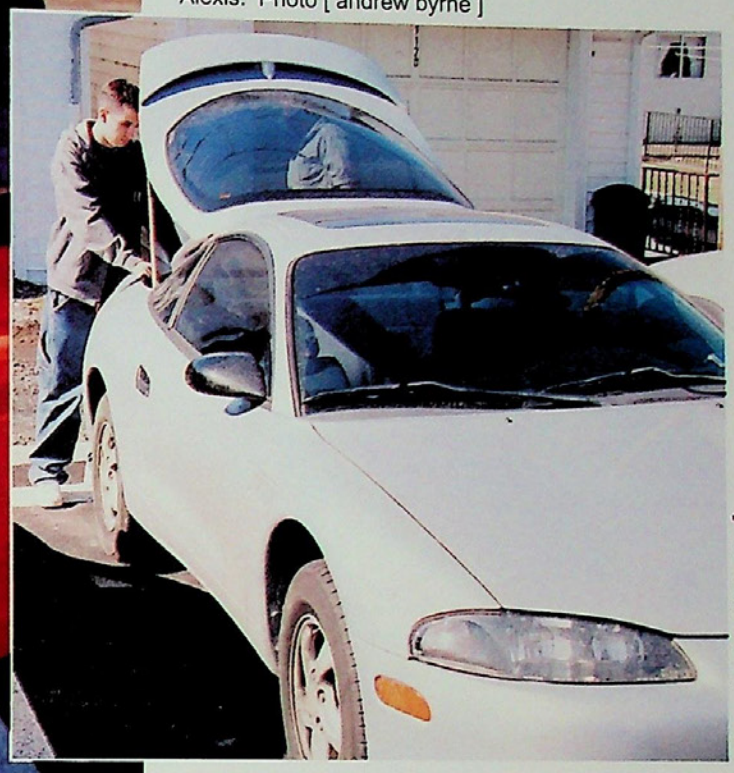
[matt martin]

Forget the Indy 500. Even more thrilling is watching our morning rush, when students burn rubber to land a coveted parking spot. The infamous Grenadier Boulevard becomes a raceway as crazed students scramble for the elusive spaces near the walk that leads up to school. This year, however, there have been some improvements to what was once just a street with a primitive gravel parking lot. Now, it's a street with an improved parking lot, consisting of lined spots, one-way traffic flow, actual macadam, and guardrails. Still, not everybody fits on Grenny, so the student expressway extends into the neighborhood just beyond Elizabeth Avenue, much to the delight of its residents. Two-hour parking has become a way of life, a vicious cycle of inconveniently moving your car, paying tickets, and competing for the closest spot on Greenwhich, High, or Montrose. Still, student drivers inevitably spend many a day looking over their shoulders, making sure that the ever-stealth Bethlehem Parking Authority is not on their trail.



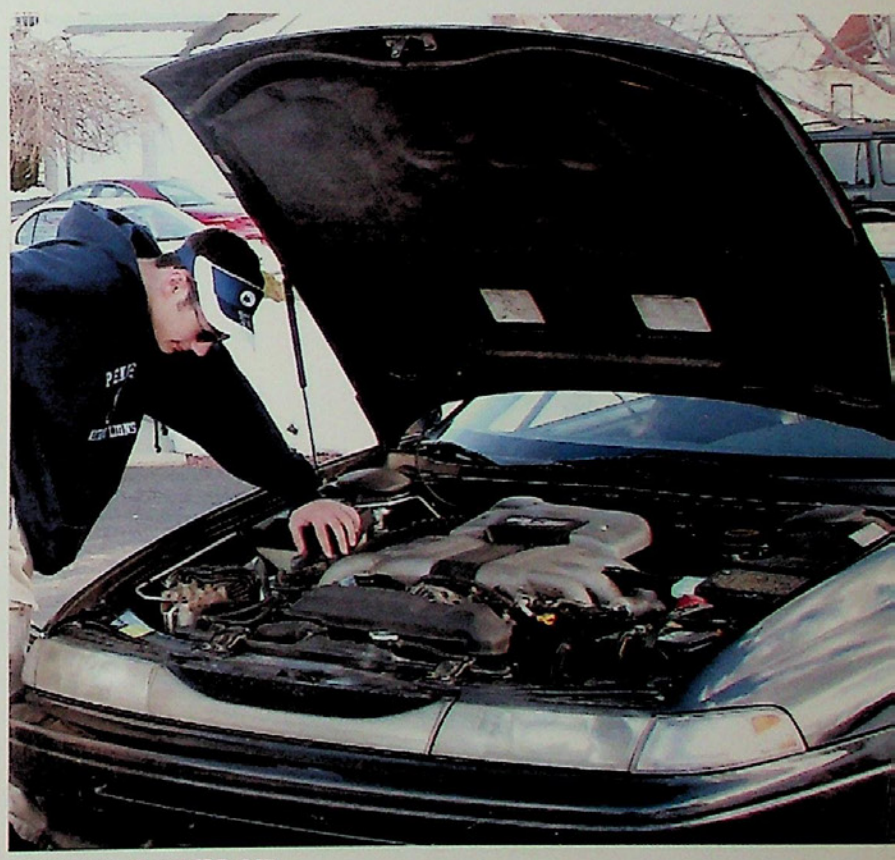
RED HOT BABY

Everybody has a first car, but you would never expect your first car to be a Porsche! Senior Alexis Venanzi gets ready to leave school and cruise in her 1983 911SC Porsche. "It's my little red baby!" exclaimed Alexis. Photo [andrew byrne]



THE DATE MACHINE

With a car like this, senior Mark Rebimbas has no problem getting a date. Mark's '98 Eclipse is a huge chick magnet. "I get all the ladies with it!" he exclaimed. Photo [andrew byrne]



GETTING A TUNE UP

Checking under the hood, senior Mike Merkler scopes out the inside of his 92 SVX. Many students do maintenance on their own car to save money. Still, Mike is obviously a big fan of his car, as he stated "It has the hottest windows ever." Photo [matt martin]

KRUISN' KERECZ

Senior Scott Kerecz has nothing to brag about with his 94 Toyota Tercel, which is evidently lacking in the horsepower. According to Scott, "It's the slowest car in the world. I'm rolling mob deep with 80 ponies." Photo [matt martin]

RAILS MADE FOR GRINDIN'
Not everyone realizes that our very own Grenadier Boulevard is not only for parking. It is a great snowboarding spot. Senior Alex Emmons is one of the few students let in on the secret, here grinding on a handrail. Al explained, "It's great having a handrail on campus. During lunch, I can go out and snowboard." Photo submitted [alex emmons]

PROPERLY PADDED

More than just a sport, it's an extreme lifestyle.

[alix mcgeehan]

No longer confined to the bottoms of skateboards, the brand names of extreme sport companies can be seen everywhere. Clothing, video games, shoes, and even sunglasses are plastered with the names of "alternative" brands like Element, Ambiguous, and Hurley, and skate shops no longer just stock blank decks and trucks. Vans is a company that ties the extreme lifestyle together every year at their Warped Tour, a music festival which showcases punk and alternative bands, holds skate and biking demos, and even sets up shops in the middle of the venue where kids can buy special edition Vans shoes and clothing right on the spot. Even food has become extreme, such as the new Extreme Doritos, complete with advertisements of kids skateboarding and biking, properly padded and helmeted, of course. With the extreme lifestyle now more mainstream then ever before, many students support alternative brands and are taking extreme sports out of the underground scene.

NOT FOR THE FEEBLE
To combat boredom, senior Jawn Au spends his free time riding in the courtyard, which he claims to be the best local riding spot. Even after spending over $1500 on his bike, Jawn beats it up doing a feeble stall on one of the walls. Photo [alix mcgeehan]

SPACIOUS GATHERINGS

While the cafeteria appeals to the many tastes of our student body, one persistent problem seems to be the limited space for friends to gather. "I enjoy spending lunch with all my friends. It gives us all a chance to just relax and talk. But there always seems to be a problem with space, so we tend to find ourselves within elbow distance of each other," joked freshman Aimee Johnson. Photo [allyssa sirb]

DINING DECISIONS

"There is a strategy to eating in the cafeteria," freshman Zach Kissingler said. "The quicker you run down there, the sooner you eat." With this idea in mind, many students don't mind joining the lingering line, while waiting to make their own dining decisions. Photo [allyssa sirb]

cram our faces

Considering the amount of stress students face on a daily basis, it's no surprise that lunch easily becomes an escape.

[melissa coleman]

Maybe you're an underclassmen who enjoys testing the limitations of the off campus lunch privilege. On the other hand, you could be a senior with the advantage of off campus lunch, so you load up the nearest car with as many people possible and travel the few minutes to one of the many fast food places that surround our school. But maybe none of that suits you. Maybe you'd just rather grab a few chairs and make your best attempt to chat it up with your friends over the roar of our overcrowded cafeteria. However you like to spend your thirty minutes, lunch is more than time for eating. As junior Chelsea Ford said, "The best part about lunch is that my friends and I finally get a chance to get together, cram our faces with overpriced junk, and just joke about our day so far." Regardless what happens in the first half of our school day, lunch brings an escape from the demands of classes and a chance to simply enjoy yourself. "It actually becomes a time that everybody can enjoy, which is always rare," laughed sophomore Emily Hooper.

A REAL CROWD PLEASER
Over 500 students attended this year's homecoming, the last of its kind held in the old gym. Senior Morgan Fatzinger was one of the many students who enjoyed the homecoming dance. Even though it was crowded, Morgan said, "This was honestly the best dance I've ever been to. Being [illegible] all my friends made it unforgettable." Photo [christmas city studio]

ROUND OF SMILES
Senior Nicole Tallarico is nothing but smiles as she dances with her friend, senior Ben Heist. "Nicole and I have been friends for as long as I can remember," said Ben, "and homecoming was a nice way to spend time together." Photo [christmas city studio]

KINGS AMONG THEIR QUEENS
Many on the homecoming court were surprised by their nominations for king or queen. "I felt honored that I was nominated for the court," commented senior Keith Sacarakis, "and it was fun being with all the hot chicks. The biggest surprise was how all the guys were lookin'." Dressed to iMPreSS

A night when students swap sneakers for some dancing shoes was the last of its kind in the Old Gym.

[nicole tallarico & natalie haller]

Homecoming is more than just a dance. It's a celebration of the start of another school year, of the start of the football season, and of the autumn spirit that embodies Liberty. For seniors, it signifies the beginning of the end. Freshmen are thrust into the world of high school, as they learn what it feels like to dance with the hot, sweaty, and scantily clad masses. This year's Homecoming was particularly important, as it closed a chapter in the school's history. For the final time, the king and queen were crowned in the Old Gym, purses and shoes were reluctantly stored under the spiral staircase by the boys' locker room, and bobby pins were adjusted in the crowded bathroom. In a way, the event will never be quite the same in years to come. But in the end, everyone will still gather at friends' houses for rushed group shots, mingle in the brisk night air as they line up to enter a decorated hallway, and walk into the celebration dressed to impress, with the feeling that the dance they are about to enter is much more than a dance.

HIGH SCHOOL ROYALTY

After four nights of learning what it took to be a male cheerleader, senior Alberto Melendez poses at the top of a pyramid at the end of the Homecoming pep rally. "I was nervous at first because I didn't want to trip or fall off the pyramid," he explained.

School spirit became an epidemic spreading through the classes.

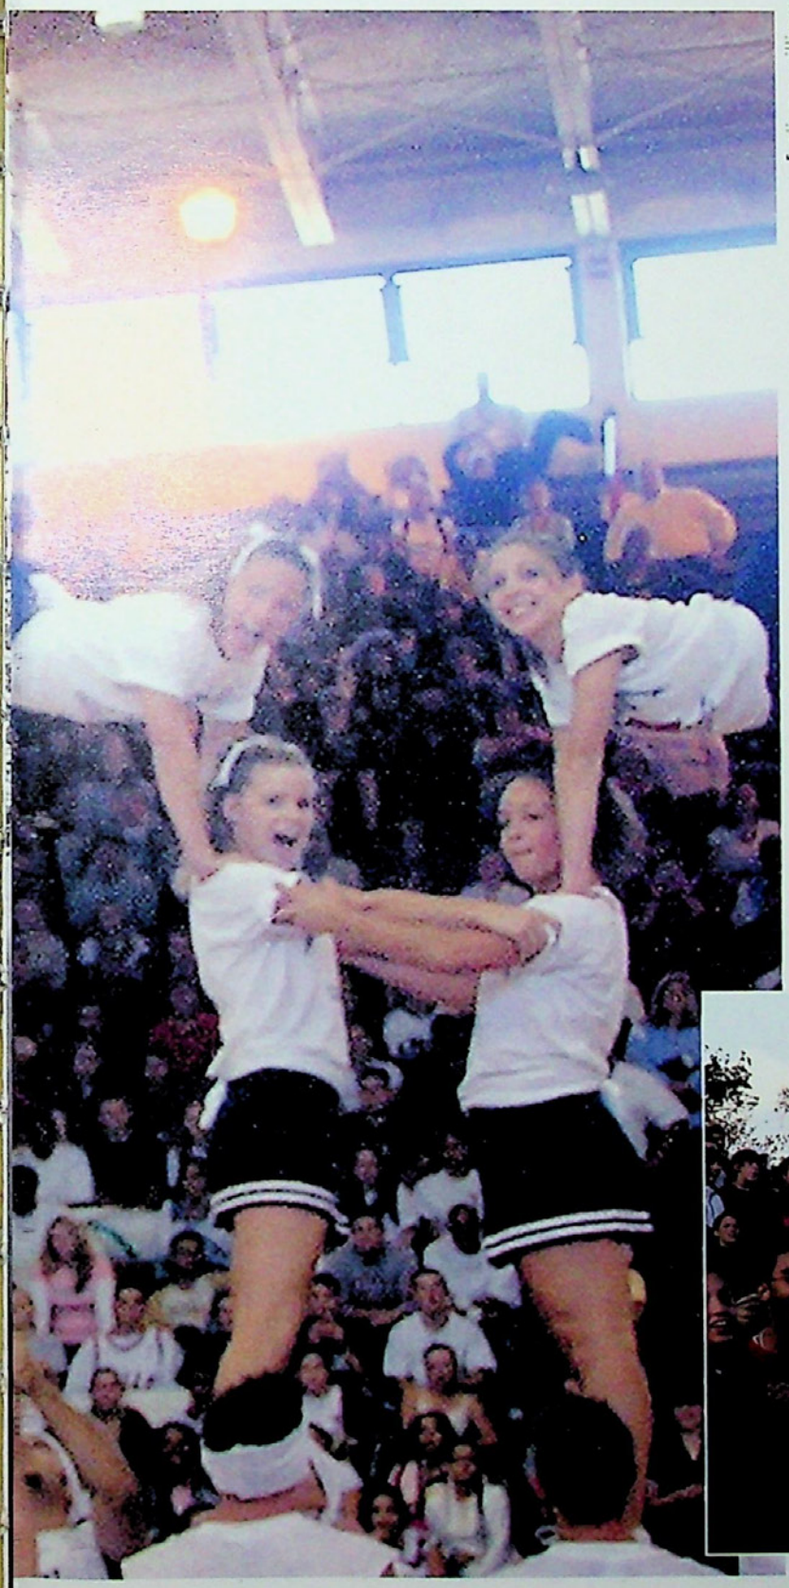
[alison williams]



Displaying spirit and courage, breakdancers, both female and male cheerleaders, and majorettes caused vast excitement at pep rallies. Others took advantage of the excitement to pull crazy stunts of a more controversial variety. From tumbling to class battles, pep rallies were filled with energy and unpredictability this year. "Pulling a pep rally stunt got me hyped," said senior Tony Logan on using a T-shirt and blow-up doll to insult the junior girls. On the day of the Homecoming event, a group of 11th grade girls wore what became the infamous pink shirts, taking a stab at seniors. Thus, a pep rally war began that included Logan's stunt and several signs. The spirit week pep rally shook things up because the festivities were moved outdoors, the band added "Lean Back" to its repetoire, and rumors that rich girls Paris Hilton and Nicole Richie would show up persisted. Surprise and amusement also surrounded the actions of certain seniors such as David Ivankevich during the traditional relays. Dave ripped a hole in the bottom of his potato sack in order to secure a win in the potato sack race between the classes. "I was too tired to put up with anyone else's shenanigans. The seniors must dominate and not allow younger classes to bask in any glory at all," Dave explained about his cheating tactics.

SURPRISE! Senior vice principal Mr. Zulli pops out of a cake to surprise the crowd, which was expecting Paris Hilton, at the spirit week pep rally. Even though weather conditions were quite cold, he decided to go through with the stunt. "I'd do anything for the kids," he explained. Photo [alex hoffman]

Thriving in chaos

From start to finish, there's never a dull moment when tailgating with the student cheering section.

[natalie haller & nicole tallarico]

It's Friday night. You and your friends get decked out in anything you can get a hold of that's red and blue. As you make your way through the parking lot, vision slightly impaired due to the window chalk covering your car, excitement fills you as you grab the last parking spot. Stepping out of the car, you are bombarded with students thriving in chaos. Walking through the crowd to get to the grill you catch a glimpse of the guys playing football in the street, anticipating the game to come. After detailed sign and body painting, you are ready to enter the stadium. Once everyone is packed into the student cheering section, the ranting and raving begins. You sit through interceptions and fumbles, the Grenadier Band's halftime performance, and the touchdown that creates the final score. You leave the night with new memories and are ready to do it all over again next Friday.

there's a cane in every crowd

"Props were always a priority with all of us. From the bathing suits to the crazy headgear, the inflatable man was definitely the biggest crowd pleaser," explained senior Jenna Speicher. Jenna, along with just about everyone else in the cheering section, always came to the games dressed in full gear. Photo [andrew byrne]

Of course the cheering section isn't just limited to the football games. Many attended the Freedom vs. Liberty swim meet to cheer on the swimmers. "We had a lot of heart and soul, no matter what sport we were cheering for," said senior Marc Davis. Photo [andrew byrne]

Seniors Adi Joseph, Mike Eckert, and Scottie Reade definitely define the meaning of a true Liberty fan. Adi said, "Because the game fell on Halloween, I knew I wouldn't feel out of place wearing a crazy mask as long as it was in our school colors." Photo [andrew byrne]

RING OUR BELL

A little rivalry between two schools never hurt anyone...or so they say.

[alexis venanzi & karen gentis]

Dressed in camouflage from head to toe, the Class of 1999 ascended the top of Freedom's main building and covered Freedom with a sign that read "Liberty Forever." With a lot of hard work and planning, another senior class prank and display of rivalry between the two schools was complete. Before the Liberty-Freedom rivalry, there was the passionate battle between Bethlehem High School and Allen High School. Allen's mascot even originated from the competitive streak between the two schools; they became known as the Canaries, as it is the only bird that can fly through a hurricane. Eventually Bethlehem High School became Liberty and a new high school rivalry was established with Freedom. "Liberty is set apart from Freedom because Liberty has age. We've graduated great grandparents, grandparents and parents; Freedom hasn't and this makes Liberty's traditions richer," explained Assistant Principal Mrs. Durante. A huge part of the Liberty-Freedom rivalry has been the passing of the bell between schools, or lack thereof. The tradition started in 1974 when the bell was given to the school that had won the most varsity sports. Liberty has had the bell now for fourteen years. Between our creative pranks and our outstanding athletes, Freedom should give up and ring our bell!

WREAKING HAVOC

No shirt. No shoes. No problem. Just throw on a cape, fuzzy slippers, or a grass skirt and you're set for the week.

[karen gentis & alexis venanzi]

It's easy to fall into the boring routine of traveling through the over packed hallways day after day and struggling to stay awake through endless physics lectures. The entire year simply becomes a blur as every day seems to mesh into one big memory. Sure, we all have the amusing short lived memories of the freshman tripping down the 800's stairwell or the class clown getting kicked out in the middle of a quiz. However, nothing will stand the test of time in our minds quite like the five infamous days that lead us into the much awaited Liberty vs. Freedom football game. The weekend before spirit week you are guaranteed to run into someone at the mall or closest thrift store shopping for the best super hero outfit or the right slippers that will match the PJ's for Monday. Not only is spirit week a time for dressing absurdly and wreaking havoc, it's five unforgettable days that model our unsurpassed spirit and school unity proven through our own outfits. Hours of preparation and thought to complete the transformation from Liberty students to coconut-bra wearing Hawaiians and the afro haired disco queens that are guaranteed to be noticed. Whatever you wear, you have to stand out and be original. "Superman, Spiderman, Wonder Woman...I just couldn't choose one hero to be. That's why I made up my own," proudly commented The Incredible Box (otherwise known as senior Alex Emmons) as he attempted to sit while clad in cardboard boxes from head to toe. As the days rapidly passed, it happily meant one day closer to the culminating point of the week: Red and Blue Day. The traditional Friday, preceded by Thursday night of 120 student decorously trashing every hallway while seniors notoriously left their '05 mark on every window reachable, was the day that will never be forgotten. Beginning with the customary senior breakfast, soon followed by the freezing end-zone painting, and ending with the even more freezing outdoor pep rally, Red and Blue Day was the perfect launch to the rousing Saturday afternoon rivalry game. Even with the continuous rumors of a possible celebrity siting that spread throughout the week that eventually proved false, spirit week highlighted Liberty's supreme identity as the school above any other.

DESERTED SLEEPING BAGS

Seniors bond on a night of decorating and protecting the school, without sleep.

"Nobody is going to sleep tonight." That was the general consensus as about 75 seniors, a handful of juniors, and a spattering of chaperones, in over their heads, gathered in the cafeteria on the Thursday before the Liberty-Freedom game. The Senior Campout is an annual event that's all about protecting our turf from problematic Patriots and a time for seniors to leave their mark for their final Red and Blue Day. This year, the class of 2005 representatives slaved over blow-up Incredible Hulks, which they transformed into the seven strapping senior football players, along with a miniature village, fondly dubbed, "Freedomville," which the students subsequently turned into a hurricane-wrecked disaster area. When they emerged from a cloud of spray paint fumes after a week of after-school planning, the seniors were ready to spend the night adorning the school, consuming absurd amounts of food and caffeine, and bonding over an evening of timeless high school games. After the simulated hurricane was set up in the lobby and the mammoth signs were hung on the front of the Commons building, seniors spent hours competing in bombardment tournaments, football and matball games, and American Gladiator-esque matches held in an inflatable jousting arena. Highlights included a controversial boys versus girls matball marathon that turned into a battle of the sexes, a "singing" competition between less than stellar vocal duos Karen Gentis and Jeff DeCrosta against Alex Demshock and Joe Loguidice, and a Zoolander-inspired "walk off" between Alexis Venanzi and Dena Shleifer. Dena also joined Jenna Spiecher and Dance Dance Revolution champion Mr. Jeff Achenzie in a display of break dancing skills, leaving their audience in hysterics. Endless activity left dozens of deserted sleeping bags littering the heated tent.

It didn't stay up long, but it was a great show of school pride. I feel bad that our decorations peeled off the ceiling paint in the main lobby". Photo [andrew byrne]

CREATING THE FUTURE

Seniors stress over a decision that will affect the rest of their lives.

Realizing that your four years of schooling at Liberty High are coming to an end is a bittersweet feeling. Leaving Liberty, the source of endless memories made with friends, teachers, and peers, is extremely tough, yet you are finally ready to break free and enter an environment in which you are the one making all of the decisions. The doors of opportunity have been knocked on long enough, and now they are finally ready to be opened. Whether you plan on attending college in the fall, starting a job right away, going into the service, or taking the year off, opportunity awaits for your arrival. The future is here and you are forced to be a part of it. As famous computer scientist, Alan Kay, once said, "The best way to predict the future is to create it." So go! Create the future holding the knowledge gained and memories had at Liberty close by.

> "No matter where or what college we go to, we will all be connected by the memories we shared at Liberty."

Service & HONOR

Serving proudly, no matter what the sacrifices may be, often proves to be the most important aspect of being a part of the military.

[jessica gerena]

You're down on the floor and your arms are quivering. Your veins are surging and your muscles feel like they're tearing apart. You're concentrating and focusing on one thing, doing that one last push-up. As you take a deep breath, clench your teeth, and push your body off the ground, you're overwhelmed with a feeling of accomplishment. This is what senior Lizbeth Sanchez experiences at least five days a week, after school and on weekends, serving the Army National Guard. "I love it! It's so much fun. Everyone there is like family to me. It's just great," she exclaimed. Lizbeth is just one of the many students who graduate and join the military. Though these young people in the military face emotional and physical challenges, they possess strong senses of determination, service, and honor. As Lizbeth stated, "People died for me, so I'd die for my country." There isn't anything our troops wouldn't give for our country, even if it results in a broken bone, stitches, or fatality, which is why our community and country is proud of those who serve.

The Broughal Step Team uses its creativity and unique steps to convey diversity and dance history. Senior Saira Ayala, Vice-President of Teen Summit, commented, "The Diversity Celebration is a very positive event to have in the school. I only wish that more people would get involved because people can learn so much from it and it's also a lot of fun." Photo [andrew byrne]

Diverse personalities

Diversity isn't just about ethnicity, but about differences and understanding.

[laura ricles]

Roaming through the halls, you encounter an array of differing faces. Diverse personalities compose the essential elements of our school. Instead of trying to make a generic mold of a student, our community and school emphasizes the diversity so widely recognizable. One such event that celebrates diversity is the Diversity Celebration, which is hosted by Teen Summit once a year in honor of Black History Month. The Diversity Celebration is in its third year running and is free and open to the whole community. "The celebration utilizes the creative arts to deliver messages about diversity. It also challenges people to be aware of the stereotypes created and to overcome these stereotypes to work toward the betterment of the community," commented coordinator and advisor Ms. Ortiz. This year's entertainment included a motivational speaker, Murdocc Saunders, who humorously enabled the audience to paint a picture of self success. The Nubian Gents and Feminine Fire, a ministry group, utilized various forms of dancing and singing. Lastly, the Broughal Step Team and Liberty Tempest Dance Team performed routines that not only exhibited their skill and dedication, but expressed the history of step and other dance forms. In addition to the evening events, this year's celebration also included help from Future Business Leaders of America and the Latino Youth Leadership. Conferences were held during the day that emphasized diversity in the community and workplace, and expression of diversity through art and spoken word. "The conferences were a new addition to the program and they were a real success. We received a lot of positive feedback and everyone really enjoyed the whole program," explained Ms. Ortiz. The Diversity Celebration helped to unite students by celebrating our differences as individuals, but our similarities as a school.

REBUILDING HISTORY

While you're daydreaming in math class, a select few are renovating a community landmark.

A project that began in 2001 is now entering its final stages. The Illick's Mill Project is aiming to conclude the revitalization of its namesake by 2006. Yet the 2004-2005 partnership of students knows that the work it is doing will leave a legacy of environmental education for years to come. However, the students of Illick's Mill also reap the benefits of alternative education. Senior Veronica Delfino said being a Mill student was "a true privilege. You learn what it's like in the business and professional worlds." The group is responsible for putting on a semiformal gala in October, the Winter Nook, the Chili Cook-Off in February, and the elaborate Riverfusion, a day of music in May. Profits for both the gala and the Nook doubled from last year's results, and director of the program, Karen Dolan, attributes the success to the caliber of the group. After advising several classes of IMP students, Dolan feels that this year's group was the "most diverse" and that "their dynamic qualities have made them the most effective" students she has had. Senior Mill student Melissa Hunter-Perrelli, who is in charge of keeping the first record of this group's progress for next year's class, described the experience as a "combination of so many wonderful elements that all come together in the name of rebuilding history."

The last play on the original stage brings out a unique cast.

[rachel lushinsky]

The auditions ended and the roles were filled. The talented and ambitious actors and actresses prepared for the next few months of winter which would be filled with intense practices every week in preparation for their rendition of " A Christmas Carol". Under the direction of a new director, Judith Danilovicz, all the hard work was soon to pay off making Liberty's first play in three years a huge success. Matt Martin, who played Ebenezer Scrooge, compares acting in his first play to the musical, "It was different because it brought a various crowd out to audition for the cast. It was more acting oriented." Dress rehearsals took place a week before the show. Junior Shaun Marakovits who played young Scrooge believes practicing without scenery or costumes is not a problem. "Scenery should already be in mind and presence while acting, it is not really the physical aspect of the play, but how the actor becomes the character. Scenery is for the audience not the actor," he explained. When showtime finally arrived the cast was in anticipation. Junior Alex Wright loves opening night, "There's a sense of excitement and adrenaline you get on stage which produces a uniquely wonderful experience." The energy from the actors was transmitted to the audience to make for an exciting and entertaining show.

BAH HUMBUG
Senior Matt Martin definitely has quite a bit of acting experience, and he proved his talents through his portrayal of Scrooge. "I've done 4 shows at Liberty at this point, but this was the first play for me, since the other 3 were musicals," he stated. Photo [andrew byrne]

KISS AND TELL
"Getting the role of younger Crachet is a role many of the guys wanted, so I definitely feel blessed to have gotten it. To work with Lindsay was awesome. She was a theater leader, and brought the cast together as a family," says junior Shaun Marakovits. Photo [andrew byrne]

CALMING NERVES
First time performer Nixsaly Rivera, a freshman, gets ready before her performance in the play. "It took me fifteen minutes to prepare. I was excited the whole time. It was only in the split second before I went on stage that I felt anxious," she remarks. Photo [andrew byrne]

Just fantasy

This isn't just a performance for strangers, it's a celebration with the family.

[alexis venanzi]

It was 4th period , the day of opening night of "The Sound of Music" as I laid on the sawdust covered wooden floorboards of Liberty's historical stage. I stared straight up at the ceiling with my palms on the floor. Over 80 years, hundreds of performers acted and sang on that very spot, those very floorboards. Every performer who has been fortunate enough to have what it takes to be on our stage has left his or her mark, and, at that single moment, I could feel them all. All the motivation, dedication and love that everyone has shared came pouring out of the stage. At that moment, the lights turned on and light flooded my surroundings, and, at that moment, I was sparked. The spark is Liberty Theatre legend; every actor is rumored to have received it. The spark results when you realize the caliber of the Liberty Theatre tradition. Some people get an unexplainable thrill as they feel the spark run up their spines and through their veins. Personally, I broke into tears. You have to be a part of our theatre to realize the love that we share. "Each show has brought me more and more love from different friends who truly know what this is. This theatre is such a cherished and respected aspect because it has brought so much meaning to every person's life who has witnessed its magic," stated head of Liberty Theatre, senior Matt Martin. We are a family in every way the word is used. We love each other, we live with each other, we would give anything for each other. Spending over six hours a day with the same people for eight days straight during a sleepless tech-week creates an impenetrable bond. The traditions are there throughout all of our memories, the traditions of the Spark, the Zen Masters, the four infamous Gunslingers, trust games, and tributes. The final show ends it all, though. We join together after closing night, cramped in the guy's dressing room, hugging and screaming at the top of our lungs the starting lyrics of Queen's "Bohemian Rhapsody." "Is this the real life, is this just fantasy?" The question is a legitimate one. The experience of putting on a musical and performing as a character often seems fictional. But Liberty Theatre is for real. It's my life. It may become the life of upcoming actors, ones who, when they get their sparks and take their last bows, will realize that they too will have the spirits in those floorboards forever.

spirit of family

It came as a surprise when a sophomore was given the lead this year. Andrew Barr quickly discredited all fears that he wouldn't be an outstanding Captain von Trapp. "At first, I was really nervous since it was my first show and I got the lead. But as soon as I got here we became a family and it was natural," Andrew, who is pictured with his von Trapp children asserted proudly. Photo [andrew byrne]

On March 23, though snow covered the ground and the roads were icy, one hundred students and a handful of teachers braved the treacherous streets and ventured into the senior cafeteria to celebrate creativity and talent at the fifth coffee house of the year. Throughout the course of the three hour event, students shared poetry or music for an ebullient, accepting audience. Begun in 1993 to fund Young Writer, the coffee houses have developed a culture and traditions all their own: loyal attendees write poetry and music specifically for the showcases and some like junior Brigitte Gotzon plan their weekends around them. While the most popular mediums of the coffee houses are guitars and notebooks, audiences revel in performances of less conventional natures. Said junior Dan Hoffman, "only at a Liberty coffee house can a poem lamenting the loss of a boyfriend or girlfriend be followed by a poem based on a chemical bonding lab report."

RAW TALENT

Art is a way to express yourself. To many students, it is also a way to show off their talents.

[karen gentis & rachel lushinsky]

Every year Liberty has an art show to showcase all of its talented students. Some of these students have taken art lessons for as long as they can remember. Others are self taught. How long students have been studying art, however, is irrelevant to their love of it. "Art is an expression of who you are. As a kid I loved drawing and coloring and I just never stopped," said senior Dan Hurner. The art show displays a wide variety of art work. From photography, to ceramics, to painting, you can find whatever you are looking for. "I had some 3D designs in the art show this year," stated sophomore Emily Burtner. "I feel that the art shows are very important because they make the artist feel accomplished," she added. Most students agree that art is truly therapeutic. "The longer it takes to complete a piece of work, the more therapeutic it tends to be. I personally seem to do my best work when I'm listening to music," said junior Jeremy Wiles-Young. The art program at Liberty is one that is unmatched by any other school. As the art show demonstrated, Liberty students have raw talent. They are original and creative which helps make our school better than the rest.

The Monocacy Park was completely submerged in water as the creek flooded the entire area. Illick's Mill, which typically stands along the creek, was then in the creek. The bridge across the waterfalls was underwater, and still the rain kept falling. Mill construction worker Rusty Sullivan had his hands full while cleaning up knee deep in water. Monocacy Park was indistinguishable, and it quickly became a river of rapid currents.

Though the category five Hurricane Ivan drenched the east coast, no one could have predicted its effect on Bethlehem.

[alexis venanzi]

Although the eye of the powerful storm hit the United States in the Florida keys, Bethlehem, too, became familiar with breakneck winds and torrential downpours. On September 2, 2004, Hurricane Ivan formed over the Windward Islands, the fourth major hurricane of the Atlantic Hurricane Season. The storm soon became a category five hurricane, peaking at winds of 165 miles per hour. It swept through the southeastern states, but then downgraded, becoming a tropical storm before eventually reaching Bethlehem on September 16. For the unfortunate families living on the waterfront, evacuations and notable damage were inevitable. Though basements flooded, cars became submerged, and high winds wracked the city, the tremendous storm did not stop and still the water kept coming. As sophomore Carly Sedlock recalled, "The storm was scary. I didn't think it could have happened in Bethlehem, but it showed that anything is possible." For the storm's duration, most were locked inside their homes; few dared to challenge the storm. Senior Nick Christof, however, decided to kayak down the Monocacy Creek during the crest of the hurricane. "The water was freezing. We started at 1 a.m. and were out on the creek for a few miles," stated Nick. Ignoring the pouring rain, fast winds, and darkness, Nick and his friend Zack Kiss undertook an adventure with only two headlamps. "There were ridiculously strong currents and we almost died. The bridge was completely under water and we struck it head on and got banged up pretty bad on rocks too. Although it was life threatening, it was an awesome time," recalled Nick. Whether you witnessed Hurricane Ivan from behind a window or from a kayak in the middle of the night, everyone who experienced it can recollect Weather Channel-worthy storm stories.

TIMELESS BEAUTY

One of the timeless places in our school is the main lobby; through the years it has gone virtually unchanged. The artwork on the ceilings has been there since Liberty was constructed, and hopefully will remain there for all of Liberty's existence. Photo [andrew byrne]

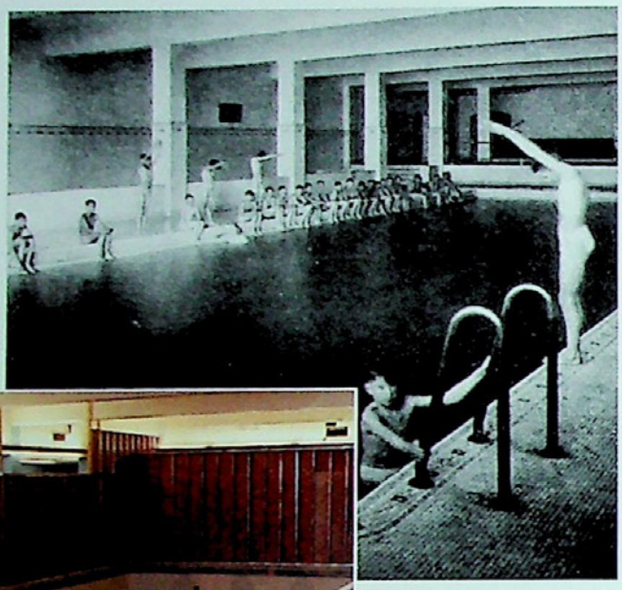
Class of 1997 graduate and physics teacher Aran Glancy spent much of his time in the pool as a member of the swim team. "The pool had a lot of . . . character," Glancy laughed. "The water was so foggy sometimes we couldn't see our hands in front of our faces." Photo [allyssa sirb]



DINING THROUGH DECADES

HALLOWED HALLS

No matter how much time passes, some things about Liberty will never change.

[allyssa sirb]

Eighty-two years ago when Liberty was built, many things were very different. The pool actually had water in it, uniforms were required for gym class, the Memorial Gym did not exist, and lunch in the cafeteria cost a mere eight cents. There's no question that through the decades our school has changed, much like the thousands of students who have walked its hallowed halls. Next year, when renovations occur and a new principal becomes the leader of our school, another chapter of Liberty history will begin. The school may look a lot different, but despite these changes, there are some things about Liberty High School that time will never alter. Any Liberty student, faculty member, or alumnus would agree that there is something timeless about our school. In the four years we spend here, we form countless relationships and memories and we also go through many new experiences. This is something that time and renovation can never change.

unique EXPRESSION

[alison williams]

Our many vocal music groups are always sure to please the crowd.

Singing is an art form through which many people release their emotions. Our many singing ensembles certainly use singing as such a tool. As a result, their performances serve as great entertainment. From a Capella to the entire group of choraliers, each ensemble provides unique expression of emotion through song. Karen Gentis, a member of choraliers, said, "Singing is just something I do for fun in the car or in the shower, but I also like to perform on stage with my peers." The choral groups' performances are often related to the time of year or have some other type of theme such as popular music; almost anyone can relate to their universal themes. "I liked the spring concert because the performance turned out well and I liked the choice of songs," senior chorus member Matt Barr stated. The passion the singers have for what they are doing is apparent, causing their vast enthusiasm to become contagious. Both admirers in the audience and soloists on stage can attain the same energy release and delight through the music.

The timeless sounds of the Grenadier Band have echoed through the walls of Liberty and streets of Bethlehem for decades. Each year, all 265 members put forth hours of preparation for football games, parades, concerts, and performances so as to offer their audience wonderful, uplifting musical experiences. The early morning practices and late night rehearsals always manage to pay off for the band's amazing showcases of talent. "I have so much fun being in Liberty's band. Playing at half time for the football games is awesome because even if the team loses, our band still wins," sophomore Chris Matthews remarked. The band, and the bagpipes in particular, have created countless memories for anyone who has had the opportunity to see them perform. The "bandos" themselves have unique memories: sophomore Diana Correia stated, "My most memorable time in band was dancing to all of the songs during the football games. It was so much fun and I felt really involved." The band experience has a lasting effect on the band members, and marching to the beat as a part of the Grenadier Band is an experience that alumni will always cherish.

sweet melody

Music inspires students throughout the school and around the world.

[kali koutsoumbis]

Passion for music and undeterred dedication fuel orchestra students. The orchestra rehearses hard and performs at least eight concerts throughout the year. The sweet melody the orchestra creates can be heard at the spring musicals, concerts, and even in Puerto Rico. "It was really amazing to perform at the Ponce School of Music with foreign students who are just as passionate about music the way I am," commented an excited senior Lindsay Super. In addition to performing in Puerto Rico, many orchestra members can be heard around the community performing in churches, shows, and even other school's musicals. The orchestra also worked to produce recorded CDs for their faithful patrons to buy. This year, under the direction of Mr. Macgill and Mr. Long, the orchestra produced a Christmas record, as well as a pop music CD. A commitment to producing beautiful music for the entire school community to enjoy ensures that our school has the best orchestra around.

Junior Elena Gambino shows the audience her skills on the violin at the band concert. "I have been playing the violin for about 12 years. I love making music more than anything else because it gives me a magnificent source of accomplishment and fulfillment. Music has helped me develop the way I think and approach things in everyday life, and I'd like to see more people benefit from music in the same way I do," explained Elena. MESMERIZING PERFORMANCE

Riverfusion brought many together for a common cause- restoring Illick's Mill.

For everyone in Bethlehem, Sunday May 15, 2005 was a big day because Riverfusion, a full day music festival which raises money and awareness for the restoration of Illick's Mill, was held. The day was devoted to showcasing both musical and artistic talents, and it allowed everyone to contribute to a common cause. Countless phone calls, meetings, e-mails and letters were done by the power team of 24 students and one teacher of the Illick's Mill Partnership to make the event a success. "This year's Riverfusion was the smoothest run ever," commented Executive Director Karen Dolan. Pulse Stage headliner, Talib Kweli, attracted a diverse group of people to see his mesmerizing performance. For some who attended, it was difficult to choose what to see and do with 23 bands on five stages and a parking lot full of food vendors. Next year's class will have the choice of keeping Riverfusion on Sand Island or moving it to the mill for a nature theme festival. Either way, Riverfusion, which has run for the past four years and will continue to be a part of the Bethlehem community, will receive the support of everyone, no matter the location.

ALL DOLLED UP

The anticipation of the prom makes all the planning and preparation for this formal event worth the effort.

[megan halkins & savannah shively]

You finally have arrived at Iacocca Hall, one last make up and hair check before you walk in. As you and your date enter, everything seems perfect. The decorations are beautiful, your ensemble is to perfection and you have been preparing for this night since you started high school. This is your prom. As you are getting dolled up for the big night, you remember the beautiful prom fashion show in the cafeteria. Caitlin Stillin-Rooney commented, "It was just so much fun being in the prom fashion show with all of our friends." You think back to how nervous you were trying to make sure you arrived to the hair salon just in time to get your hair and make up done because it's very important to look your best. Then you rush home to throw on your dress, which took weeks to pick out, and complete the finishing touches to your soon to come perfect night. However, before this night comes many circumstances need to be addressed. Every other year the SADD Club puts on a mock car crash to make teenagers aware of the dangers that come with drunk driving and destructive decisions. Every 15 minutes an accident occurs, the decision to get behind the wheel intoxicated impacts the life of so many people. The rush of emotions and the realization that prom is near is evident throughout the entire upperclassmen. They all know how much time was put in to the beautiful streamers and balloons that are perfectly hanging as you walk into what seems to be the highlight of your high school career, a perfect night with the people you have created perfect high school memories with.

RED CARPET

Star-studded students strut the red carpet with a New York state of mind.

Hair, makeup, and nails take much preparation, but the girls weren't the only ones in a rush to get ready for prom. The boys had to drive around town all day picking up corsages, tuxedos, and getting last minute haircuts. After everything was picked up and pinned in place, it was time to take pictures. The paparazzi-like family members attacked the prom-goers with flashes before they set out for the dance in their stretch limos. This year's theme, New York State of Mind, created an enchanting atmosphere as students strutted down the red carpet into Lehigh University's Iacocca Hall. At the climax of the dance, Erin Matyus and Brendan Van Ackeren were crowned prom Queen and King. "Prom was a great time and a great way to finish off the year with my best friends," commented Erin. Prom, for many of the seniors in attendance, brought about the realization of the coming farewells. This last celebration never fails to gush with romance, friendship, and a touch of sadness, but as the rowdy gentleman and ladies burst into a cheering section-inspired chant, it became clear they were also excited for the after parties.

changing GOALS

Through several messages by their classmates, graduates are reminded about having dreams

[laura ricles & alex demshock]

Sitting in front of a blank page, scanning through the mental catalogue of graduation material, one begins to understand the stress and strain that a commencement speaker is put under. Which expressions are too cliche? What words could do the class justice? What's worth saying? Ultimately, though, it's necessary to simply be honest and candid. This is not the bitter end. This is not the saddest or the most significant or the best day of your life. However, it should be special, it may draw a few tears, and it will mark an important point in each graduate's life. Class speaker Matt Pappalardo and Faculty Speaker Johanna Cespedes, along with the class officers, spoke on the nuances of graduation. Their speeches were centered around a few lines from a Cat Stevens song, which read, "Take your time, think a a lot, think of everything you've got, for you will still be here tomorrow, but your dreams may not." Secretary Alexis Venanzi took the lyrics to mean that, "Everyday, everyone has new plans, new dreams for themselves, and everyday they get accomplished. So tomorrow, each one of us will have different, changing goals to achieve."

UNDENIABLY GRAND

The ceremony, the inspirational messages and music, the senior video, all are vivid memories of this cherished event.

[laura ricles & alex demshock]

In her welcoming address, Alexis Venanzi explained that the past dream of graduation might be over, but that the class of 2005 has so many coming dreams to look forward to. Matt Pappalardo, speaking for the class, noted that no matter how different each individual in Stabler was, we all have the same fears and are all similarly unsure of the future. Johanna addressed the importance of the faculty to her personal experience as an ESL student and to each student who was touched by the teachers at Liberty. Amidst words of our four years of high school, our feelings on graduation, and thoughts on the future, the pomp and circumstance of the ceremony was displayed in true Liberty form. From a military medley played along with the announcement of all graduates entering the service to an inspirational choral piece, the commencement was undeniably grand. Still even Mr. Burkhardt admitted that he had struggled to find just the right words to say about the class of 2005. School Board President Mr. Joseph Craig ended the remarks with a bit of that simple honesty, laying out a few basic things to remember as we transition into a new stage of our lives. His final tenet truly embodied what graduation is about: the union of a monumental change and a mere juncture in the road. Mr. Craig said, "And finally, and I would say most importantly, remember where you came from." The class of 2005 will never forget.

THE FINAL DRAFT

[business teacher–ginny rohn]

For at least the first eighteen years of life, people are thinking, moving sponges, out to absorb the details of their world. Knowledge of any kind just finds a way to seep into our mental pores, whether it is the history of the Spanish Armada or how to do the Harlem shake. High school is about taking in the contents of textbooks, notes, and lectures, but there are other golden rules and life lessons to be gained from the four years spent inside these halls. In fact, a few of them are carved right into the building's very facade. I don't know how many students ever noticed or stopped to read the inscriptions above the doorways. My personal favorite is above the ground floor entrance, right below Mr. Burkhardt's office. Hold things in their proportion, it reads. Reminiscent of the perfect architectural balance of the Commons building, its walls tell the reader to keep the elements of his or her own life in equilibrium. I've found those words so helpful to keep in mind when I was hyperventilating before a test or when I spent too much time out with the crew. It's the happy medium between, "It's just a test," and "You have to get into a good college." Now, those words are helping me get through good-bye. Leaving Liberty feels like the end of the world to me, like I've put so much of myself into this place that leaving will be sacrificing part of who I am. But I just need to pause, examine all that I've soaked in over my academic career, and recall that there is a balance between pride, sadness, joy, and nostalgia, and that is where I will hold my heart.

Imagine standing in a 5x5 kitchen, surrounded by your fellow cooking partners. You pace the lanolium floor, anxiously awaiting the chime of the timer, as your homemade brownies should be done any minute. "My favorite dish we made in creative cooking was chicken jambalaya. It was a really time consuming process, but it was completely worth it," laughed sophomore Julie Brezinsky. Creative electives including, sewing, international food, candy making, wood shop and parenting allow a unique opportunity for a hands on approach to learning. The diversity of the electives offered to our students have expanded. Now more than ever, students are offered an insight into a curriculum they may have never experienced before. Senior Sean Brodt laughed as he recalled his experience in the Exploring Childhood class. "Despite your creative capabilities, or lack thereof, you learn so much from being immersed in an activity. You learn more from experiencing something hands on than from taking notes in an everyday classroom," expressed Sean. Regardless of which class attracts your particular interest, all the creative electives allow an opportunity to put yourself into an entirely new experience.

practical exploration

Investigating problems in our everyday lives.

[laura ricles & rachel lushinsky]

Experimenting and exploring go along with being a high school student in and out of the classroom. High school is the time for student to try new things and experiences. Science and math class is a time for students to put these skills to good use. Liberty offers a variety of different sciences, from chemistry to astronomy, and math courses, from statistics and geometry. All of these courses involve practical exploration and help to peak the interests of the plethora of students that make up our school. "I took Honors Anatomy because I want to study medicine in college and because it's interesting to learn about the human body," said junior Stephen Chaponis. Some students enjoy science and math so much that they choose to pursue it further out of the classroom. Science Olympiad, advised by Julie Schmittel and Aran Glancy, and the Pennsylvania Junior Academy of Science, advised by Tara Richards, are organizations that offer competitions to give exemplary science students a chance to shine. Julie Schmittel explained, "We start Science Olympiad in September to prepare for the competition of 23 different science events which takes place in March. Overall we were ninth and did really well for having such a young team." Another team composed of a competitive group of math geniuses is the Math Team, advised by Rebecca Ormesher. Their hard work paid off, as they placed tenth out of 33 schools at the Millersville University Math Contest. Whether students plan to pursue a career in the math or science field, or are just taking the class for fun, our school caters to everyone's problem-solving needs.

RESPONSIBILITY DETOURS

Whether you wait until the night before to study or finish a project in first period study hall, procrastination is a disease that every student falls victim to.

[rachel lushinsky, laura ricles, & alexis venanzi]

There is no getting around the imperative tasks that all of us go through, such as community service hours and final exams. Yet waiting until two weeks before graduation to start the required 60 hours or studying outside the classroom 20 minutes before the beginning of the exam seems to be a character flaw that all of us fall victim to: procrastination. Even though there is always that free time when the work should get started, delaying the inevitable seems to take over. Many of us we take the easy way out sporadically putting things off until tomorrow. We effortlessly find responsibility detours to dodge the hard work that lies ahead. For others, it seems that the free time is never there and schedules are packed with sport practices and extracurricular activities. Work and study time usually can't be squeezed in between regularly daily activities, resulting in assignments being put off until the last minute. There are the lucky few that work better when put under pressure. "Procrastination can be stressful and risky. However, my best writing and songs wouldn't be created if it wasn't for the pressure," explained junior Corey Florindi. For everyone else, it becomes a battle with time. The weapon of choice? Caffeine. Cappuccino and Coca-Cola quickly become students' best friend while pulling an all-nighter the Sunday before a big test. Laziness and distractions are no match for the professional procrastinators that down countless Red Bulls at 2:00 AM. However, the next morning, it all pays off. You may be wandering into first period, dazed and confused, but the worst is over. Finally, the drowsiness kicks in during fourth period French and there is no fighting the heaviness of your eyes and temptation of sleep. When the bell rings, you swear to never wait until the last minute again. Sure enough, the English paper's due date is quickly approaching, but why work on it tonight when there is always tomorrow?

Senior Kali Koutsoumbis quickly puts a poster together for her fourth period English presentation, only to discover she spelled her headline wrong. STAGE FRIGHT

Students calm their butterflies and produce entertaining performances.

Minutes before the curtains spread, nothing but doubt and anxiety fill your stomach. What if all the effort you've put into the last three months is nullified by forgotten lines or an off-key note and overwhelming stage fright? Just when you think you can slide off the stage unnoticed, your performance piece is about to begin. Now you are trapped by the audience's cold stare, while you have no clear plan and your solo is fast approaching. You deliver your first line or your first note and the audiences' initially experessionless faces light into emotion. Their emotional response calms you and you're able to continue with conviction. This isn't so bad. Time flies by, and when your finished, you receive congratulations and you are reminded how good it feels to be a part of something as special as a school performance.

FINE PRINT

Patience, commitment, and creativity. These are three qualities that describe the Cauldron, Liberty Life and Young Writer staff members. Some say, "Patience is a virtue" and the members of the yearbook staff can vouch for this. Photography Editor Andrew Byrne explained, "I really have to keep my patience when I walk into 307 sometimes. Everyone just bombards me with questions, and requests for certain photos." Their patience and dedication come together to create an excellent book with memories to recall for years to come. For senior Editor-in-Chief Matt Pappalardo and the rest of the Liberty Life staff, commitment is key. When news breaks around Liberty, they will be sure to bring you the full stories in every issue. "It takes time to come out with a good issue. The staff and I both come in after school and on the weekends to make sure everything in fine print is perfect," said Matt. Liberty's Young Writer comes together to allow people to express themselves through poetry, through song, and through other means of art. They bring to Liberty their emotion-filled book of the written word and several Coffee Houses, where people come to relax and express themselves. " People that attend the Coffee Houses seem to be very receptive and feel they can be open," said junior Dan Hoffman. "Our book represents the students and their feelings," Hoffman went on to say. Of the three groups, each member has his or her own way with words, making Liberty's communications and publications the best around.

exchanging traditions

The languages may sometimes sound similar, but the cultures brought together express the diversity of the world.

[alexis venanzi & karen gentis]

Music, dancing, acting and food fill the top of the 800's twice a year during the Foreign Language Day Festival. It is just one of the many events that take place throughout the year that opens students' eyes to all cultures of the world. Unlike most schools, Liberty is blessed with a very diverse student body. Through many organizations, such as the German, French and Spanish clubs to Latino Youth Leadership and our foreign exchange program, our dedication to exchanging traditions and cultures helps send out well versed young adults into the world. "One of my most memorable times this year was the Liberty/Freedom game. In Germany, we don't have school sports so there is no school spirit. Seeing all the kids at Liberty bond together with such enthusiasm was just so overwhelming and something I will always remember," shared Sarah Braunning, a foreign exchange student from Heilbronn, Germany. "Coming to America and being away from my family for so long has really shown and made me appreciate the things I have more. When I go back to Brazil, I will appreciate all my family and friends a lot more because after being away from them for so long. I realized how important they are to me. This whole experience has been amazing," informed Lucas Pires, an exchange student from Teresina, Brazil. Whether it is bringing students here from other countries, sending our students to foreign places, or just simply teaching other cultures of the world during class, our unique student body is a rarity among other schools.

career choice

Vo-Tech gives you more freedom to express your skills.

[kristy conti]

Walking into the salon, you can hear the hissing of hairspray cans and the snips of scissors. Bethlehem Area Vocational Technical School is full of opportunities. From cosmetology to carpentry, hands on learning is taught to students through an understandable prospective. Knowing that you have a job to complete is a rewarding experience for students. Jose Morales, a junior, is in the Auto Collision class at Vo-Tech. He commented that when he sees a car he has painted on the street, it feels good and, "I like to brag to everyone that I did that." In her cosmetology class, Erika Rorhbach told us that, "Cutting hair and working on clients from the community," is her favorite part of class. On a typical day she will learn about the theory of cosmetology for about 20 minutes and then from there she goes out to the salon and practices what she learned. Most Vo-Tech students acquire jobs right out of high school. Technical school is a great opportunity for students who do not plan to continue with formal education but rather learn a trade or a skill that will help them to be successful in their career choice.

Blank Canvas

Express yourself. Every student has to receive credit for at least one art class to meet graduation requirements. Some students see art class as just an easy grade, while others see it as an opportunity to convey emotions through visual expressions. Freshman Giselle Brown commented, "There are no boundaries in expressing yourself. You can relax about your work because you know that there is no wrong answer. Art is the way you see it". Overwhelmed by your imagination, some guidance is also very helpful when transforming a blank canvas into a work of art. "We have amazing teachers in the art department. They know their art and offer very useful advise," said Brittany Starkweather. "They let you be yourself through your art work and never making you conform," added Brittany. Art classes offer students a more hands on approach to learning. As opposed to being confined behind a desk, your imagination can run wild.

Senior Maggie Dredge works on the mural she's painting in the 400s building. " I want the mural to be a symbol of the Class of 2005. SWEATIN' it OUT Stressed for the occassion. No matter where you are, stress may follow.

Don't sweat the small stuff. Easier said then done, right? Students have different reasons for being stressed out, whether it be from sports, studying, or everyday social problems. Dealing with stress can become annoying because it can get so intense that you have no idea how to become relaxed. As you walk through the halls, you may catch a glimpse of kids with their heads down, or with their hand permanently attached to their foreheads with frustration during class. It is so common during high school to feel overwhelmed with everything that students forget how to have a good time every once in a while. Instead, many become obsessed with their school work or school activities. Yes, sports and school are very important, but it's equally important to enjoy yourself. So while you are sweatin' it out, remember to keep your cool and stay positive.

HEATED DISCUSSION

An increased interest in history resulted from the 2004 presidential election stir.

[alison williams]

A tight presidential election race between George W. Bush and John Kerry sparked interest within the social studies department this year. History and government classes became the sites of many heated discussions and debates about the candidates and their party's platforms. "My class was pretty evenly divided between Bush and Kerry supporters with strong opinions on separate issues," recalled senior Alix McGeehan about her government class. In addition to their debates on the current election situation, students were also compelled to research past elections and the historical events surrounding them. In response to the political overtones dominating current events, an exclusive election was held for students and teachers. Proving to be overwhelmingly democratic, John Kerry won the election by a two-thirds margin. Not only did students participate in the mock election, but some seniors were able to vote nationally for the first time. "I decided to vote because I think its important for Americans in the younger age bracket to make their voice heard," Andrew Rohmann, a senior, explained about his motivation to vote as an 18 year-old. High school is a crucial time to learn about politics through history classes because students need to be informed in order to make educated decisions as voters in the near future.

ENTREPRENEURS

In today's market, the business field is one of the leading professions in the world.

[angela urbano]

Among the top twelve highest paying occupations, five are in the business field. CEOs and business managers must possess many skills, including public speaking, communication, entrepreneurship, civic-mindedness, financial analysis, and computer technology. Many of these skills are taught in the business classes offered to Liberty students. All 16 teachers are committed to preparing students for the professional world. The classes create an opportunity for students to develop competent business leadership skills while at the same time allowing students to strengthen their self-confidence. Senior Joseph Loguidice spoke of the merits of business courses, explaining "I 'm undecided about my college major, so I took classes in the department to introduce myself to the world of business and help my decision." The classes are a convenient way to help with college decisions and to teach skills needed in life. Whether they wish to pursue a business career or not, many business students are also involved in the various business clubs such as Future Business Leaders of America and Distributive Educators Club of America. These students, "experience first hand a professional business environment at competitions which are interactive and fun," said Mr. Spang, DECA advisor along with his wife, Mrs. Spang. Overall, the business department offers the most electives, has the highest elective enrollment, and is the only department to offer a certificate program.

This is a program for students who are not planning on attending college but rather plan to go right into the workforce. Nieves continued, "At first I just wanted to pass, but now, because of the program, I know I can do a lot more after graduation." There are various levels and groups that "steps" students participate in, from working off campus at places such as Moravian College and Lehigh University, to working in school from the mail room to the nurses office. The program fosters professionalism by doing jobs on and off campus such as copying papers, delivering mail, typing in databases and many other tasks. At the end of this program the faculty tries to help the students find everyday jobs. With the help of the Steps to Success Program students are finding an easy transition from school life into real life.

THE FINISH LINE

Sometimes, I really hate those clocks. You know, the clocks that just keep ticking during games. While I'm devoting myself to the game, with a body block or that last sprint, it keeps on counting, completely indifferent to what is going on. The clock shows no mercy. As it comes down to those final minutes of the game, when my heart, mind, and body are on the line, the clock can't pause or acknowledge me even for a second. It just keeps on ticking. But as much as I hate the seconds slipping by, I know that I need that clock; without it, our games, matches, and meets would go on forever. I need those last minutes; they put the fire in my blood that I need to retrieve the ball or sprint that last meter. Finally the end comes, the buzzer rings, and my struggle is over. Whether I have won or lost, it's done and I can't go back. The clock is out of time and I have to accept that everything at some point must come to an end. But it was those moments the clocked ticked out that will always bring back the vivid memories of the game.

Bright future

Field hockey earns respect from area teams.

The field hockey program has finally begun to make a name for itself. For the first time in four years the varsity team beat Freedom High School. "I scored the winning goal, so I was happy," senior forward Sara Owens beamed. Beyond being victorious in their final game against our school's archrival, the girls managed to continue a remarkable 3-year streak of drastic improvements to the hockey program. The varsity team doubled the amount of goals scored from the previous season. The program has emerged from a fifteen year slump over the past few years with the help of the girls on this team. Area teams have stopped writing off the 'Canes and have begun to respect their game. "Something about the girls on this team has managed to salvage Liberty hockey, which had suffered a rough history up until recently," said senior Alex Demshock. Even though they pulled off impressive performances against seasoned teams such as Parkland and Easton, they did not make it to Districts. However nothing but a bright future is in store for the Lady Canes. "Next year we will, definitely," noted junior and third year varsity player Laura Bauman, concluding, "If we continue to improve like we have over the past few years, next year we will have a winning season."

quick feet

Victory is sweet, and the boys soccer team knows first hand.

Our soccer players proved that they can bring everything together. Their 13-7 record speaks for itself. Coach Yelovich expressed that he was proud of their success, saying, "I'm extremely happy with the team this year. We have a great record, and we were so close to winning Districts." This was the first year Yelovich coached the team and he got off to a great start. The team had many stand-out games, but senior Jonathan Bedoya recalls one in particular. On the game against Freedom, he commented, "Beating them in the stadium was awesome, because they're the biggest rivals we have and we have to beat them there." This season reflects all the hard work and practice these guys do for the sport they love. With such a great season, the standard for next year is even higher, but with returning players, talent, dedication, and quick feet, they're sure to pull it off.

TUG OF War

Each year, the girls have a lot to live up to, but they never fail to disappoint.

Some teams just belong at the top. The girls volleyball team has been part of a long-lasting athletic dynasty for several years, and they've become accustomed to being the best. The girls team made districts for the fourth straight season in a row, proving that hard work and dedication pays off. Not only did the girls make districts, but they made it all the way to the finals, only to lose an emotional tug of war against Central Catholic. "A volleyball match is played for the best out of five games. We lost the first three really closely," explained co–captain Kelly Rodenbach. Though losing the three games in a row was discouraging, Rodenbach had a different attitude, asserting that, "We were the underdogs, and Central Catholic was definitely everybody's favorite team. They all thought we would be crushed, but the girls knew we would hold our own." The seniors have high hopes for next year's team, but believe that the younger players have big shoes to fill. "We're losing five seniors this year, so the younger girls will have to step it up," states Rodenbach. Co-captain Amanda Marfisi commented, "Giving 110%, even during practice, is an important step in establishing a championship team." According to coach Stephanie Corrigan, making volleyball a number one priority and learning from past mistakes will help the girls continue their great athletic legacy and keep the girls' volleyball team in their rightful place on top.

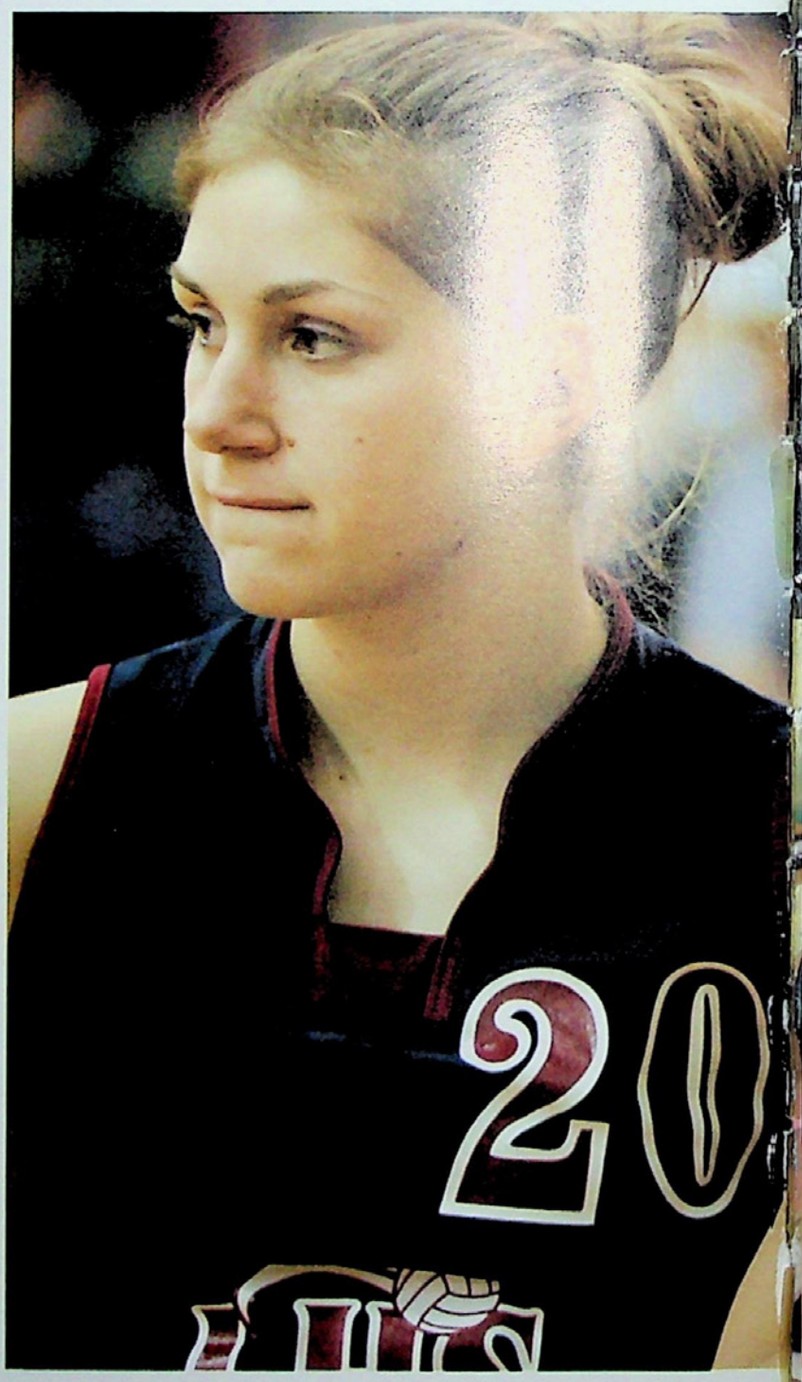
HERE TO WIN

Despite the on-going stress athletes endure, their determination continues to shine both on and off the court.

[melissa coleman]

You gather your last breath as your heart begins to pound its way outside of your chest and into your stomach. A glimpse of the cameras and announcers throws even more intensity into the game. Your mind is racing at the faintest sound of the crowds' roar, but it still is all a blur; you are in a zone. You have found that place within, when you are lost in concentration as you focus on this game and what it means. You know the stakes that are riding on your performance and it is that exact feeling that feeds your driving force. Junior Leann Searfoss explained the pressure that pushed her in this year's 16-2 varsity girls volleyball season. "The thought of letting my team down makes me nervous. I feel a pressure to do my best because I know the team depends on everybody's individual effort." But the moment you step out on the field or court, it all comes into play. The butterflies fade and the tension releases. Your purpose is clear. You're here to win.



AGAINST ALL ODDS

"When a reporter interviewed us on the upcoming District game, she told us that we had as good of a chance of winning Districts as Nadar did of becoming president. Her comment made us play harder, to prove to everyone who doubted us," said junior volleyball player Leann Searfoss. The team placed second in this year's District Championship. The outstanding record of this year's football team put a lot of pressure on the players to keep delivering victories. ...the sounds of distant shrieks of four can be heard as you travel

Trekking over seemingly endless mounds of perfectly groomed greens with twenty pounds of clanking clubs bumping against your back, you begin to wonder when you'll ever come across your little white ball. Sweat begins to drip down your face, and the distant shrieks of "FOUR!" can be heard as you travel in the direction where you think the ball landed. Despite the obstacle of ball detection, the golf team prevailed and finished their season with a 12-4 record. Before taking a shot, there are many factors a golfer takes in consideration; things such as what club to use, the direction of the wind, and where the tiny hole is. The team members must constantly wonder whether or not they will hit their farthest shot, reach a par, or completely miss when they put full force into striking the ball off the tee. "All the decisions you make during a match are critical," stated a player on the team. The decisions made by Justin McCornac, Stephen Labiak, and Douglas Marcincin were good ones, as all three qualified for districts. Justin went even further and competed in the state competition.

[senior–andy rohmann]

Good Luck! Run Fast! Do your best! Words of encouragement fill the air right before the shot of the gun explodes in the ears of the nervous and anxious runners. Sprinting as fast as possible, trying not to feel the burning sensation in their legs, their shortness of breath, or the sweat trickling down their foreheads, many cross country runners try to concentrate on crossing the finish line in their fastest possible time. This season Andrew Rohmann set the school record for the fastest mile at 4:22.9. Later, he commented about his team's slogan, "Today I will do what you will not, so tomorrow I will do what you can't," which this year's cross country team lived by. Victory is what they thrive on and what led this years team to a 10 -1 record for the boys and an 8 -3 record for the girls. "Traveling all the way down to Florida to compete in the Disney Classic was a great experience, " commented Cristian Pates. In Florida, the girls team placed second and the boys team placed third overall.

The Hurricanes tore through the competition in 2004 with just two losses

Vince Lombardi once said, " We didn't lose the game, we just ran out of time," and his quote may very well be identified with the Hurricanes' spectacular football season. In their record breaking and eye opening year, their two losses, both to Easton, came as surprises because winning became somewhat of a habit. "The second time around I felt we were the more physical team," said Coach Moncman of the Liberty-Easton football games. In fact, the 'Canes shut the Red Rovers down after their two quick scores in the first game and exceeded them statistically in virtually every category during the second meeting. For seniors Matt Sterner, Brendan Van Ackeren, Will Severn, John Korpics, Juan Hernandez, Jason Hahn, and Sean Velekei, time may have run out this year, but not before they experienced a great season. Moncman and his squad finished the season 10-2, winning one playoff game before a heartbreaking seven point loss to Easton. Although their memorable season came to an end, winning will stay in the blood of key players Andrew Lee, Dan Persa, and Andres Morales, who Moncman hopes will "improve upon Liberty's silver medal season ."

TOP SPIN

Young promising stars help rack up victories.

With a pop of the can, tennis balls pour out. "I love the smell of a new can of tennis balls. It gives me flashbacks of when I was little," said sophomore Lindsay Gray. The aroma of the fresh tennis balls fill the atmosphere as you grab your racket and trot to the base line mentally preparing for your match. Dribbling the ball once, twice, three times, and then a fourth, you then throw the ball in the air followed up by the racket. As your energy concentrates, thoughts of placement and whether you'll hit the ball flat or with top spin spiral through your mind. At the precise moment you let out a vociferous grunt and take all of your concentrated relaxation and energy out on the little yellow ball, savagely slamming it into the opponent's green pavement. This years tennis team got off to what they thought would be a rough start. With only 2 returning starters the team had to work twice as hard to help the new members and make sure the team worked to its potential. "Serena and I wanted to make sure the new girls stayed relaxed and didn't get nervous. Since we were the only two girls with varsity experience, the job fit us well," said senior Alexis Venanzi. The tennis team turned out to have a great season finishing with a record of 9 wins and 6 losses, and also sending sophomore Lindsay Gray to the state championship where she was awarded the silver medal in singles.

At nationals, Lindsay placed third out of 128 girls. Her favorite part of tennis is when her intense training pays off.

DYNAMIC SPIRIT

cheerleading

Showing what it means to be true red and blue

On the cold, snowy night before the Liberty-Freedom wrestling match, 18 varsity cheerleaders transformed the homes of the varsity wrestlers into showcases of Liberty pride using toilet paper, streamers, and door signs. Decorating the houses of athletes was just one way the cheerleaders showed their hard work, dedication, and dynamic spirit. Until the winter sports season, the cheerleaders worked tirelessly to create and perfect routines for pep rallies and games. Following the winter sports season, the girls practiced endlessly to prepare for various competitions, including the new District 11 cheerleading competition. At the competition, the varsity squad competed against squads from the district and brought home a first place trophy. "A lot of people don't realize how nerve-wracking cheerleading is. In other sports, you have a lot of time to make up for mistakes. At a cheerleading competition, you get one chance to prove how good you are. Mess up one time in your routine and your chances at first place are gone," senior captain Khaley Sestak explained. The girls proved their strength and ability by winning various awards and making countless memories.

Mountain Hawks next year.

At the last game, the crowd was roaring with excitement.

The true basketball fans never remember the losses.

Instead, they remember the victories of their team. Though this year the varsity record tested fans, at the last game the crowd was roaring with excitement as captains Michael Lawrence and Kevin Merkel led the team to victory against Freedom. "It felt great to defeat Freedom at their school since it was their defining game," stated Kevin. Contrasting the boys' electrifying end was their grim beginning. "It took some time to get used to the high level of skill of the other schools since we had young players. We also had a tough schedule in the beginning and had to play three games a week," Trevor Van Ackeran commented. Injuries further hurt the team. "Not having Brendan Van Ackeren due to his injury forced us to play inexperienced guys," Coach Rothrock explained. The team looks to build off of this year's season; the boys are depending on their teammates moving up from JV to varsity. Sophomore JV player Ross Biggs explained, "We've all played together for the past 3-4 years through the Hurricane Club traveling teams, so that helped us improve our teamwork. We all also know what each of our strengths are, so we will be able to bring it together." Although this year's varsity season was somewhat disappointing, the players, fans, and coaches have high hopes for next year.

sisterly BOND

Louisa May Alcott was once quoted saying, "Helping one another is part of the religion of sisterhood."

An unquestionable sense of security among friends is how Junior Jazmyn McDonald describes the relationship among the girls on the basketball team. She said, "We're like a family, a big family. We're thirteen sisters; we can tell each other anything." The sisterly bond they have outside of basketball helps their communication on the court. "If you know your teammates, you will play better with the team and the teamwork will come naturally," Jazmyn added. After Friday or Saturday night games, the team members always have team sleepovers which, according to sophomore Shannon White, is the best part of being on the team and a good way to bond with the girls. What's more, the girls go to camps, tournaments, clinics, and summer leagues together. The team is a tight unit of girls who, "set high standards for themselves and each other and work hard to achieve nothing less," said sophomore forward Mary-Kate Serratelli. From the baskets they shot, to the friendships they sealed, the girls had a season of many victories and a few disappointments. An outstanding team achievement was being the Boyertown Tournament Champions. The chemistry between the girls that was demonstrated during their games is not something the team will lose when the seniors leave because it is something that is part of the makeup of the team and just like family, it will never go away.

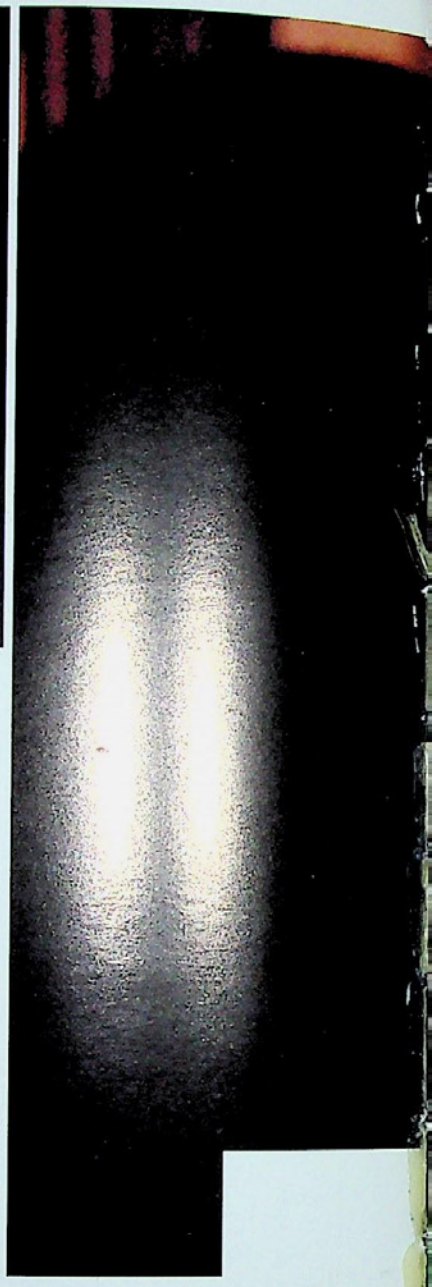
COLD cement

[rifle]

Rugged forest animals don't stand a chance against our rifle team.



You can hear nothing but your own heartbeat, becoming faster and faster, as you crouch down on the cold cement floor in the pit. As you pick up your rifle and look into the scope to aim at the target, you feel a rush of adrenaline. "Keeping your heartrate down is important," advised senior James Koons. "If your heart rate is high it makes your gun bounce which is not good if you're aiming fifty feet away at a little target." Anxiety is not the only contributor to a fast heart rate, however. Eating before events also causes an increased heart rate, so the Liberty rifle team members make sure to avoid eating before hand. These calming tactics must have worked, because this year's rifle team had an excellent season. Besides sending senior captain James Koons and freshman Peter Labiak to states, the rifle team's season included seven wins and four losses. James came in eighth in the East and sixteenth overall in the state championship. Along with winning Rookie of the Year award, Peter Labiak finished twelfth in the East and twenty-fourth overall in the state championship. The team finished fifth for the season along with a third place finish in the All-Star tournament. "We just like having fun together," said Brandon Toothman of his teammates. Thanks to all the time the team spends together, most will agree that is the best part of rifle is the time they spend together.

STEPPING ONTO THE ICE

Students are given the opportunity to experience the intensity and rush of adrenaline of an increasingly popular sport.

You stand there anxiously amongst your teammates as you become hypnotized by what's before you. The crowds' roar diminishes as your focus is drawn to the sound of the skates slicing through ice. Your eyes shift as fast as your heart is pounding, as you watch the players passing before your eyes. You take your final glance at the clock above the goal. As the seconds seem to disappear, you prepare yourself for the final shift. Junior Pandelee Mikroudis said of the intensity of ice hockey, " Your heart just pounds as you're stepping onto the ice. The adrenaline of staring into the eyes of your opponent overwhelms you and all you can think about is not letting your team down." Although the ice hockey team itself is only considered a club, there is never a question about the determination and perseverance this team has put forth. Though the team has been a part of the school's community for eight years, this was the first year that they qualified for playoffs. "It was a great opportunity to see our team make playoffs for the first time. To be a part of the first team to accomplish that made it a real memorable season for all of us" commented senior Doug Pascoe. It takes an extreme amount of effort from an entire team to mentally and physically prepare for a season that is both intense and exhausting, but the team's belief in its capabilities and the passion that consumes the players is clearly evident.

Anticipating the Rhythm

Many of the senior hockey players anticipated their final year playing for the team. Senior left wing Doug Pascoe explained, "When I stepped out on the ice the first time this season, I was nervous about how the season would turnout, but as things progressed I couldn't be happier with the way we came together as a team." Assisting Achievement

For the first time ever, the ice hockey team qualified for playoffs, and playing against arch-rival Freedom in the play-offs made it an even better. Junior Pandelee Mikroudis commented, "It was a big deal for our team to play Freedom in the play-offs. It was a successful achievement on all the teams behalf, and to be apart of that meant a lot to every player." Photo [andrew byrne]

lapping up victory

Great individual efforts and team cooperation resulted in a memorable season.

The races that sophomore Julie Brezinksy swims are blurs. Julie said, "When I race, I don't think about anything. I just swim as fast as I can." Swimming as fast as they could, all of the members of the swim team contributed to the team's winning record. The achievements of the team were impressive, as the boys placed fifth at Districts and the girls placed third. Individual achievements were even greater; several swimmers went to states and Patrick Novak, Danielle Scott, Abby Kocon, Jeanmarie Virgone, Julie Brezinsky, and Erin Matyus scored in the top 10 in their events. Leading the girls' team were captains Rachel Lushinsky, Erin Matyus, and Jeanmarie Virgone, and leading the boys' team were captains David Ivankevich, Isaac Sharken, and Rian Foust. Though Liberty's swim team was without a home pool for the second year, it did not prevent the team from lapping up victory.

Pat, who has been swimming for 11 years, said of his accomplishments, "It felt like all my hard work actually paid off." Though only a sophomore, Pat is already thinking about his future in swimming. He intends to swim in college and hopes to get a scholarship for swimming.

Starting off the year with a broken ankle, senior wrestler Ben Heist uncertainly awaited the season. Having his first match on the very day he was cleared to practice, his season got off to a rough start. "My first match didn't go so well, so I knew I had to make some changes," Ben said. Those changes culminated in his winning the Most Outstanding Wrestler award at the wrestling banquet. Ben continually trained harder during the entire season. "I was at my peak ability at the time of districts and regionals," Ben explained. He placed fourth in regionals, one place away from states. Although such an achievement could not have been anticipated at the start of the season, Ben's success was evident in the end.

The wrestlers' hard work showed through their abilities in their matches.

A typical practice for wrestling included a mile run on the old gym track, stretching, cartwheeling, jogging, skipping, and partner drilling, all before receiving a water break. Wrestling practices are intense to say the least. Not only do the wrestlers then continue to wrestle, but they also finish off practice with three sets of 30 of push-ups, sit-ups, back bridges, and squat thrusts. Occasionally, the team will run the bleachers at the conclusion of practice as well. Practicing hard and staying in shape is important, considering the weight restrictions the team members experience. "At first maintaining your weight is hard, but we become very disciplined. We know that coach will kill us if we don't make weight," senior Willie Melendez half-joked. Wrestlers can be considered some of the hardest workers in the school. They arguably train harder than most other athletes, and their efforts pay off. With an excellent record of 21-5, the wrestlers proved themselves once again. "Having a good season is such a relief because it's always long and strenuous," junior Willie Horwath expressed. Our wrestlers are proof that hard work pays off, and the wrestling legacy will continue year after year.

RANGE FROM THE CLASSICS

Not just the flavor of the week.

[megan halkins]

An ice cream store is very much like the world of sports. The flavors range from the classics such as chocolate, strawberry and vanilla to the less common such as black cherry or rose. Just like ice cream, sports are traditional and unique. Sports, such as rock climbing, slacklining, and horse back riding, go into the unique category . Even though some people may not prefer rose ice cream, it may be an other's favorite flavor, just like rock climbing may not be the first choice for some, but others may find they love it. Ross Landino explained, "Rock climbing is a completely different type of sport and people assume it is less challenging than it really is." Although some ice creams are more popular than others they all need to stay cold and involve a taste that keeps people coming back for more. Just like ice creams, all sports need something that keeps people returning to their favorite pastimes.

CRADDLING

If you are angry, annoyed, fed up and just feel like hitting people, lacrosse is the sport for you!

"Winning isn't everything" - a phrase that suits the Bethlehem Area Lacrosse Club well. The team, in its second year, is not just made up of Liberty students; it consists of students from many different high schools. "My favorite thing about lacrosse is how much of a contact sport it is. It is a mix between hockey and football," said Joe Loguidice, a Liberty senior. It is really refreshing to see that to the boys lacrosse players, the game isn't all about the competition. "We were a very laid back team, and it would have been nice if we won, but at least we had fun," laughed Neil Heimsoth, one of the three captains of the team. Since this program was only started two years ago, most of the players had never played lacrosse before. "The hardest thing to learn to do is cradle the ball, that is, keep the ball in the net," said Tony Logan, one of the other captains on the team. The Bethlehem Area Lacrosse Club can be summed in two words "simply fun". Although winning wasn't everything to BALC, the season was one of good sportsmanship, excitement and, most importantly, one of progress.

INCREASED AGGRESSION

In its second year, girls lacrosse gained players and experience

Woe be to Mr. Cecchini, who, during an assembly for the junior class, inadvertently claimed that Liberty would lose the Liberty Girls Lacrosse Club if the juniors did not score well on the PSSA's. At practice that day, nothing could stop the cries of "They can't do that!" and "How could they take lacrosse away from us?" Though the team was not in danger, the rumor that the club was threatened survived for days afterward. Unlike the supposed end of the club, the love of lacrosse and of the team was genuine. And although the team's record does not indicate district dominance, the season was marked by increased aggression and achievement; in the tournament that concluded the season, varsity lacrosse defeated both Emmaus and Nazareth, teams that Liberty had lost to each twice before. Overall, however, the accomplishments of the team were not recorded with pencil and paper, but with cheers. When junior Jenelle Petresky scored the sole goal of a JV game against Emmaus, screams from the Liberty bench delayed play for two minutes. Those cheers, in the end, have echoed louder than the PSSA-related rumor and, in fact, embody the enthusiasm for the club that has earned it the respect of any varsity team.

As a starting attackman, it was Jaime's responsibility to score goals, and score she did. Throughout the season, Jaime scored 27 goals. But Jaime did more than shoot, however. Overcoming her fear of angering opponents, Jaime became markedly more tenacious, going after the ball in the air and on the ground. After high school, Jaime hopes to continue playing lacrosse "even if I can only play on a club team."

SMOOTH STROKES

The boy's tennis team overcomes physical and mental obstacles to finish with a winning season.

Tennis has the image of being a fast moving sport for coordinated athletes. However, few know about the psychological anxiety tennis players overcome. Many times, players have been down in the third set, and find that their smooth strokes are no longer smooth and their body is physically tired. It is times like these that players with strong mental games are able to battle back. Liberty tennis is not a team made up of kids who have spent their whole lives with a private coach at Saucon Valley Country Club. But everyone on the team has a desire to win that even the most drastic defeat cannot waver. This year's team had some of the most talented players in Liberty's history, with the state runner up long jumper playing second doubles and the best violin player in the country playing first singles, Liberty proved to have a well-rounded and capable team for the '05 season.

keith sacarakis

Keith Sacarakis is what one would call a leader. He is depended on not only for his big hits, but his ability to rally up the team when it is needed. Labeled a Pre-Season All-American by the Baseball Factory, he has done nothing less than meet expectations, batting .536 with 23 RBI's. "My role on the team is to be a leader and a prime player in the lineup. I try to make sure everyone is playing their best every time they step on the field," stated Sacarakis.

Liberty baseball exceeded everyone's expectations once again this season.

The morning that the preseason standings were posted, Liberty players glared at the freshly printed ink on their newspapers. More specifically, they stared at their ranking–second last in the division. The minute they stepped on the field for practice that afternoon, every swing of the bat, and every hard knock of the ball was to prove that the team would exceed expectations, even without star pitchers JT Brotosky and Sean Heimple, who both graduated last year. "Every year I feel we can challenge for the LVIAC title, but this year we did overachieve," said Coach Pitsilos. As the temperature began to increase from the 40's to the 80's, critics began to change their opinions of the 'Canes, who stepped up to the plate, closing out the first half of the season 7-3. To go along with their winning record for the first half, Liberty topped rival Bethlehem Catholic with help from the pitching staff and a go ahead RBI from senior Ben Mies. Freedom also fell victim to the big sticks of Liberty and second baseman Dray Wieller, who also had a game-winning hit, this time in the bottom of the seventh inning. To finish up the season, after turning some heads, Liberty recorded 14 wins and 6 losses. Adding to their tradition, once again the 'Canes entered the district playoffs, this time as the number five seed after falling short to Easton 6-7 in the Northampton division title game. Liberty went on then to play Easton for the fourth time in the in the first round of the playoffs, but fell once again by a single run in a controversial meeting. Despite the loss, Liberty displayed another great season.

The combination of a quick glove and great arm strength makes senior Dray Wieller a viable choice for an all-star vote. He shows off his arm strength as he throws out numerous Hawks from crosstown rival Bethlehem Catholic. "Whether it's with my bat or with my glove, I do what I can to help the team win. Fielding has just become more repetition for me through practice," stated Dray. Photo [andrew byrne]

Batter Up

The girls softball team proves that friendship and skill can combine for a great season.

Sounds like softball season. If you have ever been on Grenadier Boulevard around fourth period during softball season, you will see the softball girls walking down to their bus, excited and a little bit nervous for their game. If you listen closely, you can hear singing, chanting, and cheering coming from the back of the bus as it drives away to take the girls to do what they do best. Down the street at Lafayette Field, the pounding of leather against leather, the pop of the ball sailing into contact with the metal bat, and the scraping of cleats against the dirt diamond are the soundtrack to spring. As the girls leap off the bus and enter into game mode, they await for the infamous words, "batter up" to take the field and dominate over their opponents. This year, this girls finished with a winning record of 17-5 and qualified for districts, where they were defeated by Parkland. Despite their loss, the girls were still a strong team, with many outstanding players. With the talent of underclassmen Sam Lawrence, Laura Jaxheimer, and Caitlin Snyder, along with seniors Kara Kahler and Laura Ettwein, the girls were named an All-Conference Team, and overall had a great season.

The boys volleyball team impressed fans and opponents alike.

Despite a lack of confidence and a doubtful outlook during the off-season, the boys volleyball team proved to be one of the year's best silent surprises. After losing six out of eight varsity players and five of six starters from last year's team, expectations were not great. Five of six varsity players for the 2005 season were either on last year's junior varsity team, which had a record of 0-18, or had not played at all. However, beginning the season with three victories began a streak of impressive performances in what was thought to be an uncertain rebuilding season. "Being successful is one of the best emotions you can feel while playing a game," commented senior co-captain Ricky Cassidy. Under the guidance of new coach and former Liberty volleyball star Coach Neiad Amary, the players managed to ride the wave of their success. A winning record guaranteed the boys a spot in districts and, throughout the season, led sophomore Ali Nabavian to break the school record for most kills and junior Justin Hoffert the record for most sets. Ali later said, "The Emmaus game was the turning point of the season; we all came together and worked as a unit." Whatever clicked on the court, it catapulted the group to remarkable heights, which they were originally not so sure they could reach.

Ali plans to continue playing volleyball for the remainder of high school and hopefully in college.

SILENT SURPRISES

The boys volleyball team impressed fans and opponents alike.

Despite a lack of confidence and a doubtful outlook during the off-season, the boys volleyball team proved to be one of the year's best silent surprises. After losing six out of eight varsity players and five of six starters from last year's team, expectations were not great. Five of six varsity players for the 2005 season were either on last year's junior varsity team, which had a record of 0-18, or had not played at all. However, beginning the season with three victories began a streak of impressive performances in what was thought to be an uncertain rebuilding season. "Being successful is one of the best emotions you can feel while playing a game," commented senior co-captain Ricky Cassidy. Under the guidance of new coach and former Liberty volleyball star Coach Neiad Amary, the players managed to ride the wave of their success. A winning record guaranteed the boys a spot in districts and, throughout the season, led sophomore Ali Nabavian to break the school record for most kills and junior Justin Hoffert the record for most sets. Ali later said, "The Emmaus game was the turning point of the season; we all came together and worked as a unit." Whatever clicked on the court, it catapulted the group to remarkable heights, which they were originally not so sure they could reach.

Sophomore Ali Nabavian had an outstanding season this year. His greatest accomplishment was having 22 kills against Emmaus. He said, "Our game against the Green Hornets was great. It was the turning point of the season. We all realized the aspects of being a team. It was enjoyable because we were all like one big family." Ali plans to continue playing volleyball for the remainder of high school and hopefully in college.

RED RUBBER

The blood, sweat, and tears are what takes this team to the top.

A track practice of 166 athletes may seem like a hectic place to be. But in reality, track is one of the most systematic organizations in the school, and each athlete is equally as important as the next. The 400 meters of red rubber track may not seem like much, but to many of the members of this team, it's everything. The track team has practices every day and even holds practices on Saturdays because "the difference between ordinary and extraordinary is the little extra," Coach Bill Ruth explained. The athletes prepare for their intensely exhausting season well before their first meet. The team conditions together in the tiny wrestling room and is put through 20 minutes of a core workout every day. "In that little blue room, all we do is scream and sweat, but after it's done, it's all worth it," junior Jazmyn McDonald explained. But for this dedicated team, toned and fit bodies are of the utmost importance because keeping physically fit ensures that the athletes do their best. The sweat from running stairs, running 8 miles per practice, pulling tires, and even throwing 20 pound balls, all help to make this team one of the top teams in the league.

"One of my biggest goals is to set a school record," commented Trevor.

She still has problems with her knee, and her back occasionally acts up. But with 4 shut outs and 180 saves this season, you'd never be able to tell she was injured. She'll be playing next year and hopes to play at Villanova University.

The girls soccer team worked hard and had a successful season full of memories.

There's no feeling like dribbling up the field and kicking the ball into the net. Although the girls of the soccer team didn't have a winning season, they did experience this victorious feeling quite often. Crashing the net, or kicking the ball into the net, is the best feeling for these girls. During their many intense games, the girls used their skills and energy to steal the ball from the other team and dribble it all the way up field, concentrating on the center of the ball and kicking it into the net. The girl's overall season was 7-12. "It was our first year with Coach Yelovich, so it was an all new coaching style, but we had a close season, and I have high hopes for next year," said sophomore Caity Garvey. The final scores of games never impacted the fun the girls had during the season. Freshman Alex Schlener remarked, "It was my first year, and I wanted to win for the seniors who are leaving, but we had a great time at practices and games." Soccer takes skill, and building that skill takes time and effort, but it pays off in the long run.

The face is the first thing you really notice about a person. Going to a school of over 2800 students, there are so many faces in the halls of Liberty that I don't associate with a name, because I don't know them yet. I love that. Each of those unknown faces holds a sort of potential for me. They could be a future lab partner or a PE leader. A new best friend, boyfriend, or even enemy. When classes change, it's almost a guarantee that you'll see a new face you've never come across before- even in your senior year. But did you ever notice that the more you get to know someone, the less you remember their face? Instead, their personality and quirks are the first thing you associate with that name. It's like the face is only provided so that you can remember which person you're talking to. As you turn the pages in this book, though many photos will bring back memories of good times, there are bound to be people you've never seen before. But just knowing that the figures in each photo mean something more to so many of the other faces in this book should give you the feeling of connectedness that turns an unknown smile into a familiar one.

FROM Mr. BURKHARDT

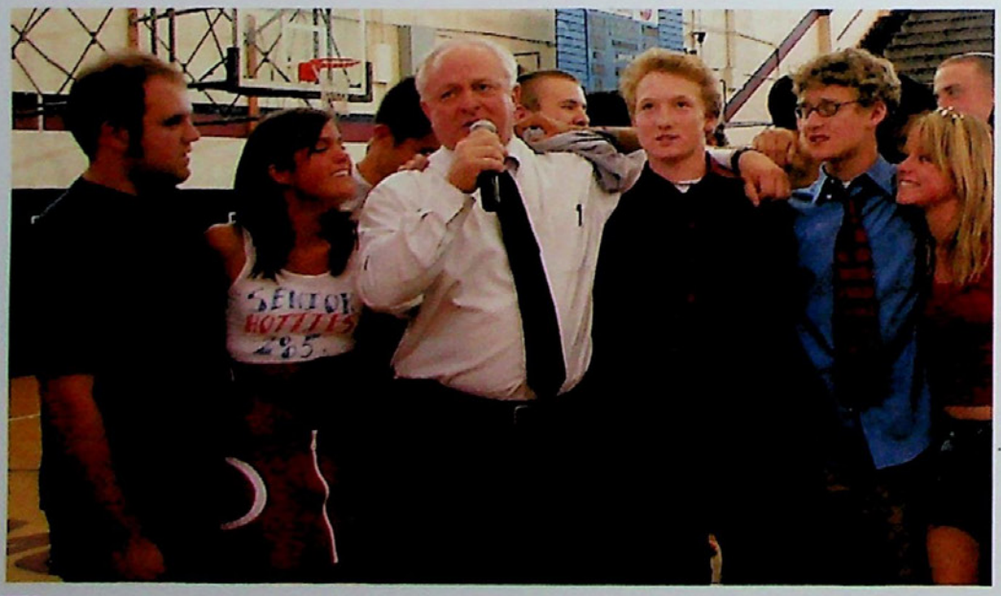
To The Class of 2005

My connection to the Class of 2005 is heightened by a shared sense of change. It has not only been my privilege to be your Principal for your years here at Liberty High School, but I also share your feelings of change because this yearbook is my final yearbook as Principal.

With every moment of your accomplishments this year came my heightened sense of pride in who and what you have achieved. I thank you for those memories. I have watched with anticipation your successes this year. I am proud of the academic achievements of all of you, and I am sincerely gratified by the Merit Scholars that have come from our school. Our clubs and organizations have been enriched by the contributions of your class and our athletes have shown both courage and skill on and off of the playing fields.

I leave you with this school year knowing that each of you has gained the necessary education acquired, respect, and compassion to take you into the future. Liberty has always had a long standing tradition of commitment to our country through students who have chosen to serve in some capacity in the military, and your class is no exception. I am confident that those of you who have chosen to take your skills to the workplace next year will continue to make me proud that you are a graduate of our high school. It is the great certainty that those of you who will pursue college education's will be a continued source of academic pride of Liberty.

The Class of 2005 fills me with hope. When you look back at your final days at Liberty High School as they are depicted in this yearbook, please know that I too will be looking into these pages with the same sense of connected hope and pride. I cannot think of a better class to celebrate my career with than Liberty High School's Class of 2005. My very best to all of you.



Sincerely,

William J. Burkhardt,
Principal

FROM Mr. ZULLI

To The Class of 2005

I want to thank you for allowing me to be your vice principal and for having the privilege of getting to know you.

By the time you read this, your time at Liberty will be a memory. The proms, pep rallies, concerts, plays, and games will have gone. As I look back on the four years, it has been a time of extraordinary successes and maturation. We have shed a few tears and shared many laughs along the way. We have both had a chance to teach each other many of life's important lessons. Keep these lessons in your heart, they will help you raise your families and make your contributions to the world powerful.

Your teachers, counselors and I have taken our mission seriously. Our mission has been to provide you with the skills necessary to achieve your ambitions, to create your own future, and to follow your own path to success. You have crossed the threshold of adulthood and your future is now in your hands. Your word is your bond. As your world presents you opportunities and challenges, I am confident that you will choose wisely.

Whatever you do, do it at your best. Remember: "take care of business." I know our paths will cross again. You truly have left a lasting impression on me and your alma mater—Liberty High.

Sincerely,

Daniel Zulli,

Who doesn't love accessories? Only one thing stands between most girls and their favorite accessory, and that is the price. This is what inspired senior Khaley Sestak to start her own business selling handmade purses, belts, and watches. "I was sick of paying outrageous prices, so I thought it would be fun to make my own," she stated. It didn't take her long to realize that many girls felt the same. "I started making some for myself and when I saw how much everyone liked them, I continued to design more." Khaley sells her products at places such as Rice's Flea Market, Kriskindlemart, and other local craft fairs where she has sold well over 1,000 products. "I'm not looking for a career in design, but I have a lot of fun doing this!" she exclaimed.

An intricate village consisting of four individually designed houses is nestled somewhere in the Pocono Mountains, high in the trees. Only its creators know the winding way to their self-proclaimed Black Rock. Seniors Mike Eckert, Andy Kester, and Issac Southard, along with 2004 graduate Andrew Price, stumbled upon a clearing in the woods while hiking in 2003. "We decided it would be a great location to build something," explained Issac. What started as a modest campsite made of recycled wood soon became a wilderness retreat. Each built his own thirty square foot treehouse. "We did it with a lot of muscle and blood. Each of our personalities came through in our work," Mike commented.

Leaving Your Mark

[alison williams]

carla dintinger

As a determined 15 year-old, Carla Dintinger walked into the Bethlehem Economic Development Department with an innovative proposal and a request to speak with the mayor. No one could have imagined that her unfunded plan to develop a teen-centered cafe would become a reality just two years later. Carla continued to work on her business plan at the end of her junior year when she received a call from two adults, Jeanne and Mark Southard, who shared a similar vision. "We met weekly and tried to sort of mesh our ideas together," Carla explained. After hard work and preparation, the Globe Cafe opened in August 2004. The Globe Cafe is a unique establishment that not only showcases local bands, but also serves as a help center for teens and a great hang out spot. The cafe is run on a volunteer basis in order to advocate healthy lifestyles for teens. "We care about making sure that local youth have a place to feel at home and feel welcome," she assured.

domenic salerni

[alexis venanzi]

All of us remember certain things of childhood; from playing little league tee-ball to a trip to Disney World. However, very few of us can say something we started at age three is the most important part of our lives at age 17. "I honestly can't remember much before I started playing the violin," comments senior Domenic Salerni who was recently accepted to the Julliard School, one of the highest respected music and performance schools in the world. Domenic has been playing the violin for 14 years and has traveled not only around the country but also the world, playing over 20 concerts in Vicenza, Italy during his seventh grade year. This year, he has traveled back and forth for practices and performances in New York City for the Pre-College Division of the Julliard School. Domenic believes that "music is the noblest profession" and decided in his senior year to pursue his passion as a career.

jason hahn

In a school of thousands, lasting legacies can be difficult to create. Senior Jason Hahn managed to make himself a legend with his creation of the mid-day barbecue, held in the Grenadier Boulevard parking lot. "We always have a great time grilling before the football games on Grenny. Just because football ended, why should the tailgating?" commented Jason. He grilled over 80 hamburgers for almost 60 students, mostly seniors, during all lunches on a freezing cold afternoon in February. If you missed the first, Jason advises students not to panic. Hahn eloquently stated, "I hope to pass this on, so that it will become a tradition for the senior classes to come."

dena shleifer

Very few adolescents can say they have played a sport in a global arena. However, senior Dena Shleifer is an exception to the rule. Dena participated in the 17th World Maccabiah Games, which is held in Israel every four years. Of the 55 girls that tried out from the States, only 20 made the team. Dena was the only one accepted to the team from Pennsylvania. The games in Israel host 7000 athletes, the 3rd largest sporting event held in the world. Several countries are represented, from South America to Europe. "I was very proud to represent the United States," Dena grinned. "It's exciting because you're meeting people around the world who are exactly like you—Jewish athletes."

PAINTING UP A STORM
Members of the senior class try their best to stay warm while painting the endzone on Red and Blue Day. "It was really tough to get the letters to stay down with all the wind, but in the end the endzone looked amazing," senior Kara Kahler boasted.

BENNY PRIDE
The student cheering section never fails to come up with new ways to show their spirit. Senior Benny Heist decided to make a poster displaying his own name so the rest of the crowd wouldn't miss him. "It was fun just hanging out with the cheering section and cheering on the team," he stated. Photo [andrew byrne]

Leaving Your Mark . . .

craig wasem

[karen gentis]

Running toward the flames to save lives, senior Craig Wasem began volunteering as a firefighter in August of 2003, after fellow senior Ryan Kery suggested that he do so. Craig enrolled in his first class, "The Essentials of Fire Fighting," a 96-hour course credited through Northampton County. "Waking up early is the worst part because unfortunately fire doesn't take a break, but I love fire fighting because it's always such an adrenaline rush," explained Craig. On March 2005 at 5:20 AM, he received his most thrilling call. "On the way to a fire on Browning Lane, my fellow firefighters and I could smell the fire in the air. When we arrived at the house, our first objective was to make sure the neighboring house did not catch flame," Craig said. Putting his life on the line to save others, Wasem truly defines going above and beyond what is expected.

jarred antonacci

During his senior year, Jarred Antonacci was selected to be the lead trombone in the All-Eastern Honor Jazz Band. Jarred was chosen to be one of eighteen jazz musicians from the Eastern United States, Canada, and Western Europe to perform for two days at the Baltimore Convention Center. Jarred expressed that he "was very honored to be chosen to be a part of this ensemble" because of the prestige of being recognized by the National Association of Music Education. "I've been playing the trombone for the past nine years and spend at least eight hours a day practicing and performing," Jarred said, concluding, "I hope to get a job playing with one of the world's famous symphony orchestras."

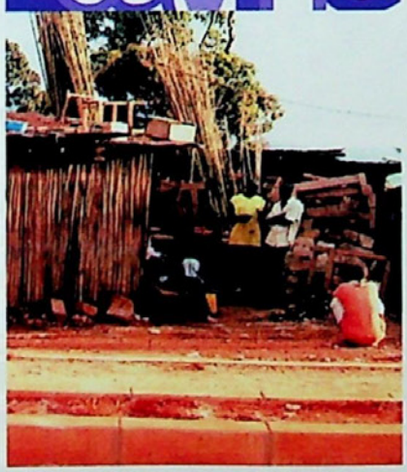
Leaving Your Mark



joel armelin

[laura ricles]

Exotic jungles and romanticized deserts, not to mention talking animals, are what our Lion King-influenced minds associate with Africa. However, Joel Armelin experienced another side of the continent: one filled with poverty and starvation. He took a two-week trip to Uganda with an organization called WATOTO to build homes for families. "I went to Africa through my church. We built houses for kids whose parents had died of AIDS," Joel explained. The motivated senior woke up at 7 AM to work eight hours each day constructing houses. He was only in Africa for two weeks, but walked away with experiences that will stay with him for a lifetime. Joel recalled, "I wanted to travel and also be able to help others. From this trip, I got to accomplish both."

mark blasini

[alexis venanzi]

Senior Mark Blasini has a natural talent when it comes to the piano, and has reached the skill level of highly trained pianists in only three years, as opposed to the usual eight. It was at the 2003 Orchestra Pops Concert that Mark was inspired to compose his own work. "I heard a string and piano quartet piece that Domenic Salerni's father composed, which I instantly respected. I've wanted to write music ever since," Mark commented. After playing the piano for only a couple of months, Mark wrote his first piece. Even when he isn't sitting in front of the keys, he always has them on his mind. "Sometimes I wake up in the middle of the night with an idea, and I have to write it down immediately. In only 3 years, the piano has definitely become a big part of my life" Mark proudly stated.

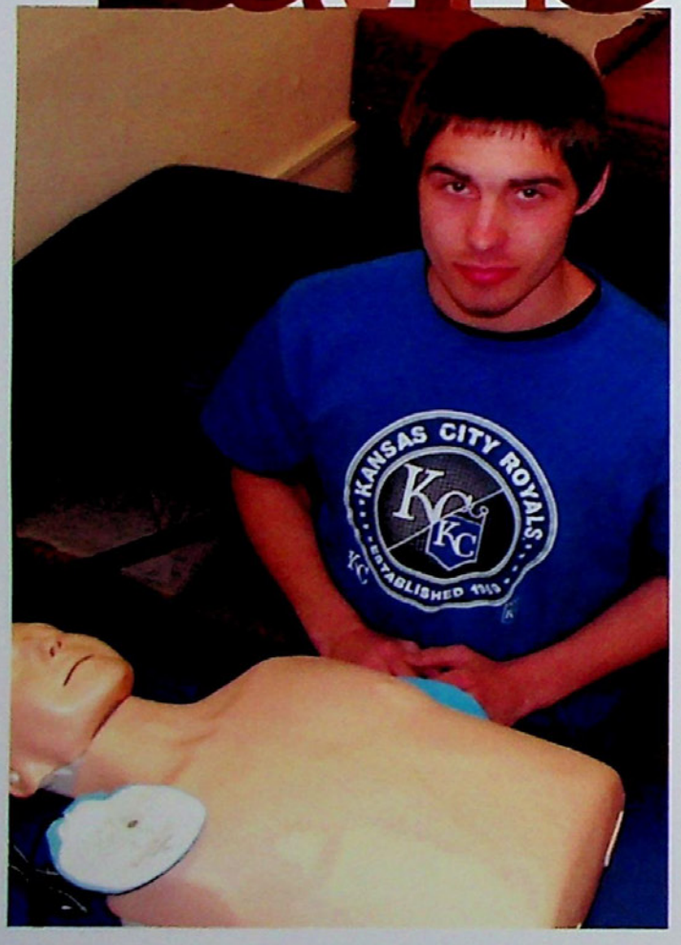
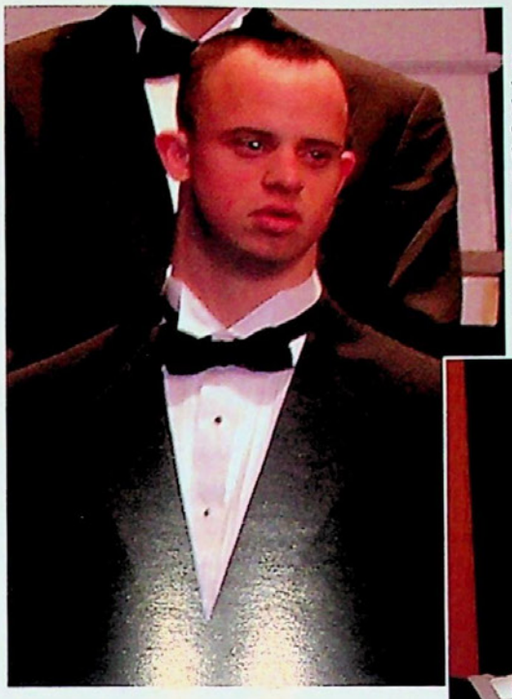
Leaving Your Mark



michael kiss

[laura ricles]

Besides school, work, and all the typical stresses in a teenager's life, junior Michael Kiss has an added strain: saving people's lives. Michael is a junior EMT as well as a junior firefighter for Bethlehem. "There's a lot involved with being a firefighter and EMT. You have to be careful because it can get dangerous, but when the chief gives me the word, I go!" exclaimed Michael. Michael became an EMT three months ago after a rigorous five month training course, and wanted to do firefighting for community service. He decided to become a junior EMT because he wanted to be able to help his mom and others with their health problems. "I am very confident that my future career will be as an EMT. It makes me feel better knowing that I am helping people," commented Michael. Michael has already saved five people's lives, and modestly remarked, "I was once called to care for a heart attack victim. I was the only one to get called and the only one that went." However, there's no shame in saying that when Michael's on call, your life is definitely in good hands.



SEASONED PRO

Despite learning to play the guitar only one year ago, junior James Buniak volunteered to play for the Foreign Language Day festival. "I really love just going crazy at performances," James explained. This summer, he'll be performing in Georgia with his brother-in-law's band in front of thousands of people. Photo [andrew byrne]

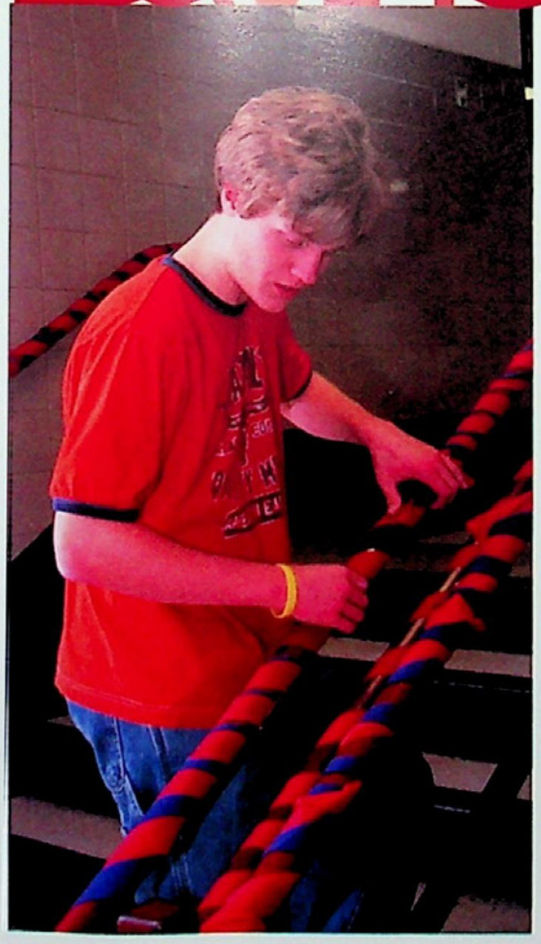
kyle oberly



[alix mcgeehan]

While at the Lehigh Valley Velodrome watching a race at the age of 8, junior Kyle Oberly had no idea that one day, it would be him out there racing on the track. But today that is just what he does; racing has become his passion. Kyle started about two years ago in a beginner's program and has now progressed into training with a coach three times per week. The rest of the week, this junior athlete practices at home. He races with the team East Coast Velo (also referred to as ECV) in category #4 races; categories #1 and #2 are considered pro. In a season lasting from July until October, Kyle expects to progress halfway through category #3 at the end of the season. To move up in categories, a racer earns points by placing in races. Each place is worth a certain number of points and once a certain number of points are earned, the racer moves up in category. "Its a really cool environment," Kyle explained about his sport, "You're racing against your buddies."

ben ou-yang

As one of the amazing violinists in the orchestra, junior Ben Ou-Yang is best known for his performance at last year's Liberty vs Freedom football game; he was raised about 4 stories high behind the bleachers on a hydraulic lift to play for the packed crowd in the stadium. "It was pretty uncomfortable," Ben described, "They had me in a full body harness underneath my uniform." Back on the ground, this string musician is also a part of the Philadelphia Youth Orchestra as of September 2004. "My private teacher recommended me to audition," he explained, "The director is really good. He makes everyone play to their potential." Ben has been taught by 3 different private teachers for the past 11 years, ever since his parents took him to a concert and decided that he should learn to play. At the moment, Ben's favorite piece to play is "Mendelssohn" because "it has three contrasting movements, each unique in their own way. And it's fun to play". With one more year left in high school, one is left to wonder what height-defying stunt Ben will try next.

"Our class involves all groups of students – we have an overwhelming turnout at all committee meetings!"

[ms. richards]

It's remarkable how far a little experience can go. Since their freshman year, the class of 2006 has gone from broke to breaking new ground in leadership. When asked about the group's progress, Gordon Mack, who has been Vice-President for the past three years, quipped, "For starters, we're not losing money anymore." In fact, the juniors came up with an innovative way to bring in class dues that proved tremendously fruitful. "We all got together one night and called the parents of every junior to let them know about dues," secretary Becky Laughery explained. Following the student government's attempt at telemarketing, over 100 students paid their dues, proving that their innovative method was a lucrative one. Advisors Miss Tara Richards and Mr. Adam Reitz vouch for the "teamwork and great work ethic" that the officers have developed, as well as "a true sense of appreciation for their soon-to-be alma mater."

Juniors Leaving Your Mark . . . .

mark mckinnon, kyle labarge, evan bauer, & mike mcclarin

[alix mcgeehan]

On the night of the Liberty v.s. Freedom basketball game, juniors Mark McKinnon, Evan Bauer, Mike McClarin, and sophomore Kyle LaBarge never expected to save a man's life-but that's just what they did. After the game in the Memorial Gym, the four boys decided to drive around the backroads of Hanover on a trip to Wawa. "We pulled up behind a Jeep at a stop sign, and we noticed the driverside door was open, and that a man was hanging out," explained Mark. At first panicking, the boys drove away only to return a few minutes later. "We thought the guy might be dead, that someone killed him" Mike said. After returning, Mike beeped his car horn at the stationary car, only to have the man wake up, close his door, then pass out again. "Then we called the cops, and an ambulance," Mark continued, "It turned out that the guy was a diabetic and needed his insulin. Without it, he went into shock, He almost died." Luckily the boys were around to prevent any fatalities that night.

chris matthews

[alix mcgeehan]

Like many teenagers, sophomore Chris Matthews spends a lot of his weekends outdoors. But unlike his peers, the time Chris spends out experiencing nature is largely due to his commitment as a Life Scout in local Troop 362. Because Chris is one of the eldest kids in the troop, he has been chosen to become a senior patrol leader. His responsibilities include running the troop, coordinating with the adults, and delegating other duties to the rest of the kids in the troop. In all his 11 years of scouting, one of Chris's most memorable moments is placing first in a district competition called the Fall Camporee at Camp Minsi. Chris and his patrol of seven other scouts spent the day participating in events such as knot-tying and fire building. The boys were then judged on teamwork, leadership, and scout spirit. In addition to placing first, Chris's patrol also received awards for Most Scout Spirit and World Conservation. "I've learned how to deal with people, as well as leadership and organizational skills," Chris said of his scouting experience. He added, "I've just learned how to be an all-around better person."

mary-kate serratelli

During November and December of 2004, at a house studio in the Coopersburg area, sophomore Mary-Kate Serratelli belted out songs by the likes of Mariah Carey, Whitney Houston, and other divas for a record she had the opportunity to make. "I don't really hand out my Cd," the soft-spoken singer explained modestly, "I just give it out to my family and friends and anyone who asks for it." Despite taking 4 years of voice lessons and coming from a family of entertainers, Mary-Kate does not plan to actively pursue a career in music. She also received what she considers to be her greatest honor this year, when the sophomore was asked to sing the National Anthem at both the state football and wrestling competitions.

"I started swimming at the YMCA when I was five because my parents' signed me up for lessons," recounted sophomore swimmer Danielle Scott, who has broken nine school records just this year. In late March 2005, Danielle had the chance to race in Orlando, FL for a week at the Junior Nationals swimming competition against some of the best high school swimmers in the country. In order to qualify for the competition, she had to make a certain time in each event. Danielle placed in the top 50 for five events–the 200 individual medley, 100 backstroke, 200 backstroke, 400 medley relay, and the 200 medley relay. At the moment, her best time is 2:06.42 seconds for the 200 IM. Danielle was also named Swimmer of the Year for the Express Times area newspaper. "I guess after I got started, I just never stopped," she said with a laugh.

Through the experience, Ethan has demonstrated a strong commitment to the community and has come to know the gratification of an on-going service project.

"We are a very diverse class but we all come together like a family."

The comfort level has set in. Sophomore year in a big high school is a year of accepting, understanding, and establishing yourself. It is a year of finding comfort in your surroundings and establishing your role in the community. The Class of 2007 has experienced this, working together well and finding Liberty to be a welcoming place, says class advisor Kristin Spang. Spang believes that her group of sophomores is in store for "great things and high expectations." They are a group of bright minds, outstanding athletes, and unique individuals that all get along amidst their different talents and interests. Andrew Barr, first in the class and its Vice President, eloquently stated, "I think our class has a real sense of unity...there's not a real sense of division because everyone kind of blends together." Spang spoke about the dedication the group put into the Spirit Week festivities, as well as the Tsunami Relief Fundraiser, which the officers organized themselves. The sophomore class is done getting their feet wet and is starting to lead their tight-knit community toward a successful and memorable high school career.

jessica turzanski

Just 4 months ago in December of 2004, freshman Jessica Turzanski was invited for a chance at something many girls dream of — the chance to be a model. "I wasn't expecting it," she protested. Jessica has had head shots taken for advertisements for her dance school in Bethlehem, Miss Linda's. She has been dancing hip hop there since the age of three, now in her 12th year. "It's really fun to get all dressed up and have makeup on, then to see the pictures when they are done," Jessica said. Ultimately, her dream is to become a Victoria's Secret model like Tyra Banks, but for now she is satisfied with the dance school. She had no reservations about the gig, but her mom is still a little wary. "My mom gets freaked out sometimes when she sees the pictures, because I look so much older," Jessica explained. Modelling has even now opened doors for her. The slim dancer has met her best friend through the experience, despite the fact her friend goes to Easton Catholic. Used for fliers and on bulletin boards for Miss Linda's, the shock of seeing her face on these ads still comes every time. "It's neat to see me somewhere. It's a feeling I can't even explain."

"They were quiet. Actually, intimidated is probably a better word!"

[ms. michael]

[allyssa sirb]

Who can blame them for being intimidated? Entering a new school with over 2,700 students is not an easy thing to do. With the fears of getting lost, being picked on by the seniors, and getting acclamated in a whole new atmosphere, it's common for freshmen to feel overwhelmed their first week at Liberty. Freshmen advisors Ms. Michael and Mrs. Boozer agreed that this year was spent allowing the students to get to know one another and become familiar with life at Liberty. "The first year is always spent helping the kids get to know the ropes," Ms. Michael stated. Although it was their first year at Liberty, the freshmen class didn't hesitate to become active throughout the school. From going to Fuddrucker's after Spirit Week decorating to organizing a fundraiser where students could pay to wear NFL hats, the freshmen had no trouble making their presence known while making memories at the same time.

christina watson

[alix mcgeehan]

Since the day we have stepped foot into Liberty, the 60 hour community service requirement has been drilled into heads; yet there are still some seniors who reach May without completing a single hour. But that will never be a problem for freshman Christina Watson. At 82.5 hours, she has gained the honor of having the most hours of the freshmen class. Christina volunteers at St. Lukes Hospital in the gift shop and one-day surgery throughout the summer and the school year. This ambitious freshman is planning to pursue a career as a pediatric nurse, and is reaching for at least 200 hours in order to qualify for a nursing scholarship in a few years. "It really makes me feel good, since I'm helping people," Christina explained. This is one guaranteed silver tassel at graduation in 2008.

rocky sawyer

[alix mcgeehan]

At only 15 years old, freshman Rocky Sawyer has already performed as Oliver in Oliver at DeSales University, and has performed the national anthem on ESPN and at a Philadelphia Phillies baseball game; a pretty impressive list at any age. Recently, Rocky had the incredible honor of being the only Liberty student to be chosen for District Chorus. "It was a great experience being directed by someone who has had earned fame in a career through singing," he explained. The best part of performing, in Rocky's eyes, is the reaction from the audience, which can sometimes be surprising. "Once I forgot the words in the middle of a song, and I had to just stop," he said about his most embarrassing show. "I just apologized and started over. They still enjoyed my performance!"

[alix mcgeehan]

Many girls start gymnastics as little girls, but how many actually stick with it through the years? Freshman Mary Lawrence is one of the few. Starting when she was only 2 years old at her dad's encouragement, she is now a promising gymnast who competes in a number of prominent competitions each year–and she wins. Mary has a current tally of 3 regional awards, 7 state championships, and 2 national awards. But the awards are not her sole accomplishment. Just the satisfaction of seeing her hard work pay off is enough for the young athlete. "By the time I started to compete regularly, I knew this was something I loved," she explained. Of all her experiences as a gymnast, Mary's favorite was being a part of a program called T.O.P.S. in Texas. There, she trained with national stars who have taught medalist Olympians. "It was just great to be a part of that," she said.

alex russo

[alix mcgeehan]

Despite starting to rock climb only two years ago, freshman Alex Russo had already earned a spot at the USA Climbing Nationals. In order to achieve this feat, Alex had to first qualify for three events in a series of local events. Next came regionals, in which the three highest ranking individuals are chosen to move on to nationals. Alex's skill placed him at first in the regional competition. Unfortunately, a bad day ensued at nationals and he came in 12th place. Yet Alex still plans to pursue another national competition next year through the American Boulder Series. Rock climbing isn't all about competing though; in fact, Alex claimed his greatest achievement has been discovering the right mindset to climb. "You have to climb for the joy of it and not for the competitive aspect," he explained. It also helps if you aren't scared of heights!

OUT WITH CLASS

The school community celebrates the end to an extraordinary carreer of our beloved principal.

[kali koutsoumbis]

Watching from the windows in Mr. Creyer's room, I could see people gathering in the front of the Commons building. Flags and red and blue balloons were dancing in the air. The Grenadier Band was parading down Linden Street, which was blocked off by the police department. Suddenly, there was Mr. Burkhardt in an old Ford convertible waving with overwhelming excitement at the crowd of people applauding him. It then hit me that our beloved principal of 15 years was retiring. It seemed only fitting to send Mr. Burkhardt out with class, as his family, friends, fellow faculty members, and students celebrated him. After a morning ceremony celebrating his service to our school and a catered breakfast and luncheon, the students organized an incentive pep rally in the memorial gym. Mr. Burkhardt chanted the L-I-B-E-R-T-Y cheer, which he spelled right, with the students for the last time. Bombarded with a group hug, a tearful Mr. Burkhardt sang the Alma Mater, something he wanted every student to know. With the year coming to an end, it was evident that Mr. Burkhardt was a principal who celebrated our school's diversity and worked so hard to disprove the "Big Bad" school reputation. A career of over 35 years of service within the school district could only end this way. A thankful community wished Mr. Burkhardt a happy retirement and welcomes him back with open arms to the school he loves. William J. Burkhardt Red and Blue Day will be May 19 every year hereafter a fitting tribute to such a dedicated principal.

Really, has Freedom ever seen the bell?

With a tradition started by our very own Mr. Burkhardt fifteen years ago, Liberty athletes again pounded Freedom High School in its attempt to win the bell. The bell goes to whichever school has the greater number of wins from anytime Liberty and Freedom play, in every sport. During the incentive pep rally, the senior athletes were honored by bringing in the bell. With a record of 23 wins to only 8 losses, it is clear which school has superior athletes—for fifteen years in a row.

How many years can a mountain exist
Before it's washed to the sea?
Yes, 'n' how many years can some people exist
Before they're allowed to be free?
Yes, 'n' how many times can a man turn his head,

The answer my friend, is blowin' in the wind,
The answer is blowin' in the wind.

Kali ,

I don't even know where to begin, we have been through everything together. From our thunder cats and lunch bunch days to spirit weeks, senior breakfast, and weird cocoa puffs and doritos mornings, I couldn't have asked for a better best friend. I am going to miss you so much next year. We have literally grown up together and with each year that we got older we got closer. Good luck with everything you do in your future. You are more than capable to accomplish anything you set your mind to. Lehigh is lucky to have you. Thanks for always being there . . . love ya lots! —Karen

Karen,

How fast time has passed since we would run out of lunch bunch screaming Thundercats. Throughout the years, we've shared so much together; laughter, tears, hopes, secrets. You were always there to listen and support me. Thank you for all the memories and good luck at Penn State. Although miles may separate us next year, you are and always will be my best friend.
Love always — Kali

All I need to know about life I learned from my girlfriends,
Good times are even better when they're shared,
A long talk can cure almost anything,
Everyone needs someone to share their secrets with,
Listening is just as important as talking,
Laughter makes the world a happier place,
Sometimes you just need a shoulder to cry on,
You're never to old for slumber parties,
Girls just wanna have fun,
Calories don't count when you're having lunch with your girlfriends,
Gems may be precious, but friendships are priceless.

COLOPHON

The 2005 Cauldron, Volume 80, was printed in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania by the herff jones yearbook company. Under the guidance of company representative, nancy tunis, and adviser lisa gilliard, the 2005 Cauldron staff was able to produce an entirely fresh, modernized book and, for the second year in a row, in full color.

Over 900 copies of the Cauldron were sold this year. All seniors received their copy free of charge with the payment of their class dues. Underclassmen were charged a base payment of $66, which was raised to $70 at the beginning of March 2005. Name plates were available for an additional charge of $5 - $10, depending on the amount of text engraved and the presence of a graphic. World yearbook inserts were printed by the herff jones yearbook company and were available for an additional charge of $5, which offered 16 full color pages of world events from this past year.

All senior and underclassmen portraits were taken by christmas city studio of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. christmas city studio photographers also supplied group pictures of Liberty's athletic teams. They were also responsible for processing the majority of Cauldron film as well as ritz camera in Westgate Shopping Center. Candid photographs for all sections of the book were supplied by the Cauldron photography staff and photographers from christmas city studio. Faculty group pictures were taken by lisa gilliard and andrew byrne, photography editor. Special thank you to andrew byrne for using so much of his own time to reorganize the photo system and take photos of everything. Photoshop effects on pictures used in the book was under the direction of alix mcgeehan, editor in chief.

The 2005 Cauldron was created using PageMaker 6.5 as well as Photoshop 5.5 and 6.0 on various versions of Macintosh OS 9.1/10 and two Macintosh iBooks. Arial and Arial Black were the two fonts used throughout the book. All layout templates, dividers, headlines, and folios were designed by alix mcgeehan, allyssa sirb, people editor, and laura ricles, creative editor. Mini stories were cretaed by the staff members under the direction of laura ricles and allyssa sirb. The opening copy was written by alex demshock, copy editor, and the divider copy written by alix mcgeehan and alex demshock.

This year's book, consisting of 348 pages, was printed on Bordeaux 100# paper. The cover of the book has a white litho as a base material and gloss lamination applied, and was designed by alix mcgeehan. The endsheets of the book were designed by alix mcgeehan and were a vc01 white, with the photos in 4-color. They also included a uv coating for the front endsheet, as were the first 9 opening pages. Due to the overwhelming positive response of full color 2004 edition, The Cauldron was excited to continute in full color once again.

Cauldron thanks all of its business and personal sponsors as well as the Liberty High School parents and students who purchased ads in the friends and family section of the book. Ad prices ranged from $20.00 to $225.00, based on the size page reserved. Thank you to mike merkler and kathleen burkit for organizing and managing all of the financial aspects of the book. Cauldron reserves the right to edit all incoming material from the Liberty High School community for content, grammar, and clarity.

The Cauldron is a member of both the Columbia Scolastic Press Association and the National Scholastic Press Association. The 2004 edition earned a gold-level rating from the CSPA and was a Pacemaker finalist from the NSPA. The book also won first place in the Desktop Media division of the 2005 Pennsylvania State Computer Fair.

A special thanks goes to nancy tunis for all of her kindness and support, and last minute help. Without her encouragement, the book would not have turned out as well as it did. Also, thank you to alix mcgeehan, allyssa sirb, laura ricles, andrew byrne, alex demshock, alison williams, and lisa gilliard for all the countless hours they put in from planning and designing the book to proofing and editing each page. It certainly has not gone unnoticed and without each of them, this book would still be unfinished.

ANDREW BYRNE!!!! after school paparazzi. mandatory work day sign in: alix, allyssa, and laura. everyone loves an irish girl... or at least everyone loves pappalardo. laura's cheerios. allyssa's poptarts. laura in the ring! computer chain reaction of death. nose typing. the worst picture of all time. the freedom doll. ipod girl. matt's photo names. fat girls anonymous. post prom! first place at states; WE'RE GOING TO NATIONALS!!!! Hey, there's a school here called 'homeschool'. cauldron 2005-we hump computers. okay BYE.

I honestly can't believe it's over. Yearbook has been such a huge part of my life the past three years, especially this year, that I don't remember my life BC-Before Cauldron. I'm truly leaving my high school years behind in 307- the white board, the shitty computers, the broken chairs...and some of the best people I've ever met, especially Allyssa, Laura, Alison, Byrne, and [illegible] shock; I can't imagine going to school next [illegible] without you five. Everytime I look at layouts I'm reminded of every person who put something into it-the photos, the copy, the planning....and I'm so proud of what we've done despite the thousands of hours it took us. As I sitting here on my last day of high school watching the sun set behind the stadium I know this book is something I'll always cherish, because we put so much into it. It is a piece of each of us. I love you all.

The yearbook is done- YAY! This year I spent more time in room 307 than I spent at home and although it was frustrating at times, it was all worth it! To all the editors, especially Alix and Andrew, thanks for putting up with my endless goofiness and stupid comments. I also have to thank Ben and Andrew for getting me buttered rolls from Wawa. I'm so proud of the yearbook we put together and I'm so glad I got to work on it with such awesome people! Lastly I need to thank Mrs. Gilliard- there's no way we could ever have done this without you, we all appreciate your dedication and hard work. I hope everyone loves this yearbook as much as I do!!! :) :) :)

I never thought the day would come when this book would be completed, but we finally finished it! All the work and countless hours in room 307 was definitely worth it! I'll never forget all the funny, and sometimes stressful, moments that we had together. I'll miss everyone so much, especially Mrs. Gilliard and the rest of the editors. Everyone put so much hard work and dedication into this book, and I want to thank everyone. Without you, we would have never been able to do this book. Also, Alix, Allyssa, Alex, Alison, and Andrew, you all have made yearbooks your life and I am so proud of the book that we have created. Good luck to Cauldron '06 and I'll miss you all next year!

Wow, what a year. Time's flown by in 307, probably because we just didn't have enough of it. Still, we made the most of what we had-and by made the most I mean we sat around and made FUN of people a lot. It was all in good spirits, though, and it brought us all closer together. I would've liked to have a few copywriters on staff, (UNDERCLASSMEN! IF YOU'RE READING THIS, PLEASE WRITE COPY FOR CAULDRON 06!) but we got by. We all resisted our burning desire to throw the cursed Macs, the crappy keyboards, and iPod girl out the window. And somehow, despite all the drama, we were able to have a lot of good times in this room. From Pappalardo donning Alix's "Everyone loves an Irish girl" shirt to celebrating the computer fair victory, we've spent much of the year laughing hysterically. I just want to express my gratitude to everyone who put their all into this crazy book – especially Mrs. Gilliard and Alix. Thanks for the ride.

Ahhh...I'm leaving many great memories behind in the yearbook room. Whether it was a dramatic rush to hand in a deadline or one of our dozens of pizza parties, this room was always full of excitement. Although I'm off to college in the fall, I'm sure the excitement will live on next year. I wish the Cauldron staff of 2006 all of the luck in the whole wide world in creating a fantastic book! To this year's editors- Congratulations! We are finished, and the book is surely the masterpiece of the century! I would especially like to thank Alix and Mrs. Gilliard for logging in those extra hours when I didn't make it after school; your dedication to this book has made such a difference. I'll never forget the moments we have had working on this book. I love this entire staff and will miss everyone next year!

Hmmm. What to say? It's tough to describe the year and all that has happened. It went by way too quickly. From the endless days of yearbook class with Allyssa yelling "Andrew Byrne!" to the days when I wouldn't get a chance to sit down because of my running from person to person to help them find and fix photos. Every event that I went to, from sports games to orchestra and club events, affected me in some way, giving me a new view on the people that attend LHS. In hind-sight, I loved every moment of being "The Photographer", even though I wanted to be a regular face in the crowd some of the time. Without the staff and Mrs. Gilliard I don't think I would be the same person I am today. To next year's staff; good luck, and remember to enjoy it. Thanks for a great year. I will miss you all.

Well if you are reading this, we finally accomplished our task of producing the 2005 yearbook. There were times I thought that it would never get done. Yes there were times of fun, times where food was the utmost importance, and certainly times of frustration. However, the dedication that some of you put forth this year was truly amazing. "You made it your own" as Randy Jackson from American Idol would say. You are all truly special people and my hope for each of you is to find those special talents that you have and share them with the world. Don't forget all the life skills that yearbook has taught you and my you never forget your second home – room 307!

Well, it is hard to believe that the Cauldron won't be able to call room 307 home anymore. It's amazing how time passes so fast in 307 and how we all laugh when the computer start shouting random things. Or when we shout at them for crashing for the 100th time. Mrs. Gilliard thank you for putting up with us and for always being there. Good Luck to Cauldron 2006. I give you this advice, remember that your funny faces and moments of pure stupidity will be caught on film and posted on the wall for all to see. Who can forget the Magna Charta! Hope everyone enjoys the book.

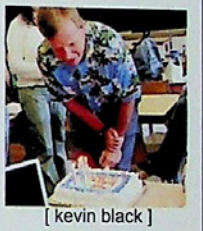
ONe LAST LOOK



[kevin black]

[junior–amanda brodt]

[juniors– jose melendez & richardo camacho]

It's really over. Right now, my clock reads 11:23 pm, June 1, 2005. I've probably seen many of you for one last look tonight, as much as it pains me to say. I love the class of 2005. I came into high school almost determined to hate it; school spirit wasn't my thing. But there is something about this class - it just sucks everyone in. I just couldn't help going to the football games and going crazy in the cheering section. Or hanging out on Grenadier for one of the infamous barbecues. Or crying at the last pep rally. Throughout this year, I've always said, "We're so lucky to be leaving this May." After all, we'd escaped many of the new changes that classes underneath us have to deal with: taking away the "D", a new principal, all the coming renovations, the new SAT. We're the last class that has gone though this high school "the way its always been". Everything will soon be different. But I don't feel so lucky tonight. Even though the freshmen will be in the old Northeast building next year, I'd rather be them, just starting high school, rather that a departing senior. I don't want this to be over. Tonight, for the last time, we were together as the class of 2005. What I wouldn't give for tomorrow to be that sweltering day, four Augusts ago, when it all began.

The sun sets in the deserted courtyard at the end of the school day. The courtyard will be renovated in the next four years into a performing arts entrance to the school. Photo [alix mcgeehan]
