Council considers CRIZ program

By ANDREW FOX
 Special to the Bethlehem Press

At the forefront of last week's City Council meeting was a public hearing on establishing Bethlehem's first Revitalization and Improvement Authority, an organization to be established under the Pa. Municipality Authorities Act. The hearing, with an introduction from Community and Economic Development Director Joseph Kelley, took place as council considered a resolution that would establish the new organization. The resolution "sets forths and approves the proposed Articles of Incorporation of the Authority and authorizes the filings with the Secretary of State of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; authorizes and directs the advertisement of a notice of adoption of the Resolution; and appoints the first members of the Board of the Bethlehem Revitalization and Improvement authority," according to council's Nov. 6 meeting agenda.

CRIZ program

Kelley explained that the establishment of the authority comes in the wake of the city's attempt to apply for the CRIZ program, an incentive under new state legislation passed in July as part of Pennsylvania's 2013-14 budget process. According to a recent press release from law firm Saul Ewing L.L.P., the state legislature passed a motion which allows the establishment of "City Revitalization and Improvement Zones."

Certain tax payments from businesses in the zones would be funneled back into the zones in an effort to spur development

Brown edges Callahan

Seeks to reproduce mayoral successes

Next year Northampton County's executive will be John Brown, part-time mayor of Bangor, who defeated widely-known Bethlehem Mayor John Callahan in a race many considered forgone.

According to unofficial county results, about 39,000 residents participated in this election, and Brown won over Callahan by about 1,300 votes. Overall, Callahan won in Bethlehem city precincts by wide margins, but Brown brought in a handful more votes per precinct in other municipalities.

He is now meeting with county employees and identifying key roles, but he said once in office he will utilize the strategy that was so successful for him as mayor of Bangor.

"We have to be able to operate government in a cost effective way and keep taxes as low as possible without sacrificing core operations," he said. "The only way to do this is to focus on managing and controlling cost and broaden our views to work together on a regional basis. Throughout the county we need to work across municipal boundaries and support regional efforts where it makes sense."

He continued, "During my four years as Bangor's mayor, using these principles, we were able to eliminate a deficit and create a generous surplus that allowed us to reduce taxes in 2013. Bangor has adopted a preliminary budget for 2014 that proposes a tax reduction for the second

Board reviews program changes

 Special to the Bethlehem Press

During the Nov. 4 Bethlehem Area School Board meeting, Dr. Jack Silva, superintendent of curriculum, along with Kim Harper of Freedom HS and Beth Guarriello of Liberty HS, presented a draft of proposed curriculum changes and new course offerings for the 2014-15 school year.

With the new program of study under consideration, new courses offered would fall under one of four pathways designed to help high school students pursue a college major or career. A student interested in a medical career can take science classes that have a medical studies focus after satisfying the state requirements to graduate. The community service requirement can also be satisfied through these special pathways.

Community service for students' pathways provides opportunities to match their interest. A student wishing to become a doctor can volunteer in a hospital and gain hands-on experience as to what their chosen profession is really like. This gives

Mayor announces 2014 budget

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI
 njastrzemi@ttonline.com

Mayor John Callahan will be leaving office soon, but last week he announced his proposed budget for the coming year and has high hopes for the city's continued financial health.

"I am proud to present a budget for 2014 that is balanced, fiscally responsible and meets both the short and long term goals of the city," Callahan said. The $71 million budget includes no tax increases and funds for the hiring of five new police officers.

Callahan said there is $1.7 billion in ongoing economic development in the city today and the tax base has increased 19 percent from a decade ago.

"I am proud to say that I am the last mayor who can say Bethlehem is 'an old steel town.' We are no longer home to the largest single-owner brownfield in the country, but rather the largest shovel-ready site for new jobs and economic growth," he said.

But Callahan said there were many hard decisions to make in this budget, and despite a decrease in water and sewer personnel, an increase of those services of 15 percent is necessary. This will amount to about an additional $32 to sewer bills for the average resident.

Callahan said this is primarily due to the debt services on the Penn Forest Dam reconstruction in 1999, and the construction of a water filtration plant in 1994 continuing to be a burden.

He also addressed the constant issue of pension costs for city employees.

"Nationally we hear about the fiscal cliff and entitlements," he said. "At the state and local level, we understand how pension costs severely limit our ability to balance budgets, forcing many municipalities to make some very difficult and unpopular decisions.

"To give you some perspective on the impact of pensions in the city, in 2003 our pension payment was $1.3 million; about three percent of the budget. Today our payment is $11 million, almost 16 percent of the budget. Continuing at that pace is not sustainable. We had to make a change. The changes that we have already made to the pensions system alone will save the city approximately $40 million over the next 20 years."

He said this budget introduces an employee payment plan for medical expenses, the first time they will be expected to contribute a percentage for health care.

Callahan said running a city is like running a business, and the recent influx of tourists, shoppers and developers is as important as simple monetary gain.

"In one corner of the city, we have internationally-known developers converting former steel land into warehousing and logistic space," Callahan explained. "In another, young entrepreneurs are taking new products and services to market while building a tech community that rivals those in New York and Philadelphia. Families fill our city parks as much as the neighborhoods surrounding them. None of this would be possible without a mindful and cautious approach to budgeting.

"We have positioned this city to grow confidently into the next stage of its evolution. And while the future is unwritten, in Bethlehem, it is undeniably bright."

students the opportunity to decide if they really like it or if the career is not for them. Students may discover that while they want to be a doctor, they cannot stand the sight of blood, Guariello said.

The new program would help students determine which course and path to take and the level for their various academic goals. Everyone must have four years of math and science and three years of a foreign language. The pathways are modeled for four-year and two-year degree programs, as well as Vo-Tech degrees and certificates, Harper said.

The four pathways include health and social services; science, technology, engineering and math; arts, humanities and communications; and business, finance and law.

Under the new curriculum, students would have to fulfill the 26-credit requirement to graduate before being able to design their own program tailored to their career choice or interests.

Silva said the new program would give BASD students a more competitive edge when applying for college.

"By the time they reach their credits they have done work in their pathways," he said. "For the majority of students out there not having a pathway system does put them at a disadvantage with other students out there."

Michele Cann, school board vice president, questioned Silva on how the program would work and how the students would know these services and courses exist.

Harper replied guidance counselors will meet with the students in small groups and individually to help them pick.

"I think it is like a dream come true. (The program is) like all the charter schools out there. You don't have to go anywhere we have it here," said director Aurea Ortiz.

The changes to the curriculum will be voted on at the Nov. 18 school board meeting.

year in a row."

He said he will be aggressive and proactive in seeking economic development opportunities, especially by working with regional partners such as Lehigh Economic Development Corporation and the Greater Lehigh Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Brown said the current administration has a plan in place to repair bridges and infrastructure, which he intends to expand, but Gracedale nursing home is suffering from an outdated image.

"We have to create a different expectation of what it means to be part of the Gracedale community that more accurately reflects the services available. There is a robust plan in place that is currently being executed which has the potential to significantly impact future financial performance. It will take two to three years to realize the full benefits of this plan," Brown said.

Corbett announces re-election bid at B. Braun

Incumbent Republican Gov. Tom Corbett announced his 2014 statewide re-election campaign Nov. 8 at B. Braun Medical Inc. in Hanover Township, Lehigh County. Joining Corbett were Lt. Gov. Jim Cawley and First Lady Susan Corbett. Corbett told the packed room of supporters and B. Braun staff his service as governor is about laying a solid foundation for the future of the state. and redevelopment projects, according to the release. The legislation was modeled after an existing law that has been the catalyst for the development of a multimillion-dollar arena complex in Allentown, though the new legislation contains important differences.

While the CRIZ program allows for up to 130 acres of land development to be funded, the application is due to the state Department of Community and Economic Development by Nov. 30 and only two cities in the state will be allowed to operate as Improvement Zones under the first wave of applications.

Current progress

Kelley noted that his office is currently reviewing potential sites to be assessed under the CRIZ program, but that right now the Office of Community and Economic Development is evaluating land, rather than specific business or companies that Bethlehem would hope to see established as a result of the CRIZ application. Kelley did, however, make reference to the possibility that North Bethlehem would see new tech companies in the future and that he felt a "need to continue to diversify our economy here in the city."

Community reaction

Bruce Haines, a resident and managing partner of Hotel Bethlehem, spoke in support of the establishment of the Revitalization and Improvement Authority. Haines did, however, express concern over where land should be designated for use under the CRIZ program. Expressing concerns that "Main Street has been virtually ignored in favor of Southside revitalization efforts," he asked council to consider options where he believed a "notion of office space nearby [Main Street] ... should be a critical consideration for this authority." Additionally, Haines expressed that "people love Main Street ... it is the crown jewel of Bethlehem," before referring to nearly $3.5 million in funds that were recently re-allocated from the historic district to the construction of a parking deck in South Bethlehem.

Other business

City Council considered the denial for a certificate of appropriateness to be issued for a garage door at 217 Broadway, under resolution 9B of the meeting's agenda.

Prior to voting on resolution 9B, council member Karen Dolan voiced concern that council had not received appropriate documentation from the owner of the property.

Council member William Reynolds countered Dolan's comments, saying that, although he disagreed with the Historic and Architectural Review Board originally, he felt voting in favor of the denial for a certificate of appropriateness would be impractical. Council voted 5-2 in favor of supporting the recommendation to deny a certificate of appropriateness, with William Reynolds and Mike Recchiuti voting against the resolution.

City Council's next meeting is Nov. 19 at 7 p.m.

The young yellow lab, Maryann, wears a training vest with a patch from the Seeing Eye Puppy Raising Program in Morristown, N.J. Bilheimer, a member of the Northampton County chapter of The Seeing Eye, said his responsibility is to prepare the young service dog for a client by socializing it through exposure to all kind of public situations with people, including elections, during a 14-month training period.

Muller to lead Lehigh County

By DEBRA PALMIERI
dpalmieri@tnonline.com

Lehigh County voters last Tuesday chose Democrat Thomas Muller to serve a four-year term as county executive.

Muller, who for the past seven years has served as county director of administration, garnered 52 percent of the total 45,214 votes cast, defeating Lehigh County Commissioner Scott Ott, a fiscal conservative, by an unofficial 23,369-21,845 tally. During the campaign, Muller stressed balancing the quality of life in the county with maintaining essential county services.

"I believe government exists to serve its residents, and I believe it's important to spend our taxpayers' money wisely," Muller stated at the time. "I don't believe we should simply gut government and slash spending just because some politician or team of politicians made an uninformed but convincing campaign promise."

Muller emailed The Press after the election. "I am grateful to the voters for my election and will be following through on my commitment to involve them more in the county's decisions and provide the services they need as effectively as possible."

During the campaign, Thomas Muller stressed balancing the quality of life in the county with maintaining essential county services.

During his campaign, Ott emphasized lower taxes, less spending and free market competition of the county's purchasing decisions. He emailed comments on the election to The Press Wednesday. "Our principles – that government should live within our means, focus on essentials, measure results, and continually improve efficiency – those ideas were not on the ballot. I was," Ott said. "Commissioner candidates who embrace those principles won last night. I did not. "Given my personal values, perhaps I cannot run the kind campaign it takes to counter what was thrown at me. "I can live with that possibility, because I must be able to look my children in the eye and say, 'Your Dad did the right thing.' "I trust the voters, and I trust the marketplace of our electoral system to – at least in the long run – make the right decisions. "I wish Tom Muller a fruitful tenure as county executive and will work to find common ground with him and my fellow commissioners as we strive to serve the people of Lehigh County. "I pray only that those who gave so much for so long to advance this reform movement will – after a few moments of justifiable grieving – pull your boots back on, get back on the horse, and continue to ride toward that horizon that you can see in your mind's eye. "Your vision for our future is not the province of a single candidate, but a commitment to time-tested principles that will outlast us all."

HANOVER TWP.
Road work now through Nov.

Work was scheduled to begin this week on a six-to-eight-week reconstruction of the intersection of Jacksonville and Bridle Path roads. The reconstruction will include sight distances, road widening and turning lanes. The work will require detours (permanent and temporary), flagmen and other temporary inconveniences during the process. Every effort will be made to keep one lane moving along Jacksonville Road at all times. The project is required of the developer building the age-restricted community along Bridle Path Road.

Northbound traffic on Jacksonville Road will be detoured at Schoenersville and, if a motorist bypasses that detour, he will be detoured at Westgate Drive when the road is totally closed. Southbound traffic at Jacksonville Road will be detoured at Macada Road.

Every effort is being made to minimize traffic on neighborhood streets via advance warning signs on Jacksonville and Schoenersville roads and Center Street.

Additionally, in the next five to 10 days, single traffic lane restrictions, assisted by flagmen, will occur at the intersection of Jacksonville and Schoenersville roads for utility work.

Car break-ins

Colonial Regional Police said a number of residents in the Hanoverville and Stoke Park/Jacksonville roads area reported thefts from automobiles Nov. 6 and 7.

Police said all the break-ins occurred overnight, but did not specify the number of vehicles entered. Purses, spare change and other valuables were reported stolen.

Police said in every instance the cars were left unlocked by the owners.

AREA POLICE

Drunk

Police arrested 21-year-old Lorenzo Pizango, of North Sixth Street in Allentown, for inappropriate behavior at the Sands casino around 1 a.m. Oct. 20.

Pizango allegedly attempted to get into another person's vehicle at the valet area. Twice.

He is cited for public drunkenness.

A half-hour later police arrested Michael Glover, 32, of South Eighth Street in Allentown.

He was allegedly observed leaping through the air and landing on a casino security SUV's hood.

The vehicle was damaged and Glover is charged with criminal mischief, disorderly conduct and public drunkenness.

A Bethlehem area radio staple has a new location with the recent move of Sunny 1100 WGPA from the Dodson Building on North New Street into a building that formerly housed law offices at 429 East Broad St. Owned by polka impresario "Jolly" Joe Timmer, the station was forced to move after 25 years at its old location when the property was sold. Timmer said the new location, across from the Bethlehem YMCA, was a good move because of price, location and the fact the operation is all on one floor. The new location also has ample parking. "I thought it was ideal," he said.

The new facility has three studios, a production room and control room, according to Timmer, who after some health issues earlier in the year seems re-energized by the new opportunity.

Timmer also said that with a new roof installed, an emergency generator shed constructed and completely new studios and technology added, Sunny 1100 is ready to continue providing the kind of pro-

Timmer hopes to have an anniversary party before the end of the year, to celebrate his 25 years of station ownership.

Council rejects Stoffa's veto

By CAROL SMITH
Special to the Bethlehem Press

NORTHAMPTON COUNTY

Northampton County employees will now be prohibited from serving on boards or commissions that do business with or provide paid services to the county for a period of one year following the employee's termination with the county. The law goes into effect in spite of County Executive John Stoffa's veto and opposition from concerned citizens and three council members.

By a 6-3 vote at council's Nov. 7 meeting, Councilman Lamont McClure won support for a change to the county's employment prohibitions' code that eliminates any possibility of a conflict of interest. The law already states that businesses or organizations paid for their services will be found in breach of their contract if they hire an employee sooner than a year after his termination. "It's in every county contract [with vendors]," said council solicitor Phil Lauer. Apparently, there were recent situations where the law was ignored by the administration.

This new law now addresses the employee and drives the point home by making it clear that he cannot take a job with a vendor for a period of one year.

Opposing the law as having a negative impact on the many employees who now serve on boards and commissions were council members Bruce Gilbert, Peg Ferraro and Barb Thierry.

Gilbert said, "It creates problems with our commissions and the way our government is run."

While Gilbert supported action that diminishes any hint of impropriety on the part of a county employee, he saw this law as creating more problems than it solves.

Alan Jennings, executive director of the Community Action Committee of the Lehigh Valley, was concerned about removing county employees now serving on CACLV's board. CACLV has a county contract to provide services such as Second Harvest Food Bank.

"It's the responsibility of a nonprofit to make sure every dollar is well-spent. The county is not served well without representatives who can watch carefully and serve well," Jennings said of the county employees on CACLV's board of directors. Their knowledge and expertise protect the interests of the county's taxpayers.

The dissenters were not able, however, to persuade those council members who wanted to make sure that county employees were being held to a non-compete clause in their future employment opportunities.

"It's just one year," said Councilman Ken Kraft. In business, non-compete clauses prevent employees from gaining an advantage by using information about their former employer to benefit a new employer. This information includes trade secrets, client lists or business practices.

In other business, both County Executive John Stoffa and Council President John Cusick extended an invitation to the new executive and the four new council members to become involved in the governmental process. Stoffa said there is an office that the new executive can use in the transition period, and Cusick said there is a County Commissioners Association (CCAP) all-day conference in Harrisburg this month that new members may attend with their expenses paid.

With Republican John Brown as the new chief administrator and four new Republicans and one incumbent Republican filling the at-large county council seats, Northampton County's executive and legislative branches will definitely see a Republican majority in January. Incumbent Peg Ferraro was the top vote-getter on the ticket. Other Republicans who will be sworn in come Jan. 6 are Glenn Geissinger, Seth Vaughn, Hayden Phillips and Mat Benol.

Council's next regular meeting is at 6:30 p.m., Nov. 21 at Northampton County Courthouse's third floor, 669 Washington St., Easton.

Pabon appointed to council seat

By LEO ATKINSON

Fountain Hill Borough Council met Nov. 4 with District Justice Wayne Maura in attendance. Maura was attending the council meeting for the first time since redistricting brought the borough under his authority in June. The Pennsylvania constitution requires that every 10 years district lines be redrawn to evenly divide the workload of the county's district justices.

After introducing himself to the council and those in attendance, Maura promised to maintain the quality of life of borough residents, as he has in Bethlehem since his election in 2005. Fountain Hill had previously been under the jurisdiction of District Justice Michael J. Pochron.

After Maura's speech, Mayor Jose Rosado noted a sharp uptick in assaults within the borough. Rosado noted that 87 had been reported already in 2013, 32 more than the 2012 total of 55 incidents.

Police Chief Ed Bachert agreed with Rosado that the figures were troubling, but added "people aren't just getting beat up on the street." He continued to say there are a few homes that rack up seven or eight calls a year but that a lot of times people just don't want to pursue prosecution.

The vacant junior council person seat was filled by Shannon Pabon.

Pabon told council that she had developed an interest in politics and wanted to see how it worked. Council voted unanimously to approve her application.

In other news, the Fountain Hill Fire Department will hold its Christmas tree sale at the Fountain Hill pool beginning by Nov. 29.

Then, the borough Christmas tree lighting ceremony will take place Dec. 1 at 4 p.m. at Broadway and North Lynn Street.

A Perfect Heart

The Bible says, "For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to shew himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him" (2 Chronicles 16:9). God is looking to reveal His strength to those who have a heart that is perfect toward Him.

The Hebrew word for "perfect" means "complete; especially friendly; full, just, peaceable, and whole." God required that His people only use standards of weight and measurement that were "perfect" (Deuteronomy, 25:15; Proverbs 11:1). The Bible refers to David as one who had a perfect heart toward God and uses David as the standard by which kings that followed him were compared, "and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as the heart of David his father" (1 Kings 15:3). David was not perfect yet God refers to him as having a perfect heart because he always retained a heart that was completely and especially friendly toward God. After David sinned, he was quick to acknowledge his sin and turn back to God in repentance. Those who are referred to as not having perfect hearts toward God were those who turned away from God and served other gods in violation of the first commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me" (Exodus 20:3). David never turned to other gods! David had a heart that yearned for God alone. He said, "I will walk within my house with a perfect heart. I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes: I hate the work of them that turn aside; it shall not cleave to me" (Psalm 101:2-3). He charged his son Solomon to serve God "with a perfect heart" (1 Chronicles 28:9). He prayed that God would "give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart" (1 Chronicles 29:19); yet, "it came to pass, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods; and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David his father" (1 Kings 11:4).

Hawks look for first D-11 title since 2001

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

It's business as usual this week for Bethlehem Catholic and that's exactly how Joe Henrich wants to keep things heading into Saturday's District 11 2A championship at Southern Lehigh.

Kickoff will take place at 7 p.m. against the top-seeded Spartans (10-1), who are coming off a 27-3 victory over fourth-seeded Pottsville last week.

It will be Becahi's first opportunity to play for a district title since their 2002 loss to Parkland in the 4A title game. Becahi's last district championship came in 2001 and Henrich doesn't want to unnerve his players anymore heading into this week's title bout.

"These kids have proven over the last four weeks that they're pretty focused on the task at hand," said Henrich. "They've been humble about it and they're still hungry for more."

The Hawks (7-4) had little trouble in their 34-6 opening round playoff win over Lehigh last week, but Henrich felt the team still had a sense of unfinished business following the win.

"I think they expected more out of themselves from that game," he said. "I didn't really see any celebrating for their first playoff win."

Southern Lehigh brings an impressive record to the table from the Colonial League, as their only loss came in a 62-35 week two drubbing to Catasauqua.

The Spartans run a Wing-T offense and compiled 296 yards of rushing against the Tide, led by Travis Edmond's 135 yards and two scores.

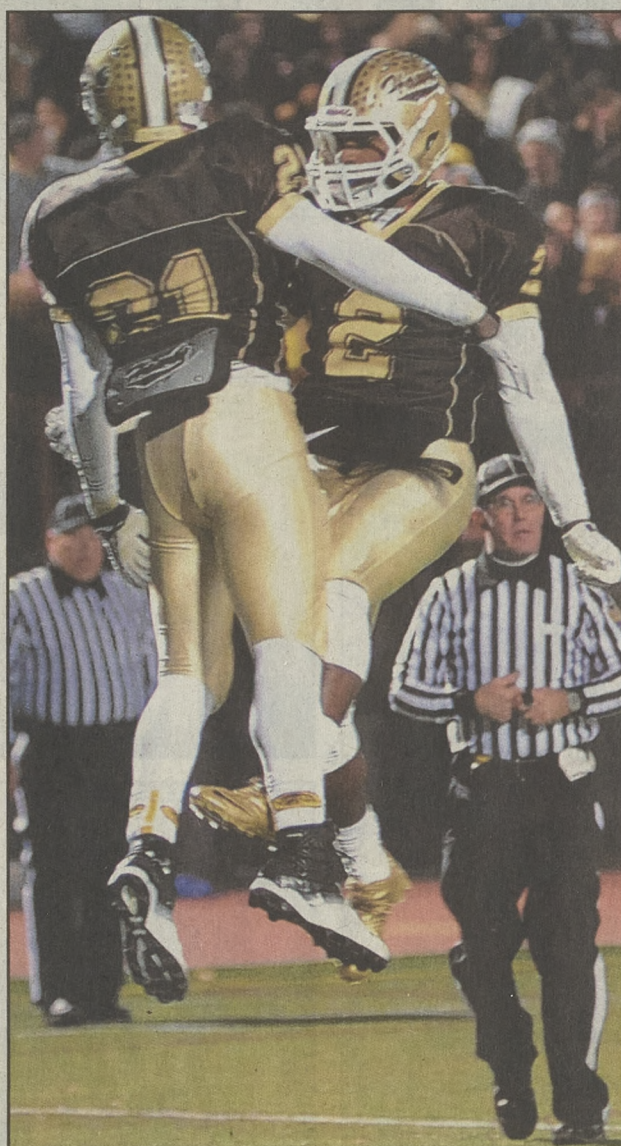

Playing against Lehigh and Southern Lehigh in back-to-back weeks doesn't pose Henrich with any problems in regards to style of play, but he also understands that his players will have to be ready for Solehi's tricky offensive attack.

"Their offense is different from anything we've seen this year," said Henrich. "They do a good job of mixing in the pass, but they are a run oriented team. The big key for our defense this week is having them stay disciplined. They can't keep their eyes in the backfield because that's when you become paralyzed to what they're doing."

And despite Becahi's lack of familiarity with the Wing-T this season, it doesn't mean Henrich and his staff won't know how to prepare for it.

"I've been doing this for 20 years and so have some of my staff, so there really isn't anything you can throw at us that we haven't seen in our lives," he said. "We'll plan for them, but we also aren't going to change much of what we do. We are what we are and we need to ride that into this game and just stay focused on the task at hand."

Hawks prove to be too much for Lehigh

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Not many people would have forecast a Bethlehem Catholic-Lehigh matchup in the opening round of the District 11 3A playoffs last week, but once that became definitive, few would have picked the Indians to pull off the upset.

That's how things worked out for the Golden Hawks, who had no trouble against Lehigh Saturday night at Frank Banko Field amid a 34-6 victory.

Becahi (7-4) scored three plays into the game and never looked back, as the second-seeded Hawks await top-seeded Southern Lehigh (10-1) in this Saturday's district championship.

Michael McDaniel scored the first of his four touchdowns on the night from one-yard out with 11:03 in the first quarter, following a 55-yard run by quarterback Julian Spigner to the Lehigh one-yard line.

McDaniel finished the night with 50 yards rushing and three scores from the ground and added a TD reception as well.

McDaniel didn't figure to be the focal point on the night, as Becahi had three runners over 50 yards to build a rushing total of 218 yards, but McDaniel has had a nose for the end zone this season, as he now has 23 touchdowns on the year.

One stat that McDaniel cares more about than touchdowns is having his team write their way into the record books as district champions this season.

"We haven't been here in awhile, so we'll see what happens next week," said McDaniel about playing for a district title. "We just wanted to take things one game at a time and focus on Lehigh. We have a lot of guys that can make plays on our team and I was just fortunate to get the ball in the right spots."

Spigner connected with McDaniel for a seven-yard score with 5:23 left in the second quarter to give the Hawks a 14-0 lead.

That's when Lehigh answered with an

Chris Negron, a former Freedom football player, is closing out the Moravian football season on a hot streak.

Not satisfied

Despite a recent hot streak, Negron sees bigger picture.

By JEFF MOELLER
Special to the Press

After some steady success, Chris Negron is ready to set some lofty goals.

In recent weeks, the former Freedom High School standout has quickly developed into Moravian College's leading rusher.

Last week, Negron rushed for a career-high 251 yards and scored two touchdowns in the team's 41-21 victory over Gettysburg.

Two weeks ago against Franklin and Marshall, the 5-foot-8, 175-pound freshman helped his team to their first win of the season in a 52-42 triumph in which he rushed for 218 yards and scored two touchdowns.

Through Moravian's first nine games, Negron has 915 yards and seven touchdowns. With one game remaining in his team's 2-7 season, Negron has already conjured thoughts about what to do for an encore next season and beyond.

"I'm working to do what I can for next season," boomed Negron. "I now know what I can do and I want to be the best running back Moravian College has ever had. We have one more game left and I want to do well."

"From there, I want to get into the weight room and work on getting better. I don't want to be satisfied with anything."

VOLLEYBALL

Hawks season ends at states

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Once Paul Abi-Daher got everyone on board for this volleyball season the results spoke for themselves.

Bethlehem Catholic was hit with early season injuries and adjustments that followed, which could have derailed their train toward a second straight district championship.

That wasn't the case for Becahi, who went on to achieve part of what they had hoped for this season-winning districts - but couldn't accomplish their second goal of getting past the first round of states.

The Hawks fell to Pope John Paul II last week in the PIAA 2A tournament, falling to their District One counterparts in a three-game sweep (20-25, 18-25, 10-25) at Liberty's Memorial Gymnasium.

Despite the defeat, Abi-Daher walks away from this season with a sense of pride and accomplishment for what the Hawks (15-9) achieved throughout the campaign.

"I thought this season was very challenging," Abi-Daher said. "With all things considered, I thought we accomplished what we wanted to do, but I still would have liked to win that first round matchup of states."

The loss to Pope John Paul II was the second straight year the Hawks lost to that opponent in the opening round of the state tournament and a three-game sweep isn't what he was looking for.

"We just came out flat and didn't execute," he said. "We always looked a step behind. We didn't execute properly and it wasn't our night."

But it was Becahi's season in 2A, as they lose three starting seniors from this year's team, including Taylor Bennett, Kelsey Mowrey and Jean Markovic.

With six juniors back in the fold for next year, Becahi will look for the schools first threepeat in 22 years.

"I think we can certainly do it," he said. "What we did this year with our lineup is what we planned on doing next year, so the transition should be easier. We're going to have experience and we'll be competitive."

Michael McDaniel tries to keep his balance during the Hawks victory over Leighton last week. The win puts Becahi in the finals this week.

Hawks

One area that Solehi has an upper hand on this group of Hawks is their playoff experience, as the Spartans lost in last year's district championship to Central Catholic 23-0.

Having experience in a championship contest does come with its perks, but being the better team will ultimately determine the outcome of ending the Hawks district title drought.

"The big things for us this week is staying focused and not making the game bigger than it is," said Henrich. "We need to show up the day of the game with the right mental attitude and execute our game plan. It sounds simple, but that's really the big keys that I have for this week."

Negron

the season, Negron was a staple in the Greyhounds backfield, but he didn't break the 100-yard barrier in a game. In the team's fifth game - a 52-44 loss to Ursinus - Negron rushed for a game-high 164 yards on just nine carries and had a 50-yard touchdown rush in the process.

It proved to be a break-out game for him.

"I started slowly this year," recalled Negron. "I was running hard, but I felt I couldn't totally break free. Over the last three to four games, I felt more confident with myself and my game, and I became more productive on the field."

Negron noted the overall speed and physical play as two elements that needed to be adjusted along the way. He also quickly became accustomed to Moravian's no-huddle offense.

"The speed of the college game is definitely different," he said. "It is a lot faster than in high school. Also, you see a lot of linebackers coming at you who are bigger and stronger than in high school. It is a real war out there and you have to expect it and be ready for it."

"I'm a small guy and it quickly becomes harder out there. With our offense, you don't have a lot of time to choose a lane or route to run. But I have had a solid line working in front of me all season." His coach has certainly noticed his determination.

"He (Negron) keeps getting better every week," said Moravian head coach Jeff Pukszyn. "He is a tough guy out there who has a better understanding of the offense and overall game. He works hard and it is paying off for him."

Negron nearly took the turn further west when he contemplated attending Albright instead of Moravian last year after returning to Freedom after spending the past two years at Dieruff. A sports management major, Negron has plans to enter the sports world in some capacity in three years.

Until then, Negron plans to play in full capacity for the Greyhounds.

eight-play, 80 yard drive, capped off by a six-yard rushing score from Wyatt Clements with 1:38 remaining in the half to draw within 14-6 following a blocked extra point.

Quarterback Tyler Cann ripped off runs of 28 and 26 yards during the drive to help move the chains, as the Indians stuck to their bread and butter rushing attack to build momentum with the score.

That's when Becahi reasserted themselves just before the half on their next possession.

Starting from their own 41, the Hawks answered in four plays, largely coming from a 33-yard completion from Spigner to wide receiver Chris Figler to the Indians' 21.

Marco Blasco busted up the middle for a 19-yard burst on the ensuing play and McDaniel scored from two-yards out for his third TD of the half to give the Hawks a 21-6 advantage 53 seconds after Leighton scored.

"I don't necessarily think that was a dagger for us right before half-time," said Leighton head coach Tom McCarroll about Becahi answering so quickly. "We knew we were getting the ball after the half and thought that we could answer, but things didn't work out that way for us."

The Hawks went on to score two more touchdowns in the third quarter to essentially seal the contest.

A 'spooky' fundraiser

By JOANNA IRELAND
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Bethlehem Area Public Library hosted its fourth annual Spooky Golf fundraiser Oct. 6 for its "Room to Grow" program. Local residents played through 18 creepy holes, nine on the main floor and nine upstairs in the future Children's Room.

The library teamed with Lehigh University, whose student engineers worked to build the course. Edana Hoy, head of Youth Services, expressed gratitude for the hours spent preparing for the event.

"I'd like to send a big thank you to our volunteers, staff and board who spent so much time planning," said Hoy, who created much of the haunted atmosphere over several days.

Many groups worked to build the family-friendly course. Area artists were responsible for the artwork, said Diane Davis, assistant director, and the teen advisory board (TAB) planned a lot, and various student groups from Liberty HS helped. "Our goal today is to raise about $8,000 towards the $1 million we need to complete phases three and four," said Room to Grow consultant Carol Ritter. "We've already raised about $2.3 million since we started the program."

A scary fact: When Bethlehem Public Library's executive director Janet Fricker first took inventory of the library's services, she discovered that the children who utilized 37 percent of programs and books used a mere 7 percent of the available space. Just one small room holds the books and materials for these budding readers.

DESTINI MCMANUS and her sister Kelti, both Liberty HS students, are also members of TAB. "I like that we get to work with people from different cultures," said Destini. "It's fun," agreed Kelti. "We're working toward our 60 hours of community service that's part of a graduation requirement," Kelti said. Both girls hope to earn a silver cord at graduation - awarded to those who volunteer at least 135 hours throughout high school.

The library formed its committee in 2009, calling it "Room to Grow," to evaluate space needs and the resources required to renovate the main library's space and revitalize the Southside branch.

So far, phases one and two are complete. Diane Davis, assistant director, said, "Phase one was cleaning out the space upstairs, relocating the offices, to create an area where we'll move the Children's Library. Phase two was to improve the layout and update the Southside branch. We added and upgraded computers, and that phase is complete. It's really beautiful now," she said.

The recent fundraiser, complete with dismembered hands, mummies, ghosts, bats and ghouls aplenty, moves the library closer to its goal of relocating the children's room from its current location to a much larger space upstairs - phase three.

"We have an opportunity, we believe, this winter to apply for a Keystone grant," Davis said. "We know that the state is behind us, and that they love this project and library."

If the library can raise matching funds of $500,000, the grant will fund the final phases three and four, she said. The last phase will be to convert the current children's library into a young adult section, Davis said.

Area businesses sponsored holes for the course including Philadelphia Trust, Deiter Bros. Johnny's Bagels & Deli, Maher Dussel CPAs, PenTeleData, RCN, and Young Plumbing & Heating.

STEPHEN GARGUILO and his sister Norah pause at the 10th hole at the Bethlehem Area Public Library's Spooky Golf event.

LYDIA BURNETT, a student at East Hills MS, is a member of the Teen Advisory Board. "I like hanging out and being with the little kids," she said, "and dressing up way before Halloween. It's fun seeing the community come together for this [event]."

A Night at the Opera

Ken Ranieri

Comedy and tragedy . . . a play of ongoing themes in the lives of "confidence men" who held positions as bankers, educators, merchants and vestrymen in South Bethlehem, and who ruled culturally from their Fountain Hill mansions during the last decades of the 19th century. With little to do after dinner in their well-appointed dining rooms, "parlor theatricals" became a perfectly respectable form of entertainment at home. Just when these Victorian "sentimentalists" yearned for something grand, builder Abraham Yost came to their rescue.

In 1874, Yost owned prime real estate on Wyandotte Street between Five Points and West Fourth Street. On this lot, he built five, three-story brick structures which housed apartments above retail shops on street level. Anchored on the corner of West Fourth Street, Yost built his "palace," the Fountain Hill Opera House, which was attached to his string of five buildings known as "Palace Row."

Yost's enterprise had been created under the auspices of 19 prominent committee members, including bankers G.B. Linderman and E.P. Wilbur, related to Asa Packer by marriage or blood, and Cathedral Church of the Nativity vestrymen Robert H. Sayre and his father, William. Five days before it debuted, the committee approved of the commodious opera house.

On Feb. 14, 1876, opening night had its problems: as coachmen atop their gleaming carriages arrived at the opera house doors, impeccably dressed patrons were pelted with rain that soaked their top hats and drenched their fur muffs, not to mention their mud splattered shoes. During such weather, carriages slogged through a gooey mixture of dirt, horse manure, urine and the remains of whatever had died in the streets.

Once inside the 1,500-seat opera house, composed patrons were dazzled by the opulence of the horseshoe balcony, the crimson-covered seats with walnut arms on the sloping parquetry, the 60 musicians tuning in the orchestra pit, the impressive boxes painted sky-blue, ashes of rose, buff and vermillion - and the convenient restrooms. Others viewed large portraits of Shakespeare, Mozart and Beethoven illuminated by gaslight.

The evening opened with German-born conductor Theodore Thomas who led his New York orchestra in a program of classical music selections, including Richard Wagner's latest hits.

For the next seven years, Fountain Hill Opera House had become the apex of theatrical entertainment in the Lehigh Valley. In the bittersweet year of 1884, when Abraham Yost sold

Crayola's happy new face

THE LEHIGH VALLEY

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The boss at the Crayola Experience in Easton has about as much fun as the children who flock to this terrific kid-friendly fun factory.

The general manager's eyes twinkle and he has a friendly and ready laugh, but he isn't Santa Claus. Dan Aylward, a veteran "entertainment attraction" manager, loves to talk about the newly-renovated Crayola Experience that reopened in May with eight new "experiences" for a total of 21 activities that entire families can enjoy.

On a recent tour of the Crayola LLC's public space in Easton, Aylward showed the new face of the Crayola Experience, an interactive multimedia and hands-on experience where families can enjoy a day of creative fun and see how this internationally famous company makes the iconic Crayola crayons and markers. The building hasn't moved, but a new entrance facing Easton's spacious and popular town square and traffic circle has brought some color to the roundabout and improved the public visibility of the four-story building.

Giant Crayola sculptures in the plaza proclaim the purpose of the building and make a colorful statement about the kid-friendly facility.

Background

Crayola sells its products in about 85 countries, according to Aylward.

He said Crayola's actual factory is now in Forks Township but was originally in Easton where it was established 110 years ago.

First known as Binney and Smith Inc., Crayola has been inspiring creativity in children for more than 100 years - since the first box of Crayola crayons rolled off the assembly line in 1903. The company began when cousins Edwin

GENERAL MANAGER Dan Aylward at the Pine Street entrance to the Crayola Experience. He said people love to have their pictures taken with the colorful building in the background.

LORRIE ORDINSKY is ready to serve customers in the Crayola Café.

Binney and C. Harold Smith took over Edwin's father's pigment business in 1885.

Schoolteacher Alice Binney, Edwin's wife, originated the term "Crayola." It comes from "craie", French for "chalk," and "ola" for "oleaginous," or "oily."

Crayola introduced its crayons not with one box, but with a full product line. By 1905, the line had expanded to offering 18 different-sized crayon boxes.

Partnerships

What was once a McDonald's restaurant now houses the Crayola Café, where visitors to the Crayola Experience can get pizza, drinks and other goodies that appeal to hungry kids and the adults who bring them.

Aylward pointed out the colorful "Rainbow Cupcakes" as an example of how the business community in Easton contributes to Crayola Experience's success. Lorrie Ordinsky from Mount Bethel was on duty in the café. She said she has worked there since May.

Sweet Girlz Bakery, at 40 North Third St. in Easton, supplies the delicious cupcakes, according to Aylward. Sweet Girlz co-owner Kari Kirchgessner said the Rainbow Cupcake was designed especially for the Crayola Experience. She said her product line has tripled since she and her partner Jill Fuls opened their business less than two years ago.

Aylward said Crayola Experience is supplied by more than 100 vendors, many from the Lehigh Valley.

Target audience

Crayola Experience's 60,000 square feet of public space at 100 Centre Square in Easton is geared toward entertaining kids from infancy through about age 12 and their grandparents and parents. The redesigned attraction last

They're racing for a cure

Middle schools from all over the Lehigh Valley invaded the Bethlehem Steelers' complex Oct. 21. The seventh and eighth graders competed in two-mile cross-country races hosted by Liberty HS's own cross-country team and managed to raise $1,400 for another kind of race – the race to cure breast cancer. Another $300 was scraped up by the girls volleyball team. They did so in honor of cross-country athlete Emily Cecchini's mother, Robyn, who lost her battle with breast cancer in March at age 44.

out and moved on, Opera House committee member E.P. Wilbur jumped at the chance to own the opera house and purchased it at sheriff's sale, then hired a staff to manage it.

Overlooked were the boxes and bits of scenery piled atop the basement heater. In the early morning of Oct. 7, 1884, innocuous wisps of smoke suddenly burst into a conflagration that quickly consumed the entire wooden floor above. By the time firemen arrived, inadequate water pressure did little to help extinguish the blaze, which had already shot up 54 feet through the ceiling, past the roof and could be seen far beyond Bethlehem.

By morning, builder J.S. Allam pulled down what walls remained of the burned opera house, and half of the merchants took their losses from damage to Palace Row.

Wilbur planned a new four-story opera house with the addition of an apartment house on West Fourth Street. As the opera house neared completion in 1888, E.P. Wilbur experienced yet another "annus horribilis" with the death of his 17-year-old son Merit in a train crash, followed by the death of his brother, Warren W. Wilbur three months later in June. Now in full mourning, E.P. wisely appointed his eldest son, Warren A. Wilbur to take the reins as "bon vivant" on opening night.

On Sept. 8, history repeated itself when patrons again battled inclement weather. The apartment house attached to the opera house on West Fourth Street later became the Wyandotte Hotel.

By the turn of the 20th century, bearded "confidence men" were replaced by clean shaven corporate moguls. The opera house featured bur-year drew about 285,000 visitors, according to Aylward. He said he expects that number to jump to 400,000 in the 12 months ending in May 2014. He said visitors from all over the United States and from many foreign countries come to Easton to visit Crayola's premier attraction.

According to Aylward, 133 part-time and 18 full-time workers staff the building. The number of part-time helpers varies with the season. He said they are busiest in the summer.

For some part-timers the job is a stepping stone into full-time career.

There are plenty of attractions, such as the one where Chelsea Carle, a charming employee from Easton, will help you print a crayon wrapper with your name on it, thus personalizing your very own Crayola.

One "experience" activity allows you to make your own special marker. A robot obeys your commands to select a mix of your favorite colors, injects the pigment into the tube and drops the new marker in your hand.

Another is a molding machine where you can pick a crayon out of a bucket and insert it into an automated machine. There you can see the colorful crayon made from paraffin, clay and pigment transformed to your choice of several other fantastic forms. "Doodle in the Dark" gives unique perspective to creative kids who can see their art work on back-lit screens.

But one of the more fascinating "experiences," especially for the adults, is the model factory where a worker makes real crayons from melted wax to finished product. A new video and huge television monitor allow the worker to show every little detail.

Besides the Crayola Café, a retail store offers everything Crayola. One of the newest products, "Create 2 Destroy," seems like great fun. It's also a great place to see 450,000 crayons waiting to be chosen by some child to fill an old-style tin container. That's a lot of Crayolas!

'Hidden Treasures' revealed again

28 artists at seven studios in 19th annual tour

By BATHSHEBA MONK
 Special to The Press

The 19th Annual "Hidden Treasures" Artisans Studio Tour, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. Nov. 16, 17, includes seven studios across the Lehigh Valley where 28 artists will exhibit, discuss and demonstrate their art.

"Hidden Treasures" refers to a group of talented artists who reside and create their works in area communities. It also describes their original, exquisite creations.

The studio tour was started in 1994 to showcase distinguished local artists and artisans. The tour stretches from Tipton to Bethlehem. The studios are the perfect place to find a holiday gift for that special someone. But the pieces are so beautiful and unusual, be prepared to treat yourself as well.

This year, five new artists join the tour: Linda Kondikoff, a mixed media artist who makes fanciful jewelry from recycled materials; Deb Reis, with functional baskets; Rick Reis, with traditional woodworking; Mette Jensen, with European-influenced jewelry, and Alison Bessedotter, who has a new spin on traditional quilting and fiber techniques.

Visitors on the tour will have a chance to talk to the artists and watch demonstrations in a variety of media, including wood, mosaics, glass, silk-painting, hand-built and thrown clay, fused glass, stained glass, lamp-worked beads, blown glass, jewelry, leatherwork, felting, wood-carving and turning, dolls and metal ware. All work is individually-handcrafted and one-of-a-kind.

Although the tour is a good time to do some holiday shopping, you can contact the artists anytime of the year and can be contacted directly by finding their contact information through the studio at which they exhibit.

Enjoy the relaxed pace, talk to the artists and ask how their pieces are created. You set the pace. Visit all the studios or just the ones that interest you most.

There is something for everyone to afford, and there are no admission fees. Work will be available for purchase.

Edible harvest easy to crack

One often-overlooked crop of fall is edible nuts. Wild walnuts, butternuts and hickories can be collected in November (as well as October) and enjoyed during the winter months.

There are many varieties of nut trees that have been recognized as outstanding when compared to most wild nut trees. These produce larger nuts and are easier to crack out than their smaller, wild relatives.

A named variety is usually produced on a grafted tree. Young wood from the superior tree is collected when it is in dormancy during the winter. It is then grafted, or spliced, onto a young wild tree called a rootstock. The grafted piece grows and will begin producing its superior nuts in several years.

Plant only named varieties of nuts to be certain your tree will be a good producer. There is even a butternut that has been named "Lost River" in honor of the location of the parent plant found near Lost River Caverns, Hellertown.

There are many species of hickories (Carya spp.) found in the United States and several of them bear edible nuts. One of the most common species in Pennsylvania is the shagbark hickory, Carya ovata. The bark hangs from the trunk in long, shaggy strips.

Shagbark hickories have compound leaves with five leaflets. The nuts are almost white and they are generally easier to crack than shellbark hickory nuts. Some good cultivars include Yoder No. 1, Grainger, Porter, Wilcox and Abundance.

Another hickory commonly found in Pennsylvania is the shellbark hickory Carya laciniosa. Shellbark hickory nuts can grow on slightly wetter sites than shagbark. The shells tend to be harder than that of shagbark.

Good cultivars for Pennsylvania include Keystone, Fayette, Henry and Hoffeditz. The nuts of both shagbark and shellbark hickories are usually small and have a sweet flavor. Hickories are not often used in the suburban landscape because they get very large. They can attain a height of 60 feet or more. They also drop nuts in the fall, which is not usually desirable on home lawns. However, they are beautiful, majestic trees and if you have the space, they can be a rewarding addition to your landscape.

See dermatologist once a year

Q. My skin has all kinds of small "things" on it like my father used to have. My doctor checks them out and says they are all harmless. But, what exactly are they?

As we age, most of us start sprouting an array of unwanted growths. Let's go over the common ones.

Liver Spots: The official name for liver or age spots is lentiginos from the Latin for lentil. These are flat, brown with rounded edges and are larger than freckles. They are not dangerous.

Keratosis: Seborrheic keratosis are brown or black raised spots, or wart-like growths that appear to be stuck to the skin. They are harmless. Actinic keratosis are thick, warty, rough, reddish growths. They may be a precursor to skin cancer.

Cherry Angiomas: These are small, bright-red raised bumps created by dilated blood vessels. They occur in more than 85 percent of seniors, usually on the trunk. These are also not dangerous.

Telangiectasia: These are dilated facial blood vessels.

Skin Tags: These are bits of skin that project outward. They may be smooth or irregular, flesh colored or more deeply pigmented. They can either be raised above the surrounding skin or have a stalk so that the tag hangs from the skin. They are benign.

Now we get into the cancers of the skin.

Squamous Cell Carcinomas: These are in the outer layers of the skin. They are closely associated with aging. These are capable of spreading to other organs. They are small, firm, reddened nodules or flat growths. They may also be cone-shaped. Their surfaces may be scaly or crusted.

Basal Cell Carcinomas: These are the most common of the skin cancers. They develop in the basal layer below the surface of the skin. Basal cell carcinomas seldom spread to other parts of the body. They usually appear as small, shiny bumps or pinpoint, red bleeding areas on the head, face, nose, neck or chest.

Melanomas: The melanoma is the deadliest form of skin cancer. Melanomas can spread to other organs and can be fatal. They usually appear as dark brown or black mole-like growths with irregular borders and variable colors. They usually arise in a pre-existing mole or other pigmented lesion.

Skin cancer is the most common type of cancer in the United States. About half of all Americans who live to 65 will have skin cancer. Although anyone can get skin cancer, the risk is greatest for people who have fair skin.

Ultraviolet radiation from the sun is the main cause of skin cancer. All skin cancers can be cured if they are treated before they spread. The most common warning sign of skin cancer is a change on the skin, especially a new growth or a sore that doesn't heal.

Check your skin often. Look for changes in the size, shape, color, or feel of birthmarks, moles and spots. And don't be reluctant to go to a doctor whenever you see anything on your skin that you suspect might be a problem.

Dermatologists recommend that, if you are a fair-skinned senior, you should get a full-body skin exam once a year. This kind of check-up isn't a bad idea for any senior.

LCCC debuts novel at GACC

"LCCC presents: The Guardian and the Graduates," a graphic novel about Lehigh Carbon Community College, debuts at The Great Allentown Comic Con (GACC), 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. Nov. 16, Merchants Square Mall 1901 S. 12th St., Allentown.

The first 500 who stop at LCCC's booth at GACC receive a copy of the graphic novel signed by the artist, Craig "Old School" Blake.

The full-length comic book is part of the "value" campaign LCCC and Mosaic Interactive, a marketing agency, launched in September 2012, emphasizing the value of an LCCC education.

This year's extension of the campaign has to do with students personifying values obtained by attending LCCC. The message is that values are so strong, it's like having super powers.

"The focus of the value campaign has been to change the perception of a community college education," said Matt McKernan, president of Mosaic Interactive.

"Through this piece, we are not only communicating the value of a community college education, but we are providing an opportunity for the community to engage with literature, art and other humanities in a whole new way. Young readers will gravitate toward this medium and instantly form a positive connection with LCCC," according to McKernan.

GACC, said to be the Lehigh Valley's largest comic and pop culture convention, includes contests, trading cards, and appearances by comic book artists, including Walter Jones (the original black "Power Ranger"), Taimak (Bruce Leeroy from "The Last Dragon"), and Ralph "Rags" Morales and Mark McKenna, comic book artists for DC Comics and Marvel Comics.

Coopersburg man leads church group

The Lehigh County Conference Churches has announced the appointment of Dr. John "Jack" E. Felch, Jr. as the Executive Director of the Conference, effective Nov. 11.

Felch was introduced at an Nov. 7 ribbon-cutting ceremony for the conference's new offices, 1031 Linden St., Allentown.

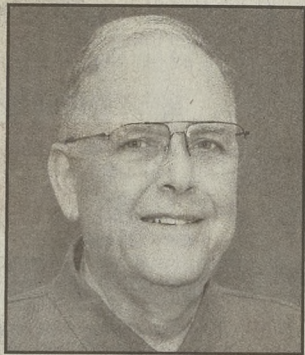

Eighteen conference staff moved to the new Linden Street location. Two Hamilton Street offices of the conference will close. The main offices of the conference are still in Alliance Hall, 534 Chew St., Allentown.

The new Linden Street site houses the housing programs of the conference. A new centralized intake-coordinated assessment case manager is the first point of entry for Lehigh County residents who come to the conference because they are homeless or threatened with homelessness.

Once the intake-assessment is completed, the client is referred to the program that best suits the client's needs.

Felch leads a staff of 32 in fulfilling the conference's mission to "minister to and advocate for those in need and encourage all to reach their full potential."

The conference, partnering with 138 congregations and faith-based organizations, seeks to put faith into action, assisting the hungry, the homeless; persons with mental health concerns and at-risk youth.

Dr. John E. Felch, Jr.

There are more than 4,900 conference volunteers, the conference assists 14,000 annually and its annual budget is $3.5 million.

For the past 13 years, Felch has been an administrator in churches and regional ecclesiastical organizations. Since retiring from the Army, Felch has been an executive with private firms, government and not-for-profit organizations. He has been on the faculty of the U.S. Army War College, George Washington University and Goshen College.

Felch is an ordained elder and deacon in The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) and received graduate degrees in Operations Research and Management.

He and his wife have been married for 47 years and reside in Coopersburg. They have four children and nine grandchildren. Mrs. Felch volunteers at her local church and with the Coopersburg Historical Society. Felch was elected to the Coopersburg Borough Council in 2009 and is Council President.

'12 Years A Slave' a lesson for us all

"12 Years A Slave" is a profound film depicting an era of unspeakable horror in the history of the United States, as well as a marker in the evolution of the depiction of slavery and race in American cinema.

"12 Years A Slave" is paced by Chiwetel Ejiofor ("Amistad," "Dirty Pretty Things," "Children of Men," "Talk to Me") whose thoughtful (his large eyes reflecting his inner disbelief), interior-driven (seen in his expressive, intense, furrowed face) and remarkable performance (his strong, well-dressed shoulders visibly slump as his fortunes sink) as Solomon Northup, on whose memoir, "12 Years A Slave" (circa 1854 with 30,000 copies sold), the film is based. Chiwetel Ejiofor (pronounced Chew-eh-tell Edge-ee-oh-for) is a certain Oscar actor nominee.

"12 Years A Slave," which has depictions of wince-inducing violence, has an eloquence in dialogue ("My sentimentality extends the length of a coin," says a slave trader, and this from Northup: "How can you fall into such despair?") and atmospheric landscapes: the bittersweet beauty in scenes of white, fluffy cotton fields, breathtaking fiery sunsets and that mysterious Spanish moss hanging from massive trees.

Look for Oscar nominations for: picture, director (Great Britain's Steve McQueen, "Shame," 2011; "Hunger," 2008), adapted screenplay (McQueen, John Ridley, story, "Three Kings"; TV's "Barbershop"), score (Hans Zimmer's uncharacteristically spare, effective score of percussion and low strings), cinematography (director of photography Sean Bobbitt, "The Place Beyond The Pines") and several supporting actor and actress nominations.

Northup was a free black man, married with two children, living in Saratoga, N.Y. Northup, a vibrant speaker, friendly gentleman and an accomplished violinist was asked to join a traveling circus-type show when he was kidnapped, apparently in Washington, D.C. Whether the show's producers-performers were complicit is unclear.

What unfolds is told partly with skillful flashbacks by director McQueen: Northup is placed on a slave ship and taken to New Orleans where he's sold at a slave auction presided over by a slave trader ironically named Freeman (Paul Giamatti at his nastiest) to a seemingly sympathetic plantation master Ford (Benedict Cumberbatch in a delicately nuanced performance) where he gets on the wrong side of the slave overseer Tibbeats (Paul Dano again weirdly wicked), who lives up to his ironic slave-beating name.

Northup is resold to another plantation owner, Edwin Epps (Michael Fassbender, who should garner an Oscar supporting actor nomination), whose cruel obsession with a young slave girl, Patsey (Lupita Nyong,

In smaller supporting roles are Alfre Woodard as Mistress Shaw, and Brad Pitt, a producer of the film, as Bass, a Canadian abolitionist.

"12 Years A Slave" is a remarkable film that should be seen by students of history, young and old.

What death teaches us about life

We turn away from every thought of it.

We even go so far as to pretend it doesn't exist. At least we do for as long as we can.

We don't even call it by its real name.

We call it "passing over" or just plain "passing."

But whether its subconscious or not, we try not to say the word died. We try not to think of death.

Until we have to. Until it sneaks into our life, grabbing someone from us, like a dark monster sucking away anyone who gets too close to the brink.

We know there is such a thing as death.

But we are always shocked when someone dies.

Shock, true shock and disbelief were the emotions that engulfed me when the phone call came.

"I thought you would want to know before you called to make your next appointment. Your buddy Patrick passed away," said his faithful secretary.

Patrick was my medical massage therapist, my fitness coach and most of all, my friend.

He was a "health addict" who got up way before dawn each day to do his stretching exercises. He said if we could do only one good thing each day for our body, we should stretch.

His morning and evening routine also included weights, strength exercises and then aerobic activity.

At 54, he took care of himself better than anyone I know. It was a blood clot in his leg that led to the aneurysm that killed him.

My disbelief when I heard about his death was a denial that death would claim anyone who took care of himself as well as Patrick did.

But we are often shocked when we hear someone we know died. We say things like, "How can that be? I just saw him."

Every time someone I care about passes away, it reminds me once again about our need to cherish life, to make the best possible use of each day.

Those who have had the experience of battling serious illness or of coming close to death often develop a stronger sense of appreciation for each day of life.

When I faced neurosurgery at 44, I vowed then that if I survived, I would make my life count. I would try to make a difference in the lives of those I encounter.

Most of all, I vowed never to waste a day, never to let it slip by while in anger or negativity.

It wasn't like a New Year's resolution that quickly slips away forgotten. For the most part, I have kept my vow.

The fragility of life is something I don't forget. Keeping that thought foremost in my mind influences my actions in diverse ways.

This week, David and I had a rare disagreement. Although I can't even remember now what it was about, I do know he thought he was right and I was sure I was. (Isn't that the way it always is with couples?)

I wanted to sulk away and remain in a silent funk.

I didn't.

Again, it's because the fragility of life remains uppermost in my mind.

I strongly believe if I spend a day in a silent funk, I'm flitting away a precious day of life. We are not guaranteed we will get another day. And if I wasted the day at hand, I can never reclaim it. It's gone forever.

That sober thought always strengthens my vow not to waste one day I am given.

When we lose someone we care about, it's another wake up call about our short lease on life. And when we realize how short life really is, how can we waste a day?

My parish priest talks about death with a different perspective.

Father Jerry's life changed in significant ways because of his close encounter with death.

For ten years, the talented musician was working in Hollywood as a performer and producer.

"Success kept coming and I was rolling in money," he says. "I could buy anything I wanted."

Right in the middle of that success, Jerry was stricken with a serious kind of lymphoma.

As he struggled to live, he says he thought about life and the meaning of it all.

"I vowed that if I lived, I would give more meaning to my life by finally doing something I had always wanted - to become a parish priest."

He did survive and I'll tell you this: His success as a priest tops anything he could have done in Hollywood. He is an extraordinary breath of fresh air, much like Pope Francis.

After five years of being a priest, the cancer came back with a vengeance. This time, nothing could help. He was dying.

Strangely, he calls it "a beautiful time getting ready to go Home."

He believes it's appropriate to refer to death as "passing over" because that's what it is. It's passing over to a new life.

Again, he pulled through and has gone on to help many facing death.

It's in facing death that we learn important lessons about life.

When we lose someone we care about, those lessons hopefully help us never to take for granted one day of the gift of life.

Every death can help us cherish that gift all the more.
