Home's low rating concerns council

BY BERNIE O'HARE
 Special to the Bethlehem Press

Medicare assigns a star rating to each nursing home, from one to five, based on health inspections, staffing and quality measures. This is often used by families to determine where to send their loved ones. Unfortunately, Gracedale's rating is going in the wrong direction.

Its current rating is two stars, or below average. The most recent state survey, conducted in December, resulted in 11 deficiencies. Administrator Jennifer Stewart-King downplayed the significance of this most recent health inspection in brief remarks Jan. 24, but Northampton County Council President Ron Heckman wants to schedule a meeting at which Gracedale, and Gracedale alone, is discussed.

This most recent inspection at Gracedale, conducted by the state Department of Health in December, notes the following problems:

(1) Gracedale "failed to ensure a dignified dining experience" for several residents. One resident was attempting to feed herself but most of her food never made it to her mouth. "The resident was not able to eat much of her meal."

(2) Gracedale failed to provide "reasonable accommodation of resident needs." A resident with lower back trouble was unable to reach the call bell and ask for help, even though she required extensive physical assistance.

(3) Gracedale violated one resident's right to be free from physical restraints. A doctor had ordered that one resident

Times News/LV Press buy semi-annual Kids Closet Sale

BY AMY MILLER
 amiller@tonline.com

A longtime community resource that helps families save money on children's necessities has a new owner.

The Times News and Lehigh Valley Press purchased the Kids Closet Sale from Danielle Andreas, who started the consignment sale nearly a decade ago, and will build on Andreas' vision this April. The paperwork was finalized recently.

"We've been talking about getting into hosting events for a few months, and when Danielle posted that after nine years, she was giving (the Kids Closet Sale) up and if anyone was interested to contact her, I thought it was a sign," Jennifer Benninger, advertising director for the Times News, said. "It is family oriented. We thought it was a great fit."

Jennifer Rowden, director of marketing at the Times News, added, "I feel like this hopefully reinforces to families that newspapers are here and are a resource. We want to meet your needs in whatever format that might be. I felt that this was a really good match."

The pair contacted Andreas and after a few discussions, Andreas felt the company

When Jesus Comes

I love the inspiring words of this old Gospel song, "When Jesus comes, the tempter's power is broken; When Jesus comes, the tears are wiped away. He takes the gloom and fills the life with glory. For all is changed when Jesus comes to stay."

A wild, demented man lived in tombs—the insane asylum of the Gadarenes (Mark 5). He was tormented by demons—always crying and cutting himself with stones—men couldn't tame him and chains couldn't bind him. He was a hopeless outcast of society. Then Jesus came, and the tempter's power was broken!

A wicked woman had gone through five husbands and was living a confused life in sin and shame with yet another man—she was seeking, searching, thirsting for something to quench her inner longings (John 4). Then Jesus came and all was changed as He satisfied her soul with "living water" and filled her life with glory! (See more on this at: www.naog.ws/thirsty.htm)

Two sisters were hopelessly mourning their brother's untimely death and burial (John 11). Four days had passed. Then Jesus came and proclaimed, "I am the resurrection, and the life!" Suddenly, at His command, "Lazarus, come forth," their brother emerged from the tomb alive! Yes, "When Jesus comes, the tears are wiped away. He takes the gloom and fills the life with glory!"

Perhaps you are in a hopeless situation right now. I urge you to call upon Jesus in prayer. The Bible promises, "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Acts 2:21). I also invite you to attend our church services where you can meet the Lord and have your life filled with glory "When Jesus comes!"

MARKING DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. DAY 'We need to get past clichés'

BY HANNA O'REILLY
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Bethlehem residents honored the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Jan. 21 with a Civil Rights Movement March. At around 11:30 a.m., members of the Civil Rights Movement in Bethlehem met in front of St. Bernard's Beneficial Society on Broadhead Avenue in preparation to march to Martin Luther King Park on Carlton Avenue.

The event was organized by Frankie West, president of the Civil Rights Movement and member since 1967. He explained his involvement with the organization and why he enjoys doing the marches year after year.

"These marches bring us unity," he said.

Timothy Smith, founder and lead pastor of City of David Ministries Faith Works and House, led the march.

"We need to get past clichés," Smith said. "We need to be an active participant in the dream." By leading the march, Smith did just that.

Smith was preceded in the march by families, friends, State Representative Steve Samuelson, Liberty HS Principal Harrison Bailey, representatives from the Liberty HS Marching Band and more.

All in attendance sang "We Shall Overcome" before arriving at the memorials to both Dr. King and his wife, Coretta Scott King. Prayers were said by Timothy Smith and Tina Singleton from the Temple Bible Church of Bethlehem, followed by speeches by West, Bailey and Samuelson, who read excerpts from "A Testament of Hope: The Essential Writings and Speeches of Martin Luther King, Jr."

A reception at St. Bernard's Beneficial Society followed for all participants to enjoy. The march was a great reminder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., what he stood for, and how to keep his memory alive today.

"This is the best feeling," West said. "You can't ask for anything better."

was what the sale needed moving forward.

"I'm excited for the Times News to take it over," she said, adding she can appreciate the family behind the big business. "I felt it was the right move."

Andreas began the sale on a whim, hoping to help families save money on children's items. She hosted the event at the Leighton Boys and Girls Band Hall, and the rest is history.

"That was 10 years ago," she said, wiping away a tear. "We made this work. I don't know how, but it happened."

She said it was an honor to turn over the sale to the Times News and Lehigh Valley Press. "That's an achievement," Andreas said.

But Andreas and her family aren't completely stepping away from the event she nurtured for so long. Consignors and shoppers will still see her during the sale, to be held April 16-18 at Penn's Peak in Jim Thorpe, but in a support role rather than as the boss.

"I'm excited about the learning curve that this is going to provide me," she said. "It's going to be tough giving up a little bit of the control, but I'm actually looking forward to that."

Benninger said the sale will see only minimal changes, but for the most part will still work as Andreas ran it in the past.

"You don't fix something that isn't broken," she said.

Rowden added the Times News' goal is to keep the Kids Closet Sale as a community resource in Carbon County.

"Our community needs this sale," she said. "There are moms who depend on this."

The Kids Closet Sale has grown significantly since Andreas first hosted it at the Leighton Boys and Girls Band Hall. It had also been held at Jim Thorpe Memorial Hall for two years before moving to Penn's Peak five years ago. Since then, families have been able to stock up on clothing, high chairs, toys and everything in between twice a year, in the fall and spring.

Registration for the upcoming spring event will open soon, hopefully by the end of the month, Benninger said, adding that more information will be announced in the Times News, as well as at tnonline.com and on the Times News and Kids Closet Sale Facebook pages in the near future.

"We're really excited about it," Benninger said.

LEHIGH VALLEY WOMEN'S MARCH

'Women's rights are human rights'

BY DOROTHY GLEW
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Though the temperature was a chilly 32 degrees, a crowd of some 200, mostly women, gathered at Payrow Plaza beside Bethlehem City Hall for the third annual Women's March of the Lehigh Valley. This year, however, the Bethlehem Women's March was not affiliated with the National Women's March because of a desire to express disapproval of what was seen as anti-Semitism and ties to the Nation of Islam of some of its leaders.

The lead organizer of the Bethlehem event was Liberty HS senior Georgia Skuza. Georgia is no stranger to protests: last year she led the "Walk Out" at Liberty in the wake of the shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas HS in Florida. Co-organizer of the event was Tara Zrinski, the first woman to be elected to Northampton County Council, who declared, "Women's rights are human rights."

Other speakers included Olga Negron, the first Latino woman elected to Bethlehem City Council; Shirley Morganelli, representing Rally of American Resistance of the Lehigh Valley; Susan Wild, one of four Pennsylvania women recently elected to the U.S. House of Representatives; Corinne Goodwin, of the Lehigh Valley Transgender Renaissance; the Reverend Elizabeth Hoffman Reed, member of the Poor People's Campaign Pennsylvania; and Kathy Fox of the Bethlehem Environmental Advisory Council.

PRESS PHOTOS BY DENNIS GLEW

Friends greeting friends was a common occurrence at the March. Here Professor Kelly Denton-Borhaug of Moravian College is hugged by Rev. Elizabeth Hoffman Reed, a local pastor and member of the Poor People's Campaign Pennsylvania.

In a crowd that trended older, students receive a cordial welcome.

The 16 speakers expressed concern about gun violence, environmental issues, LGBTQ rights, the repeal of the Affordable Care Act, and other issues. A very responsive audience welcomed each speaker enthusiastically and, when asked to do so by Fritz Walker of Cease-Fire, PA, Gun Violence Prevention, chanted with fervor: "What do we want? Background checks. When do we want? Background checks? Now!"

Observations on the Women's March

BY JULIA F. SWAN
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The reported schism in the national Women's March Organization got a lot of play recently. In reaction, the organizers of the Women's March in the Lehigh Valley felt compelled to dissociate the local event from the national organization, stating, "Because the Women's March leadership has not adequately disavowed the anti-Semitic and anti-LGBTQIA rhetoric and has failed to distance itself from the source of such rhetoric, the Women's March On the Lehigh Valley has chosen to renounce its previous affiliation with the Women's March in solidarity with our sisters in the Jewish and LGBTQIA communities."

My take on this is that differences within a group that encompasses thousands of members are inevitable, and the controversy has been overblown. The suffrage movement around the turn of the 20th century faced controversies associated with the fact that it was largely a white, middle class movement. Working class women organizing for better working conditions and African-Americans fighting for equality had their differences with the Suffragists.

And the civil rights movement of the 1960s was not without controversy, with some of the more militant leaders taking issue with Dr. Martin Luther King's nonviolent philosophy and others objecting to his increasing opposition to the Vietnam War. As I joined about 200 women, men, young people and a few dogs rallying at Payrow Plaza Jan. 19, and listened to the speakers, I knew that I was not in full agreement with all of them, and am sure they were not all in full agreement with each other.

But they were united by their passion for justice, and for the rights of women and minorities. If there was one issue on which they were of one voice, it was opposition to President Trump. Even related to Trump, MLK day was the coldest day of the year so far. Despite bitter temperatures, approximately 130 people bounced along icy roads in grumbling cars for something of an annual tradition.

It's the annual Martin Luther King breakfast at the stately Cathedral Church of the Nativity. Civil rights leader Esther Lee usually leads these events, but she was actually in the kitchen, cooking up free breakfasts.

Cordelia Miller, Bethlehem NAACP vice president, introduced guest speakers who included United States Senator Pat Toomey, State Representative Steve Samuelson, Bethlehem Mayor Bob Donchez, Bethlehem Police Chief Mark DiLuzio and Bethlehem School District Superintendent Dr. Joseph Roy. movement, saying it "would not have been as successful had they not been involved." These persons spoke as though the battle for equality has already been won.

Roy had a completely different view. He said racial disparity still exists in public school funding. He noted the state legislature adopted a fair funding formula three years ago, but is unwilling to follow its own guidelines.

"If a fair funding formula were implemented, Allentown School District would receive $80 million more and Bethlehem $20 million more," he remarked. So would every school district in the Lehigh Valley, even affluent Parkland and East Penn.

These school districts would see a deficit turn into a surplus and the need for a tax hike would be eliminated.

Dr. Roy also had an interesting observation about the public school - "It's the one place where everyone comes together."

Bethlehem Area School District's Dr. Joseph Roy notes the state fails to follow its own funding formula, resulting in racial disparity.

Bethlehem NAACP President Esther Lee not only helps cook breakfast, but moderates a panel discussion after the meal.

Tara Zrinski, representing Northampton County Council, warms up the audience with a lively speech. Her message, summed up in a sign carried by her son, is, "Our Power is Love."

there was probably not unanimity. There were numerous signs calling for Trump's impeachment, but I venture to guess there were some in the crowd who agree with me that impeachment proceedings would probably fail, further dividing the country in the process, and would leave us with President Pence, who in my view would not be much of an improvement, at least in terms of his policies.

What most impressed me Saturday was the passion and energy of Liberty HS senior Georgia Skuza, the lead organizer of the event. At an age when I was most interested in clothes, boys, movies and getting into college, Georgia organized the event and gathered an impressive group of speakers. There were women elected officials including Bethlehem City Councilwoman Olga Negron, Northampton County Councilwoman Tara Zrinski, and newly elected 7th District Congresswoman Susan Wild, as well as speakers representing a spectrum of progressive issues, from immigration to gun safety to transgender rights.

Also in attendance were representatives from Lehigh Valley For All, Fair Districts PA, and a handful of environmental groups.

This was not Georgia's first foray into political rallies. Last spring she organized a walkout at Liberty to express solidarity with the students at Marjory Stoneman Douglas HS in Florida.

Marches like this are essentially feel-good events. There is camaraderie among the attendees, and the signs are often clever and amusing, such as the one which demanded, "Impeach Trumputin." But if they encourage at least a few of those in attendance to follow up by running for office, supporting other candidates for office, joining an organization which works on behalf of their priorities, or even just contacting their elected representatives to voice their concerns, they have served a valuable purpose.

Ashleigh Strange, who is well known to listeners of WDIY, the local NPR station, offered her perspective on women's issues as a person of color.

Colorful and clever signs carried pointed messages for the White House.

Comprehensive plan will be updated

BY MARK KIRLIN
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Saucon Valley schools are working on a district comprehensive plan to be updated in 2019. The previous plan was for the years 2015 through 2018. The comprehensive plan outlines goals for each school (elementary, middle and high school) including an overall mission, vision and shared values for the entire district.

At its Jan. 8 meeting, the school board unanimously approved key representatives of a committee that will meet to discuss the updated plan. The individuals selected represent the community, businesses and parents. The representatives are as follows: community (Christopher Sherer, Shawn Welch), business (Thomas Johnstone, Lisa Szydlow, Jennifer Zavacky) and parents (Kimberly Creel, Jennifer Brasko, Tamara Humphries). In addition, there will be teacher and administrator representatives that will be assigned.

Saucon Valley School District Business Manager David Bonenberger's contract has been renewed through 2024.

According to Superintendent Dr. Craig Butler, the district is looking to add more representatives in the three areas. Butler also noted the committee will be roughly 20 in number when everyone is present. The district plans to provide more updates in the future.

In other news, the board unanimously approved Business Manager David Bonenberger's contract. The contract is for an annual salary of $144,432, including benefits. The contract will run from July 1, 2019 through June 30, 2024. Mr. Bonenberger has been Saucon's business manager since 2004. Prior to coming to Saucon, Bonenberger was a business manager at the Lehigh Area School District.

The board also approved Index Resolution 2019-20, which states that the Saucon Valley School District will not increase any school district tax for the 2019-20 school year at a rate that exceeds the index of 2.3 percent as calculated by the Pennsylvania Department of Education. Board member Bryan Eichfeld clarified that it does not mean they will raise it to 2.3 percent, it just means it will not exceed 2.3 percent.

A steady stream of donors and volunteers brings bags and packages of groceries and paper goods to fill the bus.

Volunteers work on a constantly-replenished pile of donations to help airport employees who worked for more than a month without pay.

Hours after it was announced New York's LaGuardia would cease operations due to a federal shutdown-related workforce crisis Friday, Lehigh Valley International Airport was stocking entire rooms with food and necessities donated by local businesses and community members for airport staff who have been working for more than a month without pay.

It was the second day of the event, the first being the Wednesday before.

The "Fill the Bus" drive was a wild success thanks to everyone's efforts, and LVIA saw no disruption to the many necessary positions - such as TSA and controllers - during the shutdown, said Public and Government Relations Director Colin Riccoban. "We as an airport authority will do everything we can to help our employees," Riccoban said. "For two days we've seen an unbelievable giving from the valley, a remarkable show of support from the community. All the Federal workers here are humble by the support."

Though the government was reopened later that day, a second shutdown is not impossible, and Riccoban said airport administrators are playing the need for future drives by ear.

While working in the bus, LVIA Marketing Coordinator and Bethlehem resident Krista Berardelli proudly displays a photo of a room inside the airport filled with collections.

Boscola nets student employment skills grant

State Senator Lisa Boscola announced recently that the Workforce Investment Board of the Lehigh Valley (WIB) has been approved for a $136,144 grant from the Department of Labor and Industry through the Business Education Partnership program for the WIB for its Career Linking Class. "As we focus on linking our students with career paths, business education partnerships are absolutely critical in that process," Boscola said. "The Lehigh Valley's Workforce Investment Board has taken a leadership role in addressing that need and this grant to implement a Career Linking Class will build upon meeting the needs of our students and our local businesses." With this grant, the Lehigh Valley WIB will implement a Career Linking Class (CLC) in a high school senior class in the Lehigh Valley to address the top business challenge of increasing employability skills to improve career readiness. An employability skills curriculum with 21 modules will be implemented within the CLC to focus on three areas of applied knowledge, effective relationships, and workplace skills. This grant was fully federally funded through the Workforce Innovation

Arts district hopes for national recognition

BY CAROLE GORNEY
Special to the Bethlehem Press

SOUTH BETHLEHEM

The Southside Arts District in South Bethlehem is developing a new five-year plan to help it become nationally accredited and designated as a Main Street Program with the Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development. The plan is focused on ways to improve streetscape, economic development, marketing and branding, and organizational sustainability.

To gain input for the plan, representatives of southside businesses and nonprofit organizations, as well as Bethlehem City Council members, were invited to attend the arts district's annual meeting in January at the Sands Casino Resort.

Southside Main Street Manager Missy Hartney told the 70 people in attendance, "Because the spotlight is on us and we need your help. With your help we will become a nationally recognized community; a role model for business districts across the country."

The Southside Arts District is a Main Street Revitalization Program officially organized in 2015 in partnership with Lehigh University and the Bethlehem Economic Development Corp. It is part of Main Street America, a national organization dedicated to helping revitalize older and historic commercial districts.

As part of the planning effort, arts district committee chairs held roundtable discussions during the meeting to learn what attendees enjoyed seeing on the Southside last year and what they thought needed improvement. Everyone also was asked to sign up as volunteer for one of the district's four committees: organization, design, economic vitality and promotions.

In presenting the arts district's annual report, Hartney called 2018 "an incredible year." She noted that 1,700 people

Warren and Derrick Clark are founders of Domaci, which is celebrating the end of its first year on Third Street in South Bethlehem. They tell the arts district audience that they had been looking for a location for their eclectic furnishings, home décor and gift store, and found that the Bethlehem's Southside has more of a sense of community than they had felt anywhere else.

The Southside Arts District opened in May 2018, and Missy Hartney became its Southside street manager. She held the celebration meeting to get input on the five-year strategic plan she is preparing in collaboration with the city of Bethlehem, and the businesses and nonprofits in South Bethlehem.

attended last summer's Spring on the Southside, and she praised the organization's new website and the fresh look for First Fridays. Hartney also credited the work of business and nonprofit leaders in South Bethlehem "who volunteer their time, energy and ideas to build a vibrant and sustainable downtown in the Southside."

In a letter to Lehigh County Executive Phillips Armstrong Jan. 10, Lehigh County Coroner Scott M. Grim, D-ABMDI, announced his retirement. "It is with a heavy heart that I respectfully inform you that effective Thursday, February 28, 2019, after 26 years on the job, I will be retiring my position as Lehigh County Coroner," Grim wrote in his resignation letter.

Grim said he has been offered "a very interesting opportunity and I am up for the challenge."

Grim will join the Pennsylvania Department of Health and will be investigating violent deaths, working with other coroners, law enforcement and district attorneys to develop programs to reduce the number of these type of deaths.

Grim said he leaves the community and the county with "the best coroner's offices in the commonwealth and the United States."

Following the announcement, Lehigh County Controller Glenn Eckhart said Grim "has been such a huge asset to Lehigh County that may never be replaced. I am proud to call him my friend."

"It's a huge loss for Lehigh County," Lehigh County Commissioner Geoff Brace said on Facebook. "Nobody embodies the spirit Scott has: compassionate, caring, dedicated, thorough, experienced and humble. So many of us could disappear from elected office in Lehigh County and be replaced by somebody without being deeply missed. That's not the case for Scott."

Liberty wrestlers celebrate their EPC title after knocking off Nazareth on Saturday night.

Liberty wins EPC title knocking off Nazareth Saturday

BY TOM WENBORG
Special to the Press

The Liberty Hurricanes captured their first league wrestling title since 1986 by winning the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference championship with a 33-26 win over Nazareth Saturday night at Easton Middle School.

Head coach Jody Karam reflected on the first league championship of his 26-year Liberty tenure.

"Before we got on the bus today we took them into the gym and we looked at the banners. I showed the guys the banner and I said, 'Tonight's a nice night to update that banner guys. Thirty-three years is a long time.' We'll enjoy tonight, but we know the season doesn't end tonight. This is what makes Lehigh Valley wrestling great. There's four teams that can beat each other on any given night."

Liberty also avenged its only loss of the season to a PA school, a 26-26 criteria loss to the Blue Eagles at the Virginia Duals two weeks earlier.

In Virginia, Nazareth had the advantage after the first seven bouts, 17-10. This time the score at the halfway point was 14-14. Only one of the early bouts was a rematch, where Matt Maloney again won by decision over Andrew Smith at 120 pounds.

Conner Werner won a 6-4 decision at 106.

Tal-Reese Flemming, who didn't wrestle in Virginia, surrendered an early takedown and

District 11 wrestling duals begin on Thursday

BY PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

The District 11 dual tournament kicks off this Thursday night to officially begin the postseason run for area teams with opening round 3A action taking place at Liberty and Northampton.

Freedom (eighth seed) will open with Emmaus (ninth seed) at 6 p.m. for the right to the on top-seeded Liberty at 7:30 p.m. at Memorial Gymnasium.

The other opening round bout at Liberty features Nazareth (fifth seed) taking on Whitehall (12th seed), with the winner moving on to take on Stroudsburg (fourth seed).

Bethlehem Catholic is the second seed in the bracket and they'll be at Memorial Gym as well, awaiting the winner of Easton (seventh seed) and Parkland (10th seed).

The other site pairs the home K-Kids as the third seed, as they get the winner of Pottsville (sixth seed) and Blue Mountain (11th seed).

Saturday's action moves to Freedom once again, with the semifinals slated for 10:45 a.m. and the championship bout at 5:30 p.m.

Liberty and Nazareth are the presumptive matchup in the top half of the bracket in the semifinal action, while Northampton and Bethlehem Catholic figure to be the other semifinal. If necessary, the true second place bout is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

In 2A, Northampton, Northern Lehigh and Liberty are the opening round sites on Thursday. Top-seeded Saucon Valley awaits Catasauqua (eighth seed) or Jim Thorpe (ninth seed) at Northampton. The other matchups in the top bracket features fourth seeded Mahanoy Area, as they'll get either Lehigh (fifth seed) or Pine Grove 12th seed) at Northern Lehigh.

Northern Lehigh will also host North Schuylkill (sixth seed) and Tri-Valley (11th seed) in an opening round with the winner facing third seeded Wilson.

At Liberty, second seeded Notre Dame GP will wrestle the winner of Tamaqua (seventh seed) and Northwestern (10th seed).

The 2A action will be at Freedom on Saturday as well with the semifinals, finals and true second place bout taking place simultaneously with 3A wrestling.

The basketball spotlight of the Lehigh Valley was front and center at Bethlehem Catholic last night, as the Golden Hawks hosted Freedom in the marquee battle of the season in the East Penn Conference. With both teams battling for the top spot in the conference, Tuesday's showdown, which happened after Press deadlines, would play a pivotal role in the league playoff race.

Freedom (15-3) saw its 11-game win streak snapped last week in a 76-59 loss to Easton, but the Pates rebounded with wins over Bangor, Dieruff and Pocono Mountain East heading into Tuesday's tilt.

Head coach Joe Stellato hopes that the recent defeat can pay off in the long run.

Patriots fall to Parkland, Emmaus

BY KATIE MCDONALD
kmcDonald@tnonline.com

Freedom's swim team faced two powerhouses in one week and even though the team scores were losses, the Patriots produced some top individual times against both Parkland and Emmaus.

Freedom hosted Parkland last Tuesday when the Patriots' medley relay teams just missed a first place finish. Abby Burnette, Aliah Corrado, Sage Hillier, and Hallie Smith came in second in 2:04.82, and Andrew Ehret, Al Bell, Danny Connell, and Dylan Stahl were out touched with a time of 1:46.32 to 1:45.70.

Ehret came in second in the next event, the 200 free, with a time of 1:58.92, and Danny Connell was third in 2:00.79.

Burnette was second in the 50 free with a time of 27.55 and Sydney Straka was third in 28.07.

Bell won the 50 free for the boys with a time of 21.99.

Sarah Gill placed third in diving with a score of 233.05.

Smith took third place in the 100 butterfly with a time of 1:18.31, and Dominic Fresoli took third place in the same event in 1:03.10.

Bell won the 100 free in 48.06, and Dylan Stahl was second in 56.73.

Hillier came in third in the 500 free with a time of 6:12.76, and Connell was second in the same event with a time of 5:20.64.

In the 200 free relay, Burnette, Twigger, Hillier, and Corrado placed second in 1:53.82.

uate what helps us to be successful and what hurts us," Stellato said. "Sometimes, when you are on a winning streak like that you get away from really taking a look at things. You don't want to fix what is not broken. But since that game, we have made some positive adjustments that helped us win three in a row. We feel like we are now playing our best basketball and are looking forward to the challenges ahead."

That first challenge started with Becahi (14-3), as the Pates were hoping to redeem themselves from a 74-62 loss earlier this season.

"This week matchups are exciting," said Stellato, as Freedom also plays Liberty on the road Friday night. "We put ourselves in a great position to go out and better our chances for leagues. We look forward to the challenge. We are going into Tuesday nights game thinking that if we want to be the best, we have to beat the best."

The Hawks also saw their 10-game win streak halted on Sunday in a 73-54 loss to St. John's (DC) in the Hoop Group event at Parkland.

Head coach Scott McClary knew Sunday's game would be tough from day one, but ultimately thinks the benefit of playing such a caliber program is more than important than wins and losses.

"Tough loss for us Sunday," said McClary. "St. John's is a very talented team that gave us looks that teams around here cannot give. Hopefully it will make us better down the stretch of the regular season and into the playoffs."

Liberty (10-8) heads into this week's contests against Allen and Freedom on a two-game skid with losses to Becahi and Haverford last week. The Canes need one win to clinch a district berth over their last four, which includes Easton and Dieruff.

Easton center midfielder Bethany Hall and Emmaus center back Callen Reid were named the 2018 Lehigh Valley Soccer Scholar Athletes on Sunday at the annual awards banquet in Northampton.

"It was exciting," said Reid. "I was very honored because there are a lot of people in this room who are very intelligent and very skilled in soccer."

Reid played varsity soccer for three years and was named 2018 All Conference First Team. Academically, Reid is a member of the National Honor Society and Math League.

Reid and the Hornets made it to the District XI final this past fall and qualified for the state tournament as the district runner-up.

"It was just a great experience being with all the guys," said Reid. "It was a strong team, good coaching, overall fun, and a competitive level of soccer."

Reid plans to study engineering in college but is undecided on a college choice at this time.

Hall, whose father Tim is head coach of the Red Rovers, was named All Conference Third Team, and is also a member of the National Honor Society and Latin Club.

"I was really excited because of all the hard work I've done over the past four years. It's nice to get recognized," said Hall. "I think I'll miss going to practice every day because I love playing soccer."

Highlights for Hall were qualifying for states, defeating Whitehall in overtime, team bonding, and playing for her father.

"I think it worked because he always draws a fair line. He tries to treat me evenly with the other girls on the team and when we go home I'm his daughter, and I definitely will miss playing for him," she said.

Hall plans to attend Cornell, Rice or Clemson where she will major in biological sciences and minor in political science.

Eighty Lehigh Valley soccer scholar athletes were honored at the Northampton Memorial Community Center.

Brittney Ruggieri, founder of WPSL franchise, the Lehigh Valley Tempest, was the guest speaker.

Ruggieri encouraged the soccer scholar athletes to keep soccer as part of their lives.

"When you have an opportunity, say yes. There are people out there who will help," Ruggieri told them.

Mike Torres held Sean Pierson to three team points at 126.

Travis Brown picked up a 5-4 decision by scoring a third-period reversal and riding his opponent out for the last 1:30 of the bout at 132.

The turning point in the match occurred at 160 pounds. Nazareth had just seized momentum by scoring 17 team points in the three preceding bouts, including a fall at 152 to take a 20-14 lead. Alex Cruz trailed 1-0 entering the third period and started on the bottom. The cheers from the Blue Eagle's side of the gym rose to a crescendo as it appeared that Joe Capobianco had applied a cradle.

Cruz said how he turned the bout and the match around.

"I thought that the cradle was real loose, so I just tried to roll through it and ended up with him on his back and me having to secure the pin for my team," Cruz said.

With the match tied at 20-20 with five bouts remaining, Liberty just needed to replicate their performance at those weights at the Virginia Duals where they outscored Nazareth by a 12-6 margin. All five bouts were rematches.

At 170, Joshua Talijan secured his second decision over Tommy Manos, this time by a 5-3 margin.

Nazareth won the 182-pound class by decision for the second time. Damen Moyer once again dominated his bout at 195 but had to settle for a major decision instead of the fall he achieved in Virginia.

At 220, Jake Ahmad was once again on the wrong side of a 4-3 decision when Stephen Schott scored a take-down with 23 seconds left in the third.

Jaden Freeman ended the match in style when he turned the one-point margin in the team score to seven with a third-period fall.

This weekend Liberty will look to add a new trophy to the case as it pursues its first District XI Dual Meet Team Championship title in the 22nd year of that tournament's existence.

On Thursday at 7:30 in their home gym, the Hurricanes quarterfinal opponent will be the winner between Emmaus and Freedom. If the teams hold true to form, Liberty will face now-familiar foe Nazareth in the semifinals Saturday at 10:45 a.m. at Freedom HS. Becahi and Northampton seem destined to meet in the other semifinal. The championship final will take place at 5:30 p.m.

Outdoors: Feeding deer in winter months can be harmful

BY NICK HROMIAK
Special to the Press

When hard-crusted snow covers the ground, wildlife have a tough time finding food. Deer in particular have trouble finding suitable forage. As such, many well-meaning folks put out bagged corn or grain. While commendable as it appears, their graciousness is only harming the species.

According to the Pennsylvania Game Commission, artificially feeding deer in the winter is the best way to kill a large number of deer in a small area in a short time. The problem, says the PGC, is that a deer's diet cannot be rapidly changed in winter without damage to its digestive system.

Deer, they say, have a four compartment stomach that relies on microbes for digestion. The types of microbes change gradually in early winter to digest woody browse and again in spring to digest green vegetation.

Illnesses such as acidosis and enterotoxemia often result when the winter diet is suddenly switched to simpler, more digestible carbs like corn or grain. Enterotoxaemia occurs when these carbs cause bacteria to bloom in the deer's digestive system. This bacteria is beneficial during normal feeding events, but too much releases a neurotoxin that is absorbed into the blood which results in death, as explained in a PGC booklet.

A prime example of this was explained to friends, who at one time resided outside Pennsylvania in Northampton County. What appeared to be a dying button buck that hung close to their house, necessitated a call to the local WCO for Northampton County. After addressing the visibly infected yearling that was apparently wounded during the hunting season, the WCO recalled being summoned to a home to pick up a young dead deer that was lying atop a corn pile.

This goes to explain that it takes a deer time and energy to convert to new microorganisms, like that found in bag corn and grain. During that time, it uses precious fat reserves that could have been spared if the deer had fed continually on natural winter browse, says the agency.

The PGC points to studies that have shown that deer can die from feeding on highly digestible, high energy, low fiber feed such as corn in winter. This rapid exposure to a concentrated grain diet can cause a fatal disruption of the animal's acid base balance. Deer that survive the immediate effects of "grain overload," often die in the days or weeks that follow, due to secondary complications of the disease.

Evidently this is what happened to the deer found atop the corn pile. And young deer are more susceptible since they are the last ones to feed after the larger, older, stronger deer eat first.

Another point the PGC makes is that supplemental feeding sometimes congregates deer in unnatural densities. Luring large numbers of deer in a small area could create a risk for spreading CWD, tuberculosis and in wild turkeys that feed on "deer corn."

The PGC concludes that supplemental deer feeding during hard winter months increases the winter death rate by 25-42 percent. They recommend planting certain trees, bushes and maintaining autumn food plots instead. That, and felling firewood trees in late winter puts deciduous treetops where deer can reach them.

District files challenge to LVHN's tax-exempt status

BY DEBBIE GALBRAITH
dgalbraith@ntonline.com

Salisbury Township School District is challenging the Lehigh Valley Health Network's tax-exempt status in a lawsuit filed Jan. 9.

In an action filed in the Court of Common Pleas of Lehigh County, the district is arguing the Lehigh Valley Hospital should be ordered to pay its "fair share" of taxes.

According to a news release from the district, Lehigh Valley Hospital, part of the Lehigh Valley Health Network, is a multi-billion dollar integrated health network with hospitals, outpatient facilities and numerous related health facilities throughout the Lehigh Valley.

According to the new tax exemption appeal the district filed, the hospital does not meet the constitutional requirements set forth by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court necessary to show that it is a "purely public charity."

In challenging the health system's claim of tax-exempt status, the district's recently filed lawsuit argues the health system should pay more than $5 million a year in property taxes, based on the current real estate valuation and the school district's property tax rate. The hospital's properties may be subject to future reassessments that would result in even greater revenue to the district, the news release states.

"These uncollected revenues could help support core programs and even limit future tax increases," Salisbury Township School District Superintendent Dr. Randy Ziegenfuss said.

The district claims Lehigh Valley Hospital's property tax avoidance penalizes all other taxpayers, including for-profit health care entities with which the health network fiercely competes. Contrary to state law, Lehigh Valley Health Network conducts its far-reaching business enterprises as profit-making businesses - including paying its top executives extremely high salaries and bonuses - while avoiding payment of their fair share of property taxes, the news release states.

The lawsuit was filed by special outside counsel Martin Cohen and Mark Altomose of Cohen, Feeley, Altomose & Rambo, and by Aaron J. Freiwald, managing partner of Freiwald Law in Philadelphia.

The lawyers will only be compensated if the tax appeal is successful.

The news release lists the following key points:

•Under a 1985 Supreme Court decision, nonprofit hospitals are not automatically exempt from paying local property taxes, which substantially fund

Pennsylvania's public schools. They must meet the law's rigid five-point standard to qualify as a purely public charity.

•Lehigh Valley Hospital does not satisfy these requirements to be property-tax exempt and also fails to meet other state and county rules and regulations.

•Based on a comprehensive review, it was determined that the hospital provides less than two percent of its total operating revenue for charitable care. Pennsylvania law allows tax exemption only to those entities that donate a substantial portion of their revenue to charity.

•According to the Pennsylvania Constitution, the privilege of property-tax exemption is reserved for those nonprofits that are primarily in the business of charity," Freiwald said. "Lehigh Valley Hospital is primarily in the business of profits and they do quite well enough to pay their fair share to support the students, faculty and staff and Salisbury Township."

"We intend to vigorously defend the matter," according to a statement from Brian Downs, Lehigh Valley Health Network's public information officer. "It is important to point out that this is an appeal of a decision of the tax assessment appeals board which found in LVHN's favor."

"We believe the health network fulfills its charitable mission including improving health care, advancing medical science and providing education," Downs said. "We feel Judge Brian Johnson's decision in June 2016 related to the handling of our charitable assets bolsters this point."

Stabler Foundation grants $22K to Center for Humanistic Change

The Center for Humanistic Change, Inc. is pleased to announce it has been awarded a $22,200 grant from The Donald B. and Dorothy L. Stabler Foundation. These funds will support the Project SUCCESS/Crossroads Mentoring Program in the Lehigh Valley. Project SUC-CESS/Crossroads, is designed to prevent and reduce substance abuse and help young people who are most in danger of failure in school or other high-risk behaviors develop resiliency and coping skills so they can make healthy, positive choices to succeed in school and life. Currently, Project SUC-CESS/Crossroads is serving children in 30 schools within Lehigh and Northampton counties.

Prevention Programming offered by the Center for Humanistic Change, Inc. helps to further its mission, which is to give people, especially youth, the knowledge and tools they need to make better-informed and more positive life choices. The ability to make healthy choices is critical when people face peer pressure, loss, painful transitions and other difficulties. Armed with positive skills, participants are better able to make healthy decisions and avoid destructive behaviors while building resiliency.

The Center for Humanistic Change, Inc. facilitates interactive experience-based trainings and small groups that engage participants in meaningful learning. See GRANT on Page A14

CHEMO Bag Volunteers 'priceless'

The CHEMO Bag, Inc. recognized and thanked its 70 sponsors and volunteers at its 2019 appreciation dinner held recently at the Tavern at The Sun Inn in historic Bethlehem. In its seventh year, the nonprofit is committed to providing free gift bags filled with items that provide comfort to patients undergoing chemotherapy treatments.

At the dinner, Board of Directors President Cathy Heimsoth told her audience that the organization that was started by the vision and passion one family has grown to an active volunteer effort. "We are blogging and working to gain more visibility. We have no administrative costs, so 100 percent of donations goes to fill the bags."

Recognizing that The CHEMO Bag would not work without volunteers, Heimsoth quoted from Sherry Anderson, author of "Rising from Defeat": "Volunteers don't get paid, not because they're worthless, but because they're priceless."

Cancer survivor and gift bag recipient Robin Zamadics was the evening's guest speaker. When she was diagnosed with stage two breast cancer in 2016, she said she was scared. When she went for her first chemotherapy treatment, she was given her bag. "It was so special that someone had put the bag together and hoped that I would be all right."

After her treatments, Zamadics went to the Hope Lutheran Church in Cherryville, where she worships, and got more than 100 students in the Sunday School classes to collect items for more gift bags. "I wanted to help others get the bags," she explained. She got her wish. The students' campaign collected two carloads of items.

Appropriate gift bag items that can be donated include bottled water, colloidal oatmeal soap, crystallized ginger, green tea and ginger tea, lip balm, preservative free treats, knitted hats, 50 by 60-inch lap blankets mints, lemon drops and gum.

Since its founding, The CHEMO Bag has distributed 3,000 gift bags at seven infusion centers in the Lehigh Valley, or on average more than 400 per year. Volunteer coordinator Kelly Harwick says that number has grown to 70 bags a month, or double the number per year.

The CHEMO Bag Board of Directors includes Ryan Haas, Allentown, website; Cathy Heimsoth, Bethlehem, president; Josh Katrick, Catasauqua, sound and media; Whitney Carullo, Bethlehem; Kelly Harwick, Bethlehem, volunteer coordinator; and Melissa Healy, Bethlehem, secretary. Other board members who could not attend the dinner are Judy Swartley and Cheryl Fritz.

Good news, bad news to start the new year

Calling General Grant, calling General Grant. As of Jan. 6, you need a $50 bill (featuring a portrait of President and Civil War hero Ulysses S. Grant) from your wallet to pay for your trip from end to end on the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

That's right, ladies and gentlemen, it now costs $50.40 for the trip from Neshaminy Falls, the easternmost interchange in Pennsylvania, to Warrendale, the westernmost just before the Ohio border.

If you have E-ZPass, it's a lot cheaper — $36.20.

If you enter at the northernmost interchange of the Northeast Extension near Clarks Summit and travel to the Ohio border, the cost is $58.10.

This has been the 11th consecutive year that motorists are being greeted with a rate hike in the new year. Just another way the state wishes us "Happy New Year."

For those who take the turnpike between the Mahoning Valley and Lehigh Valley interchanges, the one-way cash rate of $3.35 has increased by about 20 cents, while the E-ZPass rate rose about 13 cents from $2.16.

Larger vehicles pay substantially more tolls. A class 9 vehicle weighing more than 100,000 pounds, for example, would pay more than $2,000 to make the cross-state trip.

In announcing yet another increase, Mark Compton, chief executive officer of the Turnpike Commission, said that the Pennsylvania Turnpike is the oldest in the nation, going on 79 years of age. "We owe it to toll-paying customers to continue to invest in our road to make it safer, smoother and wider," Compton said.

He added that about 84 percent of the $552 million capital budget is focused on renewing, rebuilding and widening the toll road, which carried more than 200 million vehicles in 2017. Once the figures are in for 2018, that number is expected to be even higher.

These annual toll increases are nothing new. We told you last July when the commission announced the 2019 increases that this was going to be an annual occurrence through 2044. (This is not a typographical error!)

Compton said the turnpike authority will try to keep the increases in check through efficiencies, but, he added, "We have no option except to increase tolls annually. Right now, traffic and revenue predictions estimate increases of up to 6 percent per year will be necessary until 2044."

If these 6 percent annual bumps do take place as projected, the driver of a car making the trip between the Mahoning Valley and Lehigh Valley interchanges would make a cash payment of $12.24 each way in 2044.

Well, that's the bad news; now for the good news: Pennsylvania motorists are not paying a higher gas tax this year. Despite this, Pennsylvania continues to have the highest gas tax in the nation when combining federal, state and local taxes.

We motorists pay about 77 cents a gallon in taxes, or about 48 percent more than the national average of 52 cents a gallon. The state tax accounts for 57.6 cents of the total.

How did we become the highest gas-tax state in the union? It came about in 2013 when the state General Assembly passed and then-Gov. Tom Corbett signed Act 89, lifting the wholesale gas tax, which had hit its cap a number of years earlier. So while the price of gasoline soared, the tax remained the same, leading to a badly underfunded deficit to fix roads and deteriorating bridges.

The legislation called for a three-step hike, the last installment of which took effect in 2017. In 2013, before the increase started, we paid 31.2 cents a gallon in state tax. When the third increase went into effect in 2017, we paid 58.2 cents in state tax, an 87 percent increase from 2013. The rate came down slightly in 2018 and remains there for 2019 at 57.6 cents a gallon.

You might have forgotten that this same Act 89 provided for increases in license and registration fees, too, which came into being in 2014.

Pennsylvania is one of the few states which rely on gas taxes and motor license fees to finance bridge and road repairs. The commonwealth has one of the largest systems of roads and highways in the nation, and, until recently, one of the worst.

The tax hike raised an expected $300 million in 2017, and since its inception in 2014 added nearly $2.5 billion for road and bridge projects.

That's why just about everywhere you drove in 2018 you encountered bridges being replaced or repaired and roads under construction. "Your tax dollars at work."

These taxes are known as "user fees." In other words, if you want to avoid them, don't drive — not a very practical alternative for most residents, especially for those who live in areas where mass transportation is spotty to nonexistent.

In their infinite wisdom, state officials decided some years ago to close down the state hospitals. The argument was that residents there would do better in community mental health programs. ## ANOTHER VIEW: ALLENTOWN STATE HOSPITAL

Project needs a serious developer

BY BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Let's say you wanted to buy 200 acres from someone. You're willing to pay $2.57 million. Let's say the seller is willing, but tells you it must first spend $15 million to knock down all the buildings located there. What's more, the seller is going to give you three years to get a few investors to join you. During that time, it is spending $2.2 million a year to maintain the buildings it wants to knock down. You'd say that seller is nuts and belongs in a state hospital. That seller, unfortunately, is the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The property in question is the Allentown State Hospital, which is where our glorious legislators belong. Without question, its deal to sell the 200-acre campus for $2.2 million to a private party is fiscally irresponsible. It's actually borderline lunacy until you learn who's involved. Then it really begins to smell.

In their infinite wisdom, state officials decided some years ago to close down the state hospitals. The argument was that residents there would do better in community mental health programs. But guess what? Funding for community mental health has been cut. The result is that some severely mentally ill people are on the streets. They've been flooding our jails, too. In Northampton County, 72 percent of the jail population is mentally ill, according to county medical personnel. Twenty-three percent of these inmates suffer from serious mental illness, with acute symptoms.

After deciding to shut down the state hospital straddled between Bethlehem and Allentown, state officials had to decide what to do with it. Former Allentown Mayor Edwin Pawlowski, currently a resident of a federal prison, wanted it. He promised state officials he would seek proposals from developers, entrepreneurs and nonprofits. But by that time, it was known that Pawlowski was under federal investigation for illegal contributions from those developers and entrepreneurs.

So the state began negotiations for a direct conveyance. No requests for proposals. No advertising the property. Nope, someone from Doylestown mysteriously appeared and is negotiating to buy the property. A direct conveyance to an outfit called TCA Properties was unanimously approved in the land of midnight payraises in 2017. The deal must close in three years.

Like fish, any deal that lasts that long begins to stink.

How did the state line up TCA Properties, who State Representative Mike Schlossberg referred to as a "serious developer"? What makes him a "serious developer" is the fact that he is represented by former State Rep. Jennifer Mann, now a lobbyist and a wheeler-dealer with a real estate license.

Though Mann is a registered lobbyist, she has failed to list her work on behalf of TCA. How did TCA get lined up with the state? Mann is currently lobbying to get a special tax break for TCA from the county, Allentown and the school board.

State law fails to require lobbyists to register for dealings with local government.

We all know how that worked out for Mike Fleck, who acted as a political consultant and then lobbied local governments for deals with his business clients.

Now let's take a closer look at this "serious developer." The principal of TCA Properties is David Ali, who operates both TCA Properties and another one-man outfit called Impala Builders. He runs both businesses out of his house in Doylestown.

Bucks County records show the following liens:

2018-73860. Pa Dept of Revenue v. David J Ali and Maria L, filed 8/8/18 for $10,107.77

2011-74202. Pa Dept of Revenue v. David J Ali and Maria L, filed 11/30/11, for $5,710.83

2008-72320. Pa Dept of Revenue v. David Ali, filed 7/29/08, for $6,721.37

2007-70914. Pa Dept of Revenue v. David J Ali and Maria L, filed 4/9/07, for $6,049.49

2010-21825. IRS v. David J Ali & Maria L, filed 10/4/10, for $4,789.88

2004-04444. EARTHSTAR BANK v. David J Ali & Maria L, foreclosure complaint filed 7/8/2004. Terminated 10/12/06.

2005-20094. IRS v. David J Ali, filed 2/8/05 for $87,270.01.

2011-07439. AMERICAN FAST FREIGHT INC v. IMPALA BUILDERS LLC, filed 8/18/11, for $8820.14.

When State Senator Pat Browne campaigned against opponent Mark Pinsley, he did so on the basis of supposed liens against Pinsley. But he made a mistake. These TCA liens are very real. No government, state or local, should do business with someone who collects tax liens like candy.

In case you're wondering whether anyone aside from me has noticed that TCA is far from the "serious developer" that

State Rep. Mike Schlossberg pretends it is, let's look at what The Morning Call itself said about TCA and David Ali back in 2017:

Ali's companies, TCA and Impala, also are named in a March 10, 2015, report by the Department of Veterans Affairs Office of Inspector General. The report raises questions about how Ali's companies handled the purchase and sale of property in Fayetteville, N.C. The property was owned by the family of a Veterans Affairs employee, leading to the finding that she had "an appearance of conflict of interest" by participating in the evaluation and sale of land used as a VA health care facility, according to the report.

This is a "serious developer"? Sign me up. I can make deals from my estate atop the Nazareth Army Navy store, sitting in my underwear.

Allentown developer Nat Hyman recently contacted the very state legislators who want to sell this property to a tax deadbeat. His interest was reported in a Morning Call story that originally was very positive. Then the story was updated with vitriol from Schlossberg, directed at Hyman. This seems to be a hobby for local Allentown officials, but that's another story. Schlossberg's remarks were so personal that the newspaper decided to tone it down and remove some of them.

Why are Schlossberg and even Browne so willing to trash Hyman? Simple. Jenn Mann represents TCA, not Hyman. Jenn Mann used to employ Schlossberg.

Just a few days ago, Schlossberg sent a missive to The Parkland Press, saying "In a perfect world, the Allentown State Hospital buildings would be preserved and re-purposed to create jobs and grow our economy, but we have to face the facts."

Now he has a "responsible developer." Hyman wants to preserve the buildings and create jobs. He is seeking no TIF or any of the usual government handouts. But he lacks a connection to Jenn Mann.

Nat Hyman is no Ghandi. He's in this to make money. I do not mean to suggest that he should get the sweetheart deal intended for the tax cheat from Doylestown. It is clear that TCA lacks the resources to do the demolition. Instead of wasting more money, the state should seek proposals from interested developers and do what is right for the Lehigh Valley.

Trial date set for officer in fatal shooting

creber@tnonline.com

A Lehigh County judge has set a trial date for an officer who is facing criminal charges for a fatal on-duty shooting last year.

Jonathan Roselle, 33, of Parryville, a former officer with South Whitehall Police Department, will go to trial Sept. 24.

State police have charged Roselle with involuntary manslaughter for the Aug. 4 death of Joseph Santos.

Roselle was in court on Friday to discuss his attorney's motion to dismiss the charges against him.

During the hearing, the assistant district attorney prosecuting the case said that he expects District Attorney Jim Martin to participate in the trial. The judge, Kelly L. Banach, also issued an order stating that people attending the trial would not be able to wear T-shirts demonstrating support for the victim, Joseph Santos, or law enforcement.

Outside the courthouse, it was an emotional scene as the mother of one of Santos' three children talked about the impact that his death will have on her child and his two other children for the rest of their lives.

Arlene Figueroa is the mother of the youngest of Santos' three children, Jodessy Santos. She said seeing Roselle in the courtroom reminded her of the void her young daughter felt over the holidays, not being able to spend them with her father.

She was joined by an attorney representing two of Santos' three children and members of Make the Road PA, an organization for Latino communities, which is advocating for Roselle to face prosecution for the shooting.

The officer, Jonathan Roselle of Parryville, is facing involuntary manslaughter charges. Figueroa was joined by Make the Road PA members Ashleigh Strange and Maegan Llerena, and Jeffrey Simms, an attorney for two of Santos' children.

from that date to respond, before she decides whether or not to grant the motion.

Banach scheduled the trial for Sept. 24, in the event that the motion to dismiss charges is not granted.

Both sides are to exchange reports from any experts they plan to call at trial by July 15. A pretrial conference will take place on Aug. 16.

Banach also said that at all court dates going forward, she would be enforcing a decorum order setting rules in the courtroom.

People attending proceedings will not be able to wear shirts endorsing either the victim or law enforcement.

Cellphones must be powered off, not just silenced. Spectators may be searched upon entering the courtroom.

Figueroa was wearing a shirt showing Santos and their daughter. She said she wears it to show who he really was, but she understood the reasons for the judge's order.

There were supporters on both sides.

Jessica Koput supports Roselle and is part of a community who posts on the "Support Officer Jonathan Roselle" Facebook group. She said while Santos' death is a tragedy, police need the support of the citizens they swear to protect.

"We currently live in a country where some are prosecuted for doing their job, some are not. We see this so often when it comes to our police. This is a tragic incident. However, we must trust our police are doing their job by protecting our communities," she said.

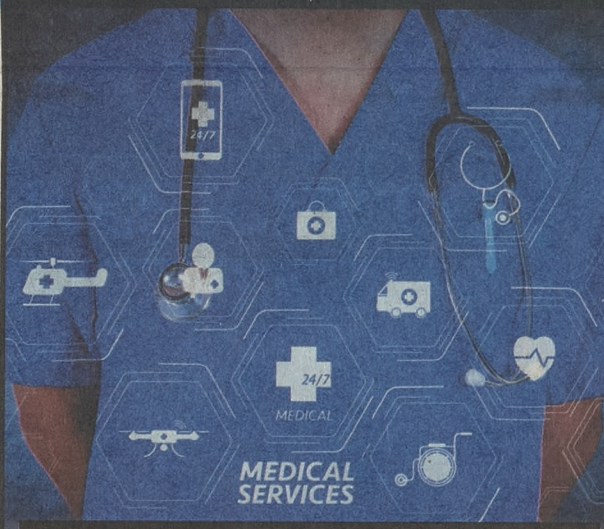

Jeffrey Simms, an attorney for Santos' two younger children, said he is planning to file a wrongful-death suit to ensure that Santos' children are appropriately compensated.

Maegan Llerena, deputy director of Make the Road, said the case goes beyond Jonathan Roselle, and recent convictions against other officers across the country show that the criminal justice system needs to change.

When in 'Roma,' Oscar plays 'Favourite'

The Academy Awards nominations always leave something to be desired.

There are films, actors, directors and others you think deserved nominations, but did not receive them.

So it goes with the 91st Oscars.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences presents the 2019 Academy Awards ceremonies honoring 2018 movie releases, 8 p.m. (EST) Feb. 24, Dolby Theatre, Hollywood and Highland Center, Los Angeles, televised live on the ABC-TV.

Oscar snubs shouldn't be surprising, and yet, somehow, they always are.

It's kind of like a questionable call, or no-call, by a referee in an NFL divisional title playoff game.

Never nominated for a competitive Oscar were classic cinema era directors, including Charlie Chaplin, Fritz Lang and Preston Sturges, and contemporary directors, including Tim Burton, Terry Gilliam and Christopher Nolan.

Never nominated for a competitive Oscar were classic cinema era actors, including Myrna Loy, Ann Miller and Marilyn Monroe, and contemporary actors, including John Cusack, Meg Ryan and Michael Keaton.

Female directors are noticeably absent from the 2019 Oscar nominees. There are none.

In the history of the Oscars, female director nominees total five: Lina Wertmüller, "Seven Beauties," 1976; Jane Campion, "The Piano," 1993; Sofia Coppola, "Lost in Translation," 2003; Kathryn Bigelow, "The Hurt Locker," 2009 (the only female director Oscar winner), and Greta Gerwig, "Lady Bird," 2017.

The 2019 Oscar nominations seem, for want of a better term, all over the place.

"The Favourite" and "Roma" each have 10 nominations. Next is "A Star Is Born" and "Vice," each with eight nominations, followed by "Black Panther," with seven nominations; "BlackKkklansman," with six nominations, including Spike Lee's first director Oscar nomination; "Bohemian Rhapsody," with five nominations, and "Green Book," with five nominations.

The Oscar nominations record is 14, held by "All About Eve," 1950; "Titanic," 1997, and "La La Land,"

In the 2019 best picture category, even though 10 movies could have been nominated, only eight were nominated. Nominees include the first superhero movie, "Black Panther," the highest-grossing movie of 2018, with a worldwide gross of $1.23 billion. Oscar is now firmly in the Marvel Cinematic Universe orbit.

Among notable feature films absent in the best picture category are actor-director Clint Eastwood's highly-regarded "The Mule," which received no Oscar nominations. Eastwood deserved director and leading actor nominations.

Speaking of old men and the Oscar, Robert Redford was also overlooked for a leading actor nomination in "The Old Man & The Gun."

Another snub-way was director Damien Chazelle's superb Neil Armstrong biopic, "First Man," which only received four technical category nominations, despite Oscar-nominee worthy leading actor and supporting actress performances, respectively, as the Armstrongs by Ryan Gosling and Claire Foy.

Jenkintown, Montgomery County, native Bradley Cooper didn't receive an Oscar nomination in his theatrical feature film directorial debut for his labor-of-love, "A Star Is Born," See OSCAR on Page B2

Readers Pick the Oscar Winners

Nominations for the 91st Academy Awards have been announced.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences presents the 2019 Academy Awards ceremonies honoring 2018 movie releases, 8 p.m. (EST) Feb. 24, Dolby Theatre, Hollywood and Highland Center, Los Angeles, televised live on the ABC-TV.

The Press Focus section again presents the "Readers Pick the Oscar Winners" contest. The person who picks the most correct number of Oscar recipients receives a $50 Penn's Peak gift, Roxy Theatre movie tickets, a Press prize package, and may have his or her photo published in the Focus section of the eight Press newspapers and web sites.

OSCAR

Continued from page B1 even though it received eight nominations, including best picture, as well as leading actor for Cooper, leading actress for co-star Lady Gaga and original song for "Shallow."

While Regina King received a supporting actress nomination for "If Beale Street Could Talk," and the film received a best score nomination (Nicholas Britell), director Barry Jenkins didn't receive a nomination, although he received a nomination for adapting the James Baldwin novel to the screen. Nor did "Beale Street" receive a best picture nomination.

One of the biggest missing in action nominations is that for "Won't You Be My Neighbor?," the beloved documentary feature about public television children's show host Fred Rogers.

Another feature documentary left off the Oscar nominations list is "Three Identical Strangers," about male triplets separated at birth, then reunited.

Also on the snub hub is Ethan Hawke, an anticipated leading actor nominee for "First Reformed," for which the film's director Paul Schrader received an Oscar nomination for original screenplay. "First Reformed" co-starred Allentown's Amanda Seyfried.

Emily Blunt, who has never been nominated for an Oscar, was twice-snubbed for her stellar and quite opposite 2018 roles in "Mary Poppins Returns" and her husband-director John Krasinski's "A Quiet Place."

Other snub-drubs included Marielle Heller, director, "Can You Ever Forgive Me?," even though she directed Melissa McCarthy to a leading actress nomination and Richard E. Grant to a supporting actor nomination.

Also snubbed was Josie Rourke, director of "Mary Queen of Scots," which received nominations for costumes (Alexandra Byrne) and makeup and hairstyles (Jenny Shircore, Marc Pilcher, Jessica Brooks). Saoirse Ronan wasn't nominated for the title role of "Mary Queen of Scots," nor was Margot Robbie as rival, Queen Elizabeth I.

The favorite in the somewhat similarly-themed Great Britain costume-drama niche was "The Favourite," with 10 nominations, which tied with director Alfonso Cuarón's "Roma," also with 10 nominations.

"Roma" apparently won't be among the Oscar-nominated films packaged for screenings in AMC and Regal movie theaters. That's because Netflix, which released "Roma," didn't abide by the movie industry's 90-day theatrical release window.

"Arrivederci, Roma" at the multiplexes.

Breaking 'Glass'

Is the "Glass" movie half-full or half-empty? The answer partly depends on whether or not you're a fan of "Glass" writer-director M. Night Shyamalan.

"Glass" is third in Shyamalan's "Eastrail 177 Trilogy" that began with "Unbreakable" (2000), which starred Bruce Willis and Samuel L. Jackson, and continued with "Split" (2016), which starred Willis and introduced James McAvoy and Anya Taylor-Joy in the series.

Eastrail No. 177 refers to the derailment in "Unbreakable" of Train No. 177.

Willis (security guard David Dunn, aka The Overseer), Jackson (Elijah Price, aka Mr. Glass), McAvoy (Kevin Wendell Crumb, diagnosed with Dissociative Identity Disorder, i.e., multiple personality disorder, who has 24 personalities), and Taylor-Joy (Casey Cooke, who adores Kevin) are joined by Sarah Paulson (psychiatric doctor Dr. Ellie Staple).

Returning from "Split" are Spencer Treat Clark as Joseph, Dunn's son, and Charlayne Woodard as Price's mother.

Dunn and Crumb are taken to a psychiatric hospital where Glass is already incarcerated.

The performance by McAvoy ("Atonement," 2007; "The Last King Of Scotland," 2006) is something to behold. The multiple personalities he portrays include: Patricia, Dennis, Hedwig, The Beast, Barry, Heinrich, Jade, Ian, Mary Reynolds, Norma, Jalin, Kat, B.T., Kevin Wendell Crumb, Mr. Pritchard, Felida, Luke, Goddard, Samuel, Polly. It's an astounding piece of acting. McAvoy switches "characters" in a second, and is convincing portraying each.

Jackson (Oscar supporting actor nominee, "Pulp Fiction," 1994) manages a facial tick and is silent until (no spoilers here) things get really scary.

Willis ("The Sixth Sense," 1999; "In Country," 1989; "Die Hard," 1988) presents a contained performance, projecting an inner resolve that makes you wonder what he's thinking at all moments.

Paulson is effective as a doctor with an agenda. Taylor-Joy has a memorable screen presence.

Lehigh Valley residents, and especially Allentown residents, will be intrigued identifying scenes at the former Allentown State Hospital, where "Glass" was partly filmed in October 2017. Most of the cinematography is of exteriors. There are also some interiors of the former hospital. There's a brief scene of Hanover Avenue in the vicinity of the hospital. A skyscraper-enhanced Philadelphia skyline is superimposed as backdrop to the hospital in some scenes.

"Glass" has innovative cinematography by Director of Photography Mike Gioulakis and a jittery, pounding soundtrack by composer West Dylan Thordson.

Happening," 2008; "The Last Airbender," 2010; "After Earth," 2013; "The Visit," 2015) creates extreme tension in "Glass" in the best sense of a psychological-thriller. Some scenes are disturbing.

Shyamalan's screenplay presents many fascinating questions. It provides few answers. The answers are up to you, as is your evaluation of "Glass." Is "Glass" half-full or half-empty?

"Glass," MPA rated PG-13 (Parents Strongly Cautioned Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13. Parents are urged to be cautious. Some material may be inappropriate for pre-teenagers.) for violence, including some bloody images, thematic elements, and language; Genre: Science-Fiction, Thriller, Drama; Run Time: 2 hrs., 9 mins.; Distributed by Universal Pictures.

'Buyer & Cellar' dream role for Allen Township native

BY KATHY LAUER-WILLIAMS
Special to The Press

When Doug Atkins first read the play "Buyer & Cellar," there was no doubt in his mind he would one day star in the show.

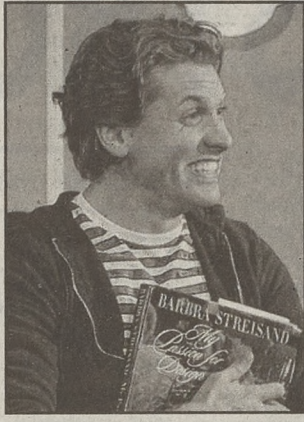

The absurdist one-man play is about an out-of-work actor who takes a job curating the Malibu basement of superstar Barbra Streisand.

"I didn't know how or when, but I knew I was going to do it," the Allen Township native says.

Atkins, who now lives in Houston, Tex., plays the role for the third time and for the first time in his native state, in "Buyer & Cellar," Jan. 31 - Feb. 24, Montgomery Theater, Souderton, Montgomery County.

Atkins says "all the memories came flooding back," when he got back to the eastern Pennsylvania region.

"This will always be my theatrical home," he says. "This is where I got my start in theater."

Atkins got his start in Northampton Area School District at George Wolf Elementary School, Bath, where he played the Tin Man in a stage production of "The Wizard of Oz."

He was inspired to try the stage after seeing Dick Van Dyke in the 1964 feature movie "Mary Poppins."

"I said I want to do what he does," Atkins recalls.

From there he studied theater at Lehigh Valley

Charter Arts High School, graduating in 2008. He studied musical theater at West Chester University.

He performed in hit shows, including "Grease" at Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and "Young Frankenstein" at The Ritz Theatre Company, Haddon Township, Camden County, N.J.

"I was bartending and auditioning my tail off," he says. "I was working steadily in Philadelphia."

Then he read that Houston, Tex., was one of "five up and coming regional markets" for theater.

"At 24, I packed my bags and moved to Houston," he says.

It was there, Atkins came across "Buyer & Cellar," the one-person show by Jonathan Tolins, and was hooked.

He sent a video audition to eight theaters that were planning to do productions of the show, and got callbacks from two, and ultimately was cast.

In 2016, he debuted in the role at Stage West Theatre, Fort Worth, Tex.

"It was terrifying because I was only 25," he says. "But I drilled it and it stuck. Then I had so much fun doing it."

He reprised the role last year at Main Street Theater, Houston. Both productions were well-received.

"I'm so thankful for all the fantastic notices I got for the role," Atkins says. "It really put me on the map."

When he got an email from Tom Quinn, artistic director of Montgomery Theater, offering him the role for the third time, he jumped at the chance.

"I'm so excited to bring this home," he says. "My grandparents, who live in the Lehigh Valley, can come and see it." His grandparents are Michael and Brenda Ondush of Whitehall.

Atkins is one of a small tight-knit fraternity of actors who have played the role more than twice.

"I didn't expect to be doing this for the third time at 29," he says. "I got to talk to the playwright Jonathan Tolins. This show offers so many possibilities."

In the show, Atkins plays Alex More, a struggling actor recently fired from Disneyland, Anaheim, Calif., who is hired to work in the private basement mall in Barbra Streisand's house.

Tolins was inspired to write the comedic play after reading Barbra Streisand's architectural book, which details the setup of her own private mall, complete with a dress shop, doll shop, and working yogurt machine, in the basement of her home.

The character in the play, Alex More, at first does not meet his employer, but eventually Streisand comes down and the two strike up a friendly relationship. The play chronicles fictional exchanges between More and his idol, a source of admiration and frustration for More. "On the surface, it's a comment on celebrity, but at the core it's about how we treat others in the world," Atkins says. "You may be able to create a mall in the basement, but you still have to deal with people."

Atkins says the role is demanding. He plays six characters, including Streisand, who he creates entirely through mannerisms.

"It's a big old romp through Malibu," Atkins says. "The older I get, the more the show evolves."

The show is not recommended for children under 17.

Closings of house sales down slightly for 2018 in the Lehigh Valley

BY PAUL WILLISTEIN
pwillistein@tntonline.com

Closed sales of houses in the Lehigh Valley during 2018 were down slightly from the previous year, according to the Greater Lehigh Valley Realtors (GLVR).

Closings were down 0.6 percent, or 8,373 closed sales of houses in 2018, compared to 8,420 closed sales of houses in 2017.

In 2018, closed sales of houses decreased in nine of 12 months, with only January, August and October posting closed sales gains.

Pending sales were up slightly year-to-year, by 0.8 percent, or 8,544 in 2018, compared to 8,479 in 2017.

New listings were down 1.1 percent, or 11,481 in 2018, compared to 11,613 in 2017.

The average sales price increased 5.2 percent, from $215,519 in 2017 to $226,643 in 2018.

The median sales price increased 7.6 percent, from $185,000 in 2017 to $199,000 in 2018.

The percentage of list price received increased 0.4 percent, from 97.7 percent in 2017 to 98.1 percent in 2018.

The housing affordability index decreased

11.3 percent in 2018, compared to 2017.

Market Analysis

Home prices were consistently up again in most markets in 2018 but at reduced levels compared to recent years, according to the GLVR December 2018 and 2018 year-end report released Jan. 15.

"High demand for few homes for sale fueled price increases, but the evidence is mounting that inventory will finally improve in 2019," GLVR President Carl Billera said, adding, "This may apply some downward pressure on prices for beleaguered home buyers."

Closed sales for houses in the Lehigh Valley decreased 17.3 percent in December 2018, with 535 houses sold in December 2018, down from 647 houses sold in December 2017, according to the GLVR.

Pending sales increased in December 2018, up 17.1 percent, or 499 houses in December 2018, compared to 426 houses in December 2017.

New listings decreased 4.1 percent, or 444 in December 2018, down from 463 in December 2017.

Inventory levels again shrank, by 11.9 percent in December 2018, or 1,571 units in December 2018, compared to 1,783 units in December 2017.

Days on the market again decreased, by 17.6 percent in December 2018, or 42 days in December 2018, compared to 51 days in December 2017.

The Months Supply of Inventory again decreased, by 12 percent in December 2018, or 2.2 months in December 2018, compared to 2.5 months in December 2017.

"Unemployment rates remained remarkably low again in 2018, and wages continued to improve for many U.S. households," GLVR CEO Justin Poremba said, adding, "Housing affordability will remain an important storyline in 2019."

The average sales price increased 1.2 percent in December 2018, to $222,326 in December 2018, compared to $219,700 in December 2017.

The median sales price increased 3.8 percent in December 2018, to $190,000 in December 2018, compared to $183,000 in December 2017.

year-end report: It is generally good for all parties involved in real estate transactions when wages grow, but the percentage of increase, on average, has not kept pace with home price increases. This created an affordability crunch in the second half of 2018, the report stated.

A fourth interest rate hike by the Federal Reserve in 2018 spooked the stock market to close out the year, observed the GLVR year-end report. The Fed has indicated that the number of rate increases in 2019 will be halved, which may be of little comfort to an already compressed consumer, stated the GLVR report.

Explaining relatives' divorce to children

Q. My sister and her husband are going through a separation and probably a divorce. My children, ages eight and five, keep asking questions like why their aunt comes to visit them alone. We keep telling them that Uncle Kevin is out of town, but eventually we will have to be honest with them. How do we explain divorce to children?

The panel stressed the importance of being honest with children when answering their questions, but that doesn't mean that you have to go into great detail.

"The more you lie," panelist Pam Wallace said, "the worse it is going to be in the long run."

"Separation is not an easy thing to explain," panelist Wanda Mercado-Arroyo observed. "You just need to be very sensitive in your approach."

Panelist Denise Continenza suggested relating the situation to something the children understand or have experienced. She gave an example of what the parent could say: "Sometimes relationships and friendships don't work out. You don't play with some children anymore. And grownups do the same thing."

Wallace added that the children likely have friends or classmates whose parents are divorced, and that could be part of the discussion. "The eight-year-old surely is aware of the situation," Wallace continued. "He could simply be told that his aunt and Uncle Kevin aren't getting along, and they think they will be happier living apart."

Because eight and five are very different ages, panelist Erin Stalsitz recommended talking to each child separately. She also said it would be a good idea for the mother to talk to her sister, and let her know that the children were asking questions, so that the aunt doesn't get blindsided. If the aunt can discuss the situation without becoming emotional, she might want to be part of the conversation.

"Make sure you answer the children's questions at their levels," Mercado-Arroyo said, adding, "Don't give too much information or details, and make sure the kids understand what you've told them."

The important thing, according to Continenza, is that the children feel secure.

She said the parent should tell them, "We are together as a family, and your aunt will always be a part of it. She will love you forever."

As for the uncle, the panel agreed that the best answer if the children ask is "We're not sure." That's when it might be good to ask the children how they feel about the uncle, and what they would like to see happen.

People I want to emulate

"Be the things you loved most about the people who are gone."

I saw that little message on Facebook and it spoke to me. That's because I've been trying to do that for decades.

Sometimes I manage it.

Sometimes I fail no matter how hard I try.

For much of my life the person I most wanted to emulate is my Aunt Rose. Telling you why she is so special in just a few paragraphs is hard. But I'll tell you this.

From the time I was a girl of about 10, I realized my Aunt Rose was special. She had four sisters, all beautiful and all into the importance of looks.

Rose never concerned herself with how she looked or what others thought of her. Sometimes her sisters said her behavior was scandalous.

That's because she did unorthodox things like bringing home a mentally challenged man who had no place to live and no one to care about him.

Filled with compassion, Aunt Rose could never see anyone hurting without trying to help.

When my parents divorced, my mother was left with no place to live and no means to support two children on her own. It was my Aunt Rose who got her through it.

Although she only had a small house, Rose made room for us in her home and in her heart.

I loved listening to her stories at the dinner table. Often she was ranting about how the union was trying to put her out of business.

As the young owner of a very small dress factory struggling to survive, she was often in verbal battles with the ILGWU.

Oh, one thing I forgot to tell you. She was forceful and persuasive with a booming voice. People tended to do whatever Rose wanted.

One day at work, someone gave her an aspirin for her headache. No one knew it was penicillin, to which she was allergic. She died instantly at the age of 54.

She left this world, but she never left my heart.

At her funeral, so many strangers came forward to tell us how she helped them.

I never stopped trying to be like her. But even when I tried to do something mundane like organize a family reunion, no one listened to me like they did to Rose. I simply didn't have her forceful personality.

When I applied for a good-paying office job with the union Aunt Rose was often battling, I thought they might hold my relationship to her against me.

Instead, I got the job

WARMEST REGARDS

By Pattie Mihalik

because of her.

"I picked you," the union boss said, "because you remind me of your Aunt Rose. She was someone I highly respected and admired."

Few compliments have made me prouder, even though I know I can never do half the good she did.

But I keep trying.

I also keep trying to emulate the strength my mother had in life. When I have to go through a painful procedure, I close my eyes and think of my mother and all she endured, telling myself her strength runs through my veins. It always gets me through the situation.

I try, too, to emulate my father's unconditional love. He always made clear he didn't love me because I did well and achieved some nice things. He loved me simply because I was his daughter. I never had to earn his love. It was always there, always unwavering.

After Dad's health failed and he could no longer drive, my sister and I complained that my brother didn't travel to see him. My father shushed us, saying, "Never complain about family."

Family was priceless to dad. He taught us to stick together without judgment. It's sometimes hard, but Dad drummed into us family is sacred.

If he knew something negative about someone, he never repeated it.

As I age, I'm a little bit better about not judging. But I have a long way to go.

I like that quote about being the things you loved most about people who are gone.

My husband, Andy, died 15 years ago. I learned some important lasting lessons from him, but I think it would be impossible for me to emulate Andy.

When we first met my friends, I called him St. Andrew. He remained that way until his death.

In more than 41 years of marriage, he lost his temper with me once. Looking back on it, it seems impossible to believe.

Another thing that's hard to believe is how Andy could endure so much pain and illness without ever complaining.

He never complained. Not once. He endured two debilitating strokes and three cases of cancer in a remarkably stoic way.

How to deal with pushy salesperson

Dear Jacquelyn, The other day, I went to a big retailer and crossed paths with a salesperson who was pushy. After the first couple of tries to excuse myself, I started to feel uncomfortable. I was not interested in the product he was selling and he would not take "No" for an answer. How do you politely tell a persistent salesperson you are not interested?

Dear Reader, Working in sales is about convincing potential customers they can't live without a product. You just so happened to encounter an aggressive

RESPECTFULLY YOURS

By Jacquelyn Youst

sive one who wouldn't take "No" for an answer. Salespeople know that their persistence can break your resolve.

A common sales strategy is to engage you in conversation, keep you talking. Your savvy salesperson was hoping you might eventually run out of excuses and give in. When you understand basic sales tactics, you can turn the tables and break away easier.

The next time an overly ambitious salesperson frustrates you, remain polite and calm. Be prepared with a basic response, but be firm with your words. Simply say, "No, thank you. Have a good day."

Seasoned salespeople are also skilled at reading your body language to determine if you are going to buy a product. Send the message that you're uninterested by not making eye contact, turning and walking away.

He or she should get a clear signal that you're not interested. Remember, if the salesperson senses you're on the fence, he or she will continue the sales pitch.

Don't take it personally when you encounter a forceful salesperson.

He or she is just doing his or her job, and if the salesperson is doing it right, he or she won't make you feel like running in the opposite direction.

Respectfully Yours, Jacquelyn

Your Top 10 list to achieve a long life

Q. What are your best recommendations for achieving a long life?

The American Geriatrics Society's Foundation for Health in Aging offers a Top 10 list for longevity that can't be beat. Here's an edited version of the list. The clichés are mine.

1. Go Over The Rainbow: You need fewer calories when you get older. Choose nutrient-rich foods like brightly-colored fruits and vegetables. Eat a range of colors. The more varied the colors, the wider the range of nutrients you're likely to get.

2. Take A Hike: Walking as little as 30 minutes, three times a week can help you stay physically fit and mentally sharp, strengthen your bones, lift your spirits and lower your risk of falls.

3. Bottoms Up:

HEALTHY GEEZER

By Fred Cicetti

fred@healthygeez.com

Drinking a moderate amount of alcohol may lower your risks of heart disease and some other illnesses. What's "moderate" changes with age. It means one drink per day for older men and a half drink daily for older women. A "drink" is one ounce of hard liquor, six ounces of wine, or 12 ounces of beer.

4. Get In The Sack: Contrary to popular belief, older people don't need less sleep than younger adults. Most need at least seven or eight hours of shuteye a night. If you're getting that much and are still sleepy during the day, see a health-care professional.

5. Twist Your

Brain: Sharpen your mind by playing computer games, doing crossword puzzles, learning a new language, and engaging in social give-and-take with others.

6. Wear A Love Glove: Older adults are having sex more often and enjoying it more, research finds. Unfortunately, more older people are also being diagnosed with sexually-transmitted diseases. To protect yourself, use a condom.

7. Review Your Drugs: When you visit your health-care professional, bring all of the prescription and over-the-counter medications, vitamins, herbs and supplements you take, or a complete list that notes the names of each, the doses you take, and how often you take them. Ask your health-care provider to review everything you brought or put on your list. He or she should make sure they're safe for you to take, and that they don't interact in harmful ways. The older you are, and the more medicines you take, the more likely you are to experience medication side effects, even from drugs bought over-the-counter.

8. Speak Up When You Feel Down: About one in five older adults suffers from depression or anxiety. Lingering sadness, tiredness, loss of appetite or pleasure from things you once enjoyed, difficulty sleeping, worry, irritability, and wanting to be alone much of the time can all be signs that you need help. Tell your health-care professional right away. There are many good treatments for these problems.

9. Get Your Vaccinations: Must-have vaccines for seniors include those that protect against pneumonia, tetanus-diphtheria, shingles, and the flu, which kills thousands of older adults in the United States every year.

10. See Your Doctor: See your health-care professional regularly and bring a written list of questions with you so you don't forget to get all the answers you need.
