Some time ago, according to information received by members of their family, three brothers, Michael, Stephen and John Ferrani of 129 Crest Avenue, learned of each others presence "somewhere in England," and went out of their way to meet. According to the information, it was a happy reunion. Private Michael Ferrani, a veteran of campaigns in North Africa and other major engagements, is one of a trio of Bethlehemites who were transferred to England to train troops. His brothers, recently advanced to the rank of Private First Class, are both in units of the U. S. Medical Corps. John has been in Uncle Sam's service for the past three years, two of which he spent overseas. Following his induction he was sent to Camp Pickett for his preliminary training, and was later transferred to Camp Dix. Stephen was inducted on February 18, 1943, received his preliminary training at Camp Pickett, and was then sent to Camp Devon, Mass. Both had been employes of the Bethlehem Steel Company before their induction.
