District seeks reassessment on commercial properties

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Long a method used by property owners to reduce their tax bills, the assessment appeal will now be used by Bethlehem Area School District (BASD) to increase revenue – they call it a “reverse tax appeal.”

Administration officials think they can collect $1.5 to $2 million more per year from residents by getting some big-ticket properties reassessed.

BASD Superintendent Joseph Roy said if the district had received that money, last year's budget would have only been increased 3.3 percent instead of the 4.8 percent that was approved.

The school board voted July 23 to let the administration commission Keystone Realty Advisors “take a proactive approach to real estate assessments,” meaning the school board solicitor can now file documents with ArtsQuest honoree Marlene “Linny” Fowler rises to the occasion as her husband Beall Fowler and U.S. Congressman Charlie Dent provide assistance during the Musikfest Opening Ceremony Friday at Americaplatz at the Levitt Pavilion SteelStacks. The philanthropist and Bethlehem resident was recognized for her many years of dedication to nonprofit ArtsQuest and the community.

Musikfest thanks Linny Fowler with its Founders Award

By PAT KESLING
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Calling major patron Marlene “Linny” Fowler “an all around wonderful person, an angel,” Jeff Parks, president and CEO of ArtsQuest, thanked her and presented her with this year's Musikfest Founders Award at Musikfest opening ceremonies Friday night at the new Americaplatz at the SteelStacks campus on Bethlehem's Southside.

“I don't know if we'd be here today without Linny and Beall Fowler's help. They have been with us since the idea of the Banana Factory was floated years ago and their philanthropy, vision and general support have brought us here to SteelStacks, which wasn't even started two years ago,” said Parks.

“Linny is a person who over three decades has sought out ways to help people and organizations by sharing her love of art, her time and treasure. So many projects, so many children who received art classes and education, would never have happened without her.”

“Beall and I have been privileged to be able to help people and organizations. It warms our hearts. We have tried to be good stewards and urge others to do whatever they can,” Linny said. “My main focus now is to help lower economic and minority students with some aid for higher education.”

The Fowlers have helped many young people to move forward to receive advanced degrees and have high level employment.

Linny's husband said, “We, especially Linny, believe and have acted on the thought that with a little bit of help, people can achieve so much.”

ArtsQuest created a video to honor the couple. In that video, Dr. Arthur Scott, former president of Northampton Community College, said it was imperative to have a Southside campus.

“We didn't know how we were going to do it and then the Fowler family stepped up,” Scott said. “So many stu-

Liberty student earns national math honors

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Troi Pitt has her name in lights – really. The 15-year old math whiz's name is literally in lights at the corner of Easton and East Elizabeth avenues where Liberty HS's digital message board trumpets successes and important events to passersby.

Troi recently won a Bronze Medal in Houston, Texas, when she placed in the Academic, Cultural, Technological and Scientific Olympics math competition sponsored by the NAACP.

The LHS sophomore was one of four girls that the Bethlehem Chapter of the NAACP sent to the national competition.

According to her mother, Troi maintains a 3.9 GPA and is an honor student. She credits Northeast MS math teacher Linda Shive and LHS 9th grade honors algebra teacher Marietta Zweifel as being inspirational teachers in her daughter's academic success.

ACT-SO, a youth program sponsored by the NAACP, encourages academic and cultural achievement among underserved minority high school students.

Community volunteers and business leaders serve as mentors and coaches in promoting academic and artistic excellence among African-American and Hispanic students, according to the organization's website.

Troi said her love of M&M candies led to the winner math project in which she demonstrated the probability of finding brown M&Ms in any given package of the popular candy.

She said there are six colors of M&Ms and that her project demonstrated that statistically there will be 10 brown ones in a batch of 100.

The other colors are red, blue, green, yellow and orange, according to an Internet search.

Troi plans to be a pharmacist and U.S. Congressman Charlie Dent and Guto Bebb, a visiting conservative member of Parliament for Aberconwy, Wales, joined area business, economic development and education representatives at a roundtable discussion about business issues July 27 in the Greater Lehigh Valley Chamber of Commerce's Bethlehem office.

For a little over an hour the two elected officials responded to questions covering the impact of unemployment rates on job prospects for recent college graduates, employment retraining, business taxes, labor issues, apprenticeship programs, health-care, and the current financial crisis in Europe. Bebb is one of six members of Parliament currently in the United States "shadowing" congressmen to learn more about the American political process and the solutions it considers to address business and economic development issues. He was elected in 2010 "because of the economic crisis" and said that his country is "still in a very bad situation" due to a lack of consumer confidence and the current financial crisis in the European Union.

Both Dent and Bebb found common ground throughout the discussion and agreed when Dent said, that is a "crisis of confidence that needs to be addressed."

Earlier in the day Dent and Bebb had visited Air Products and had plans to visit a hi-tech farm in Lebanon, neighborhoods in Kutztown, and the Welsh Society in Bangor during their time in Dent's Congressional 15th District.

Council increases pool rates*HELLERTOWN

By MARK RECCEK
 mrecek@tnonline.com

Due to recent incidents at the Hellertown pool, Hellertown Borough Council July 16 unanimously approved increasing pool rates from $5 to $10 for adults and from $4 to $8 for children.

Rate changes resulted from discussions July 2 regarding reports of recent thefts, parents leaving children unattended at the pool, the use of inappropriate language and failure to follow pool rules.

Councilwoman Gail Nolf said the rate increases are necessary to help reduce the influx of non-residents.

In addition to the rate increase, large coolers are now prohibited at the pool and the borough will no longer offer free swimming after 6 p.m. or discounted swimming after 4 p.m. and rain checks will no longer be provided. The pools lower side gate will also be closed to everyone except visitors with strollers and handicapped individuals.

Council indicated the rate changes were also necessary as other area pools charge higher daily fees for swimmers. In particular, Mayor Richard Fluck said Quakertown charges $12 daily and $8 for children.

The pool rate changes became effective July 21. Council anticipates discussing new pool rules prior to the 2013 swim season.

In other business, council approved the purchase of a new garbage truck. The monies for the truck originated from an already existing budgeted funding source.

Also during the meeting, council adopted a resolution to withdraw from the pending litigation concerning the Neighborhood Improvement Zone (NIZ) in Allentown. The law as initially drafted will allow for local residents' earned income taxes to be used to construct Allentown's hockey stadium. State legislators recently removed from the legislation the ability of Allentown to retain earned income taxes.

Hellertown Police Chief Robert Shupp also recognized Officer Carl Fisher for receiving a Northampton County award for issuing the most traffic citations for DUI arrests.

CITY POLICE

Arrests

Police arrested 31-year-old Angel Nieves during separate, unrelated incidents at local fast-food restaurants late July 21.

According to police, around 11:30 p.m. Nieves, of Ramblewood Lane, was at the Easton Avenue McDonald's trying to sell a necklace to a woman. When she refused to buy, he allegedly spat in her face.

Nieves was arrested for harassment.

About two hours later a woman at the nearby Arby's saw a man inside her parked car, allegedly attempting tampering with the controls.

Police identified Nieves and charged him with public drunkenness, theft and criminal attempt of auto theft.

DUI

Police arrested 28-year-old Daniel Falcon, of South 13th Street in Allentown, for allegedly driving while intoxicated around 11:30 p.m. July 20.

According to police, Falcon's vehicle made an illegal left turn directly in front of a police patrol car on West Fourth Street and was pulled over.

Police said Falcon had an open container of beer in the car and was driving while under suspension.

Falcon is charged with several driving and DUI violations.

Hanover Township got the ball rolling. It was the first municipality to support a legal challenge to Allentown's controversial Neighborhood Improvement Zone (NIZ). A creature of a 2009 state law that could only ever apply to Allentown, it authorized the diversion of all earned income taxes from workers inside a 130-acre NIZ, even those who reside outside the Queen City.

Sixteen townships and boroughs, along with a school district, eventually joined this litigation.

State legislators listened, and on June 30 amended the NIZ law to remove language that authorized an EIT tax grab. They also expanded the definition of a Neighborhood Improvement Zone so that it could conceivably apply to other municipalities.

Following an executive session before their July 24 meeting, supervisors unanimously voted to authorize solicitor Jim Broughal to terminate the challenge when he determines it is in the best interest of the township and its residents.

After filing this suit, both Hanover and Bethlehem townships were peppered with 28 Right-to-Know requests filed by Allentown Department of Community and Economic Development Director Sara Hailstone. In addition, Morning Call columnist Bill White called township officials "smug" and "hypocrites."

"We had to bite our tongue and just take it," remarked supervisors' chair John Diacogiannis.

But after the vote, he spoke out. Instead of lashing out, he wished Allentown well on the "difficult challenge" of revitalization. He explained that the litigation was never aimed at the Allentown arena or even the NIZ, but at "ill-conceived legislation that took away a revenue stream for local municipalities and school districts. This loss of revenue over a 30-year period would have had significant impact on many of these entities."

On July 16, Bethlehem Township authorized solicitor Jim Broughal, who also represents Hanover, to withdraw the

Reilly's 55+ community gets approval

By BERNIE O'HARE

Special to the Bethlehem Press

When Hanover Township Supervisors met on July 24, they directed their solicitor to terminate their legal challenge to Allentown's Neighborhood Improvement Zone (NIZ). That's where developer J.B. Reilly has plans for office buildings, a luxury hotel and housing.

But that's not all.

Supervisors also approved plans for Reilly's 55+ active adult community on Bridle Path Road, located next to the former St. Frances Academy.

Reilly already has one active 55+ community on Jandl Boulevard in Hanover Township, named by Where to Retire magazine as one of the top 100 best master-planned communities in the United States.

Reilly's newest 55+ community, called Traditions of America at Bridle Path, will include 204 homes on a 68-acre lot. It will be built in phases.

In 2007 when this plan was first proposed, over 450 residents objected, most of them highly critical about traffic and the development's impact on Monocacy Creek, a highly regarded native brown trout stream. But nobody objected to the latest rendition of this development. It includes a substantial conservation easement along the Monocacy, along with improvements to Jacksonville and Bridle Path Roads.

Plans were presented by David Biddison, general counsel to Traditions Capital.

Smile! An orthodontist is coming to Wegmans

By BERNIE O'HARE

Special to the Bethlehem Press

Wegmans thinks of everything. Though customers love those oatmeal raisin cookies and Chuckles candy bars, they can still have perfect smiles. That's because Dr. Luis J. Alvarez will be moving his orthodontist offices to Stoke Park Road and Wegmans Drive, right across the street from the upscale grocer. Following a July 26 hearing, Hanover zoners unanimously granted dimensional variances from setback requirements.

Representing Alvarez, Attorney Christine Durso argued that the irregular, flagpole-shaped lot, makes those variances necessary.

Engineer Robert Caraciolo noted that the proposed one-story, 5,824-square-foot building only takes up about 6 percent of the 1.99 acre lot. He added that there will be 42 parking spaces, one more than required under Hanover's zoning ordinance. In addition, the property will be heavily buffered with evergreens, to assure the privacy of residential neighbors.

Six residents attended the hearing but had no problem with the requested variance.

"I have no objection to what they want to do," stated Orvis Pike. "All I'm concerned about is what is going to happen to Fairview Street."

Pike, along with other residents like Gary Kepner, told zoners that Fairview Street borders their properties, but dead ends right before it reaches the Alvarez tract. Despite a warning sign,

"Born Again"

Jesus said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3). The Bible teaches that there are only two eternal destinations—heaven or hell! The conclusion is both simple and shocking! Since one "must be born again" (v.7) to go to heaven, the destination of those who are not "born again" is—hell!

So, what did Jesus mean by using the term "born again" in His conversation with this Jewish ruler? After all, Nicodemus was a good, moral, religious person. Were not these qualities sufficient to get him into Heaven? Jesus explained that this second birth was "of the spirit" (John 3:5) much like the wind which can be heard and felt, but not seen. One is supernaturally "born again" by the invisible Spirit of God—not by outward religious ritual!

Nicodemus asked how it happens and Jesus referred to Moses who had placed a serpent of brass on a pole, at God's instruction, to save the Israelites who were dying from deadly snake bites—a judgment for complaining against God (Numbers 21:8). When they believed and looked upon the serpent on the pole, as God instructed, they miraculously lived! Likewise, Jesus said that He would be lifted up on the cross and those who believe and look upon Him would miraculously be "born again." "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

When one believes on Jesus, he is "born again" and his eternal destination is changed from hell to heaven as John the Baptist explained, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3:36). I urge you to believe on Jesus and receive Him now in prayer (see: www.naog.ws/message.htm). "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God" (John 1:12).

Zoners nix Center Street office

BETHLEHEM

By BERNIE O'HARE

2210 Center St. will remain a residence ... at least for now.

Bethlehem zoners have denied a use variance that would have permitted developer Abe Atiyeh to relocate his offices from Whitehall Manor to a residence at the northeast corner of Center Street and Dewberry Avenue. Following a three-hour hearing July 23, attended by approximately 40 neighborhood opponents, Atiyeh's application was denied by a 4-0 vote.

Atiyeh's right-hand man, engineer David Harte, told zoners that there would be no changes to the residential appearance of the property, located on a .67 acre lot at 2110 Center St. Instead of occupying it as a home, up to nine Atiyeh employees would work there Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Eleven parking places, accessible from Dewberry Avenue, would be screened from nearby residences. No signage would advertise the business, and there would only be an occasional visitor.

He assured everyone that a business use would not change the character of the neighborhood.

Harte added that the property, four times the size of lots across the street, is a "unique" property, a poor fit for a family with small children. In addition to being adjacent to a church with a large parking lot, Harte noted the heavy traffic in that area, as well as a traffic light at a "busy street corner" and the lack of a sidewalk on Center Street. He added there are already numerous nonresidential uses in the area, from Kirkland Village stores to a nearby cemetery.

Representing Atiyeh, attorney Mark Malkames characterized the proposed business as "low impact, low intensity, nobody knows they're there" kind of use.

But neighbors argued that allowing this business use would open the door to other businesses wanting to move into a residential area.

Main Street resident Mike Polay likened the situation to a "camel getting his nose in the tent," arguing there are "plenty of other places where this use is proper." Vicki Ebert expressed concerns about accidents that would be caused by increased traffic at the site, adding that she personally witnessed three accidents of vehicles being rear-ended while trying to access the property. And Brian Taylor, who is raising three children across the street, disputed Harte's contention that traffic makes the neighborhood unsafe for children.

Frank Kovacs, a contractor who lives on nearby Main Street, called the proposal "unconscionable," and cast doubt on Atiyeh's intentions. "You give him an inch, he takes a mile," Kovacs argued.

Representing six of these neighbors, attorney Steve Goudsouzian argued that Atiyeh had failed to meet any of the criterion for a variance.

"If you find this is unique, you open the door to every single person in Bethlehem to come in and ask for a variance, willy-nilly," he said.

Although Atiyeh's request for a use variance has been denied, this might be a pyrrhic victory for neighborhood opponents. A new zoning ordinance, under consideration by City Council, will allow business uses on corner properties by special exception, providing there is evidence that the property was once used as a business.

Harte produced aerial photographs and permits establishing that this Center Street corner property was used as a greenhouse until some point in 1972.

In other business, zoners voted 4-0 to allow Christopher Brumfield to erect an above-ground swimming pool at 719 Hawthorne Road. Brumfield needed a variance to move the 12-foot-diameter pool away from power lines. Neighbor Kenton Sem complained about the noise that would be caused by a pump on a "postage stamp" lot, but Brumfield assured zoners that noise levels would only increase about six decibels.

Normal conversation, from a distance of three feet, has a decibel level of 60.

Caracciolo told residents this problem will have to be addressed in the planning process. He agreed it might be necessary to extend Fairview Street to the service road.

"We seek to be good neighbors and to follow the directions of the township," the engineer assured everyone.

Solicitor Ted Lewis told residents that their concerns about Fairview Street are beyond the authority of a zoning board but should be made known to the planning commission.

Alvarez's wife, Christine, told zoners that offices will be open Monday through Thursday, 8 p.m. to 5 p.m. In response to resident concerns about possible noise from air compressors associated with dental work, Alvarez stated that orthodontists have no need for them.

Alvarez has two offices. His primary location is in Center Valley. A second office at 190 Brodhead Road will be relocated to Hanover.

According to Dr. Alvarez, he hopes to be up and running by this time next year.

Watlington brought home gold in swimming

By KATIE MCDONALD

He who goes into the last wall the hardest comes out the fastest.

Whether Freedom's Seth Watlington remembers these as famous last words, or words he will never forget, one thing is for certain: a PIAA State Class AAA Swimming and Diving Championship gold medal in the breaststroke won by the Patriot swimmer this March at Bucknell University.

At the time, Watlington said, "I kind of just came up from when I touched, and I saw the scoreboard because it was right there. It was an overwhelming feeling of joy and adrenaline. It was kind of like a 'Finally!' type thing. I'm just glad I decided to dig in and go for it."

Freedom swimming coach, Barb Glaser, saw everything come together for Watlington that day.

"I was really happy for him. He peaked at the right moment. He's so intent and so insistent that he's not going to come in second," Glaser said.

Perhaps what made the state championship even sweeter for Watlington was that he had been trailing for most of the race.

"I was actually behind until the last five yards, the last three strokes," Watlington said.

Fortunately, those magic words that were spoken to him by a teammate's father, prior to the event, kicked in, and Watlington won the breaststroke by .06 seconds in 55:89.

In addition, Watlington also won a PIAA State medal in the 200 IM, placing eighth in 1:54.52.

Coach Glaser said, "That's the fun part of coaching: when you're standing on the deck and everything you worked for comes together. You know that behind that speed is so much work. I couldn't be prouder."

Glaser had watched the progression of Watlington over four years, noticing the biggest changes during his junior year; then, his senior year.

"Junior year, he was beginning to understand the notion of being on a team. He really, really came around senior year in that regard. He had a way about him that was approachable, soft, and open," said Glaser.

Watlington also had a singular focus that translated

Giangiobbe proved there's never a doubt

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Brianne Giangiobbe doesn't like it when people doubt her.

They've been doing it for years in regards to her volleyball acumen.

Despite being an all-state volleyball member for two straight years, as well as claiming first-team LVC honors and District 11 all-star status her senior year at Freedom, Giangiobbe may have still had her doubters.

But if there's one thing that Giangiobbe thrives on, it's doubt.

But if there was one thing that we couldn't doubt this year, it's that Giangiobbe is Freedom's female athlete of the year for the Bethlehem Press.

The Lafayette bound outside hitter was the rock for the Patriots the past two years and was one of the top volleyball players in the region.

On top of that, she was Freedom's most valuable female track athlete as well, taking third at leagues in the 200 and was apart of a third place 4 X 100 team at districts.

It's all part of the makeup of Giangiobbe's body of work of never giving up as her motivation.

"People always said that I was too small for volleyball," said Giangiobbe, who stands at 5-foot-8. "I went to Philadelphia four times a week for the past couple years to work harder at volleyball and it paid off."

"I never tried to pay too much attention to what people would say. I just focused on playing the game I love and that's what makes everything so gratifying. I get to keep playing a sport I love in college."

Giangiobbe also used her older brother Joseph as a form of inspiration to achieve the dream of playing collegiate athletics.

Joseph is a junior on Lebanon Valley's basketball team and Giangiobbe hoped that she could one day emulate her older sibling in the collegiate athletic realm.

DON HUNT MEMORIAL

Soccer games announced

Girls contests added to fall schedule this year

The Super 2 Challenge, as it has unofficially been called, began in fall of 1998 as a result of the breakup of the East Penn Conference.

In desperate need of independent games for the 1998-99 season, the five remaining conference members (Allen, Becahi, CCHS, Dieruff and Emmaus) developed a challenge concept pitting the EPC against the Philadelphia Catholic League in a variety of sports. The sports selected for that first year were cross-country, field hockey, boys soccer, boys basketball, girls basketball, wrestling, baseball, softball and track.

Once the concept and match-ups were solidified the conference focused on finding a sponsor. Service Electric Station Manager Don Hunt enthusiastically embraced the idea and offered financial backing and television coverage for the entire series; thus the origin of the original name, "The Service Electric Super 2 EPC - PCL Challenge".

Throughout its 14-year history, the challenge has gone through some necessary changes such as the streamlining of sports, the addition of new venues, the infusion of new opponents and the unfortunate and untimely passing of Don Hunt.

What has not changed however is TV 2's commitment to the youth of the Lehigh Valley and their financial support, which this year will exceed $500,000 in cash and contributions such as t-shirts, water, transportation costs, official fees and site costs. Utilizing the creativity and enthusiasm of Sports Director Mike Zambelli the challenge has evolved into a solid five-sport competition (baseball, field hockey, boys and girls soccer and softball) that is viewed as one of the highlights of the sports season.

Now, as preparations take place to enter the 15th year of competition, the "Don Hunt Memorial LVC Challenge Series" offers this unique opportunity to many more student athletes and fans from the local area.

The Lehigh Valley Interscholastic Athletic Conference wishes to thank Service Electric President John Walson, Jr., Station Manager Andy Himmelwright, Sports Director Mike Zambelli and their staffs for their continued support and sponsorship of this event. Without Service Electric and 2 Sports the challenge series would not be possible.

Liberty advances to summer semis

By PETER CAR
pcar@tntonline.com

Summer league basketball can be defined in various ways in terms of importance for the upcoming season, but you'll never hear a coach be disappointed in his team having more opportunities to play.

Liberty has that chance this week as they rolled into the semifinals of the Stellar Summer League at Cedar Beach.

The Hurricanes took on Dieruff in one of the semifinals, while Central Catholic and Emmaus battled in the other semifinal.

Liberty head coach Chad Landis didn't expect his team to be playing this late in the year, but takes it with open arms.

"You never know what to expect in the summer because you don't know which kids are going to come," he said. "We expected to make the playoffs, but you can never fully anticipate how far you're going to go after that. It's a good experience for our guys to extend their summer by one or two more games."

Liberty scored a 56-54 victory over Allen in the quarterfinals to advance to the semis, where they hope to pull the double on the Allentown schools, but knocking off a feisty Dieruff team would not be an easy task.

The Huskies defeated Bangor 55-42 to advance to play Liberty and have been one of the pleasant surprises of the summer.

"They've had a solid core of kids coming every week and they've been playing real well," said Landis. "We're going to be without a couple key guys, so it's going to be a tough matchup for us."

Liberty was expected to be without Chavon Williams, Greg Noack and KJ Williams to surely diminish their starting five, but also give other players an opportunity to shine.

"There will definitely be more shots to go around," Landis said. "We just need to play well and finish strong. We lost in the first round of the playoffs a year ago, so for us to improve upon that this year is a good sign."

Union players coming to Musikfest

Philadelphia Union soccer fans will have two opportunities to meet the players of their favorite team at Musikfest this week thanks to 6abc.

The Union's Chris Konopka will appear at the 6abc booth at Banana Island to sign autographs, pose for photos and talk with fans. In addition, everyone who stops by will receive a free giveaway item from the team.

Goalkeeper Konopka, from Toms River, N.J., will be on hand Thursday, Aug. 9, from 4:30-6 p.m. Guests can also meet Action News personalities such as meteorologist Mellissa McGee and reporter Jennifer Joyce, as well as have their photos taken at the Action News Photo Booth.

Musikfest 2012 continues through Sunday, Aug. 12.

This year's festival features more than 500 performances on 15 stages, as well as 60 food vendors, 40 artisans and a wide variety of family fun.

For more information, visit www.musikfest.org.

Tragedy at Eagles camp

The tragedy that engulfed the Philadelphia Eagles organization Sunday morning was one of shock and sadness with the sudden death of Garrett Reid.

PRESS PASS
BY PETER CAR

The 29-year-old son of head coach Andy Reid was found unresponsive in a Lehigh University dorm room at 7:20 a.m. Sunday when he was found by an Eagles official.

The aftermath and questions that remain are now part of the puzzle that the Reid family, Eagles organization and fans seek in the wake of a family tragedy.

Questions regarding Garrett Reid's history have certainly come under scrutiny in regards to his troubled past with prescription pills and bouts with heroin addiction that came to the forefront during a traffic stop on January 30, 2007 where Reid was arrested on drug charges.

The Reid's have publicly said that Garrett's drug problems started in 2002 when he attended Brigham Young University and became involved with OxyContin and heroin.

Now, a sudden death overnight during Eagles training camp has led many people to speculate on the causes of Garrett Reid's death. By the time this article is published, an autopsy was expected to be performed on Reid's body to give people clarity on the causes of such a tragic loss for the Reid family.

But make no mistake about it, this is a loss for the entire Eagles family. Garrett Reid was a staple on the practice field, serving as an assistant to strength and conditioning coach Barry Rubin.

As Eagles defensive back Nnamdi Asomugha put it on Sunday, "Garrett is a part of our football family, our extended family, our immediate family, so it's a very tough time for us."

Eagles General Manager Howie Roseman has spent his entire 14-year career with the Eagles and Andy Reid. Now, he'll be helping the head coach and his friend deal with a problem greater than any X's and O's.

"We've been with Andy for a long time. He's always been strong for us; we're going to be strong for him right now," Roseman said. "As a father and a friend, we're all hurting."

After finding out the results of the autopsy, the next question is how will the Eagles move forward and when will the Reid family be able to heal?

The NFL is a microscopic sports league, where each and every minute of the day is scripted for the coaching fraternity.

Having to deal with the death of your child is a task that Reid is now dealt with.

Eagles' brass have called the head coach "rock-solid" in the wake of the tragedy, but nobody really knows how Reid is dealing with it internally.

When Reid took a six week leave of absence in 2007 following the

Alabama Rig designed to fool fish, deep or shallow

By NICK HROMIAK
Special to the Press

In these sweltering hot, dog days of summer, freshwater fishing is tough, especially if fishing during mid morning to mid afternoon hours. It's at this time when live bait is preferred to entice a bass, pickerel or walleye to hit.

But keep in mind predator fish can sometimes be found in shallow water around cover where they can grab an easy meal or deep water near some sort of structure, say the bass fishing pros. Some fish will hold close to the bottom, while others may suspend. But they'll all be where their food is. Your job is to find them with the best times being early morning or late evening hours.

But there is one artificial rig that has the potential to fool fish if they're deep, suspended or shallow. It's a not a new concept, just one that was adapted to freshwater fishing. What I'm referring to is the Alabama Rig that was designed by Andy Poss of Muscle Shoals, Alabama and being marketed by Mann's Bait Company, a lure maker whose name is synonymous with bass fishing.

The Alabama Rig incorporates five wires emanating from a center point with an artificial minnow head joining the group of wires together. The five wires have snap swivels on each end where up to five lures or bait can be attached. The entire rig can be cast to cover or structure or slowly trolled. In essence, it's like fishing saltwater teaser arrays or Christmas trees as they're often called.

Mann's Alabama Rig may be a productive lure during these dog days of summer.

The rig became a huge hit on bass fishing tournaments last year. Even though the lure sells for $25, the company had problems filling all the orders after bass pro Paul Elias used it to overwhelmingly win an FLW tournament in Alabama.

But the lure has come with some problems. Seems the extra hooks were catching fish on their shoulders, sides and faces causing unexpected injuries. Because of this, the lure has been banned on the B.A.S.S. Elite Tour as some anglers look upon them as unsporting. [Golf is going through a similar situation with long, belly putters and years ago with Ping's square grooves in their iron faced clubs.]

In checking on the legality of the Alabama Rig for Pennsylvania waters, Eric Levis, Pennsylvania Fish & Boat Commission's media relations manager, said they are not illegal as long as there's no more than three hooks being used or attached to one line with the exception being during ice fishing.

So, the answer would be to simply attach hookless plastic worms, spinners or crankbaits on the remaining two wires in teaser fashion, or just put a single hooked bait on the slightly longer center wire which is the one that customarily gets hit.

To use Mann's Alabama Rig, you'll need a stout bait casting rod and reel spooled with 20-pound test line as you'll be heaving some pretty heavy hardware.

During these slow fishing days, the Alabama Rig may be worth a try. Probably the only time it wouldn't be too productive would be during winter months. But then who knows, maybe it would work.

arrest of Garrett, as well as his brother Britt, on separate drug related traffic incidents, the Eagles season was over after an 8-8 finish that found them last in the NFC East.

Reid had time to cope. He had time to deal.

With the hype and expectations surrounding this team heading into their September 9 opener at Cleveland, Reid is dealing with the biggest blow of his life in the midst of season preparations.

This will undoubtedly be a rallying cry for the organization and its players, as their love and support the coach has been evident.

Quarterback Michael Vick tweeted "My condolences go out to Coach Reid and his family. Stay strong and we LOVE you coach."

Todd Herremans added, "Terrible news today. Please pray for the Reid family in this tough time. Garret was a good friend and will truly be missed!"

As much as this may be football related, it's also another reminder about the fragility of life.

One day you're on the football field working, the next day you are gone forever.

It's reminders like these that make you more grateful for what you have in life, no matter the circumstances.

Watlington: golden in swimming

into a leadership role.

Glaser explained that teammates would see Watlington performing his workouts on his own, and ask what he was doing.

"To see that kind of individual commitment, that was a teachable moment," Glaser said.

Before the PIAA State meet, Watlington won District 11 gold in the breaststroke with a time of 56.28, breaking a 2006 district record.

Watlington also won District 11 gold in the 200 IM with a time of 1:54.37.

Glaser said, "This year was the perfect example of total commitment to very necessary and difficult training. The psychology of swimming is often overlooked. You can be powerful, but the two have to meet. His head was in the game. He lived and breathed swimming."

At the start of the 2011-2012 season, not only was Watlington preparing for his final year of high school swimming, he was planning for a future at the United States Naval Academy.

"He really stepped up his game. At a Division I school like Navy, you'll be hurting if you don't. He spent a whole year upping his game," said Glaser.

Not only did Watlington need to balance the mental aspect of swimming with the physical, he needed to balance academics with athletics.

"His time commitment is unparalleled. Academics is supposed to come first, and for Seth, it did. He was able to work on dryland and in the water; he had a high GPA, and he had a social life. He was setting himself up well for the demands of Navy," said Glaser.

Watlington also holds Freedom's pool record in the breaststroke with a time of 58.43, which was set this season during the Patriots' meet against Emmaus.

"He'd be a good mentor for anybody," Glaser said.

After all, he who goes into the last wall the hardest, comes out the fastest.

Giangiobbe: don't ever doubt her

"I set a goal for myself to be like my brother and play college athletics," Giangiobbe said. "He pushed me to be a better athlete and person and he's one of the people that I look up to the most in my life."

"We always practiced together growing up and he always told me that I could do anything I wanted. I wanted to do well on the court for him."

She paced Freedom's district quarterfinal run this year by amassing 365 kills, 45 aces, 59 blocks, 76 digs and 250 assists last season.

Over her three years on the varsity team at Freedom, Giangiobbe has amassed 993 career kills. Not bad for someone that was presumed to be too short on the court, as she spent the majority of last season as a middle hitter and setter.

And despite losing to Whitehall in five games in districts, Giangiobbe took her final high school volleyball match as the greatest moment of her senior year.

"Even though we lost, it was great to see everyone come together the way we did," Giangiobbe said. "It was amazing to see how we all played hard and played the best game of the season."

She'll miss her track memories as well, but as she moves onto Lafayette's pastures, Giangiobbe has proved her doubters wrong.

"I don't worry about them anymore," she said. "I've accomplished my goals and now I just want to keep getting better at the next level."

Fear of rising costs

Commissioners may ax health department at next meeting

By ANDREW CASS

Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Lehigh County Board of Commissioners discussed a bill that would withdraw Lehigh County from the joint department of health it shares with Northampton County at its July 25 meeting in Allentown.

It was the first reading and discussion of the bill, which is co-sponsored by commissioners Michael Schware, Thomas Creighton III, Vic Mazziotti, Brad Osborne, Scott Ott and Lisa Scheller. The bill will be voted on at the next board of commissioners meeting scheduled for this evening.

Schware, who represents District 5, said financial considerations were the primary reason for wanting to withdraw from the bicounty health department.

"It's something that initially might cost county taxpayers a little bit, but in the future it's something that will certainly grow," Schware said. "As we've learned this year, there's no guarantee in state funding and given the economic situation going forward, I don't see a case where this makes sense from a financial standpoint."

District 2 Commissioner Percy Dougherty, however, opposed the bill and said that pulling out of the joint-county department of health would be a mistake.

"We have less than a third of the population of the Lehigh Valley served by a health department," Dougherty said. "We find that most of the coverage is in the city of Allentown and in the city of Bethlehem. What we need is the same services sent out to the suburbs. Under a joint department, we are looking for universal coverage."

One job, four candidates

Committee passes buck to commissioners full board

LEHIGH CO.

By ANDREW CASS

Special to the Bethlehem Press

After interviewing all four candidates vying to serve out the remainder of County Executive Don Cunningham's term, the intergovernmental and appointments committee (IGAC) decided to not recommend a single name at its Aug. 1 meeting in Allentown.

Instead, a motion was passed by the committee to send all four names to the board of commissioners, to be voted on at its Aug. 8 meeting.

Commissioner Vic Mazziotti, who serves on the IGAC, said he was impressed by the interviews of all four candidates and said he did not feel ready to make a decision.

"This is a more difficult decision than I anticipated," Mazziotti said. "I thought I would be more comfortable voting for a particular candidate tonight and I'm not feeling that comfortable at the moment."

The IGAC was made up of chairman Scott Ott, Thomas Creighton III and Mazziotti.

Daniel McCarthy usually serves as the vice chairman of the committee but did not participate because he is running for the county executive position. The committee was joined by the rest of board of commissioners (except for Commissioner Michael Schware, who was on vacation but was watching the streaming video of the meeting) who could not vote, but could ask questions to the candidates and make suggestions to the committee members.

The four candidates, McCarthy, Matthew Croskis, William Hansell and John Ingram were interviewed in alphabetical order. The interviews were 20 minutes long and started with a series of fixed questions by the IGAC. The questions included asking candidates why they decided to run, what they believe the primary job of the county executive is and how they plan to work on the budget. After the IGAC's questions were completed, the committee members and the other members of the board of commissioners had a chance to ask follow up questions.

After all four candidates were interviewed, the committee and the other board of commissioners discussed who they thought should be nominated.

"I wish I could grab the best parts of each candidate and make a new person," Commissioner Thomas Creighton joked. "Legal has already informed us we're not allowed to do that," Commissioner Ott joked back.

Creighton initially only motioned that Hansell and McCarthy be considered after Commissioner David Jones said the committee should consider someone with experience.

"I think there's a value for experience in that we're asking someone to come in to what is realistically a very large organization, a very complex organization, and a great deal of boundaries and accountabilities to many, many entities outside of itself and the abil-

Outdoor fun and learning activities for children are taking place at Burnside Plantation the third Saturday of each month. Organized by Historic Bethlehem Partnership as part of the Back To Your Roots program, the family events run from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The remaining "fun on the farm" schedule features "Dairy Daze" Aug. 18, "The Amazing Husk" Sept. 15 and "Cooking with the Three Sisters" Oct. 20. The 18th century Burnside Plantation is the only farm in the City of Bethlehem. Children enter free with paid adult admission. Special HBP discount family packages are available. For more information visit www.HistoricBethlehem.org. ABOVE: Summer intern Courtney Conrey of Lehigh University holds a chick during the "Eggs and the Birds that Lay Them" June program at Burnside Plantation.

The fourth annual Daniel's 5k Flight raised $16,500, enough to provide seven scholarships totaling $12,000 for students in three Allentown Diocesan high schools. Daniel's 5K Flight was established to honor the memory of Daniel D'Ambrosio, a pilot who tragically passed away July 31, 2008 in a plane crash at age 27. There were 330 people at the walk. Nickeea Raves, Dan's former fiancée, his parents, Marcia and Peter D'Ambrosio and his brother Anthony thanked everyone who helped make last year's "flight" successful. ABOVE: The runners start off at Spring and Lehigh streets under police escort.

Sayre Observatory

Karen M. Samuels
Columnist

Sayre Observatory, the second building erected at Lehigh University campus in 1868, no longer functions as an observatory and was moved in 2005 from its original site. Today, it is called the Sayre building and houses the Graduate Student Council.

After Alfred Marshall Mayer was hired by Lehigh University as professor of physics and astronomy for the college's first year in 1866, he pleaded with the college board of trustees to build and equip an observatory.

As a young man, Mayer resisted his father's plan to become a lawyer and instead was drawn to the uncertain career path of physicist and astronomer. As Lehigh's first astronomy teacher he voiced his concern that the best way to teach astronomy was with a telescope. Trustee Robert H. Sayre was persuaded to donate $5,000 to build an observatory and purchase equipment.

The observatory building was designed by Mayer and built by Captain James Jenkins, the construction supervisor for the first buildings on the campus. The initial equipment, selected by Mayer, consisted of a 6-inch equatorial telescope made by Alvan Clark & Sons. The telescope sat on an equatorial mount, which allowed it to stay fixed on a moving object. A portable transit instrument, by Stackpole, was purchased to measure vertical angles of heavenly bodies and determine their geographic positions. A sidereal clock by Brand was used to measure the Earth's rotation and to assist locating celestial objects. A zenith telescope by Blunt pointed vertically to the sky and was used to measure latitude of stars.

Many important observations were made in the small stone building. Mayer observed the feature now called the Great Red Spot on Jupiter from the observatory. Although he was not the first to note the spot, he brought attention to its existence through a publication of his findings. In 1870, Mayer measured the size of sunspots and the decline in magnetic activity.

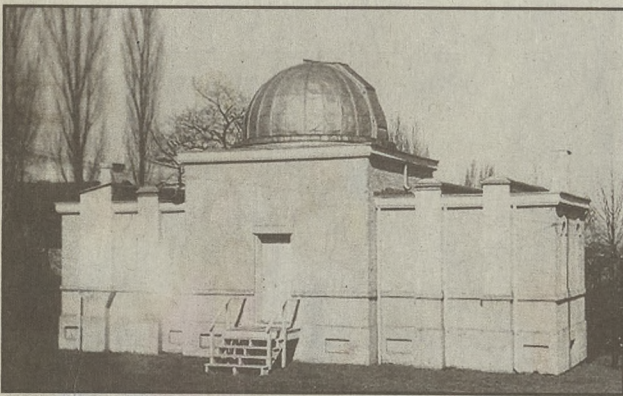

Charles Leander Doolittle, Lehigh's astronomy professor from 1875 to 1895, made more than 12,000 observations that led to his conclusion that a vibration in the measurement of latitude was because the North Pole was moving along the meridian at a rate of four and five tenths of a second per century. Doolittle's pioneering efforts led to the discovery that the sun was almost 300,000 miles greater in diameter than was previously thought.

Through the work of a Lehigh student, Joseph B. Reynolds, an asteroid was named "Planet Lehigh" in 1910. Rev. Joel Metcalf, an amateur astronomer, discovered an asteroid or "minor planet." Asteroids are small bodies of rock that orbit our sun. Their sizes range from 600 miles to less than one mile across. Coincidentally, Planet Lehigh is about the size of the Lehigh Valley. Reynolds calculated the orbit of the asteroid for Metcalf, and in return Lehigh University was permitted to name it.

Ching Sung Yu, a science graduate, spent many hours in the Sayre Observatory during his years at Lehigh. When Yu returned to China, he became the director of the Chinese Academy of Astronomy. In 1929 he designed and founded the Purple Mountain Observatory in Nanjing and the Phoenix Observatory in Kunming, the first observatories to be built in his country.

On May 2, 1909, the South Bethlehem and Saucon Street Railway Company began service on tracks laid on Broadhead and Packer avenues. The resulting vibrations made it impossible to take precise observations with the telescope. Only students and amateur astronomers made limited use of the observatory in the following years. Finally use of the observatory ceased sometime in the 1950s. The equipment was packed away in 1961.

It was necessary to relocate Sayre Observatory in 2005 to make way for a $14 million campus enhancement program. A new road was excavated and Wolfe House & Building Movers of Bernville lifted the building onto a trailer. The building was moved about 300 feet, next to the Alumni Memorial Building.

The Sayre Observatory was the second building built on Lehigh University campus in 1868.

Each day, tens of thousands of Sikh pilgrims, like these two women, visit the Golden Temple.

All that shimmers

Amritsar's Golden Temple

This is the eighth in a series of articles about the author's recent visit to India.

By BRANDON TAYLOR
Special to the Bethlehem Press

There's something liberating about walking around without shoes, bare-footing your way through people traffic. It's even better when your steps fall upon smooth avenues of shimmering marble.

In Amritsar, the last stop on my trip around northern India, I had such a chance to experience life sans footwear. And, more importantly, I experienced the country's tolerance and diversity, two forces that seem to hold India together.

Amritsar, a city in Punjab near the border with Pakistan, is home to the Sikh religious group's holiest shrine, the Golden Temple. The temple sits as the centerpiece of the holy grounds, an island of gold surrounded by clean, clear water.

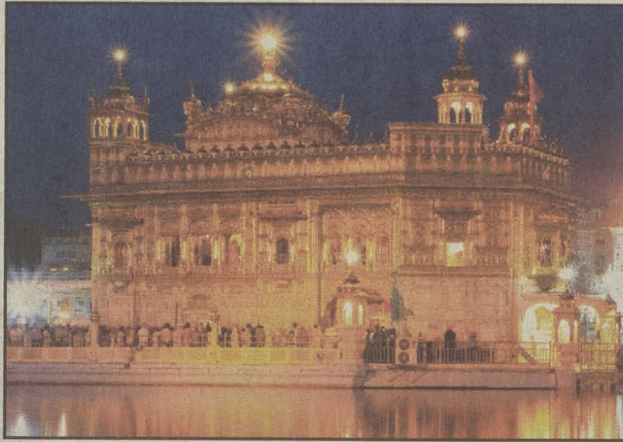

According to Sikh doctrine, people of any color, class or religion are welcome to enter and pray, or simply peruse. All are treated as equals, members of the same global village, but all are expected to remove their shoes and cover their heads.

From the moment I entered, I picked up on this strong sense of community the Sikhs embrace. Groups of families walked side-by-side, stopping at certain points to pray. Many Sikhs went out of their way to shake my hand, smiling brightly as they said, "Welcome." Their greeting also seemed to convey gratitude that, as a foreigner, I felt the temple warranted space on my travel itinerary.

Throughout the afternoon, groups would gather around me, curious and excited about why I was visiting. Most were young,

Life without footwear can be a pleasant experience. Inside the compound surrounding the Golden Temple, I had to remove my shoes and cover my head. If my white skin didn't make me stand out, the orange bandana did. I'm not sure who these people are with me. They just wanted to have their photo taken.

The Golden Temple – the Sikh religious group's holiest shrine – is an amazing blazing nighttime sight.

speaking only broken English, but it was enough for us to have a quick conversation – the usual rundown about nationality, thoughts on India and marital status.

Each day, tens of thousands of Sikhs visit the temple. Some live in Amritsar, others are pilgrims bused in from neighboring cities or rural areas, either spending the day or staying in special residences for long-distance worshippers. A kitchen provides free meals – by some estimates as many as 80,000 a day – with volunteers working around the clock to hand out bowl after bowl of food to the hungry.

Amritsar's Golden Temple was the highlight of my trip to India – an inadvertent saving-the-best-for-last sight that almost didn't make it into my travel plans. Lacking that touristy veneer prevalent at other temples and attractions, the Golden Temple presented a respite from crowds of tourists. It was a more authentic experience, an experience that was the final touch on the painting of India as I'll remember it: A wonderfully chaotic country of colors and diverse interests held together by unexplained, contradictory forces to create a picture of elephants, deserts, temples and, most importantly, people.

LETTER: MULTI-TASKING

Weeping for victims, university and Joe Paterno

To the editor:

One of the first things you learn in college is how to do many things at the same time. It wasn't called multi-tasking when I was a Penn State student, but like most Penn Staters, I mastered it early.

Therefore, as a person who can handle many things at once, I would like to say to all of those who accuse Penn State supporters of not caring about Jerry Sandusky's victims, that I can, at the same moment in time, feel terrible for the monster's victims and want to ensure that no child's suffering is ever again missed at any institution or in any community – while I also question the knee-jerk reaction of the media, the NCAA, the Big Ten and everyone else who has piled on Penn State in assigning punishments, sanctions and blame when all of the court cases are not yet completed, when all of the pertinent information is not yet available and when many key people have not yet been heard.

I can insist that ongoing investigations look at the entire timeline and the actions of every person who was involved with Sandusky's unfettered access to young boys (including the ones he adopted), not a cherry-picked few with glaring omissions like the only eyewitness, the leaders of the charitable organization he founded and the State Department which allowed him to adopt six children – at the same time that I reach out to distressed fellow alumni to lend support in these difficult days.

I can feel deep sympathy for the young men who have come forward to convict the monster, and possibly even more for those who haven't had the courage to do so – at the same time that I can decry the lack of investigative professionalism in the Freeh report and Louis Freeh's subsequent press conference in which he offered up huge conclusions not supported by factual data in his own report.

I can question how ANY human being could have walked away from witnessing an adult sexually abusing a child without taking immediate physical action – at the same time that I can feel awful for Sue Paterno and her family for the way that the leaders of what should have been a grateful institution has turned on them and made their husband and father into a scapegoat to conceal their own inaction and inept handling of the situation from the very beginning.

I can feel deep satisfaction that the monster who abused those poor young boys will rot in jail for the rest of his life – at the same time that I can be offended that the leaders of the school which 14 members of my family call "our school" did such a poor job of representing us in the public forum following their own pathetic handling of the whole awful situation.

I can weep for Sandusky's victims – at the same time that I believe the current members of the Penn State football team to have been victimized for something they didn't do and feel badly for every student athlete at Penn State whose experience will be diminished by a reduction in football revenue which sustains virtually every other athletic program at Penn State.

I can shudder at the perverted acts described by Sandusky's victims – at the same time that I shake with rage that the Penn State-hating head of the organization which is supposed to ensure that the rules of college athletics are followed would so abuse his organization's and his own power to "punish" Penn State for NOT breaking any of his organization's rules while encouraging vultures from other college football programs to pick at Paterno's remains by seducing players away from Penn State.

I can be proud of the Penn State students who have raised so much money for RAINN's rape crisis centers to help current and future victims throughout the country – at the same time that I am thoroughly annoyed by every media moron who looks down his or her nose to declare that Penn State should have been less focused on football and more focused on academics when Penn State is the ONLY major university which has consistently done just that, at least since Joe Paterno took over the program.

I can shake my head in disbelief that a smiling monster fooled parents, children, community leaders, fellow coaches, law enforcement officials, his wife and family and everyone else with whom he came in contact into thinking he was a "great guy" who cared about children – at the same time that I shed bitter tears over what has been done to the legacy and accomplishments of a genuinely great man whom I loved, respected, and revered – and STILL DO.

I can hate everything Jerry Sandusky did with every fiber of my being – at the same time that I continue to be proud of my school and the traditions that MAKE us all Penn State.

And I can do ALL OF THAT AT THE SAME TIME, so don't insult my intelligence by suggesting that if I care about Penn State or decry the way Joe Paterno's legacy has been wrongly destroyed that I don't care about the suffering of Jerry Sandusky's victims.

WE ARE Penn State – and we can multitask with the best of them.

Holy Infancy: New principal named

Holy Infancy's new principal, Virgilio Ogando, has dual masters degrees in bilingual education and building leadership from Mercy College in the Bronx, N.Y. Before coming to Holy Infancy, he was the principal of a Holy Spirit School in the Bronx. His first meeting with the parents of Holy Infancy students is scheduled for Aug. 22.

Srs. Therese Dowd and Joyce Vales, the former co-principals of Holy Infancy, have been given a retirement assignment at St. Denis in Manasquan, N.J. Their last day in the sister's house, the dual residence at Webster and Fourth streets, is Aug. 15. The building is being sold. The sisters of the Order of St. Joseph built and ran the school since its founding in 1894.

As of 2012, there are no longer nuns at the school. The nuns who serve the parish will be at the Casa Belen Convent. Sr. Moira will remain in Bethlehem, living in the Casa Belen, to continue her work with the CCD program.

DEAN'S LISTS

Alvernia University

Three Bethlehem residents have been named to the dean's list at Alvernia University. The students, all Occupational Therapy majors, are seniors Noel Derhammer and Danielle Manini and freshman Victoria Vidumsky.

To be eligible, students must carry a semester GPA of 3.5 or better and take a minimum of 12 credits.

Keystone College

Kathleen Foley of Bethlehem, was named to Keystone College's president's list. The list is comprised of full-time students who complete 12 credits and achieve a grade point average of 4.00.

COLLEGE NOTES

Northampton Community College

Staff membered honored

The following Northampton Community College (NCC) faculty and staff members have recently received awards for excellence in their work. The awards and the recipients are: Christensen Excellence in Teaching: Charles Rinehimer, professor of biology; Support Staff Excellence Award: Diana Holva, financial aid/veterans' affairs assistant; Professional Staff Excellence: Carolyn Brady, director counseling and support services; Professional Staff Excellence: Tamara Tucker Mehlig, assistant to the president; Excellence in Teaching by an Adjunct Faculty Member: Richard R. Ruck Jr.; Excellence in Non-Credit Instruction: Rosemary Towne.

Students attend workshop

NCC was represented by Bethlehem and Hellertown students at the 20th Annual Beacon Conference for student scholars at two year colleges, held June 1 at Westchester Community College, Valhalla, N.Y.

Students who presented papers included Pamela Sutliff, "The New Homeless - Economic Recession Hits the Middle Class: A Proposed Sociological Study," and Abigail Tjaden, "The Mirror Image," both of Bethlehem; and at the conference's poster session, the presenters included Laura E. Halsel, "An Artist of a Kind," of Hellertown.

Allied Health appoints Meyers, Iacono

Two NCC graduates and faculty members have been appointed to program directors. Effective July 1, Sherri Meyers, professor of dental hygiene, became director of dental auxiliary programs and Steven Iacono, radiography faculty, was named director of the radiography program.

Jones named new VP

Bethlehem's Sherri Jones, a Cornell University graduate, has been named vice president for institutional advancement and executive director of the Foundation at Northampton Community College.

She was a director of alumni affairs and the annual fund before serving as director of alumni affairs at Lafayette College and senior executive director of alumni affairs and communications at Columbia College, N.Y.C.

Her responsibilities will include overseeing fundraising, alumni relations, marketing, communications, special events and some auxiliary services. She succeeds Susan Kubik, who retired in June.

PRESS grant awarded to NCC

NCC is one of 15 colleges nationwide chosen to receive a $100,000 "PRESS (Persistence, Retention, and Student Success) for Completion" grant from the Walmart Foundation. The monies will enable the school to involve more full- and part-time faculty in efforts to improve student performance in math and English courses.

Northampton was selected because of its record as a leader college in the "Achieving the Dream," a national nonprofit organization committed to educational reform.

The Commission on Accreditation of Allied Health Education Programs (CAAHEP) has continued N.C. C.'s diagnostic medical sonography program accreditation for ten years. NCC offers both an associate degree and a specialized diploma, both of which allow the graduate the opportunity to sit for the American Registry of Diagnostic Medical Sonographer's (ARDMS) examination. As of August 2012, 78 students will have graduated from NCC's sonography program.

Northampton Community College's main campus is located at 3835 Green Pond Road. The Fowler Family Southside Center is located at 511 E. Third St. For more information, contact NCC at 610-861-5300 or 1-877-543-0998 or visit www.northampton.edu.

Moravian College

Gratz named director of leadership giving

Robert Gratz, '75 became Moravian's director of leadership giving on August 1. He will be responsible for developing, maintaining, and sustaining relationships between Moravian College and its alumni and supporters.

Gratz earned a bachelor's degree in history and sociology and a certificate in secondary education from Moravian in 1975, a master's degree in secondary education administration from Lehigh University. He was given an honorary doctor of humane letters from Centenary College, Hackensack, N.J.

He was the superintendent of schools for the Hackensack (N.J.) Public Schools. He was named 2011-2012 campaign chair for the United Way in Warren County, N.J., and New Jersey Northern Region Superintendent of the Year in 2010.

He has received Moravian's 2006 Benigna Education Award for outstanding contributions to the field of education. A member of the Moravian College Athletic Hall of Fame, he is a recipient of the Gillespie Award for outstanding service to Moravian athletics.

Moravian College is located at 1200 Main St. For more information, call 610-861-1300 or visit www.moravian.edu.

Northeast MS eighth grade art students were hard at work letting their creative juices flow as they learned how to weave baskets and master the art of coil pottery. Art teachers Deanna Korhammer and Bob Schantz called the students' work "surprising" and "very creative" noting a "sophistication in the quality of the artwork of the kids." Both teachers credited the students interest and commitment and noted that some come in after school to work on their pieces. The artwork was placed in a student art gallery for the entire student body to enjoy. ABOVE: Northeast MS art students Kyle Ross, Michael Noble, Johannes Rites, Olivia Boules and Jenna Vanhorn (standing), and Marcus Gichiengo and Orlando Rivera, Jr. (on floor) present a number of their finished products amongst a collage created to the theme of "we beat the streets."

Across the miles

Fourth-grade students at James Buchanan ES got to learn all they could from state Rep. Steve Samuelson (D-135) via a live feed web chat from their west Bethlehem classroom. For nearly an hour, teacher Eric Bellucci's fourth-grade class peppered Samuelson with questions about politics, presidents, the role of government, the difficulties associated with being an elected official and his family. Samuelson regularly visits schools within the 135th legislative district, according to his legislative assistant, Rosemary Hensel, a retired teacher who taught at James Buchanan ES and helped to set up the program. In 2012 Samuelson visited and toured nine schools. He and his staff also deliver a variety of booklets to help area students understand the role that government plays in their daily lives.

Students were able to watch Samuelson respond to their questions via the web direct link to the State Capitol Building.

Hailee Schneider asks Samuelson how many people work in the Capitol building.

Upon completing their question-and-answer session, the entire class gathers to thank Samuelson.

County applies for state's human services block grant

By CAROL SMITH
Special to the Bethlehem Press

NORTHAMPTON CO.

With state budget cuts for the county's human services departments a reality, Northampton County Council unanimously supported applying for the commonwealth's Human Services Block Grant pilot program.

At its Aug. 2 meeting, Ross Marcus, the county's director of Human Services, told council that the county's participation in this program would allow the flexibility to move funds where the unmet needs are in the seven categories covered by the block grant. Another significant benefit is the ability to re-program up to 3 percent of any unspent funds in the following fiscal year, said Marcus, which could amount to about $500,000.

"It's hard to spend down every cent," said Marcus of the grant guidelines. "If we have to deal with budget cuts, it will give us flexibility to deal with these cuts," added the human services director.

At an earlier council meeting, Marcus said the downside of block grant programs is that the state uses them as a vehicle to transfer responsibility and not dollars for funding these services, which translates to less money to operate programs. Seven county human services programs will face state budget cuts and will be lumped into one block grant. These services include the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP), a medical insurance program for uninsured low-income children and teens; child welfare programs; programs that serve the homeless and those in need of drug and alcohol treatment.

As Northampton is one of eight home rule charter counties in the state, council President John Cusick said he hoped the state would approve the county's application for this pilot program.

In other council business, County Executive John Stoffa reported that public response to the county's first-time offering of a Citizens' Academy is very positive. For the Sept. 12 start of the academy, a class of 25 is signed up for the 10-week sessions with 16 on a waiting list. Each week topics such as public works, emergency management, sheriff's office, corrections and human services will be covered.

Council's next meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m., Aug. 16 on the third floor of Northampton County Courthouse at 669 Washington St., Easton.

Race honors slain officer

A 5K run/walk Aug. 12 will mark the one-year anniversary of the loss of Freemansburg Police Officer Robert A. Lasso, who was killed in the line of duty in 2011. An estimated 500 people are expected to participate in this event which will begin and end outside of the Freemansburg Borough Police Station. The event route will loop through the streets of Freemansburg. The event is open to all ages, and we encourage both runners and walkers to take part! A quarter of the proceeds will go to the Freemansburg Police Department in the form of a donation. The remaining proceeds will be given to Robert's widow and their two young children. The event will be held rain or shine. Please visit www.RunningForRobert.com for more info and to register for the run/walk.

Technology assists sheriff's dept.

By CAROL SMITH
Special to the Bethlehem Press

A new information sharing system and a records management system will be welcome for needed technology advancements for Northampton County's sheriff's department.

At Northampton County Council's Aug. 2 meeting, Sheriff Randall Miller received council's approval to purchase a county-wide COBRA information sharing system and a digital records management system.

Made possible by a federal grant, the $350,000 COBRA system will allow real-time cross-jurisdiction data sharing. Miller said every county law enforcement agency will be able to view and contribute information with each other, as well as with officers in Lehigh County and Warren County, N.J.

For the first time, a Northampton County officer making a stop for a criminal offense will know if that individual was stopped for an earlier offense in Lehigh County. The time delay could be as short as 30 minutes Miller said.

Cody Computer Services, a Pottstown-based company, received the contract to manage this Web-based program.

Cody Computer Services also received the $156,000 contract to implement a digital records management system. This software system was selected from five other firms. Each firm provided a full-day demonstration of the system's operation.

Miller said he was familiar with the system from his days as Bethlehem's chief of police. His advice was to use the system's ready-to-use features for record keeping, evidence keeping and tracking Uniform Crime Reporting data. Miller said in his experience, customizations made to the program's software created functionality problems and were expensive to make.

Council's next meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m., Aug. 16 on the third floor of Northampton County Courthouse at 669 Washington St., Easton.

Lehigh County Commissioners voted unanimously to approve the creation of a joint health department with Northampton County in 2007, but it has never been given an operating budget.

Dougherty suggested that the board hold off on deciding the fate of the department.

"I would hope that rather than killing this at the next meeting, we instead look into some alternatives," Dougherty said. "Can we just simply put it on the shelf and wait for better economic times to come around or some other options?"

Halyna Stegura, a Lower Macungie resident who has served on the Lehigh Valley Board of Health since its inception, also spoke in defense of the health department. Stegura said that counties in Pennsylvania with health departments have lower infant mortality rates as well as a lower percentage of heart disease, diabetes and cancer-related deaths. She also said that as a citizen of suburban Lehigh County, she should have the same access to health coverage as those who live in urban areas.

"I am saddened to know that I do not have the same rights as those who live in Allentown," Stegura said. "I believe that I should be afforded the same rights through the health department."

"We have 30 days from the date of Mr. Cunningham's exit from the office, July 9, to make a recommendation to the board and 45 days for the board to vote on that before it would go to the courts, which we are committed to not having happen," Ott said.

JOB

ity for someone to come in and not have to be brought up to speed bodes well for the functionality of the administration," Jones said.

Commissioner Lisa Scheller added that Crosli should be considered as well.

"[Crosli] has experience in business, he expressed a willingness to work with us in terms of budgeting and prioritization, he would bring a fresh set of eyes to the county and he had some concrete ideas of areas that we could cut spending," Scheller said.

Commissioner Percy Dougherty suggested that all four candidates be considered.

"We'll have more time to consider them, to get more information from other people who know them well, and we can make a better decision," Dougherty said.

Creighton and Mazzotti said they were comfortable with the idea of sending all four names to the board of commissioners and a motion proposed shortly after was passed unanimously by the IGAC.

"At the next board meeting, the board will take a vote to accept our recommendation and then we will go and literally take a roll call vote starting with Commissioner Creighton and he'll say which candidate he wants and we'll walk all the way through that," Ott said. "If any candidate gets five votes on the first round, then that person would be appointed [county executive]. In the unlikely chance that that happens, we'll probably have to go through a series of votes."

The board has until Aug. 23 to make a selection.

Musikfest continues as nation's biggest free music festival

By PAUL WILLISTEIN
Focus Editor

Musikfest 2012 again straddles the Lehigh River.

For the second year, many concert sites at Musikfest, which continues through Aug. 12, are at SteelStacks on Bethlehem's south side.

These include Sands Steel Stage, Americaplatz at Levitt Pavilion, Community Stage at Air Products Town Square, Musikfest Cafe, and Jazz Cabaret and Lyricplatz, both in the Frank Banko Cinema, ArtsQuest Center.

Prior to this year, Lyricplatz and Jazz Cabaret were presented on Bethlehem's north side.

Also in the cinema auditoriums this year are late-night comedy programs.

Admission is charged for Sands Steel Stage concerts and the comedy shows.

There are 515 performances, 500 of which are free, at the 29th annual Musikfest, making it the United States' largest festival of free music.

"While ArtsQuest has made few changes to this year's Musikfest, the ones that we have made will result in even more free programming for our patrons," said ArtsQuest Vice President of Performing Arts Patrick Brogan.

"Thanks in large part to the support of ArtsQuest's members, corporate partners and volunteers, guests will be able to enjoy a record number of free performances in 2012, with more than 98 percent of the shows at the festival being offered free of charge," Brogan said.

Concert sites continuing on Bethlehem's north side include: Banana Island children's stage, Plaza Tropical, Moravian Church Old Chapel chamber music series, Central Moravian Church vesper concerts, Liederplatz at Sun Inn Courtyard, Main Street entertainment, Festplatz with polka bands during the day and party bands at night, and Volksplatz.

The Fahy Bridge is the most direct connection between the two Musikfest sites, although Musikfesters may also traverse the Hill-to-Hill Bridge to the west and the Minsi Trail Bridge to the east.

There are 60 vendors at Musikfest north and south.

Handwerkplatz, with its 45 artisans, is again in the north side's 18th Century Industrial Quarter, which last year, along with the Volksplatz area, flooded when the Monocacy Creek, which empties into the Lehigh, overflowed its banks.

Parking lots are at Martin Tower, Eighth Avenue and Eaton Avenue, and Route 412 and Commerce Center Boulevard. Parking is free. There's a charge to ride the shuttle bus to Musikfest.

Musikfest concludes with a fireworks display Aug. 12, visible from the north and south sides and the bridges in between.

This year, you can download a free Musikfest App to your iPad, iPhone and iPod touch.

Boston

Rock band Boston performs at 8 p.m. Aug. 12, Musikfest Sands Steel Stage, SteelStacks.

Scholz played all the instruments on his basement demos, except for drums. The demos were repeatedly rejected by record companies.

The debut album, "Boston," released Aug. 8, 1976, was the second-best selling debut album in the United States, with more than 17 million copies sold.

Boston's hits include "More Than A Feeling," "Peace of Mind," "Long Time," "Rock And Roll Band," "Smokin'," "Don't Look Back" and "Amanda."

p.m. Aug. 8, Musikfest Sands Steel Stage, SteelStacks.

The three Grammy Award-winning singer-songwriters appear on stage together to perform their hits, such as "Reelin' in the Years" (Fagen), "Takin' It to the Streets" (McDonald) and "Lowdown" (Scaggs). The Dukes' tour began June 20 in St. Louis and concludes Aug. 24 in Indianapolis.

In the Rhythm Revue: Jon Herington, guitar; Freddie Washington, bass; Shannon Forest, drums; Michael Leonhart, Walt Weiskopf and Jay Collins, horns; Jim Beard, keyboards; and Carolyn Leonhart and Catherine Russell, background singers.

Daughtry

Daughtry, led by "American Idol" season five finalist Chris Daughtry, performs at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 11, Musikfest Sands Steel Stage, SteelStacks.

Daughtry, fourth on "Idol," turned down an offer to become lead singer of the rock band Fuel and formed his own group.

The self-titled release, "Daughtry," sold 4 million, was named the No. 1-selling album of 2007 and contained the singles "It's Not Over," "Home," "What I Want," "Over You" and "Crashed."

Other albums are "Leave This Town" (2009), which debuted at No. 1, and "Break the Spell" (2011). Daughtry was the first "American Idol" contestant to have two consecutive No. 1 albums.

Band members are Daughtry, above center, lead vocals, guitar; Josh Paul, bass; Josh Steely, lead guitar; Brian Craddock, rhythm guitar; and Robin Diaz, drums.

Jane's Addiction

Alternative rock group Jane's Addiction performs at 7 p.m. Aug. 9, Musikfest Sands Steel Stage, SteelStacks.

Jane's Addiction spearheaded the movement of modern American festival culture by launching and headlining Lollapalooza.

The group released its first studio album, "Nothing's Shocking" in 1988. Other albums include "Ritual de lo Habitual" (1990), "Strays" (2003) and "The Great Escape Artist" (2011).

The band broke up in 1991, reunited in 1997, broke up and got back together in 2001. The band is 35th on VH1's "100 Greatest Artists of Hard Rock" list.

Opening the concert is Band of Skulls.

Sheryl Crow

Nine-time Grammy Award winner Sheryl Crow performs at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 10, Musikfest Sands Steel Stage, SteelStacks.

Her 1993 debut, the seven times platinum "Tuesday Night Music Club," reached No. 3 on the Billboard charts, received three Grammys and included the hits "All I Wanna Do," "Strong Enough," "Can't Cry Anymore" and "Leaving Las Vegas."

Crow's hits include "If It Makes You Happy" (1996), "Everyday Is a Winding Road" and "My Favorite Mistake" (both 1998) and "Soak Up The Sun" (2002).

Crow's most recent album is 2010's "100 miles From Memphis."

Charities she supports include The Breast Cancer Research Foundation and The World Food Program. Crow, a cancer survivor, partnered with the Pink Lotus Breast Center in Los Angeles in 2010 to open the Sheryl Crow Imaging Center.

Martin D-28 "Dreadnought" guitar to be given away.

Win Martin 'Dreadnought' at Musikfest

C.F. Martin & Co., Inc., Nazareth, largest producer of acoustic guitars in the United States, is giving away a Martin D-28 during the 29th annual Musikfest, Bethlehem.

As part of the contest, Martin Guitar is giving a private tour of the Martin Guitar Factory in Nazareth, and an opportunity to meet C.F. Martin & Co. Chairman and CEO Chris Martin IV, who will sign the brand-new D-28 guitar.

The contest was launched opening night, Aug. 3, at Musikfest when

C.F. Martin & Co. Director of Museum & Archives and Special Projects Dick Boak visited the festival to present the guitar at Martin Guitar Lyrikplatz, the festival singer-songwriter stage in the Frank Banko Alehouse Cinemas at ArtsQuest Center at SteelStacks.

Registration for the contest continues at Martin Guitar Lyrikplatz and online through Aug. 12, with the winner announced on the Martin Guitar Facebook page at noon Aug. 15.

"Martin Guitar Lyrik-platz is the destination at Musikfest where audiences head to enjoy talented singer-songwriters, many of whom perform on acoustic guitars including Martins," said Amani Duncan, Vice President of Brand Marketing for C.F. Martin & Company.

C.F. Martin & Co. has been creating instruments for more than 175 years. It has introduced techniques and features that have become industry standards including X-bracing, the 14-fret guitar and the "Dreadnought" size.

The "Dreadnought," as the D-28 is called, is constructed of solid East Indian rosewood back and sides, Sitka spruce top and mahogany neck. Massive bass response balanced with articulate highs makes it a benchmark acoustic guitar.

The instrument, which retails for $3,000, has long been a favorite of some of the music business's biggest names and is ideal for beginning and intermediate guitar players.

D-28s have been played by Jimmy Page, Hank Williams, Elvis Presley and Johnny Cash.

Savor every second

When I called a relative to wish him a happy 65th birthday, he said the day was nothing special. He was just having a quiet day at home.

His good news was that for the first time in four years, he received a birthday card from his estranged daughter. It was just a small, generic card, he says. Totally without sentiment. Not enough of a gesture to heal whatever happened between them. But perhaps it's a start.

I doubt if either of them can say what caused the rift. All that is clear is that a father and daughter who had a close bond throughout life now have nothing to do with each other.

My friend Tim is in somewhat the same situation. But in his case, he knows exactly what caused his estrangement from his only daughter.

At 75, after 11 years of loneliness after his wife died, Tim met someone else. Someone who taught him how to laugh again.

That was OK with Tim's daughter until he decided he was getting married again. She didn't want anyone to take her mother's place in Tim's home.

Tim says her real concern is that a wife would inherit his home — the vacation home his daughter wanted to be hers.

"If you go through with the wedding, you will be dead to me," the daughter said. "I will walk out of your life and you will never see me again."

She's kept her word.

Last week Tim had serious cancer surgery. His grandchildren traveled long distances to come see him. But his daughter still refused to come. She told her own children it didn't matter if her father died. He was already dead to her.

What is wrong with people?

Why do they stuff negative feelings inside them? Why do they cling to hurts and grudges like it's something precious to protect?

Don't they know life is short?

Don't they know every second of life is precious? It's too precious to waste.

We were all reminded of that last week when dozens of people in Colorado had their lives changed forever — just because they went to a movie premier. Twelve people died and 75 were injured.

Jessica Ghawi was one who lost her life in the senseless massacre. She was at the wrong place at the wrong time.

Ironically, the same thing happened to her last year in a Toronto mall. In a busy food court, one man opened fire.

According to Jessica's postings on face book, seconds before the shooting

WARMEST REGARDS

By Pattie Mihalik
newsgrl@comcast.net

"a funny feeling" came over her and she stepped outside the food court, a move that kept her from being shot.

This is what she wrote about the experience:

"I was shown how fragile life was on Saturday. I saw the terror on bystanders' faces. I saw the victims of a senseless crime. I saw lives change.

"I was reminded that we don't know when or where our time on earth will end. When or where we will breathe our last breath.

"I say all the time that every moment we have to live our life is a blessing. So often I have found myself taking it for granted. Every hug from a family member. Every laugh we share with friends. Even the times of solitude are all blessings. Every second of every day is a gift. After Saturday, I understand how blessed I am for every second I am given."

That's what Jessica wrote after her brush with death in Toronto. She could write nothing about her Colorado experience because she died in the movie theater a few minutes after she was shot.

But the message she wrote last year continues to resonate with me. She's right.

Every hug from a family member, every laugh we share with friends are blessings not to be taken for granted. We never know when they will end.

One woman I know tells the heartbreaking story of losing her husband of many years after they had a violent fight. "I grabbed him by the shoulders and yelled some pretty nasty things I didn't mean," she said.

Her husband walked out the door and died of a heart attack an hour later.

"I wish I could take those words back," says the wife. "I never expected it to be the last thing I could ever say to him."

The fragility of life is something we like to overlook. It's scary and some believe it's morbid to think about the short lease we are given on this earth.

But when we do, perhaps we would do a better job of making our words count. Words that heal a rift or words that make someone's day are those we will never regret.

The most precious thing we each have is life itself. It's a gift not meant to be squandered.

We don't know how much time we will be given. But one thing is certain: If we savor every second, we will make best use of the time we have.

Visitor Center in trial run for Musikfest

The Bethlehem Redevelopment Authority and City of Bethlehem are giving a sneak peek of the new Bethlehem Visitor Center at SteelStacks during Musikfest, through Aug. 12.

The interactive visitor center, which will be open for guided and self-guided tours, is featuring several exhibits that highlight the region's arts and cultural attractions, history, industrial heritage and recreational opportunities.

Housed in the 1863 Stock House, the oldest remaining building on the SteelStacks campus, the Bethlehem Visitor Center is set to open this fall and will offer a variety of information and interactive displays on the Lehigh Valley's festivals, events, restaurants, attractions and more.

Hours during Musikfest are noon - 8 p.m. Aug. 11, 12; 5 - 8 p.m. Aug. 8, 9, and noon - 4 p.m. Aug. 10.

A staff member will be on hand during the festival to greet guests, offer tours and answer questions.

Bethlehem man stars in opera

Bethlehem's Jeremy Galyon stars in the opera, "Susannah," 7:30 p.m. Aug. 10 and 3 p.m. Aug. 12 in the Berks Opera Workshop and the Fall Festival of the Arts production, WCR Center for the Arts, 140 N. 5th St., Reading.

Carlisle Floyd's masterpiece was inspired by Appalachian folk songs, hymns and opera melodies. It was written during the 1950's McCarthy Era and inspired by the biblical Apocrypha.

In the opera's plot, Susannah is an innocent young person targeted by closed-minded hypocrites and preyed upon by a corrupt leader.

Galyon, a Metropolitan Opera bass, stars as the Rev. Olin Blitch. The opera includes soprano Tamara Black, Metropolitan Opera tenor Charles Reid and Berks Opera Workshop singers.

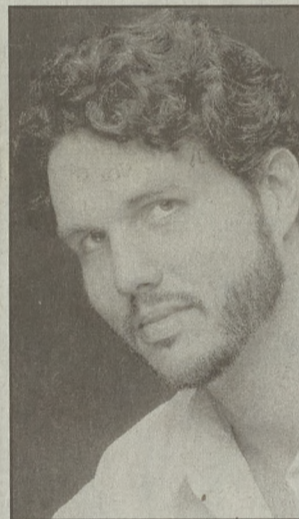

Berks Opera Workshop

director Francine Black conducts the orchestra. Joel Gori directs the production.

The fully-staged, costumed production of "Susannah" will be sung in English.

There is a multimedia introduction by Berks Opera Workshop President David Richie 45 minutes before each performance.

Tickets: racc.edu/millercenter, 610-607-6270

Cancer Support offering free programs

The Cancer Support Community of the Greater Lehigh Valley, formerly The Wellness Community, is offering free education and support programs for cancer patients and their caregivers in August.

Through participation in professionally-led support groups, educational workshops and mind-body-spirit classes, people affected by cancer learn skills that enable them to regain control, reduce isolation and restore hope regardless of the stage of disease.

Unless otherwise noted, programs are held at The Cancer Support Community, 3400 Bath Pike, Bethlehem.

Programs that have been held at 83 S. Commerce Way have moved to Park Plaza, 1st Floor, Suite 103. The new location is in the building adjacent to the main Bath Pike location.

"Family Game Night," 6 - 8 p.m. Aug. 23: A night of "Just Dance" and other Wii and PlayStation games will be held. While the children are playing, parents and grandparents can test their skills in a trivia game.

"Healthy Cooking: Cool Cooking," 5:30 - 8 p.m. Aug. 23: The menu includes Cool Noodle Salad and Frozen Yogurt Fruit Pie. The class is taught by Gale Maleskey, MS, RD.

"Frankly Speaking About: Colorectal Cancer," 5 - 7 p.m. Aug. 28: Colorectal cancer patients and their loved ones learn about treatments, side effects, management strategies, social and emotional challenges of diagnosis and survivorship issues.

Speakers are David S. Bub, MD, Colorectal Surgeon, Blue Mountain Health System, and Jen Sinclair, LPC, of Cancer Support Community.

A light dinner will be served. The program is held at Bowmanstown Medical Plaza, 204 Bank St., Bowmanstown.

RSVP to Mary Lou McGeehan, 610-377-7070.

Information: 610-861-7555.

Three questions from the e-mail bag

Q. Does getting older make your mouth dry?

Most dry mouth is related to the medications taken by older adults rather than to the effects of aging. More than 400 medicines can affect the salivary glands.

These include drugs for urinary incontinence, allergies, high blood pressure, depression, diarrhea and Parkinson's disease. Also, some over-the-counter medications often cause dry mouth.

Dry mouth can also be caused by cancer treatments such as chemotherapy and radiation, nerve damage in the head or neck, the autoimmune disease Sjogren's syndrome,

HEALTHY GEEZER

By Fred Cicetti
fred@healthygeezers.com

endocrine disorders, Alzheimer's disease, stroke, anxiety disorders and depression.

Sjogren's syndrome can occur either by itself or with another autoimmune disease such as rheumatoid arthritis or lupus. Salivary and tear glands are the major targets of the syndrome. The result of the syndrome is a decrease in production of saliva and tears.

The disorder can occur at any age, but the average person with the disorder at the Sjogren's Syndrome Clinic of the National Institute of Dental and Craniofacial Research (NIDCR) is in his or her late 50s. Women with the disorder outnumber men 9 to 1.

Q. What causes most cancer deaths?

Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer death in men and women in the United States. It occurs most often between the ages of 55 and 65.

There are two major types of lung cancer: non-small cell lung cancer and small cell lung cancer.

Each type of lung cancer grows and spreads in different ways, and each is treated differently.

Non-small cell lung cancer is more common than small cell lung cancer. Doctors treat patients with non-small cell lung cancer in several ways.

Surgery is a common treatment. Doctors may also use radiation therapy and chemotherapy.

Small cell lung cancer grows more quickly and is more likely to spread to other organs in the body. In order to reach cancer cells throughout the body, doctors almost always use chemotherapy.

Treatment for small cell lung cancer may also include radiation therapy aimed at tumors.

Q. Who is at the highest risk of getting osteoporosis?

Osteoporosis, or porous bone, is a disease characterized by low bone mass and structural deterioration of bone tissue. This condition creates an increased risk of fractures.

The chances are greater if you are a woman. Women have less bone tissue and lose bone faster than men because of changes from menopause. Small, thin-boned women are at greater risk. Caucasian and Asian women are at highest risk.

Age is a major risk factor because bones become thinner and weaker as you age. Heredity can also increase fracture risk.

Osteoporosis is a major public health threat for 44 million Americans; about 68 percent of them are women. One out of every two women and one in four men over 50 will have an osteoporosis-related fracture in their lifetime.

A bone mineral density (BMD) test is the best way to determine your bone health. BMD tests can identify osteoporosis, determine your risk for fractures, and measure your response to osteoporosis treatment.

Songwriter Jessica Smucker in Musikfest Lyrikplatz debut

By PAUL WILLISTEIN
pwillistein@tnonline.com

Lancaster County singer-songwriter Jessica Smucker has been to Allentown plenty of times, but not to perform concerts.

She almost made it to Bethlehem.

More than one year ago, she was to play at a south side Bethlehem coffeehouse, but the place closed.

Smucker makes her Musikfest debut at 6 p.m. Aug. 8, Martin Guitar Lyrikplatz, being presented in the Frank Banko Alehouse Cinemas, ArtsQuest Center, SteelStacks, Bethlehem.

The Aug. 8 lineup includes: Kenny Ferrier, 5 p.m.; Sarah Ayers, 7 p.m.; Carlos Barata, 8 p.m.; and Katie Kelly, 9 p.m.

Smucker, a vocalist and keyboard player, is expected to sing original songs from her recordings, including "The Sleeping World" (2008), "Reluctantly Yours" (2010) and "This Broken Moment" (2010), the latter her first full-length CD.

Smucker has performed up and down the East Coast at venues and music festivals, including the 2010 Renewable Energy Festival in Kempton.

She's sometimes accompanied by musicians who've played on her CDs, including Dave Sheaffer, bass; and Tommy Leanza, drums.

Smucker's songs have been dubbed "dark pop," with catchy melodies in minor keys and lyrics that infuse sad stories with humor and hope. Her songwriting is described as "woven with a sort of defiant sadness, a square-jawed resilience" (Fly Magazine).

She placed first in the 2010 SolarFest Singer-Songwriter Showcase Competition and second in the 2010 Susquehanna Music & Arts Festival.

Smucker, who graduated from Lancaster Mennonite High School, began singing in Ridgeview Mennonite Church, Gordonville, near Bird-in-Hand, East Lampeter Township, Lancaster County.

"I've played piano since I was five. I wasn't very disciplined. Some of my teachers wanted me to read music and I wasn't that into it," Smucker says in a telephone interview.

"I would write songs occasionally, but it was always for fun. I was always writing something," says Smucker, who usually plays a Yamaha CP 33 piano in concert.

Smucker attended Goshen College, Goshen, Ind. and received a BA in English and Creative Writing from Western Illinois University. Her poetry was published in literary magazines.

Of her initial view of performing her songs in public, which began about five years ago, Smucker says, "I was sort of intimidated by other musicians — the people who were doing it seriously."

She says readers of her poetry encouraged her to write songs. Smucker wasn't sure she wanted to share her innermost thoughts and feelings or her experiences and observations.

"I've always been really driven. With poetry I was feeling stuck and was blocked. I was putting too much pressure on myself.

"I started playing more piano and doing more songwriting, just for myself. I had a few people, including my ex-husband, say, 'You should be doing something with these. They are great.' I didn't want to. I didn't want to ruin in for myself, the way I felt I had ruined poetry."

After living in Macomb, Goshen and Chicago, Ill., Smucker moved back to Lancaster County in 2005.

Her father, Marlie Smucker, owns Stoltzfus Amish Deli at The Allentown Farmers' Market, where she has worked part-time.

"I was just coming out of a divorce and not sure what I wanted to do," says Smucker, married for two and one half years and describing the divorce as amicable.

In Lancaster, she met Jeff Bryson of the band, Vinegar Creek Constituency. They became friends.

"I said, 'I write some songs sometime.' He urged me to play them. His immediate reaction was 'I can't believe you're not performing these songs. What can I do to make sure that you will?'"

"At that point, my biggest reluctance was that I didn't think I was a musician. I didn't think I was very good on the piano.

"It takes a lot of audacity to ask other musicians to accompany you, especially coming from the background of being a writer and working entirely in isolation." Smucker told Bryson that if he could find musicians to accompany her, she'd give performing her original songs a try. She and Bryson played at some open mikes.

"My mentality was that: 'If people like it, I would keep putting it out there, if the response was there.'"

"I didn't want to be another musician pushing my music on people. I wanted to feel that people were asking for it.

"And the response was good. I kept going with it. A couple months later, I started the band.

"I turned 30 and started the band in the same month."

The title of Smucker's "The Sleeping World" and band is derived from a Leonard Cohen quote.

"I'm a big Leonard Cohen fan," she says. "There was already a band called Midnight Choir."

The interview, Smucker recalls, included this quote from Cohen: "'The last refuge of the insomniac is a sense of superiority to the sleeping world.'"

"It has a sense of pomposity to it," she allows, "but it has a lot of layers. It's really the sleeping world that we're singing to."

So, Smucker's music is a wake-up call, she was asked?

"Hopefully. Exactly," she says.

When Bethlehem was Steel Goundie House exhibit theme

By DOROTHY GLEW
Special to The Press

It can be said that in many respects the Bethlehem Steel Company was Bethlehem.

For decades, it was the area's largest employer. In the 1940s, 30,000 workers had jobs there. In addition, it sponsored events in the community, founded civic organizations, and provided funding for the area's educational institutions.

It was, in many ways, "The Steel Way of Life," as the title of an exhibition in The Goundie House, 505 Main St., Bethlehem, states.

The exhibit is a collaboration of Historic Bethlehem Partnership and The Steel Workers' Archives. Exhibit curator is Amy Frey, Curator of Collections and Exhibitions at Historic Bethlehem.

The exhibit, which continues through this year, tells the story of the company from the perspective of its bricklayers, millwrights, carpenters, truck drivers, welders, on up to the chairman and CEO.

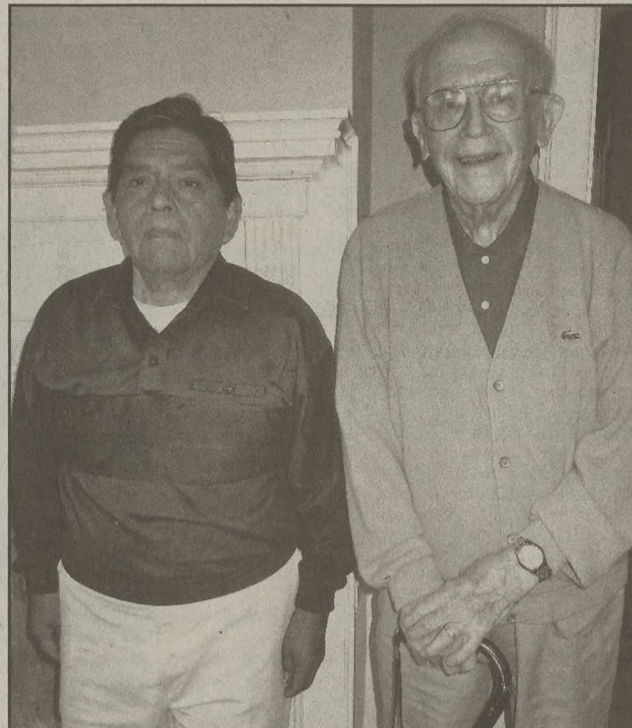

Ten former employees of Bethlehem Steel are featured in the exhibit, including Jeanne Brugger, Vincent Brugger, Hank Barnette, Helen Weaver, John Deutsch, Lester Clore, Joe Wilfinger, Bob Burke, Jerry Green and Richie Check.

It features life-size portraits of former Steel employees by photographer Ed Leskin; videos of Steel employees describing their working lives at the plant by videographer Bruce Ward, a former steelworker himself; a wall of photos and documents donated by former Steel employees; and artifacts including a hard hat, lunchbox, brass checks, Bethlehem Steel time books and overtime forms.

Two painted murals, completed by Freehand Murals, depict a view of a South Bethlehem street, and the Welfare Room, a locker-like space where steel workers stored their personal belongings. Two welfare baskets hang from the ceiling.

The entrance to the exhibit includes a Community Memory Wall. Visitors may bring photos, letters, and personal histories to be copied, written or left on the wall for the duration of the exhibit. The stories will be added to Historic Bethlehem Partnership's archives.

Among the many former employees with lengthy careers at the company was Rudy Garcia. When he began working at Bethlehem Steel in 1944 at age 17, he was paid 50 cents an hour. A year later, he was drafted and served in the Army Air Corps for two years.

Upon returning, he met a former co-worker, George Schaeffbach, who urged him to return to the plant. He did, and stayed until 1992, completing a 48-year career. Garcia's father had emigrated from Mexico to work at Bethlehem Steel and two of Rudy's brothers were employed there.

On his last day at the plant, Garcia made his way to the parking lot and found a group of co-workers and all his bosses waiting to say good-bye. His bosses told him he had been a wonderful employee. Also in the parking lot was a horse-drawn carriage and driver his wife had engaged to transport him to a celebratory dinner.

When George Schaeffbach applied for work at the plant in 1947, he was told, "It's a dirty job, but you can have it if you want it." It was the beginning of a 37-year career for him.

Women at the company did a variety of jobs. A photo of Marlene Burkey, a test-grinder in the Tool Steel Department, attests to the fact that female employees were not confined to offices. A photo of her Mobile Equipment Operator's Permit hangs in the exhibit.

Jeanne Brugger's experience at the plant was mixed. "In the beginning, it was a rocky road," she says in a video. At the time she started in 1964, "no girls had been in the plant since World War II," so there weren't any safety shoes available for her.

Worse, her boss didn't want a "girl" working there and wouldn't talk to her for a week. Fortunately, other employees treated her well. Reasoning that "it was good money," the recently-divorced mother of a young daughter decided she would make it work. She did, and remained at the company for 29 years.

For all the dirt, noise, and danger at the Steel plant, pride in their work there, gratitude for the good jobs it provided, and nostalgia over its demise are common sentiments expressed by the employees featured in the exhibit.

Jerry Green, President of United Steelworkers Local 2599, put it this way, "One of the things I miss about Bethlehem Steel ... is that whenever on Broad Street you would look out there and you would see the blast furnaces going. And you could smell the company you know ... I miss the dirt being on the cars because I knew that there were thousands of jobs that went with that."

The Goundie House is open 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. Tuesday - Saturday and 11 a.m. - 4 p.m. Sunday.

Appetizer Bowl to benefit ArtsQuest arts education fund

ArtsQuest and more than one dozen area restaurants team up for the Appetizer Bowl, 4 - 7 p.m. Aug. 26, Musikfest Café, ArtsQuest Center, 101 Founders Way, Bethlehem.

Appetizers, dips and finger foods will be served in six different categories: Cheesiest, Seafood-based, Dips & Spreads, Veggie-based, Meat-based and Sauciest Couple (wings and sauce).

Attendees may sample and vote for their favorite in the "People's Choice" category. A judging panel will determine winners in the six appetizer categories.

Restaurants confirmed are Bethlehem Brew Works, Cosmopolitan, The Farmhouse Restaurant, The Gyro Company, Iron Lakes Country Club, Musikfest Café, Sagra Bistro, Sangria and Spiro's Family Restaurant.

Proceeds benefit ArtsQuest's Arts Education Fund.

grant: Good Shepherd Rehabilitation Network's Pediatric Program has received a $15,000 grant from The Wells Fargo Foundation for pediatric programming, physician and therapist services, purchase of assistive technology for learning, reading and alternative communication and charitable care.

"Good Shepherd's outpatient pediatric program is such a wonderful resource for children and their families," said Cindy Garcia, personal banker, Wells Fargo. "It's been there for my daughter and it's been there for other Wells Fargo team members, too."

Almost 40 percent of pediatric patients receive some sort of charity care because their families have no insurance or simply cannot afford to pay for their child's therapy. The grant from the Wells Fargo Foundation will help in the effort to improve access to these vital services for more children.

Good Shepherd Pediatrics provides inpatient and outpatient rehabilitation to children with a variety of physical or cognitive conditions, including autism, developmental delays, neuromuscular disease, stroke, brain and spinal cord injuries or multiple traumas. Good Shepherd's Outpatient Pediatric Rehabilitation Program offers the services of the only two board-certified developmental pediatricians in the Lehigh Valley region.

Cancer Support: The Cancer Support Community of the Greater Lehigh Valley presents the 5th Annual Wings of Hope, 10:30 a.m. Sept. 8, Cedar Crest College, 100 College Drive, Allentown.

The free, 90-minute event includes music entertainment by Melody for Humanity, children's crafts and activities, refreshments, and a sale of butterfly-themed items. Rob Vaughan of WFMZ Channel 69 is emcee.

At noon Sept. 8, there will be 250 Monarch butterflies, which are symbols of transformation, released in honor of those affected by cancer.

"This wonderful event is a meaningful and touching recognition of our loved ones, friends, and co-workers. Nine thousand people are diagnosed with cancer each year in the Lehigh Valley, and we stand with every one of them," said Cancer Support Community of the Greater Lehigh Valley Interim Director Elizabeth Scofield.

In advance of the event, you may donate $10 to sponsor a paper butterfly, inscribed with a loved one's name. These butterflies are pinned to curtains and displayed at the event. The butterflies, embedded with wildflower seeds, can be taken home and planted, to grow into butterfly-attracting wildflowers.

Rain date is 3 p.m. Sept. 9.

To purchase a butterfly, contact Dianne Moody, dmoody@cancersupportglv.org, 610-861-7555, ext. 39.

Something 'Wild' at cinema

One of the pleasures of summer movie-going is discovering a less-trumpeted movie amidst the summer blockbusters.

"Beasts of the Southern Wild" is one such film.

The film's intriguing title reveals little. Even after seeing the film, you may not be able to describe what you have seen. However, you will know you've had an extraordinary film-going experience.

"Beasts" tells the story of six-year-old Hushpuppy (Quvenzhané "Nazie" Wallis), a motherless child. The parenting skills of her father, Wink (Dwight Henry), border on child abuse.

Hushpuppy lives in a high-rise trailer, or rather a trailer on stilts, elevated to avoid the flooding of the Mississippi River down along the levee so deep in a Louisiana bayou nicknamed "The Bath-tub" it seems to be in the Gulf of Mexico. The father lives in a separate nearby trailer.

They live cheek by jowl with the chickens and pigs, which, on any given evening, may be their dinner.

Hushpuppy and Wink are so poor the poverty line is something they aspire to.

Wink instructs Hushpuppy how to fish for catfish — barehanded — from a pickup truck bed that has been outfitted with oil drums as pontoons and an outboard motor. It seems quite bayou-worthy.

Wink and his friends are alcoholics. One wonders if the alcohol kills the germs that would otherwise infect them.

After a hurricane and dangerous rising waters, Hushpuppy, Wink and a ragtag collection of neighbor adults and children become water-born refugees. No quarter is given and none is taken. "No crying," Wink orders Hushpuppy.

Their travels lead to a series of mishaps and Hushpuppy's real or imagined encounters with her long, lost mother, as well as prehistoric beasts known as aurochs, a kind of gigantic wild boar, that have been set loose. Weaving through the storyline are apocalyptic warnings about climate change and the melting of the Arctic polar ice cap.

"Beasts" is mysterious, disconcerting, stunning, profound and powerful. It has the fierce wildness of innocence. It's one of the year's best film's so far, and sure to be an Oscar contender.

"Beasts" received four awards at the 2012 Cannes Film Festival, Grand Jury Prize at Sundance and the audience award at the Los Angeles Film Festival.

Not for a moment do you feel as though you are watching a movie. The acting is so realistic. The story is told so off-handedly.

Lafarge 'Business of the Year'

The Northampton Area Chamber of Commerce (NACC), partners of the Greater Lehigh Valley Chamber of Commerce, have announced that Lafarge North America Inc. is the 2012 Business of the Year.

Lafarge was selected for outstanding spirit and commitment in contributing to the success and growth of the Chamber, the business community and the Northampton area.

Tony Pristash, NACC President, presented the Lafarge staff with a plaque and other citations, as well as a media package from Regina Luciano, Lehigh Valley Press Advertising Assistant Manager, at the 4th Annual NACC Iron Pigs Night June 27.

"On behalf of the management and our great employees here at the Lafarge Whitehall Plant, we are very excited to receive this prestigious honor," said Lorraine Faccenda, Lafarge Optimization Manager.

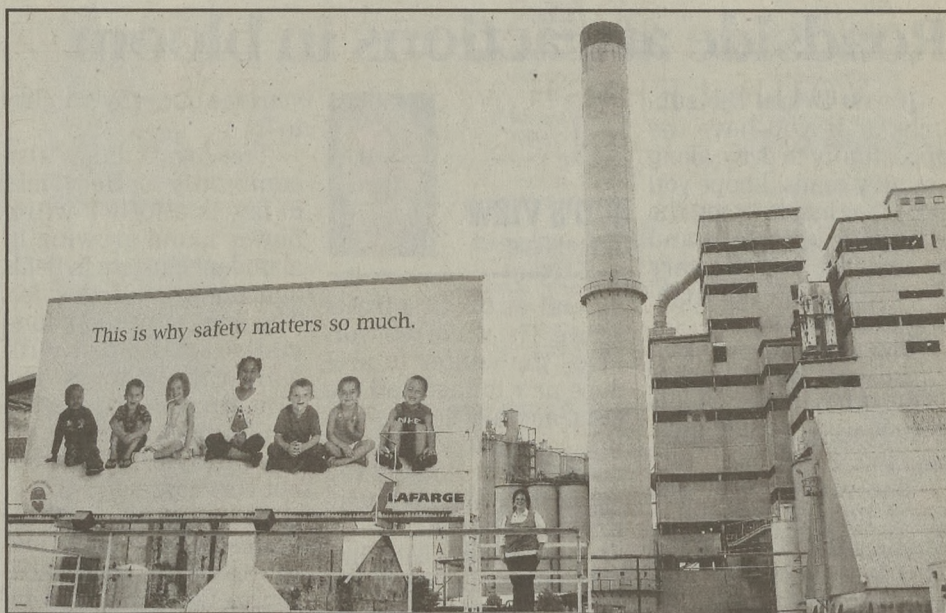

"The 2012 Northampton Area Chamber of Commerce Business of the Year Award signifies that we are not only succeeding as a company, but also as a good neighbor and well-respected member of the community," Faccenda said.

Lafarge employees celebrated the night with staff, family and fellow Chamber members while enjoying an evening of baseball at Coca-Cola Park.

Ben Franklin invests $342,547 in firms

The Ben Franklin Technology Partners of Northeastern Pennsylvania Board of Directors has approved the investment of $342,547 in support of regional economic development.

Ben Franklin announces the following company investments from its Pennsylvania Challenge Grant funding, in the Lehigh Valley Press circulation area:

Early-Stage Firms

ArioTech, Bethlehem, Northampton County - Ben Franklin Investment: $50,000 - Customize and deploy a new type of information-sharing platform for hospital-discharged chronically-ill patients and their care providers, and pilot the technology in three major northeastern United States hospitals. Released patients will better able to adhere to their medication regimens, manage their symptoms, and learn more about their diseases. They will more efficiently communicate with their care providers about important physiological information including blood sugar, blood pressure, pulse oximetry, and others. This will help hospitals lower costs and improve patient experiences and health outcomes.

BioSample Solutions LLC, Bethlehem, Northampton County - Ben Franklin Investment: $70,000 - Complete development and begin commercialization of the BioCookie, a proprietary sample preparation technique for application in DNA and RNA extraction technology. BioSample manufactures DNA and RNA extraction kits for laboratory tests on blood and saliva. These new tests will allow for the development of increasingly sophisticated drugs and more personalized medicine regimens. Sample preparation will be greatly simplified and accomplished at twice the speed of the current methodology.

Sunstream Earth, Allentown, Lehigh County - Ben Franklin Investment: $110,000 - Complete construction and testing of a prototype of a new type of solar-powered thermal generator for electricity production. This new technology will allow electricity to be produced on-site utilizing only ambient solar heat, without the need for connection to the power grid. The generator requires a much smaller footprint and is more efficient than conventional solar-generation technologies.

Established Manufacturers

EcoTech Marine LLC, Bethlehem, Northampton County; University Partner: Lehigh University - Ben Franklin Investment: $25,000 - Improve supply chain processes through modifications to an existing Enterprise Resource Planning system, and plan for expansion into a larger space. EcoTech's patented VorTech propeller pump is located outside of hobby reef aquariums, providing better heat control and flow. EcoTech has enjoyed outstanding sales with the pump. Its new Radion LED lighting unit improves aquarium growth, coverage, and energy efficiency, and provides a customizable spectral output.

Alpha Packaging, Bethlehem, Northampton County; University Partner: Lehigh University - Ben Franklin Investment: $48,000 - Implement practices and install equipment to reduce energy consumption by 20 percent at this manufacturer of plastic bottles and jars primarily for the nutritional, pharmaceutical, personal care, houseware, consumer chemical, and food and beverage markets. The plastic container industry is highly competitive both domestically and internationally, and controlling energy costs is essential to maintaining competitive advantage.

Edward Jones gets financial honors

Financial services firm Edward Jones was named the Advisory Solutions Firm of the Year by the Money Management Institute.

The firm was chosen because it most exemplified overall excellence and contributed to the long-term success and sustainability of the wealth management industry, according to Jeff McElhaney, an Edward Jones financial advisor in Emmaus.

The award was presented at the Institute's annual Gateway to Leadership Awards Dinner held in Chicago.

The Money Management Institute is the national association for the managed investment solutions and the wealth management industry. This award recognizes the features and benefits of both of the firm's advisory platforms.

Edward Jones Advisory Solutions is an asset allocation and advisory program that allows investors to select from research or custom models with an initial minimum investment of $50,000.

The program has grown to more than $75 billion in assets under management since its introduction in August 2008. Advisory Solutions ranks as the United States' fourth largest mutual fund advisory program, according to MMI-Dover Research.

In addition, Edward Jones offers a dual contract separately managed account program with more than $2 billion in assets under management.

Vice President joins Good Shepherd

Good Shepherd Rehabilitation Network has named Laura M. Shaw-Porter of Elverson, Chester County, as vice president, Human Resources.

Shaw-Porter has more than 20 years of human resource leadership experience, 10 years of which was spent in the health-care industry, including Physiotherapy Associates, Exton, and NovaCare Outpatient Rehabilitation, King of Prussia.

Most recently, she was senior vice president, Human Resources, Philadelphia Insurance Companies of Bala Cynwyd.

She received a bachelor's degree in human resource management from Temple University, and is pursuing a mas-

Laura M. Shaw-Porter's degree in human resource development from Villanova University.

Wildlands chooses new fund director

Wildlands Conservancy has announced that Megan Sciarrino is its new Director of Annual Fund & Communications.

Sciarrino oversees Wildlands Conservancy's annual fund efforts, and relevant communications and event coordination, including the Lehigh River Sojourn and Green Gala.

"Megan's creativity, coupled with her passion for getting outdoors, is well aligned to increase communitywide support for the protection of local, high-value lands," said Elizabeth Dugan, vice president of development and communications at Wildlands Conservancy.

Sciarrino is a longtime marketing communications professional who has held positions in corporate television production, education and laboratory medicine. She comes to

WFMZ-TV news reporting again lauded

Maranatha Broadcasting's WFMZ-TV has been recognized with eight Pennsylvania Associated Press Broadcasters Association news awards.

"The awards are a testament to the quality of work my staff performs every day, but especially to their ability to perform in the toughest of circumstances and when the community relies on us most," said WFMZ-TV News Director Brad Rinehart.

For the third consecutive year, AP has recognized WFMZ-TV as the best regularly-scheduled newscast. "'69 News at 5' gave viewers outstanding team coverage of an incredible tragedy," said the judges on team coverage of a gas explosion. "A news team viewers can count on."

The WFMZ-TV team was recognized with first place recognition in the following categories:

Regularly-Scheduled Newscast: "69 News at 5" - Dan Rinkus, producer; Amy Unger, senior producer; Manoj K. Shamdasani, assistant news director; Brad Rinehart, news director; Rob Vaughn, anchor; Wendy Davis, anchor; Brett Schutter, director

News Documentary: "Aftershocks: Earthquake in Haiti" - Jaccii Farris, docujournalist; Lee Jen-

ins, photojournalist

Spot News: "Deadly gas explosion" - Dan Rinkus and Janelle Hill, producers; Amy Unger, senior producer; Manoj K. Shamdasani, assistant news director; Brad Rinehart, news director; Brett Schutter, director; Joscelyn Moes, Bo Koltnow, Jaccii Farris and Stephanie Esposito, reporters

Series: "What can Davis save us?" - Wendy Davis, anchor; Manoj K.

Shamdasani, assistant news director

News Or Sports Talk Program - "The Big Ticket," - Troy Hein, sports director

Additionally, the 69 News team was recognized with third place awards in the following categories:

Sports Play-By-Play: "The Big Ticket," Troy Hein, sports director

Public Affairs: "The 2011 Freddy Awards" - Barry Fisher, general manager; Shelley Brown, executive producer; Jamie Balliet, producer

Sportscast: "69 Sports" - Troy Hein, sports director; Jim Vaughn, Neille Giffune, sports anchors

The 69 News Documentary "Aftershocks: Earthquake in Haiti" received praise from the AP judges. "Wow! This entry made us feel like we were on the ground in Haiti, witnessing everything in person. The reporter did a fantastic job describing every scene. The photographer seemed to be everywhere; the lens captured every moment. In addition, we felt as though there was an element of danger; the journalists kept their cool while capturing history in the making," said the judges.

WFMZ-TV's commitment to sports coverage was also acknowledged. "'The Big Ticket' represents outstanding sports coverage. A fantastic example of a local sports department serving its community," the judges said.

The entries were judged by the North Carolina AP Broadcasters Association.

Roadside attractions in bloom

If you live in the suburbs or if you have the opportunity to drive along country roads, I hope you take the time to enjoy the varieties of colors and species of wildflowers growing along the highways and byways.

Many of them are listed as invasive, but they tend to brighten up my travels from home to local destinations.

The majority of the white flowers growing at the shoulder of area roads at this time of the year are Queen Anne's lace. This member of the parsley family is also commonly called wild carrot. The flat-topped, lacy, off-white flowers often contain a single dark purple floret in the center.

Native American women and children painstakingly collected these tiny individual florets to use as a dye. The florets were the only source of that particular shade of purple found in the area. You can check out this attractive purple hue by picking one of the dark florets from the middle of a Queen Anne's lace flower head and crush it against one of your fingernail.

Queen Anne's lace, although widespread, is not native to the United States. This plant, like many other wildflowers, is an introduced species from Europe, probably from the Mediterranean area.

The biennial produces the familiar green feather-like carrot foliage during the first year. This foliage dies off as the first frosts arrive. The white root survives the winter to produce new foliage and the familiar white flowers during the second year of growth. It is considered one of the worst European-introduced weeds.

Queen Anne's lace, like many other plants in the parsley family, is a host plant for larvae of the black swallowtail butterflies. The larvae, also known as caterpillars, are green with black markings.

Collecting a few black swallowtail butterfly caterpillars is a good activity to do with children. Place the caterpillars in a fairly large closed but airy container with enough host foliage to satisfy their appetites.

The caterpillars will each form a chrysalis and after several weeks emerge as beautiful adult butterflies. The butterflies are very tame at this time and will usually sit on your finger until you release them into the yard.

It is a great way for children to witness a miracle of nature up close and personal. Be sure to handle the butterflies gently. Do not touch their wings. The wings are made up of tiny scales that can be damaged if handled. Improper handling might also prevent the butterfly's ability to fly.

The oxeye daisy, also commonly called field daisy, is another white flower found growing in abundant clusters in fields and along area roadsides. The one- to two-foot-long stalks are topped with white-rayed flowers. The 15 to 30 narrow rays spread out from a yellow center. The petals are edible, but not very tasty.

One of my Penn State professors in a parks and recreation and department course, told the class that if you add the daisy petals to a peanut butter sandwich, the petals take away the sticky tendency of the peanut butter to coat the inside of your mouth. I tried it and it worked.

The blue chicory flower is another species of wildflower that is difficult to miss as you drive on highways at this time of the year. The chicory flowers are open for only one day.

The flower heads are about one and a half inches across with squared, fringe-edged petals. The leaves at the base are very similar to that of the dandelion, but the leaves growing along the stems are smaller. It grows from a long, deep taproot.

The roots can be roasted, ground and used in place of coffee or as a coffee additive. According to Euell Gibbons' book, "Stalking the Wild Asparagus," the plants growing along local road shoulders are the same plants that are imported by the tons each year to be used as a coffee additive.

Yellow hawk weeds, white Queen Anne's lace and blue chicory provide a wonderful world of color along rural roadsides.

Chicory grows to a height of 1- to 4-feet-tall. It blooms from June to October. The basal leaves can be used in salads in the same way as dandelion. Be sure to gather the leaves before the flowers appear. Dig parallel along the taproot to gather the sweeter tasting white underground leaves.

The majority of yellow flowers mixed in with Queen Anne's lace, oxeye daisies and chicory are hawkweed flowers. There are about 50 hawkweed species. They prefer dry clearings, pastures and roadsides.

The flowers grow on the top of 1- to 3-feet-high unbranched, hairy stems. Flowers vary from yellow to orange to reddish colors. The stem grows from the center of a rosette of hairy basal leaves.

During a recent rural trip to purchase a new birdfeeder from the Mill at Germansville, I was admiring the colorful bounty of wildflowers growing at the edge of the road shoulders.

Several miles from my destination, I passed the local municipality's roadside edge-cutter. Its naked steel arm was reaching out, ripping and cutting the wildflowers and whatever additional vegetation was covering the shoulder and the bank.

As I returned home from the mill nothing remained along the roadside but clumps of wilted foliage. The road edge looked horrible.

I've often wondered if it's really necessary to spend tax dollars to trim the road edges. Do these 3- to 4-feet-tall plants actually create a safety hazard?

I recommend cutting areas where it is necessary for safety such as crossroads and sharp turns, but allow other road edges to grow and flourish. This will also free up the driver's time to concentrate on more important work issues.

That's the way I see it!

Share the Moment in Color!

As a service to our readers, The Press weekly newspapers will print engagement, wedding and anniversary photos in color in the Focus section.

The fee for each article with color photo is $25.00.

The weekly newspapers will continue to run one black and white photo at no charge. Two photos, color or black & white, are $35.00.

The Press will not accept photos that are computer printouts. The printed or emailed, high-quality digital color photo, article information, contact name, telephone number and a check, made payable to The Press, need to be sent to: The Press office, 1633 N. 26th St., Allentown, PA 18104.

For INFORMATION on how to send digital photos and vow information, please call 610-740-0944. Or see our website - www.lehighvalleypress.com

Our Lady of Perpetual Help summer carnival

PRESS PHOTOS BY TIM GILMAN

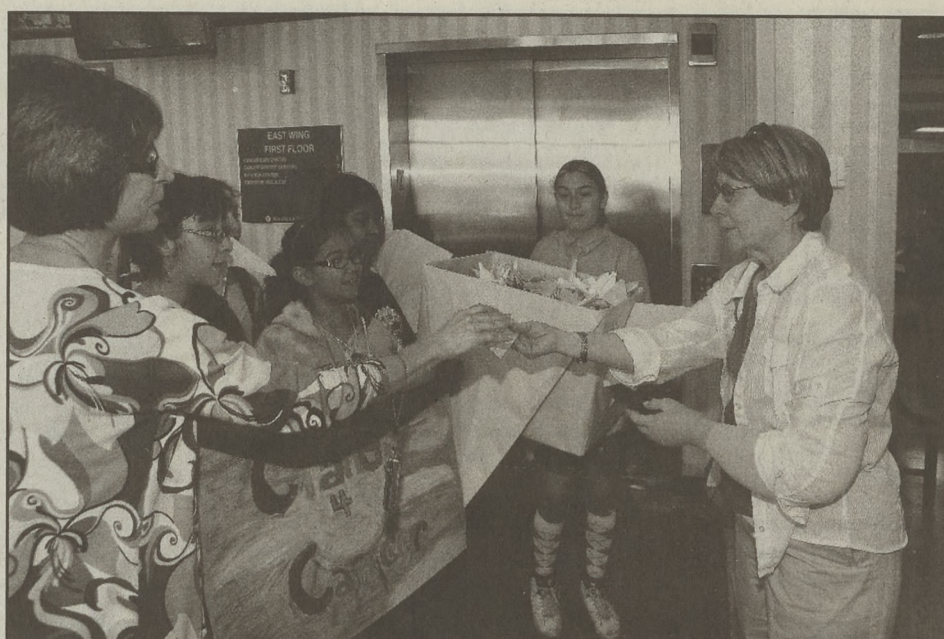

Rides and games are family entertainment options at Our Lady of Perpetual Help's summer carnival in Bethlehem Township, near the City of Bethlehem border. Young horse rider Madeline Gazzano, of Bethlehem, is accompanied by her grandfather Jake Joseph, of Easton, on the old-fashioned carousel operated by Goodtime Amusements of Hellertown. The popular admission-free carnival has been a major fundraiser for the Catholic parish.

Parishioner David Ney, of Hanover Township, a carnival volunteer since the early years of the summer event, prepares potato pancakes. Food sales contribute immensely to the bottom line of the 20-year outdoor festival.

Students craft origami gifts for cancer patients

A number of Fountain Hill Elementary School students donated their time and care to patients at St. Luke's University Hospital Cancer Center recently, hand-making 1,000 paper cranes for patients in the hospital.

Hospital Marketing and Public Relations Director Sue Ross said in a release the five girls decided to do a special project with the help of their art teacher, Susan Berkenstock.

Katrisha Cordero, Guadalupe and Fatima Montero, Michelle Leonor-Hernandez and Delysia Vazquez, "were inspired to take on the project after hearing the story of Sadako Sasaki, a young Japanese girl who developed leukemia as the result of breathing contaminated air from the attack on Hiroshima in 1945," Berkenstock said.

According to the story, Sasaki received paper cranes as a get-well gift and, while sick and growing weaker, took on the personal challenge to make 1,000 paper cranes, hoping it would cure her illness.

The girls hope the cranes will lift the spirits of those in need.

The cranes will come with the message, "This origami crane was made by the students of Fountain Hill Elementary School. According to Japanese legend, one who creates a thousand paper cranes will be granted a wish. Our wish for you is Health, Serenity and Peace."

The girls recently presented the cranes to Dr. Nimisha Deb, medical director of radiation oncology and Joe Pinto, administrative director of oncology services, and were given as gifts to patients coming to St. Luke's for cancer treatment.

"These girls are truly remarkable people," Riley said. "We are happy to accept these beautiful origami cranes and message, knowing the spirit in which they were made."

"They will truly be a source of joy and inspiration for our patients."

Fountain Hill fifth-grade students Guadalupe Montero, Fatima Montero, Delysia Vazquez, Katrisha Cordero and Michelle Leonor-Hernandez brought 1,000 origami cranes to St. Luke's Cancer Center in a large crane-shaped container.

Krysta Cares Flight Club has first golf fundraiser for children

The "KC Flight Club", a service branch of the Krysta Hanke Memorial Fund, recently had its first golf fundraiser of 2012 "Courses That Care" — "Miles That Matter" at Pleasant Hills Golf Course.

The Flight Club raises money to purchase gas cards for families who must transport children for continuing medical care.

Thirty-two golfers participated and more than $500 was raised to purchase gas cards.

Golfers participate in a two-player scramble format.

Top scores went to Butch and Brian Arndt (father and son) with a score of 10 under par followed by Scott Gardner and Bud Kroninger with a -8 and -5 for Bill Harper and Wayne Benninger.

Nancy Birosik won the Texas Roadhouse putting contest.

The Longest Drive Ladies winner was Janet Ifkovits. The Longest Drive Men's winner was Bill Green.

Green also won "Closest to the Pin" on No.

seven with Frank George taking the honor on No. 15.

Even with the rise in fuel costs, this event will provide approximately 3,000 miles of driving for the families transporting children to the Good Shepherd Pediatric Rehab Center. The Flight Club has provided these families with more than 10,600 miles through gas cards and gifting provided by Giant Foods.

NOTICE OF CATASAUQUA
ZONING HEARING #3-12

The Catasauqua Zoning Hearing Board will hear the following appeal on Tuesday, August 21, 2012 at 7:30 P.M. in the Municipal Complex, 118 Bridge Street, Catasauqua, PA 18032.

Approval of the minutes of the May 15, 2012 meeting.
Re-organization of the Board.

APPEAL #3-12: The appeal of James and Florence Williams, 617 Front Street, Catasauqua, PA 18032, and Jeffrey Joseph for variances related to a proposed subdivision of their property. Specifically, the applicants are requesting a 1,891.6 sq. ft. variance for the newly created Lot #1, a 1,651.1 sq. ft. variance for the newly created Lot #2, variances of 16 ft. and 9.36 ft. respectively for Lots #1 and #2 for the lot width requirements, 3 ft. and 4 ft. respectively from the front yard setback requirements and a variance of 2 spaces for the off-street requirements related to Lot #2, and a use variance related to the residential use of the property. The property is located in a DC-Downtown Commercial Zoning District in which neither apartment building will add a commercial component nor free-standing single family homes are permitted. The use of the property and location of the buildings with respect to the side yard setbacks, the parking deficiency related to the main structure all are pre-existing non-conforming uses under Catasauqua Zoning Ordinance. The subdivision proposes no new development on the property.

Any other business that comes before the Board.

Applicants must be present for their hearing. Parties interested in a scheduled hearing may review the application and supporting documents at the municipal building during regular business hours.

Eugene L. Goldfeder, Zoning Officer
