Board wants state program for school projects

By JOSE ROMAN
 Special to the Bethlehem Press

It might sound like pocket change compared to the total amount of money needed to build the new Nitschmann MS, but no matter what anyone thinks of the approximately $7 million the Bethlehem Area School District wants from the state to help pay for the new school construction and other projects, and in spite of a funding freeze, the school board has decided to go after the money anyway.

At its May 20 meeting, the Bethlehem Area School Board passed a resolution urging the Pa. General Assembly to increase funding and to maintain a reimbursement program for school construction and renovation projects including the Nitschmann project.

"A significant delay in receiving the state reimbursement at Part H of the PlanCon process will force the Bethlehem Area School District to borrow additional money," reads part of the resolution passed by the board.

The $7 million would come through the Planning and Construction Workbook program, better known as PlanCon. Through PlanCon, the state reimburses school districts a share of costs associated with building and renovating school facilities. Last year, as part of Gov. Tom Corbett's 2012-13 budget, PlanCon funding was put on hold. The moratorium is supposed to last through June 30.

But board directors decided not to sit and wait. With a swift string of yeses, all directors, except Irene Follweiler, gave the resolution the green light.

Follweiler said she is not opposed to getting the money and concedes no amount of dollars is too small to reject. Rather, she questions the resolution itself. Previously, she has argued that passing resolutions can make the board look "too political."

oath, that he and his son are lousy contractors. Years ago, they built a storage building at 1746 Center St., but it's rotting away. So he asked zoners for a dimensional variance that would enable them to demolish the storage building and replace it with an 11-foot by 28-foot garage.

Neighbor Linda Caraghan, who also swore that the storage building is deteriorating, asked zoners to let him build a garage. Yerk promised he'd hire a contractor this time, and zoners granted the variance, 4-0.

Zoners also granted a dimensional variance to Richard and Idella Dickey, 1526 Easton Ave., to construct a 10-foot by 20-foot addition to their garage. Richard Dickey explained

THE MEANING OF THE DAY

Fountain Hill's Memorial Day event May 23 was moved into the elementary school's gymnasium when a rainstorm blew through, but still held all the expected pomp. Guest speaker Tom Marshall, Bethlehem's recycling director, described why the day is important to him and why the sacrifices made by service members deserve recognition. "They gave their lives so that we may live in a free and prosperous United States," he said. "Remember that and give grateful thanks."

Historic guardians monitor alterations

BETHLEHEM

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI

Bethlehem's Historic Conservation committee, an advisory group appointed by the mayor to help preserve the integrity of older structures as the city changes, discussed three properties at its monthly meeting at the Banana Factory May 20.

Tom Rummel, president of Results Homebuyers, Inc., which refurbishes and resells homes, recently replaced the roof of the 1910-built 728 Evans St. He said he was previously unaware he needed committee approval on design and materials.

Local architect and committee member Christine Ussler said federal regulations prohibit destroying historic materials, but that in this case the original shingles were already gone.

Though the shingles used by Rummel are not perfect, members granted appropriateness, as the building's height makes the shingles hard to see.

Members later spoke with residents Charles and Elena Dziuba, who wish to demolish an old garage at a 333 Vine St. property they rent out. Members' main concern (aside from what would happen to the attractive old garage door) was whether the demolition would reveal an unsealed patch of bare wall on the adjoining home.

The Dziubas agreed with the committee's recommendation to contact the neighboring homeowners and offer, in writing, to help make any needed repairs to the home in exchange for permission to remove the garage.

Finally, Alejandrino Trujillo retuned with an update from a prior visit regarding a store he hopes to open soon at 226 East Third St. Members discussed fresh thoughts and options with Trujillo, including changes to a roof over a rear staircase, backlit rather than internally-lit signage and using non-metal siding at ground level to avoid denting.

Trujillo noted the changes and said he will work to complete them quickly as he aims to open by October.

Ussler said she is looking forward to the completed work. "It's a great project. We're all eager to see it."

Once deemed appropriate by the committee, properties go before Zoning Hearing Board review.

"I have to move things out just to get the lawnmower," he complained. He added that he has so many things that he has to rent a storage facility a few miles away from his home. "The wife says, 'I need this, I need that,'" he complained.

Looking at pictures, Zoner Gus Loupos joked, "Oh, I think you can still get a few things in there."

Dickey said he has an architect and contractor ready to build the addition. "It's not Commissioner Yerk is it?" joked Zoner Bill Fitzpatrick.

During the May 20 voting, Follweiler reminded her fellow directors that not long ago they made a commitment to stay away from actions that might make the board appear to be playing politics.

No one knows for sure if the moratorium on PlanCon will be lifted. Still, the school board has already put few eggs in the PlanCon basket. According to the board, investments have already been made, such as the hiring of a project manager, and pre-construction related contracts have been awarded. Board directors approved the construction of the new Nitschmann MS in February. The estimated total cost of the project is $53.7 million.

Cops get cash for new bikes

FREEMANSBURG

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI
 njastrzemi@tntonline.com

Borough council received good news for its small police department May 14, when Northampton County District Attorney John Morganelli attended the public meeting with a donation to contribute to local neighborhood patrols.

Morganelli said he'd recently spoken with new Police Chief Todd Pantuso and decided Freemansburg deserved a little more attention. "Todd came to me and told me he thought a bike patrol would be useful to the borough," Morganelli said. "I thought it was a great idea."

Morganelli went on to describe rising pressure on municipalities and recent events such as the fatal shooting of a police officer in the borough as evidence even help is needed. He presented a check for $3,000 to the borough to help implement a bicycle program to assist local police work.

Pantuso later welcomed new part-time Officer Jeff Farneski, who recently retired after 27 years as an officer and investigator with another department.

Council voted to accept the resignation of a member of the Planning Commission and accepted Charles Derr as the replacement. Derr is a former council member and president, and current busybody. He's also working alongside community member Dennis Scholl to revitalize the old Freemansburg Canal into a quality education site for history buffs and local students.

Scholl spoke to council and said the site will be cleared of invasive plants and will include a garden, new fencing, raised walkway, refurbished canal lock and a mule barn - complete with a big plastic mule. It will be open to the public and student groups.

As the entire room tried to ignore Derr's spontaneous lesson on mule reproduction, Scholl said he's pleased with all the volunteers assisting with the project and work is proceeding apace. "We'll have that site open for the kids by October."

Borough Manager Judith Danko agreed. "Freemansburg can be very proud of this project and I'm happy to be a part of it."

The next meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. June 4 at Borough Hall, 600 Monroe St.

Fifth year without a tax increase

SAUCON VALLEY

By MARK RECCEK
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Saucon Valley School Board wants to make it five years in a row without a tax increase.

The board at its May 14 meeting approved the 2013-14 proposed budget by a vote of 7-2, with school board members Sandra Miller and Sharon Stack voting no.

This year's $40.7 million budget was made possible by utilizing $104,511 from the district's $2.1 million undesignated fund balance to avoid a tax increase.

The board passed the budget while funding a behavioral specialist at $8,108 and not replacing two retiring teachers and funding only one bus purchase, rather than two.

School board member Lanita Lum supported the funding of the behavioral specialist.

"I will strongly support any additional support we can have in that area," said Lum. "Unfortunately, the schools do need to address mental health issues that we have here in our district."

Miller's decision to vote no was based on her wanting to keep a high school family and consumer science teaching position full-time by using $28,000 in the budget to fund the position. A motion was later made by Miller to fund the position from the undesignated fund balance, which was approved by the board.

The board will vote on the budget June 11.

The final 2013-14 budget must be approved by June 30.

CITY POLICE Possession

Responding to a report complaining of intoxicated people at the first block of West Broad Street early May 17, officers made three arrests for various charges.

Sarah Billot, 22, of Glendale Avenue, is charged with public drunkenness.

Joseph Wilson, 21, of Carlton Avenue is charged with possession of a small amount of marijuana.

Jorge Martinez, 20, of Vernon Street, fled and ditched a sweatshirt before jumping a fence on Glendale. He was apprehended and wrapped in the sweatshirt police found a pistol.

Martinez is charged with possessing a firearm without a license.

Few surprises, low turnout

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI
njastrzemski@tntonline.com

The primary election vote-counting lasted longer than expected, with news of Bethlehem mayor and Northampton County executive offices not tallied and announced until late afternoon May 23.

Turnout for this primary was surprisingly low, said Northampton County Election officer Dee Rumsey. According to unofficial results, only about 14.4 percent of Republicans voted, and 13.8 percent of Democrats participated, despite the contentious and Democratic mayoral and county executive races. Rumsey, in a telephone interview, could not specify why turnout was so low, and admitted municipal elections are sometimes just fickle.

Near-centenarian Harold Thomas from Moravian Village in Bethlehem exits a voting booth after casting his ballot for the the 1st district of the 15th ward at Northeast MS. Recently honored Outstanding Senior Citizen of the Year by the Northampton County Area Agency on Aging, Thomas said, "Voting is a special privilege we have in this country people don't always take advantage of." The senior citizen, who emphasized that he'll be 97 in July, added, "I try to vote in every election."

City Councilman Robert Donchez won out over fellow councilman J. William Reynolds for top contender in the mayoral race. However, since there's no Republican candidate, Donchez is essentially mayor-elect. It may the Democratic nomination for county executive following Glenn Reibman's concession. Callahan finished with a 20-point lead.

Scott Ott pulled ahead of Dean Browning for the Republican seat as Lehigh County executive.

Northampton County Council nomination winners include Seth Vaughn, Mathew Benol, Glenn Geissinger, Peg Ferraro and Hayden R. Phillips.

City Council members Eric Evans and Karen Dolan retain their seats for the moment, as Bryan Callahan and Adam Waldron, both small-business owners, also earned nominations. The sole Republican nominee was Chris Morales.

In the municipalities, three-decade incumbent Gerald Yob retains his mayorship in Freemansburg over fellow Democrat, council member and Fire Chief Donald Lasso. Rudy Gallich and George Wilson retain their seats on Borough Council while Mark B. Lorrach won the seat vacated by Lasso. All three men are also Democrats.

Republican Pat Breslin beat longtime Bethlehem Township Commissioner Paul Weiss for his seat, and is a presumptive winner without a Democratic opponent.

Hellertown borough Democrat James Hill won a nomination over Council President Philip Weber, while current council members Thomas J. Rieger, Gail Nolf and Michael McKenna remain in place. Linda L. Leewright was the borough's only Republican candidate.

CITY POLICE Drug possession

Police arrested a man and woman on a litany of charges following a domestic dispute May 11.

Officers responding to a call in the 400 block of Third Avenue around 4:45 a.m. observed alleged drug paraphernalia in the home and requested a warrant to search the premises.

They discovered a "large amount" of marijuana, heroin, unspecified paraphernalia, a motorcycle and $9,000 cash.

Alexander Bernardini, 42, is charged with possession of paraphernalia and simple assault.

Mildred Martinez, 32, of Livingston Street, is charged with possession of paraphernalia, possession with intent to deliver and criminal conspiracy.

DUI accidents

Police arrested a 29-year-old man for driving intoxicated around 1 a.m. May 18.

Officers allegedly observed Michael Master, of Wright Street in Easton, crash his car into a parked vehicle and continue driving. He was stopped on West Market Street and subjected to sobriety tests, which he failed.

Master is charged with DUI.

Officers arrested a second man for similar circumstances around 2 p.m. that day.

Gregory Eckman, 59, of West Union Boulevard, allegedly crashed his vehicle while drunk and already had a DUI-suspended license.

Eckman is charged with DUI, careless driving and driving while suspended.

"Full Of Glory"

Last Monday morning I received an unusual phone call. I heard a man's voice excitedly say, "Pastor!" and then his speech broke into a torrent of unknown tongues. I recognized Bruce's voice and I knew what this meant—he had evidently just been wonderfully baptized in the Holy Ghost like the early Christian believers in Acts 2:4 who "were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." I responded, "Well, praise the Lord!" But he just kept on enthusiastically speaking in tongues and obviously bubbling over with the joy and glory of the Lord! It was as if he couldn't stop or perhaps didn't want to stop! Together we continued to praise the Lord in other tongues.

When Bruce was able to speak in English, he told me what had happened. He was on his way to work and was going to turn on his car radio when he felt that the Lord was telling him to leave the radio off and just praise Him. As he obeyed, the glory of the Lord began to fall upon him and then he felt that the Lord was telling him to pull over to the side of the road. Again, he obeyed and suddenly a gush of heavenly glory swept over him, and he began to loudly speak in tongues! He told me that waves of divine love, joy, and peace engulfed him. It was overwhelming and full of glory!

Such an experience of divine joy, peace, and glory is biblical and fitting upon receiving the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Peter referred to "the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into" and noted that the early Christians "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory" (1 Peter 1:12 & 8).

Evangelist Charles Finney testified that he "received a mighty baptism of the Holy Ghost" and he said "it seemed to come in waves and waves of liquid love...I wept aloud with joy and love...I literally bellied out unutterable gushings of my heart." See more at: www.naog.ws/thirsty.htm

Budget set with 2.1% increase

Money for Bethlehem playgrounds included in budget

By JOSE ROMAN
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The Bethlehem Area School District Board accepted the proposed $224.1 million budget proposal May 13, which will amount to a 2.1 percent tax hike.

Board members argued for weeks over whether it could afford five new all-day kindergarten classes, and ultimately voted 5-3 against an even greater tax increase, despite overall support for the idea.

Of sunnier news, the budget includes money for the building and repairs of several elementary school playgrounds.

A capital plan to improve the situation of several playgrounds within the district was presented to the board during the May 6 facilities meeting by the district's Facilities Director Mark Stein. At that meeting, Stein called upon the school board to begin budgeting to build and maintain school playgrounds.

According to Stein, at least two playgrounds within the Bethlehem Area School District are in need of repairs and equipment upgrades. Two elementary schools, Fountain Hill and William Penn, have no play equipment at all. Communities around Fountain Hill and William Penn schools have been active in raising their own money to build playgrounds.

The cost of building or upgrading school playgrounds could be as high as $100,000. Stein came up with that figure based on the average number of children who use the playgrounds listed in the capital plan he presented to the board.

Currently, each school PTA or PTO must come up with the funds to improve or build their own playgrounds. "Over time, this model has led to inequalities between school playgrounds based on the ability of each school community to fund-raise," Stein told the school board in a memorandum dated May 1.

Stein expects that this shift in funding responsibility from communities to the district will help ensure that schools have appropriate and necessary playground equipment based on the number of children who could benefit from using those recreational facilities.

Construction of needed school playgrounds could begin as early as this summer.

Council updates room rental rules

By CAROL SMITH
Special to the Bethlehem Press

NORTHAMPTON CO.

Northampton County Council approved changes to its hotel room rental tax collection policy in an effort to be more competitive and to simplify the process.

Lori Sywensky, the county's community development coordinator, told council at its May 2 meeting that two major updates to the county's hotel room rental tax rules and regulations would simplify how the 4 percent tax is collected from the county's 43 establishments. Sywensky added that the changes would make the county more competitive with Lehigh County.

The rule changes involved the list of exemptions for overnight stays of more than 30 days. The list was broadened to include companies that pay for employees to stay more than 30 days.

Regardless of length of stay, persons or families needing a room due to status as a low-income person or being displaced from their homes by a natural disaster, as well as employees of federal or state government, are also exempt from the tax.

No other changes were made to the county's 2005 hotel room rental tax ordinance.

Retirement fund reaches new high

By CAROL SMITH
Special to the Bethlehem Press

NORTHAMPTON CO.

Northampton County Executive John Stoffa reports that the county's retirement fund is on solid financial ground. At NC council's May 2 meeting, Stoffa said there was $302 million in the fund, which was a new high. The balance has nearly doubled from February 2009 when the fund stood at $161 million. The fund's previous all-time high was $258 million, set in May 2007.

While many local, state and school district budgets are underfunded when it comes to retirement plans, Northampton County's retirement fund is 80 percent funded.

For the first time in two years, county retirees received a cost of living increase, which totaled more than $4 million.

Stoffa also updated council on the bond being prepared to finance much-needed capital improvement projects at Gracedale.

The county's Human Services Director Ross Marcus reported that no bond could finance all the projects.

"We're behind on capital improvements. We won't be able to do all the capital improvements with this bond issue. It's going to take us quite a few years to get caught up," said Marcus.

According to Marcus, the top priority should be given to improving Gracedale's emergency generator system, which had not handled well the massive power outages resulting from Hurricane Sandy in October 2012.

"We are encountering new worst case scenarios, and we need to do a better job of being ready," Marcus added, in referring to the need to be on emergency power at the nursing home facility for three days.

Some wounds or damaged tissues require more oxygen than normal in order to heal. Patients with these conditions may be a candidate for hyperbaric oxygen (HBO) therapy at Lehigh Valley Hospital-Muhlenberg. STATE VOLLEYBALL

Hawks must get through Northeastern

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

Bethlehem Catholic will have to get through the top-ranked team in the state in order to defend their state volleyball crown.

The defending 2A state champions swept Coughlin in three games (25-13, 25-19, 25-15) in the first round of the PIAA 2A championships on Saturday to set up a quarterfinal draw against Northeastern.

The Hawks travel to Cumberland Valley Wednesday night for a 5:30 p.m. tilt against the state's most decorated team in 2A volleyball, as the multiple-time state champions are the heavy favorites to walk away with the state title again this year.

Hawks' head coach Jeff Koch understands the predicament his team is in, as the District 3 champions are a draw that nobody wants to see, especially in the quarters.

"It's unfortunate how things worked out this year with us having to play them this early, because we feel that we're the two best teams in the state," Koch said. "We're basically looking at this as the state championship."

The PIAA moved away from pool play to head-to-head matchups this season for tournament play, which helped navigate this early matchup.

Becahi played Northeastern at their own tournament earlier in the year, losing to them in a best of three series, 2-1. Those games only went to 15, but Becahi got a feel for the team that has been ranked number one all season long.

"They play very similar to us," he said. "We're both aggressive teams that have power hitters and jump servers. They beat Parkland pretty easily this year as well, but I think we match up well with them. We just can't commit any mistakes, because they really capitalize off that."

Becahi beat Northeastern last year 2-1 in state pool play as they went on to win the state championship for the first time in school history, as well as register their first win over Northeastern as well.

Koch hopes they can make that scenario two-for-two tonight, as they would move on to this weekend's semifinals with a win.

"We really have nothing to lose," said Koch. "Our backs are against the wall and we just have to go out and play."

Liberty was swept by Whitehall last week in the District 11 3A semifinals 25-19, 25-23, 25-22 to end their season with a 13-6 mark.

"Whitehall just wanted it a little more than our guys did," said head coach Neiad Ammary. "It was still a great season on our part, but we give Whitehall credit for the win."

'Canes win showdown

The Liberty Hurricanes are the defending district champions, and until someone tells them otherwise, they will maintain that title, according to Liberty softball coach Rich Giering.

Facing archrival Freedom in the District XI quarterfinal on Saturday, the Hurricanes prevailed 7-0.

Liberty shortstop, Alyshia Dellatore's first-inning double put the Hurricanes on the scoreboard. Then, with the bases loaded, third baseman, Emily Cecchini, was hit by a pitch, putting Liberty ahead 2-0.

Taking the mound for the Hurricanes was Lauren Epsaro, who also plays outfield.

"[Getting two runs early today] really helped me on the mound. We just knew we had to come out in the first inning and not wait to start to rally," said Epsaro.

Working for Epsaro on Saturday were her two-seam and her change-up. "Until I jammed my finger," she said, "but I didn't want to stop." Epsaro finished the game with a shutout, giving up six hits.

"I was kind of nervous, but as soon as I got started, I had confidence, and I knew my defense was behind me," said Epsaro.

Liberty designated hitter, Deb Renner, contributed a triple in the third inning and scored on a passed ball.

"I got underneath it pretty good. Good things happen when you make contact, and I've been working really hard on hitting," Renner said.

Pates conclude great season

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcdonald@tnonline.com

There could only be one winner between the Bethlehem schools in the District XI softball quarterfinal, but it was Liberty who topped Freedom, 7-0, on Saturday at the home of the Patriots.

Freedom ended its best season in recent years with a record of 15-8 and made the LVC playoffs for the first time, but those achievements were of little consolation after the Patriots' loss to the Hurricanes.

"I'm bummed. We've been struggling to score runs for a long time. Our hits were just not falling. We made decent contact, but we didn't string any hits together," said Freedom coach Nora Borger.

Because Freedom's starting pitcher, Emily Gundrum has been ailing, Borger's plan was to start freshman, Shayla Peterson.

"I wanted Shayla to go a few innings, and then bring in Emily," Borger said.

Peterson, however, ran into unexpected trouble in the first inning when Liberty had the bases loaded. Gundrum took over, but she hit Hurricane batter, Emily Cecchini, and the Hurricanes scored their second run.

Even then, Borger was not concerned, hoping that the Patriots' bats would come alive. Several of Freedom's hits, however, were stolen by Hurricanes, Alyshia Dellatore, Lily Acosta, Lexi Scala, and Cecchini.

Earlier last week, Freedom reached the quarterfinals by defeating East Stroudsburg South, 3-2. Morgan Lukievsics had a single and an RBI, and Carly Deichman had two hits for the Patriots.

Freedom will graduate five seniors: Gundrum, Corrine Kline, Sam Cabrera, Rebecca Herman, and Lukievsics.

"I'll miss the seniors. They've been an important asset to our team. They have big personalities, and they're fun and funny to have around," said Borger.

Hargrove's distance in the shot put was 41-4, and her distance in the discus was 119-05.

Also from Liberty, Casey Harewood placed tenth in the high jump with a height of 5-02.

Bethlehem Catholic senior, Mara Blanchard, came in 21st in the pole vault with a height of 10-0.

Eckman has Moravian Academy back on map

By JEFF MOELLER
Special to the Press

When he took over as head baseball coach at Moravian Academy three years ago, Chris Eckman decided it was time for the program to shed its image.

Eckman, who has been a teacher at the institution for six years, heard enough of the jokes and laughter when the program was discussed and believe he could transform it from a literal laughingstock to a bona fide one. Moravian Academy brought back baseball 10 years ago after a lengthy hiatus.

"No one really took it (baseball) seriously," recalled Eckman. "It was always the brunt of jokes. There were times that they looked like they would qualify for districts, but the program has too many JV games.

"I wanted to take a shot to legitimize the program."

This spring, Eckman helped his club take a few giant steps to legitimacy.

The Lions finished with an overall 8-7 record and earned a spot in the PIAA Class A District 11 playoffs, marking their first visit in school history. They further rewrote their history books when they defeated Lehigh Valley Christian, 6-5, before they fell to perennial power Tri-Valley, 10-0, in the next round.

"It was a huge moment for the program," said Eckman. "In the past, our kids never really made a real intention to get to districts and we didn't have the foundation that others schools have. But we have a bunch of players here who are very dedicated to this cause and they realized what they could accomplish."

"We were able to compete, and the players gained confidence along the way. We needed to win our final game to get into districts and we went out and beat Jim Thorpe, 9-1. That win said a lot about the dedication we have now."

Eckman cited the play of sophomore pitcher Jacob Schippell, who developed throughout the season into arguably the staff ace.

"He (Schippell) was revelation," said Eckman. "When other teams would see him warming up, they were probably licking their chops. He is not an imposing figure. But he went out there, hit his spots, and kept teams off balance.

"He came up big for us all season."

Junior Owen Laughlin also made an impact with the club this spring. Laughlin, a transfer from Allentown Central Catholic, led the team in several offensive categories while he split his time from pitcher, short stop, and center field.

"He (Laughlin) was our best offensive player," said Eckman. "He was a guy we counted on in big spots and he did a great job in the outfield. He also provided leadership qualities for us."

Eckman also noted the presence of basketball standout Luke Gutekunst, who decided to play baseball this spring instead of playing on an AAU team.

"We were happy that he came out and it did help the program," said Eckman. "Luke is a solid player and he gave us another option in our lineup."

With the recent rash of success, Eckman is optimistic his club can remain annual contender in the Class A district race.

"We used to have guys who picked up a glove and put it down in May," said Eckman, who previously worked with a private school baseball program around the Boston, Mass. Area. "Playing baseball from elementary school through college, I always played during the summer. We are having guys starting to play as often as they can.

"Success can breed success. These guys and everyone else saw what we are capable of doing, and we feel we have a solid foundation in place for the future here."

Bethlehem teams ousted from districts

By PETER CAR
pcar@tronline.com

The baseball season ended without any hardware for local teams, as Liberty and Freedom were both ousted from the District 11 4A tournament last week.

The Hurricanes (15-7) fell to Parkland for the third time this season following a 4-1 defeat in the quarterfinals. Parkland pitcher Tyler Duff registered his third win of the season over the 'Canes.

Parkland went on to knock off Pocono Mountain East 3-0 in the semifinals to set up tonight's championship finals against Whitehall (21-2) at 7 p.m. at Coca-Cola Park.

The end of season run for Andy Pitsilos' crew was bittersweet, knowing that his team improved throughout the season, but ran into a buzz saw in an early playoff matchup.

"Well, I took from our season that the kids worked hard to get better and I think we did that," Pitsilos said. "We had a tough quarter final draw and we ran into a pitcher that had our number. We will give him credit for beating us."

est teams in the state last week, losing to Whitehall 14-0 in the quarterfinals.

It was a similar script from the Zephyrs 10-0 victory over the Patriots during the regular season.

Whitehall went on to knock off Stroudsburg 11-3 in the semifinals, en route to setting up a rematch of the Lehigh Valley Conference championship game against Parkland, which the Zephyrs won by a 5-2 affair. Freedom ends its spring campaign at 13-9, as Whitehall opened up a 6-0 lead in the third inning, with an eight-run fourth to give Freedom no hope.

The Patriots did come away from district play with a game-winning 4-3 opening draw against Northampton, when Jarrett Clymer belted a solo shot in the eighth for the win.

Renner also hit a double, scoring Cecchini who had hit a double to center, but Renner was caught off second for an out.

"I've been working on hitting to right field. [Today] we just needed to go in with a clear mind and a new attitude. I'm so excited. We've just been more of a team and working together," said Renner.

The Hurricanes had 11 hits in the victory.

Giering said, "Because of the wind, we hit before we came over. I told them to stay the same; just attack. Don't try to change the swing. I've always told them, when you come with intensity, it's much better than when you just show up. I told them, we are the defending 4A district champs and will be until someone changes that." The Hurricanes will have taken on the winner of Pleasant Valley versus Stroudsburg on Tuesday in the district semifinal, past Press deadlines.

Only a few days remain in spring gobbler season

By NICK HROMIAK
Special to the Press

There are only a few days remaining until the end of spring gobbler season (Friday, May 31).

Spring Gobbler was successful for some turkey hunters, but field reports suggest success came predominately during the first week. After that the gobblers got lockjaw and wouldn't talk turkey.

Bob Danenhower, owner of Bob's Taxidermy in Orefield, said he was able to talk to a couple nice gobblers, but he couldn't get them into range. The one time he did, two gobblers stood together and he didn't want to shoot one and wound the other. So he passed.

According to Danenhower, this was the worst spring season he's experienced in quite a while. While he saw lots of jakes, his theory on them is, "let them go so they can grow."

One reason for the silence, he believes, is that the hens were nesting early or they were already tending to their poults. He thinks hunters should hunt in the afternoon instead of the morning now that the season is an all-day affair.

It's believed that hens will leave a gobbler in afternoon hours to lay an egg or two, making the long-beard lonely and more vulnerable.

"To circumvent the problem," says Danenhower. "Some hunters are attempting to call in hens hoping a gobbler will be in tow."

Glenn Lindaman, former owner of BuckWing Decoys in Whitehall, got his gobbler at 7 a.m. Monday morning after the Saturday opener. His bird weighed 19 pounds, had a 10-inch beard and three-quarter inch spurs. A friend of his, he reports, shot a bird on the first Thursday after the opener at 10:30 a.m.

"Last Thursday I heard five gobblers off the roost and then silence, as I tried calling for another friend," he said.

Hens, he contends, are still getting in with the gobblers but thinks these remaining days should be good because the eggs are starting to hatch and the hens won't have a thing to do with the gobblers.

If you're experiencing similar problems, there's still time to give these tips a try from the Yamaha Turkey Hunting Pro Team.

* During the last part of the season, Yamaha pros say hens disappear and are nesting. Days heat up and gobblers travel together again. Some are still driven to find hens; still others return to male turkey groups, or will soon, and stay this way through summer and autumn. Their suggestion: Use fall turkey calling tactics by soft-selling gobbler yelps that may interest late season male spring turkeys just as they do in autumn. The call, they recommend, is deeper with a slower cadence-yawp-yawp-yawp than faster, higher pitched hen yelps.

Lastly, they say to keep your eyes and ears open for an approaching red head bobbing through the greened-up woods.

Lehigh Valley Conference announces scholar athletes

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

The Lehigh Valley Interscholastic Athletic Conference announced their scholar athletes last week at Moravian College.

Every varsity sport over the year was represented, as 23 student-athletes took home the prestigious honor to represent their sport for excellence on the field and in the classroom.

Bethlehem Catholic's Bridget Smith was the only representative to take home two awards during the morning ceremony, as she won honors in girls' soccer and girls' basketball.

Smith, who will be attending the University of Pennsylvania this fall as a pre-med major, is at the top of her class at Beahm, as well as one of the best female athletes in the entire district this past season.

Taking home another honor may have been icing on the cake for her senior year.

"I feel very honored to win both of these awards, as we had great season in soccer and basketball, but academics have always been my top priority," said Smith. "I've never wanted to put anything above my grades and it's just great to win two of these awards."

Nazareth's Galin Swigart and Easton's Kathryn Nemeth won a separate category for the Character and Sportsmanship award, as the breakfast event highlighted the conference's best and brightest individuals.

Northampton's Evan Notaro was on the list as well, as he took home honors in golf.

The Temple-bound Notaro reveled in the opportunity to win the award and was surprised to take home the honor.

"We have some great athletes at Northampton, and some very smart ones as well, so it's a great feeling to win," he said. "To have this award mix acdemics and athletics is great to show all the work you put in really makes it worth it."

Parkland's Paul Tajiri won the honors for football, as he was one of four Trojans to win on the day.

"It's great to be recognized and I just want to thank everyone that has helped guide me through the years," said Tajiri, who will be attending Messiah College. "Football is very big in the area, so to be selected is great."

Whitehall's Matt Bonshak may be a star on the baseball field, but he was also a state qualifier in wrestling as a junior, as he took home the nod for wrestling.

"When you see some of the guys that I was competing with for the award, it really makes it more special to come out and win," said the Lehigh-bound Bonshak. "Everyone that was nominated is top-notch, so it's a great honor."

Freshpet boosts technology training

By DANA GRUBB
Special to the Bethlehem Press

"It's all about relationships," said Freshpet CEO Richard Thompson as he met with five Freshpet scholarship recipients April 26 to present a check for $10,000 to Northampton Community College director of development and scholarships Paul Acampora. Ten NCC students are receiving $1,000 scholarships because of their enrollment at NCC in manufacturing-related fields of study.

Thompson said his big goal is to be a partner in the Lehigh Valley and he is hopeful that by assisting students in technology fields that lead to manufacturing careers, it will help in part to provide the workforce necessary to run and manage Freshpet's new state-of-the-art manufacturing facility located on North Commerce Way in Hanover Township.

Freshpet manufactures fresh pet food for dogs and cats, by eliminating preservatives and using locally purchased raw materials to mix, blend, cook and process a natural and healthy pet food.

Currently operating out of a plant near Quakertown, Freshpet's growth had been maximized at that location, limiting the company to $75 million in annual sales, Thompson said. The new Hanover Township plant will allow for growth to $250 million in annual sales, and will provide employment for 125 team members. Freshpet spent $25 million to completely renovate an existing building.

Thompson and Vice President of Manufacturing Michael Hieger also took the five scholarship recipients in attendance on a tour of the plant, which is scheduled to open by early June. Near the end of the tour, several of them presented employment applications to Thompson and Hieger.

The Freshpet annual scholarship program has been established with NCC to "support Northampton Community college students who might be effective and valued members of the Freshpet team one day," according to a memorandum of understanding for the program.

Students majoring in fields that lead to manufacturing careers are eligible.

Acampora noted how quickly Freshpet has established itself as a partner in the community and in higher education, since deciding to move into the new manufacturing facility.

NCC students Tykinya Milan and Stephanie Longo test an automated hand-washing system during a tour of locker room facilities that have been built for Freshpet employees. A cafeteria that features fresh and wholesome food is free to team members, who can also take home samples of the pet food from a refrigerated display unit located in the plant's front lobby.

The tragedy of Eleanor Pettinos

On the night of July 7, 1950, Eleanor Pettinos had a fatal confrontation with her young Italian lover. As he aimed his gun at her, she may have wondered how she, of all people, came to be in this predicament.

Karen M. Samuels
Columnist

Eleanor, born in Bethlehem in 1906, was the only daughter of Charles E. Pettinos, the "Graphite King," and Joy Chapman, the daughter of William Chapman, a local pioneer slate manufacturer. When she was a young girl, her parents moved the family to a Park Avenue apartment in New York City. All their needs were met by the live-in butler, maid and cook. However, it seemed, the apartment was not enough.

All their friends – the Roosevelts, Astors, Vanderbilts and Rockefellers – were building large estates on the North Shore Gold Coast of Long Island. F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel "The Great Gatsby" described the opulent lifestyle of these millionaires. Not to be outdone by their friends, the Pettinos built "Thatch Cottage" on Long Island in 1920. Architect Mrs. John McLeran designed the house in the style of a typical Normandy country cottage; complete with a roof of molded and textured concrete in imitation of thatch. "Cottage" doesn't accurately describe this 13-room, 6,500-square-foot home with three fireplaces, guest cottage, cabana, in-ground pool and pond. The house faced Oyster Bay and sold in 2001 for close to $3 million.

Charles and Joy gave their daughter the childhood of a princess. The New York Times society page documented Eleanor's lavish parties at the Plaza and Ritz Hotels. She studied with the best dance instructors to prepare for her debutante ball, when at age 18, she was introduced to "polite society."

The ball was attended by 500 at the fashionable Fifth Avenue Sherry Hotel. At age 20, Eleanor married Richard Almond Blow, the son of George and Adele Blow of Deer Park, Ill., in a Paris wedding. Many of her American friends sailed to Paris weeks ahead of the wedding to be present for the ceremony.

Richard eventually became a well-known surrealist painter and mosaic artist. The couple had a child, Richard Marco Blow, in 1928. Five years later, they divorced amicably and guided their son toward receiving excellent education at Harvard and Fordham universities. The son had just completed his master of art degree when the tragic event occurred.

During the year leading up to July, Eleanor and Cesare Silvera were a romantic couple who traveled together throughout Europe. Cesare was 21 years her junior and was described as a strikingly handsome man. He lost a leg during World War II as he fought in the Italian Army. He compensated for this loss with a wooden leg.

A month before the incident Eleanor began avoiding Cesare. She wrote him notes that the affair was over. She stayed away from her luxurious apartment in Florence, Italy, and hid at friends homes. Cesare's notes to Eleanor had frightened her. He threatened to commit suicide by jumping off the Grotto's Bell Tower.

She returned to her apartment the night before her scheduled trip back to the United States. Cesare confronted her there and shot her twice with his Italian Army revolver. He then shot himself. The police found both their bodies the next morning.

Eleanor's son Richard was undoubtedly affected by the shocking death of his mother. His obituary described him as a restless traveler, who never married nor remained in one place for long.

The Pettinos brothers, George F. and Charles E. Pettinos, founded a graphite mine near Byers, Pa., in the 1890s and built a factory on River Street on Sand Island. They made crucibles, containers that can withstand very high temperatures, for Bethlehem Steel. Charles graduated from Lehigh University in 1896 and was a gifted musician.

On April 27, the gate of Easton Rotary Field swung open for the Miracle League's first day of baseball this year. One hundred-92 kids, formed into 12 teams, will play every Saturday on a $750,000 astroturf baseball diamond. There's a teletron in left center field, stands and most importantly, lots of free ballpark franks. This ball-field, built for kids whose physical and intellectual challenges prevent them from playing in the local Little Leagues, is already seeing double the participants who played there last year. Some might call it a miracle. Easton Rotary Field is located right next to Chrin Community Center in Palmer Township. ABOVE: Nearly 200 physically and intellectually challenged kids have the opportunity to be real baseball players at Easton Rotary Field.

Grade: 12

Family members: Along with my parents, Bernie and Melissa, I also have six siblings: Amanda, Kelly, Bernie II, Alyssa, Brent and Kyleigh.

Favorite subject: My favorite subject is mathematics. I have always enjoyed math throughout my school years. Knowing that I will need what I learn in the near future, I make sure to put a great deal of focus here.

Activities: My activities include playing football, volleyball and CYO basketball. Along with playing basketball, I also help coach my little brothers' team. I also participate in Mini-THON, which benefits children with cancer.

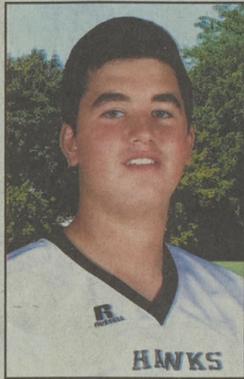

Next steps: I plan on receiving a degree in business, and shortly after working side by side with my father. He owns an asphalt paving business, which I hope to help him run in the near future.

Career goals: My goal is to become a successful business owner, who can eventually do well enough to help out my community as well.

Heroes: I have one true hero who passed away about four years ago. He was my grandfather Charles Brown. In the short amount of time that I knew him, I was able to learn a lot of important life lessons. He showed me what it looks like to be a true man, and what it takes to have an impact in people's lives.

Hobbies: My hobbies include watching sports, playing sports and spending quality time with my family and friends.

Current job(s): I currently spend my summers helping my dad out with his company. This is a great opportunity because it is preparing me for the rest of my life.

Volunteer/community work: I currently am a volunteer basketball coach for my brothers' team. I also bake and volunteer at the Soup Kitchen.

Likes: I like anything that includes sports, food, family and friends. When you are around the people that mean the most to you, it is easy to like just about anything you are doing at the present time.

Dislikes: I do not dislike much, but a few things that I really can't take include bullying, fighting and negativity. With all the problems going on in today's world, the last thing we need is more negativity.

Greatest accomplishment (so far): My greatest accomplishment thus far was winning the volleyball state championship title. The support and hard teamwork showed me what a great organization I was a part of; these are the memories that will never be lost.

Advice for peers: If you took nothing else from this, I would like you to remember to live every day to the fullest. Never take anything for granted, and when it's your time to shine, leave it all on the court.

Nearly 60 high school students and adults aged 62 and over participated in a mini-medical school experience offered by St. Luke's University Health Network in partnership with the DaVinci Science Center to learn more about medicine. "We were extremely pleased with the paricipation and the enthusiasm of the students of all ages," said Joel Rosenfeld, MD, MEd, FACS, chief academic officer for St. Luke's University Health Network's Graduate Medical Education program and associate dean, Temple University Clinical Campus, St. Luke's University

Graduation June 5

This has been an exciting time for the students at Freedom HS. Multiple events have conspired over the past few weeks leading up to the ultimate moment for seniors: graduation. Graduation for Freedom will be held at Stabler Arena June 5.

Kristen Dalton
Freedom HS

April 27, BASD Mini THON raised $23,518.99 for the Four Diamonds fund! This benefits children with pediatric cancer. THON included both Freedom and Liberty students and was held in the Liberty gym. There was food to last everyone for days, multiple activities such as Zumba and Fitness Bootcamp, recreational time which included playing outside on the football field, swimming, coloring chalk, blowing bubbles and TONS of dancing!

It sounds like a great time, and it was! The only requirement for the students to participate was they could not sit down until the final moment. Overall, Freedom and Liberty students raised an amazing amount of money for the children with pediatric cancer, surpassing their goal substantially, and shared an experience that will hopefully pass on for many generations.

The following weekend, Freedom held its prom at DeSales University. The theme was Grecian and students danced the night away and topped the night off with an emotional slow dance to a song about the end of an era, and a song we all know will be played for generations at every graduation, "Time Of Your Life" by Green Day.

The only thing left on the Freedom seniors' checklist is, of course, finals; the one part of ending school that isn't very exciting. Overall, this past month has been a very memorable one for seniors.

From Freedom's first ever BASD Mini-THON to a beautiful Grecian prom, it's been an interesting ending to a wonderful year.

All that remains is graduation when seniors throw their caps in the air and collect money from their family members to save for impending college bills.

About 150 guests at the SkillsUSA chef's Culinary Challenge competition enjoyed a five-course meal recently in the fourth annual meeting of some of the Lehigh Valley's best chefs mentoring student chefs from local high schools.

Chef Randy Zerfass, the chef at Northampton Country Club, led Freedom HS students Tyler Shulman and Jaclyn VanBilliard to a team victory with their winning dish, "Tres Comida de Latina - Trio of Latin Foods." Shulman and VanBilliard attend Bethlehem Vocational and Technical School. The winners will get a plaque commemorating their victory, and custom-made chef's coats.

Zerfass also won the same competition last year, according to SkillsUSA Executive Director Jennifer Smith.

SkillsUSA organized the event, which was hosted by Lehigh Career and Technical Institute in Schnecksville.

Smith said about 25 students participated in the event. Ten student chefs competed in five teams.

Other students waited tables and cleared tables between courses.

Lautrec treat

A summer blockbuster for Allentown Art Museum

By PAUL WILLISTEIN
 Focus Editor

Art lovers are in for a treat this summer with the June 2 opening of "Toulouse-Lautrec and His World," through Sept. 1 at the Allentown Art Museum of the Lehigh Valley.

At the preview party, 6 - 8 p.m. June 1, there will be themed hors d'oeuvres by Karen Hunter Catering, live music, cash bar and strolling women French-cabaret style. According to a museum press release, "can-canning is encouraged." (Reservations: 610-432-4333, ext. 129). There are more events, lectures and programs keyed to the exhibition.

Allentown Art Museum Chief Curator Diane P. Fisher has been immersed in the exhibition, which occupies the Scheller and Rodale galleries.

"It's going to take up both of our large galleries. So, that's very exciting," Fisher says.

The museum is one of the first venues outside of Europe, and the closest to Philadelphia and New York, to host the exhibition, on loan from the collection of the Herakleidon Museum, Athens, Greece.

Paul Firos, director of the Herakleidon, which he founded in 2004, gave a May 19 talk at the museum, second stop for the exhibition on its United States tour, after debuting at the New Britain Museum of American Art, New Britain, Conn.

The exhibition includes about 150 original Toulouse-Lautrec works on paper, which are owned by Firos. Some are accompanied by relevant passages from French literature, photographs, and other objects to give a sense of the Belle Époque (Beautiful Era) in France, roughly the late 19th century through World War I.

Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec (1864 - 1901) lived in Paris during what is described as a "colorful time of cabarets and cafés." He portrayed its singers, actors and other characters in his posters, lithographs and drawings.

"Toulouse-Lautrec didn't have a very long career," says Fisher. He is mostly known for his work from 1890s.

Fisher and her staff installed the exhibition at the museum.

"It's an excellent collection that really views the full depth of the graphic work of Toulouse-Lautrec," says Fisher.

The exhibition includes nine large posters that were originally hung in Paris.

Lautrec, categorized as a Post-Impressionist, was influenced by the French Impressionist movement and incorporated the sensibilities of Monet and Renoir in his own work.

"Toulouse-Lautrec was trained classically as a painter," Fisher points out. "But, really, the graphic arts were his medium, and he brought them to a new level in terms of graphic design and advertising. He has an economy of line, influenced by Japanese prints. He really captured the essence of Paris in the Belle Époque."

In a lithograph, every color has a separate stone that needs to be aligned. "That's technically very challenging," Fisher says.

"Toulouse-Lautrec would keep 100 of the posters for his own collection before the text was included. And those are the most valuable and rare."

"The printer would put on the text. That was also designed by Lautrec. Those posters would be pasted all over Paris, and the people would quickly take them."

"At the time, posters were not considered art. But Toulouse-Lautrec knew they were. People just loved them. He became an overnight success when he published his first poster," says Fisher.

That was in 1891. The poster was for the Moulin Rouge, a nightclub.

"This was the era of joie de vivre, the Belle Époque. The pursuit of pleasure was paramount. Toulouse-Lautrec was in the Montmartre section. That's where a lot of actors lived. He didn't differentiate between poor people and rich people. He was very wealthy. He was born to a line of aristocrats in the south of France," Fisher explains.

"His mother always gave him money. His father loved horses and wanted him to follow in his footsteps. Lautrec was born with a genetic bone condition and he fractured both legs as a teenager. So, his legs stopped growing and his torso grew normally. He needed a cane to walk. He only grew to about five feet tall. He could not live the lifestyle his father envisioned."

Toulouse-Lautrec portrayed the life he could not fully live, but could observe.

"He captured the essence of movement," Fisher points out. "In part, the unusual angles are from Japanese prints and also the artist Edgar Degas." Photographic images also influenced Lautrec, according to Fisher.

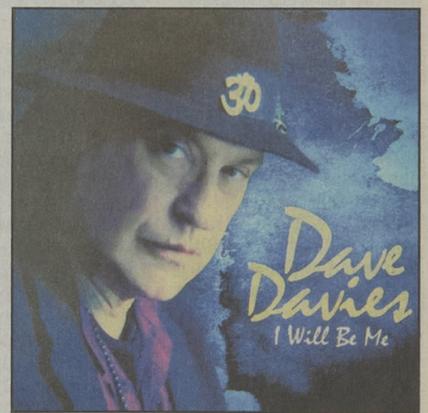

"He had no use for landscape. He only wanted people," she notes.

Lautrec's infirmity, short stature and others' impressions of him also informed his art.

"He's always looking at the underside of society. He has a quote about ugliness," Fisher says. "Ugliness everywhere and always has its enchanting side. It is fascinating to discover it where no one else had noticed it before."

Your look ahead at Valley Arts

CONTRIBUTED IMAGE

You really got him: Dave Davies, the legendary co-founder of the seminal British Invasion rock band, The Kinks, is in concert 8 p.m. June 1, Musikfest Cafe, ArtsQuest Center, SteelStacks, 101 Founders Way, Bethlehem. Guitarist Davies, seen above on the cover of his latest album, "I Will Be Me" (set for release June 4), was an integral part of the quartet that helped shape the sound of rock with Top 10 hits like "All Day and All of the Night," "Lola," "Tired of Waiting for You" and "You Really Got Me," the latter of which features his iconic guitar riff to kick off the song. In 1990, Davies, as a member of The Kinks, was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. Tickets: art-squest.org, 610-332-3378

City Arts: Camp for Kids adds fashion, nature, science, math

By BATHSHEBA MONK
 Special to The Press

If you think of mosquitoes and poison ivy when you think "summer camp" think again. The Baum School of Art in Allentown is hosting Partnership Camps for children this summer which focus on beauty without the bugs.

City Arts: Camp for Kids is for children 7-11 and runs from June 24 - 28. City Arts is a collaboration of six major art and cultural institutions in the Lehigh Valley: The Allentown Art Museum of the Lehigh Valley, The Baum School of Art, Civic Theatre of Allentown, Community Music School, Miller Symphony Hall, and Repertory Dance Theatre.

This year, The Baum School of Art is adding new camps to its line up: The Fashion Academy and pARTnership Camps with other local organizations, including Nature and the Arts Camp and The Dexter Baker Picking up STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Art, and Mathematics) Camp.

Students in City Arts will learn about art, music, theater and dance from local masters. The camp culminates in an event to showcase the students' newfound mastery.

For children ages 12-17, each weekly and bi-weekly session of The Fashion Academy focuses on a city renowned for fashion: New York, Tokyo, Paris, London and Milan. Students will discover all the things that go into making a stylish piece of clothing: design, illustration, styling, sewing, draping and patternmaking, as well experience the offshoots of clothing design such as modeling, photography, textile design and accessorizing.

Shannon Slattery Fugate, Executive Director of The Baum School of Art, says the school is lucky to be the beneficiary of the clothing collection of Jane Stieg, wife of James Stieg, one of the head engineers at Mack Trucks, Inc.

All of her clothes were meticulously styled and sewn by a private couture who designed them just for her in the 1950s and '60s. Students can examine the clothing and see firsthand the craftsmanship that goes into a high-end piece of clothing: bound seams, shoulder darts, matching patterns, and chain weights to hold down plackets. Students in any week of the Fashion Academy will have the opportunity to participate in a runway fashion show and exhibit at the end of the summer.

Did I say no bugs? There might be a couple, but mostly friendly bugs, at Nature and the Arts Camp, a partnership between The Wildlands Conservancy and the Baum School of Art, July 22 - 26.

In the morning, students will observe nature firsthand at the Poole Wildlife Sanctuary, Lower Macungie Township, then travel by bus to The Baum School for activities focusing on nature and wildlife.

The link between creativity and scientific discovery will be highlighted at The Dexter Baker Picking Up STEAM Camp, a collaboration between the Da Vinci Science Center and the Baum School of Art. There are two sessions of camp. The first one takes place Aug. 12 - 16 and the second one Aug. 19 - 23, both for children 10-13.

It's hard to challenge the idea that the arts are a crucial part of a well-rounded education and The Partnership Camps fill a real need when arts programs and education are being cut from school budgets.

'Star Trek Into': sci-fi boldly

"Star Trek Into Darkness" is that all-too-often rare sci-fi movie that has spectacular special effects, a screenplay with an actual storyline, character development and surprise plot turns.

J. J. Abrams ("Star Trek," 2009; TV's "Aliens," "Lost"), directs a screenplay by Roberto Orci and Alex Kurtzman ("Transformers," 2007, 2009; "Star Trek," 2009) and Damon Lindelof ("World War Z," "Prometheus," "Cowboys & Aliens," TV's "Lost") that mixes action set pieces and character-driven scenes.

The "Star Trek" machine keeps churning 'em out to a seemingly never-satiated movie, TV and videogame audience.

The characters were created by Gene Roddenberry for the original 67-episode TV series, 1966-'69. There have been many permutations of "Star Trek," including the 1979 big-screen movie and its six-plus sequels, including "Star Trek: Nemesis," 2002, which lived up to its title and nearly doomed the big-screen franchise.

There have been a dizzying number of TV series, including: "Star Trek: The Next Generation," 1987-'94; "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine," 1993-'99; "Star Trek: Voyager," 1995-'01; "Star Trek: Hidden Frontier," 2000; "Star Trek: Enterprise," 2001-'05; "Star Trek: Genesis," 2012, and "Star Trek New Voyages: Phase II," 2004-'13.

Here, Kirk is tasked to capture the fiendish Khan (Benedict Cumberbatch, Sherlock Holmes in the 2010 BBC series), who has blown up a Star Fleet facility in San Francisco.

The "Star Trek" reboot, beginning in 2009, had deft casting and the new release continues that. Chris Pine as Captain

MOVIE REVIEW

By Paul Willistein

James Kirk (the William Shatner role in the original TV series) and Zachary Quinto as Spock (the Leonard Nimoy role) are superb.

Pine portrays an everyman quality, boyish charm, intelligence and bull-headed determination. Quinto, in makeup, has an uncanny resemblance to the Spock of Leonard Nimoy. Cumberbatch is an extraordinarily nuanced actor and plays a nefarious villain with wonderful subtlety.

Secondary roles are also well-cast and well-acted, including Simon Pegg (Scotty), John Cho (Sulu), Zoe Saldana (Uhura), Karl Urban (Bones), Anton Yelchin (Chekov), Bruce Greenwood (Pike), Peter Weller (Marcus) and Alice Eve (Carol).

The Imax 3D version reviewed is worth the higher ticket price if you're a special effects fan. The space-chases, battles, fights and conflict integrate the special effects and 3D into the storyline and heighten the excitement.

Scenes between the main characters are memorable. Abrams frames many of the dialogue scenes in close-ups and lets the camera linger and scenes breathe. You get a real feeling for Kirk and Spock, especially. The buddy-flick aspect of the film works. The dialogue is frequently humorous.

"Star Trek 3" has been announced. So, Trekkies, expect "the voyages of the Starship Enterprise" to continue.

ents Strongly Cautioned. Some Material May Be Inappropriate For Children Under 13) for intense sequences of sci-fi action and violence; Genre: Action, Adventure, Sci-Fi; Run time: 2 hours, 12 mins.; Distributed by Paramount Pictures.

Box Office, May 24: Because of the early Focus section deadline for the Memorial Day holiday, box offices results are not available.

Unreel, May 31: "After Earth," PG-13: Will Smith and his son Jaden star as Cypher and Kitai Rage, respectively, who crash-land on earth, 1,000 years after it's been abandoned. M. Night Shyamalan directs for the first time a screenplay that he didn't write in the sci-fi action film.

"Now You See Me," PG-13: A team of illusionists rob banks and give the money away during their shows. Morgan Freeman, Isla Fisher, Mark Ruffalo, Jesse Eisenberg, Woody Harrelson and Michael Caine star. Mindfulness is the current buzzword

By PATTIE MIHALIK
newsgirl@comcast.net

WARMEST REGARDS

By Pattie Mihalik
newsgirl@comcast.net

Each time frame seems to give us new buzzwords. It's a word or words that suddenly come into vogue with a new meaning.

Today's buzzword seems to be "mindful."

It's not a new word or even a new practice. But it has taken on a life of its own during the past two years.

It simply means focusing our attention and awareness to a new level of consciousness.

The mindfulness movement has been around for a long time, probably starting with the concept of mindfulness in Buddhist meditation. Clinical psychologists also have used it for decades.

Now mindfulness has entered the mainstream and we hear about it everywhere.

We're told "mindful eating" is one way to control weight.

In addition to not shoving food mindlessly in our mouths, we are told to eat s-l-o-w-l-y, lingering over each bite, savoring the flavor and appreciating the food.

This week on Christian radio I heard about faith-based mindfulness. It calls for being acutely aware all day, every day, of God and his creation.

For some, "religion" is going to church on Sunday, sitting in a pew, and listening to the sermon. After church, that's it until the following week.

Mindful faith calls for looking at your world and everyone in it as part of God's creation. It calls for being aware of and appreciating all of life on an everyday basis.

The big "mindful movement" started first with a call for mindful living. I didn't need to read a book or hear about that movement to live the concept. I've been doing it for years, decades actually.

Of course I never called it mindful living. I simply called it being aware of the moment and living each moment to the fullest.

I describe it as inhaling life, tasting every delicious morsel by taking time to see, feel and appreciate all the small moments that make up life.

In other words, it means staying completely in the moment and appreciating that moment for what it is.

It sounds simple, but it's not. Our minds drift. While we are doing something, we tend to always be thinking about our next activity instead of concentrating only on the present moment.

One psychologist gave an excellent example of a parent giving a baby a bath. Instead of enjoying the sheer magical pleasure of the moment, the parent is thinking about what's next on the "to do" list.

I've been trying for years to do more living in the moment. But sometimes, hours and even days slip by me in a busy whirl, especially when I have multiple appointments in one day.

When you think about it, don't most of us spend our days like that? We go from one chore or activity to another, without savoring any of it. It's just "stuff we gotta do."

We get in our cars and go from destination to destination, heedless to any of the beauty along the way. We don't see the puffy clouds of another beautiful day of life. We don't see the countryside as it rushes by our car window. All we're thinking about is getting there.

I know I was like that during my working career. When I retired and realized the time I had left was shorter than what I had already lived, I knew I wanted to do everything in my power to savor each remaining day.

Mindful living, as it is called, is just another term for savoring life and all of its sweet, tender moments. Speaking of sweet, tender moments, how many of them do you fail to see each day?

If there is ever a compelling case for mindfulness, it's in relationships, the cornerstones of our life.

Whether we're talking about relationships with our spouse, parents, children, siblings or office mates, our happiness depends on how we build those relationships.

My theory is we don't lay enough strong building blocks in relationships, especially when it comes to marriage. Most of us tend to gloss over, miss, or take for granted what a spouse does for us. Sometimes we don't even see it.

There are so many daily acts of love and caring that we don't see. How can we be grateful for something if we are not aware of the gift we are being given?

One friend complained to me that her husband is a great guy but he never remembers to buy her a Valentine's present.

But he does keep her car running, works on every home improvement she wants, and gives her back rubs at the end of a day.

I told her those caring acts are all Valentines.

David and I both try especially hard to be mindful of each and every caring act we do for each other.

I said "thank you for caring" after he spent a boring day driving me to the doctor's, sitting in the office and waiting for an inordinate amount of time, then staying cheerful and solicitous on the way home.

I wanted him to know I didn't take him for granted.

In much the same way, he remembers to say thank you when I make his favorite recipes or do something special to please him.

Mindfulness is getting so much attention that it rates its own new magazine as well as a host of Internet sites.

But the best place for mindfulness is right in our own lives.

It can certainly heighten an appreciation for life.

Kinks' Dave Davies: He's really got riffs

By PAUL WILLISTEIN
Focus Editor

Rock fans are in for a sweet spot with the June 4 release of Kinks' legend Dave Davies new album, "I Will Be Me" (Cleopatra Records) — only his sixth solo studio album by my count — and his concert, 8 p.m. June 1, Musikfest Cafe, Bethlehem — only one of a baker's dozen United States' gigs by my count (as of this article's deadline).

Speaking of counting, Davies is known for devising one of the most famous rhythms and riffs in rock 'n' roll this side of Bo Diddley (1, 2 ... 3, 4 ... 5, as in: bomp, bomp ... bomp, bomp ... bomp).

Davies' bang-a-gong riffs in The Kinks' 1964 No. 1 United Kingdom and No. 7 United States hit, "You Really Got Me" (1 ... 2, 3, 4 ... 5, as in: boom ... boom, boom ... boom), which I've felt has its musical antecedent in a jazz brass section coda (the onomatopoeic "stronger than dirt"), although various sources credit The Kingsmen's "Louie, Louie" as a major influence.

Davies' riffing on "You Really Got Me" is regarded as an early, and possibly the first, example of power chords, laying the groundwork for heavy metal (for its "heaviness") and punk rock (for its basic-ness). Van Halen launched its career with a 1978 version, charting at No. 36, from its debut LP.

With The Kinks, along with the Yardbirds, The Who and some of The Beatles' music, rock 'n' roll became rock.

A new Davies' album is an event, owing that his are so few and far between: "Fractured Mindz" (2007), "Bug" (2002), "Chosen People" (1983), "Glamour" (1981) and "AFL1-3603" (1980).

"I Will Be Me" has music and vocal contributions from The Jayhawks, Anti-Flag, Oli Brown, Chris Spedding, Dead Meadow, The Art and Geri X.

"Little Green Amp," the lead-off track, is a tribute by Davies to the distorted guitar sound he created when he took a razor blade to his electric guitar amplifier's speaker cone, creating what's described as a fuzz-tone.

The guitar riffs in "Amp" are sort of like "You Really Got Me" in reverse. It's unmistakable, as is Davies' warble, recounting "the neighbors next door ... can you stop that racket?" even to modulating the chords and adding "they really got me that time."

The next track, "Livin' In The Past" is more industrial-strength rock. You can hear Cream's "Sunshine Of Your Love" and "White Room" in the riff-o-rama.

"The Healing Boy" about the healing power of grandchildren, recalls John Lennon's "Beautiful Boy" with a descending sitar line, strings, music-box style keys and Davies' conversational confessional style.

"Midnight In L.A." is a straight-ahead rocker, which, as do the other songs, include Davies' humoresque lyrics: "I like the smog" and "thought I'd catch the night while still young," concluding with a droll BBC announcer: "Good morning, this is the BBC News."

"In The Mainframe" rails against cyberhype in a "Matrix," inspired sort of way. Davies sings, "resistance is futile," as is his music, reminding the listener that this album is as vibrant as new Dylan, and as much rockin' fun. Anybody who successfully uses "it's a new paradigm" in a lyric gets my vote.

"Energy Fields" is a bit of Ozzy Osbourne's "Iron Man," but in Davies' fey, coy voice, "charade" is pronounced "cha-rod" — veddy British.

"When I First Saw You" has a vocal not unlike that of cheeky Paul McCartney in a ballad as Davies, as always, plays the desultory Edwardian dandy.

"The Actress," "Erotic Neurotic" and "You Can Break My Heart" sound like slices of life.

"Walker Through The Worlds" is David Bowie meets George Harrison with electronica sound, India modality and treated, spoken vocals. All very spacey.

"Remember the Future" heads for Stones' country with a "Circle will be Unbroken" meets "Red River Valley" melody.

The title cut, "Cote Du Rhone (I Will Be Me)," returns to Davies' "You Really Got Me" riff and, with his voice at its most plaintive, he sings, "I won't be what they want anymore."

And that should be just fine with rock fans everywhere. "I Will Be Me" is astounding, clearly a milestone in Dave Davies' career, and a great rock album of this or any year.

Hamilton St., Suite 203, Allentown.

An opening reception for "Joie de Vivre" is noon - 5 p.m. June 2 in the Salemme gallery, where the exhibition continues through June 30.

The terra cotta works, called bozetti, represent the initial "sketch" stage of the sculptor's art. Mikolas is showing a series of variations on figures of dancers, created in the last year.

The works of Mikolas (b. 1939) and Salemme (1892-1995) have more in common than their chosen artistic medium. Both artists were born in Europe — Mikolas in Czechoslovakia and Salemme in Italy. Both received rigorous training in an academic system of apprenticeship with roots in the Renaissance. Both emigrated to the United States and settled in the Lehigh Valley.

Salemme moved to Williams Township, Northampton County, in 1962 and continued to create there prolifically until his death at age 102.

Mikolas has maintained a home and studio in Newside, Lehigh County, since 1975.

Salemme is represented by six of his "Environments," more elaborate terra-cotta compositions combining figures with architectural elements, created in the mid-1960s.

Complementing the sculpted sketches are drawings, in charcoal and chalk by Mikolas, and in ink by Salemme.

Also on view are works by both sculptors in plaster and bronze, including the bronze maquettes (scale models) for two of Mikolas's large-scale local public commissions: his Asa Packer memorial at Lehigh University, Bethlehem, and his monument to Dr. Conrad Raker at Good Shepherd Rehabilitation Hospital, Allentown.

Works by Salemme include the sculptor's 1926 bronze portrait of Paul Robeson (collections National Portrait Gallery and Allentown Art Museum), his 1927 bronze portrait of Ethel Waters (collection National Portrait Gallery and Lehigh Valley Hospital) and his 1964 bronze portrait of John F. Kennedy (collection JFK Library).

The Antonio Salemme Foundation maintains the gallery in Allentown to preserve and celebrate Salemme's artistic legacy.

The grapefruit effect and medications

Q. My daughter heard that grapefruit juice can be toxic for some people. Is that true?

The juice, itself, is not toxic. But you should be careful taking medicine with grapefruit.

Grapefruit juice can raise the level of some medications in the blood. The effect of grapefruit was discovered after using juice to mask the taste of a medicine. So, be sure to ask your doctor or pharmacist if it is safe to have grapefruit with your medications.

Taking medicine can be hazardous to your health. You have to know what you're doing.

For example, calcium-rich dairy products or certain antacids can prevent antibiotics from being properly absorbed into the bloodstream. Ginkgo biloba can reduce the effectiveness of blood-thinning medications and raise the risk for serious complications such as stroke.

You should educate yourself so you know what active ingredients are in the prescription and over-the-counter medicines you are taking.

Some people treat over-the-counter pain relievers as if they are harmless. They can hurt you if you take them improperly. They contain drugs such as acetaminophen, ibuprofen, naproxen sodium and aspirin. Acetaminophen is in Tylenol. Ibuprofen is in Advil. Naproxen sodium is in Aleve.

Many prescription or over-the-counter medicines that treat multiple symptoms, such as cold and flu medications, also include acetaminophen and the other pain-relieving ingredients. So you have to be careful not to take too much of any one ingredient by ingesting more than one medication that contains that ingredient.

Seniors take more medicines than any other age group because they have more health problems. Taking several drugs a day presents dangers.

Here are some tips to avoid hazards:

Always inform your doctor or pharmacist about all medicines you are already taking, including herbal products and over-the-counter medications.

Tell your doctor, nurse, or pharmacist about past problems you have had with medicines, such as rashes, indigestion or dizziness.

Don't mix alcohol and medicine unless your doctor or pharmacist says it's okay. Some medicines may not work well or may make you sick if you take them with alcohol.

The best advice is this: Don't be afraid to throw a lot of questions about your medicines at your doctor, nurse or pharmacist.

Here are some good questions:

When should I take it? As needed, or on a schedule? Before, with or between meals? At bedtime?

How often should I take it?

How long will I have to take it?

How will I feel once I start taking this medicine?

How will I know if this medicine is working? If I forget to take it, what should I do?

What side effects might I expect? Should I report them?

Can this medicine interact with other prescription and over-the-counter medicines, including herbal and dietary supplements, that I am taking now?

And, ask your pharmacist to put your medicine in large, easy-to-open containers with large-print labels.

Experience bears repeating

My second career (I was an elementary school teacher for 33 years) as a nature and travel writer-photographer will never place me in a higher tax bracket, but it has afforded me a number of atypical encounters that I would not have experienced if I did not have press credentials.

BUD'S VIEW

By Bud Cole

One example happened earlier this month when I joined Northampton County Pennsylvania Game Commission Wildlife Conservation Officer Brad Kreider and Deputy Tom Harrington, while they processed a nuisance black bear.

According to Kreider, this particular male bear was not considered a nuisance bear, but it was hanging out in a rather populated area in Plainfield Township, Northampton County, where the potential for encounters with children and other residents was highly possible and could lead to problems.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission estimates the Keystone State black bear population to be more than 18,000. These numbers, along with the rapid development of the suburbs, places a continual demand on wildlife officers to relocate nuisance bears.

Kreider conducted a black bear program at the Stockertown Rod and Gun Club several years ago. I remember him saying, "I've had a black bear report or complaint from every municipality and township in Northampton County." After the meeting, I asked for permission to tag along sometime when he captured and processed a black bear.

I witnessed the sixth bear processed by Kreider this year. The bear was trapped with a culvert trap. The trap is baited with a concoction of several mouth-watering treats most bears can't resist. The mobile traps are used to move bears from conflict areas to wilderness locations.

Trapped bears are processed before they are given a free ride to a new location. Captured bears are tranquilized to determine weight, health and age.

Once the drugs take hold, the bear is removed from the trap. Its weight is determined in two ways: with a scale and measuring the bear's chest in inches and comparing it to a chart that estimates the bear's weight.

If the bear has not been previously trapped and tagged, both ears are tagged using numbered metal ear tags. These allow game commission officers to monitor the bear if it is captured again, becomes a road casualty or is harvested during black bear hunting seasons. A small molar is removed and sent to a lab to determine the bear's age.

The bear that I saw processed had not previously been tagged. I was surprised when Kreider asked me if I was interested in a hands-on experience. What did that mean, I wondered?

Well, hands-on was exactly what it sounded like. I could tag the bear and remove the molar. I, of course, said yes.

The bear's chest measurement indicated that its estimated weight was 350 pounds.

Kreider recorded the two ear tag numbers and I attached the tags to the bear's ears. Then, I removed the bear's molar.

When the processing was completed, the bear was loaded back into the culvert trap for transport to its new surroundings. Lifting and loading a limp sedated 350-pound bear was no easy task. Luckily, I was taking photos.

After the bear was placed safely back in the trap it was time to go for a ride. By the time we traveled 80 miles to State Game Lands 211 in Lebanon County, the bear was awake and definitely ready for its exodus from the trap.

I prepared to take photos of the bear escaping from the trap. I stood about 10 feet away in a diagonal position at the back left of the culvert trap. There was an old grass covered road to the right that continued up a slight slope. "The bear should follow the road," Kreider explained.

I asked Harrington if I was in a safe place. "About 90 percent of the time there are no problems when the trap door is opened and the bear is released," he said.

I hoped he was joking. "But don't forget that you pulled out its tooth about two hours ago," he added with a big grin.

When the trap door opened, the bear flew from the trap and continued rushing along the old road as fast as his four legs could carry 350 pounds.

It was obvious the bear had no idea and could not have cared less that I was standing 10 feet away, taking as many photos as possible while he raced away and disappeared over the hill.

Processing a nuisance black bear proved an enjoyable and educational day that I have added to my list of unusual outdoor experiences.

That's the way I see it! To schedule programs, hikes and birthday parties: 610-767-4043; comments: bbbcole@enter.net All Rights Reserved © 2013 Bud Colei

Basket bonanza

New Life Lutheran Church, New Tripoli, had a basket social fundraiser May 17 and 18 for two individuals with cancer. There also were tickets sold to win a quilt. Barbara Kistler of Heidelberg Township places tickets in the can of the basket she wants to win.

Kenneth Koch of Lynn Township made plenty of hot dogs to keep everyone well fed at the New Life Lutheran Church basket social.

APPEAL #7-13

The appeal of Renovation Properties, LLC, 1513 Washington Street, North Catasauqua, PA. The applicants are seeking variances related to the property at 415-417 Front Street, Catasauqua, PA. The applicant appeals from the denial of the Zoning Officer for parking and other relief and is requesting variances relating to parking, increase in impervious coverage and dwelling unit size. Specifically the applicant is requesting a four-space variance from the parking requirements of Section 280-38 and the Table of Required Off-Street Parking; a 10 foot variance from the requirements from Section 280-40c(2) relating to minimum aisle width for two way traffic. The site plan shows a 14 foot aisle width instead of the required 24 feet; a variance from the requirements of Section 280-41 relating to an off-street loading facility; a variance from Section 280-26 and Table 3 relating to lot coverage exceeding 90%; and a variance of 13 sq. ft. relating to unit #2 and 68 sq. ft. relating to unit #3, both from Section 280-54c relating to minimum size of dwelling units. The property is located in a DC-Downtown Commercial Zoning District in which apartments are permitted providing the buildings also includes an allowed principle non-residential use. The appeal of Catty Holdings, LLC, 1177 N. Sixth Street, Whitehall, PA. The applicant is the owner of the property at 126 Bridge Street, Catasauqua, Pennsylvania. The documents filed by the applicant in support of its appeal are available for inspection at the Borough Offices at 118 Bridge Street, Catasauqua, Pennsylvania during normal business hours Monday thru Friday between 8:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m.
