

Marcks, Charles

Advances in Navy

From printer's galleys to ship's galley is the course into which the life of Charles Marcks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude O. Marcks, 414 Second Avenue, has been turned. He's now a seaman, second class, getting the rating on his return to Sampson, N. Y., after completing a furlough with his parents. Seaman Marcks was an apprentice in the composing room of the Bethlehem Globe-Times at the time of his enlistment.

March 10, 1944