

Neville, Harvey

TO STUDY WAR GASES

JAN 9 ~~1943~~

Dr. Harry Neville Will Leave for Amherst Sunday.

Dr. Harvey Neville, head of the Department of Chemistry at Lehigh University, will leave Sunday for Amherst College, Amherst, Mass., to attend a gas specialist course given by the Chemical Warfare Service of the United States War Department. Dr. Neville is one of four men from Pennsylvania who have been selected to take this highly secretive work.

In Northampton County Dr. Neville heads the Civilian Defense gas section.

At Amherst the course will bring to the attention of the attending experts new developments in the detection and combat war of gases. In this respect the United States is far in the lead among the nations, Dr. Neville holds, and is ready "if and when."
