Shirley Lindgren

‘Well done my good and faithful servant’

By PAT KESLING
 Special to the Bethlehem Press

Those attending Shirley Lindgren's funeral at Bethlehem's First Presbyterian Church said the sunny day reflected her optimistic personality and her joy when telling a friend a few weeks ago, "Life is good." Speakers were upbeat. There was laughter, and, of course, tears for the woman who was allegedly beaten in her Wall Street home by her son Michael, 51, Aug 20.

At least 400 people were there Saturday as senior pastor the Rev. Dr. Alf E. Halvorson gave a moving homily. It was obviously clear that he knew Shirley and her husband, Ralph and their five children.

The crowd moved as one, with many nodding their heads, when Halvorson said, "I met with Ralph in the hospital and he said to me, 'My son did this to me but it was not my son. This Michael was mentally ill. He had stopped taking his medicine.'"

Family members confirmed that to be true, saying Michael was schizophrenic and bipolar but they never felt he was dangerous.

Ralph Lindgren was released from the hospital a few days before the funeral and he greeted guests. His face was still badly bruised and he was limping, but he looked good. People were commenting that he and his wife were so close, so dedicated to their children, such community leaders together, that he would feel he had to be at the celebration of Shirley's life. As the sun shone through the windows, the mood was light and happy. Many said Shirley's spirit could be felt as her husband greeted them all.

Liz Lorenz, a long-time friend and president of the Bethlehem

Garden Club in which both Lindgrens were active, said she and others agreed that if the couple, as parents, could do it, they would hire lawyers for Michael. All the other children, Kathryn Kucey, J. Thomas, David and Timothy, shared memories with those standing in line for about an hour.

"The sparkle in her eyes was both mischievous and genuine. She cared so much," said Sharon Yoshida, a Wall Street neighbor who attended with many from the Bethlehem Historic District where the couple was active.

Bethlehem Mayor

John Callahan said, "Shirley was both a gentle soul and a powerful force for good in our community. All who knew her benefited and Bethlehem is better because of her."

Rev. Halvorson listed the many groups in which she was active, starting with Bethlehem Special Olympics, which she co-founded 34 years ago in order to give children with intellectual difficulties an involvement in sports. Today, there are hundreds of youth involved and as many volunteers in the year-round program.

Among the youthful participants was her daughter, Kathy who excelled under her parents' guidance in ice skating and roller skating, winning all sorts of local and national awards.

After the funeral, at the reception in the church social hall, Bethlehem Garden Club friends provided all the table arrangements from their home gardens in a tribute to Shirley, a 20-year member who was especially dedicated to flower design. In August at the annual Flower Show at the Hotel Bethlehem, where she was co-chair with Liz and Shirley Donchez, she won second place and Liz said she was "thrilled." Club members were so devoted to Shirley they created all the flower arrangements for Kathy's wedding last year.

McNeill to be on ballot

By AL RECKER
 Special to The Bethlehem Press

Daniel McNeill, former Whitehall Township executive with a strong union background, wasted no time getting his campaign started for state representative in the 133rd District.

The state Democratic Committee on Monday tapped the 65-year-old Hokendauqua resident as the party's candidate.

"This isn't an 'I, I, I' position," McNeill said in his remarks to committee members at the Fullerton fire hall Sunday. "This is a 'we' position and I believe we have to approach this as a team."

Lehigh County Democratic Chairman Rick Daugherty said the party will soundly back McNeill in his campaign, a seat held by a Democrat for decades.

The action by the state committee follows a recommendation from party committee members of the 133rd District who, on Sunday, gave McNeill 15 votes, the most of the eight persons seeking to fill the vacancy.

LEHIGH COUNTY

New executive, new budget

By NATE JASTRZEMSKI
 njastrzowski@ttonline.com

In back-to-back press events Aug. 28 Lehigh County officials unveiled the county's new executive and the proposed 2013 county budget.

President Judge Carol McGinley administered the oath of office to 75-year-old William Hansell, a former city council member and business administrator with decades of experience in government and management.

Hansell replaces Don Cunningham, who left the position after six years to become executive director of the Lehigh Valley Economic Development Corporation.

Hansell's remarks stressed bipartisan decision-making to encourage accomplishment.

William Hansell, right, sworn in as Lehigh County executive Aug. 28, speaks with Commissioners Michael Schware and Lisa Scheller following the official ceremony.

"Divided government can work with civility, with respect and with understanding," he said. "I believe we can seek consensus, accept compromise and disagree without being disagreeable. I believe that's a vision - I hold out my hope we can make that happen."

"We are blessed in this community to have incredibly talented and gifted people who do our work for us," Hansell said, "and a difficult job it is." Hansell described his 16-month tenure as consisting of three goals: To make the best use of employee talents, introduce a system of performance measurement and maintain priority-based budgeting.

Hansell later described the proposed 2013 budgeting.

"What we remember most about Shirley is her unconditional love for her family and her unending commitment to her daughter Kathy," who Maureen called Shirley was a strong, creative and diligent attendee and volunteer at First Presbyterian Church. Thirty other members, known as the Memorial Reception Team, arranged a bountiful reception in the church social hall under the direction of Phyllis Wertman. Members remembering Shirley as a "devoted member, always willing to go the extra mile with a smile," included Nancy DeSario, Ginny Shunk, Marie Boltz and Sally Roe. A portion of the food was donated by Lehigh University, where Ralph was a professor and Shirley an active participant in the Lehigh Wives.

'Determined but calm, sweet'
Friends, neighbors remember Shirley Lindgren

By PAT KESLING
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Shirley Lindgren, 77, who died in her beloved Bethlehem on Aug. 22, is being hailed as the ultimate community leader, much admired by the many people who worked or played with her in her many activities for the good of those who came within her reach.

"She was the voice for those who didn't have a voice," said Tom Dolusio, former superintendent of Bethlehem Area School District and Liberty High School principal. Lindgren served on the Parent Advisory Board of the BASD from 1975 to 1982. She and her husband, Ralph, who had a special needs child, were both major community advocates for years.

"Shirley was a real pioneer to make sure this group of kids got the best education they could," Dolusio said. "She got a lot done because of the way she carried herself. Instead of yelling, she'd be determined but calm and sweet and say to me, 'Tom, could we make it a little bit better?' and I always worked with her and she got her way. What she did for the students was amazing. No one else could have done what she did."

That includes co-founding the Bethlehem Special Olympics, where she served on the management team from 1976 to 2011, when she was inducted into the Pa. Special Olympics Hall of Fame. "We were all so grateful to her for starting Special Olympics," said Ruth Gaal, who with husband Barry, has a child Michael, who has "intellectual disabilities" and loves sports. "We joined in 1986 and had no idea how to meet his athletic needs," Gaal said. "She recruited children and families through the schools and has been our longest volunteer for 34 years."

"She did a lot of legwork to get us going," Gaal said. "When we didn't even have an office, she and Ralph opened their house for meetings. She was determined but gentle with a great sense of humor."

Louise Tusak of Bethlehem was the manager of Bethlehem Special Olympics for 16 years, and Shirley was the secretary. "I am extremely proud of all that was accomplished," Tusak said. "Shirley could be counted on to do anything for the cause."

It seems all who ever worked with her feel that way. One such group was the Bethlehem Garden Club, where Shirley just last month participated in its very successful show at the Hotel Bethlehem. Liz Lorenz is club president, following Ralph Lindgren.

"Shirley is best described as gentle soul," Liz said. "She was a real asset to the community and is at the top of the list."

Neighbors said that Shirley was proud of her daughter, Kathy, a special needs child, who achieved so much through her parents' tutelage. Kathy met, fell in love and last year married Stephen Kucey in. Friends say this is something Shirley and Ralph never expected 30 years ago.

Through training with her parents, Kathy and Stephen and Ruth Gaal's son, Michael, have been employed for years in Lehigh University's food services department.

The heartbroken neighbors in the Bethlehem Historic Neighborhood Association organized their own special tribute. Jean Theman discovered that a Victorian tradition was to adorn doors with black draping.

"That morphed into creating black bows with boxwood attached from neighbors' gardens. We have about 55 homes displaying them. Shirley was often puttering around in her garden," Theman said. "This is our way of thanking her for all she did for an entire community."

et set at $365 million. It is a decrease of $24 million from last year and includes a small one-time expiring tax credit — about $44 for county residents — which will total $6.5 million. He also said the budget will allow for 2 or 3 percent salary increases for the nearly 2,060 county employees.

Hansell expects to add two positions, an assistant district attorney and an operations manager, but 21 positions will be cut, mostly through attrition.

The county is 84 percent funded, which is better than some counties which are as low as in the 50-percent range, "but there's still away to go," Hansell explained.

Commissioner Percy Dougherty said the proposed budget will be discussed openly by commissioners and individual county offices at a series of hearings Sept. 17-19.

History-making book sale opens Sept. 12

The Bethlehem Area Public Library is advertising its upcoming September book sale as the "biggest book sale in the library's history" and it's no wonder, given the selection of more than 20,000 books, movies and music that library sales supporters will be able to choose from. First editions and collectible Heritage Press books in their original sleeves are included in the rare book section. Book sale manager Laurel Stone said the "shelves and displays are bursting at the seams." Titles on subjects such as art, photography, crafts, writing and war are plentiful, according to Stone, who credits a group of volunteers who spend countless hours preparing for each sale. Hours on Wednesday, Sept. 12 are from noon until 8 p.m. On Saturday, Sept. 15, hours are from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Parking is available in the city garage after 4:30 on Sept. 12 and all day on Sept. 15. Most major credit cards are accepted. For additional information visit www.bestbooksale.org or call 610-867-3761, ext. 235. on November's Democratic ballot. State Rep. Joseph Brennan withdrew his name from the ballot following his arrest Aug. 15 on drunk driving and simple assault charges.

Brennan announced last Wednesday he would not seek reelection, following a news conference held in Catasauqua last Tuesday by Republican candidate David Molony.

McNeill will now face Molony for the 133rd district legislative seat.

The district includes Coplay, Catasauqua, sections of Whitehall Township and wards in south Bethlehem, east Allentown and Fountain Hill. For decades it has been represented by someone from Bethlehem and Fountain Hill. That will change after the election, regardless of whether McNeill or Molony wins.

During Sunday's vote by the local committee members, McNeill received 15 of the possible 40 votes. Fountain Hill Mayor Jose Rosado came in second with 11 votes. Each of the eight candidates had a person nominate him or her and a second vote was then given by another person, after which each aspiring candidate gave a three-minute address.

Daugherty said McNeill had strong support from party committee members from Whitehall and is well-known in the district.

Other local candidates aspiring to secure the committee's favor included Catasauqua Councilwoman Jessica Kroope and Coplay Councilman William Leiner Jr., a former Lehigh County commissioner and borough mayor. Bethlehem residents Anthony Rybak, George H. Yasso, Ray Lynn and Patricia Smith-Mendsen also went after the nomination.

McNeill commented Sunday that the district should be served by a person who can get the job done in Harrisburg for local constituents.

Employed with Lehigh County's Health Services, McNeill served as Lehigh County manager of regional partnerships, as Whitehall commissioner for two terms and as an appointed Whitehall Township executive.

He was also employed with the state's Department of Weights and Measures.

Affiliated with Ironworkers Local 36 for 38 years, McNeill was the union's business agent and secretary for seven years, vice president of Lehigh Valley Building Trades for seven years and was responsible for seeking employment for 150 workers.

Married for 27 years to Jeanne McNeill, the couple has two daughters, ages 19 and 25.

Have You Tasted?

An infidel had just completed an eloquent address to a large audience. "And now, does anyone have any questions?" he asked. An old man, who had been a drunkard most of his life but who had recently become a Christian, shuffled down the aisle and ascended the platform. Taking an orange from his pocket, he began to peel it. The lecturer asked him to state his question, but the old man just went on-peeling his orange and eating it section by section. Finally, wiping his hands on his pocket handkerchief, the old man turned to the lecturer and said: "Here's my question. Can you tell me, was that orange sour or sweet?" "Idiot!" retorted the lecturer in anger. "How do I know? I never tasted it!" To which the elderly man replied: "And how can you know anything about Christ, if you have never tasted Him?"

Experience outweighs any argument! I urge you to taste—to experience the love, peace, and joy of sins forgiven through faith in Christ! Let Jesus prove Himself in your life as did the converted drunkard. Then you will understand the significance of Psalm 34:8, "O taste and see that the Lord is good!" Honestly seek the Lord in prayer and He will satisfy you! "For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness" (Psalm 107:9). Jesus declared in John 6:35, "I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst" (see www.naog.ws/thirsty.htm).

A verse of a song we sing in our church asks, "Have you tasted that the Lord is gracious? Do you walk in the way that's new? Have you drunk from the living fountain? There's honey in the Rock for you!" Many "have tasted that the Lord is gracious" (1 Peter 2:3). Taste now by humbly asking Jesus to save you from your sin and see! Invite the church or contact me, and I'll do all I can to help you experience the goodness of the Lord!

CITY POLICE
Burglary/drugs

Police arrested a 17-year-old burglar and the resident he was burgling in separate incidents Aug. 21.

According to police, a young man from Jischke Street was observed exiting a basement door at 861 Media St. around 9:40 a.m. The door had been forced and a TV from inside was sitting in the alley. He is charged with burglary and related offenses and was remanded to Northampton County Juvenile Detention.

Officers conducted a search for additional suspects at the home and found a marijuana-growing operation in the attic.

Police obtained a warrant and, when he arrived back home that evening Ray French, 32, was arrested. He is charged with possession of a small amount of marijuana, possession with intent to deliver and possession of paraphernalia.

DUIs

Police arrested a man and a woman from one vehicle at the same time and place for separate drunken driving incidents around 12:10 a.m. Aug. 21.

County council pulls the plug on regional health department

By CAROL SMITH
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The possibility of a creating a regional health department is no longer a reality. Following the action of the Lehigh County Board of Commissioners to back out of the formation of a bi-county health department, by a vote of 8-1 Northampton County Council decided the economy would not support funding this new agency.

Councilman Lamont McClure was the single vote opposed to repealing the health department legislation at council's Aug. 16 meeting.

While Councilman Bob Werner and other council members supported the concept of a department to help prevent health emergencies, the majority said the county could not afford to fund this new health service. The county faces some tough economic hurdles, with budgeting for its $27 million swaption termination fee and its $4.2 million contribution to Gracedale's 2012 budget. While non-city residents would benefit from a regional health department, the concept, which has a long history in the area, going back some 35 years, is not an economic priority.

Since 2009, the Lehigh Valley Board of Health has worked on the creation of a first in the state regional health department that would allow residents from surrounding townships and boroughs to have access to the same range of health resources as those provided by Allentown and Bethlehem's Board of Health departments.

About 50 percent of the funding for the regional health department's $9.6 million budget for its first full year of operation would have come from state funding for health departments, fees and permits, grants and private contributions. But to be eligible for these state funds through Act 315, the health department needed matching funds from both counties. For 2012, each county's contribution would have been $225,000. For 2013 to 2016, each county's share would have been $450,000.

In searching for other alternatives to provide health services, Council President John Cusick suggested the possibility of purchasing services from the Bethlehem Health Department.

In other business, by a vote of 7-2 council approved authorization of the sale of $9.3 million in bonds to finance the termination of the swap agreement, which was terminated June 22. With these 2012 federally taxable bonds and an $18 million check from the county's reserve fund, the county will be out of its 2004 swap agreement with Bank of America. The loss to the county is expected to be $11 million over the life of the bonds.

While it's an unpleasant position for the county to be in, Cusick said council needed to act. Good news is that the county's AA credit rating was maintained due to the county's low overall debt ratio.

In addition to these taxable bonds, $60.7 million in tax exempt bonds will be issued to refinance the county's 2001 $111 million in 30-year bonds.

Council's next regular meeting is at 6:30 p.m., Sept. 6 on the third floor of Northampton County Courthouse at 669 Washington St., Easton.

CITY POLICE

observed Samuel Carpenter, 37, of Breinigsville, making a traffic violation on Catasauqua Road and pulled him over in the Beef House parking lot.

Carpenter was determined to be too intoxicated to drive and charged with DUI.

While officers spoke with Carpenter, his passenger, similarly intoxicated Patricia Zulli, was told to stay in the car. Instead, Zulli, 45, of Birchwood Drive, walked to her own nearby car and began to drive off.

She too was arrested for DUI.

DUI

Police arrested 41-year-old James Schlener, of Second Avenue, for driving while intoxicated around 10:55 p.m. Aug. 23.

According to police, the city firefighter was in his Jeep Wrangler in the 1000 block of Eighth Avenue when he drove into a utility pole.

Schlener is charged with careless driving, DUI and DUI highest rate of alcohol.

Kim LaBrake of the Saucon Valley Library Task Force told Borough Council it is feasible to consolidate library services for Lower Saucon citizens at its Aug. 20 meeting.

LaBrake said the feasibility study has been conducted over a period of 18 months and focuses on four areas, which include demographics and statistics, building, technology and finance. The study would not be implemented immediately.

"Nothing is taking effect," LaBrake said. "It's only a feasibility study for Hellertown and Lower Saucon to look at to start discussions themselves."

She presented council with a no-debt two-year proposal. The proposal would include $113,947 spent on improvements to the mezzanine, children's and computer areas and additional main level stacks and the reading area. Also, the parking area would be enlarged by 529 square feet and $50,000 would be spent on technology improvements to provide additional computers, databases and e-resources. Two full-time additional staff members would have to be hired.

The projected cost to Lower Saucon Township residents during year one and year two would be $127,528 and during year three, $74,542. Costs to Hellertown during year one and year two would be $69,826 and $40,814 during year three.

LaBrake said funding options would be subject to negotiations between Lower Saucon, Hellertown and the Hellertown Area Library (HAL) task force.

The task force findings also show the current Hellertown library and parking lot can be expanded to meet state standards and the majority of the resource needs. Additionally, the current Hellertown facility is centrally located and the materials collected at the facility meet the state library standards for a consolidated township and borough population of 16,670.

LaBrake also indicated consolidation would result in certain impacts on the Hellertown library. Consolidation would result in fewer materials available at the HAL than currently exist at the Bethlehem Area Public Library (BAPL); bookmobile services currently provided by BAPL to Lower Saucon would be discontinued. Lower Saucon residents would still be able to utilize the BAPL and borrow materials under the ACCESS PA program. Materials could still be requested through the inter-library loan system and other book delivery options could be explored, LaBrake said.

Lower Saucon Township resident and member of the task force Tom Maxfield told council and the audience in attendance changes would not occur within the next year.

"It probably would not happen this year because there is a lot that needs to be looked at," he said.

According to the feasibility study, 50 percent of the 4,181 Lower Saucon Township residents who hold a BAPL card also have a card from the Hellertown library, 35 percent of Lower Saucon cardholders also use the Hellertown library and Lower Saucon residents, on average, comprise one-half of the participants in many children's programs at the Hellertown library. Also, Lower Saucon residents checked out 30,637 materials from the Hellertown library in 2011, representing 35 percent of the library's checkouts.

Council unanimously approved the recommendations proposed by the task force.

Council grants sidewalk exemption

By MARK RECCEK
mreccek@tnonline.com

Hellertown resident Ernest Svites Jr. came before borough council Aug. 20 asking council members to grant him an exemption to installing a sidewalk on his property, located at 580 Miller St.

Svites, who has resided at the property intermittently since 1956, argued a sidewalk is not necessary due to the infrequent pedestrian and vehicular traffic that passes by his residence. He also argued the slope and the costs of installing a sidewalk, averaging between $9,000-$13,000, justified granting an exemption.

"Time has stood still on Miller Street," he told council.

"I sincerely doubt anyone would use the sidewalk," Svites added. "I'd be all for it if there was a reason for it."

Zoning Codes Officer Kris Russo agreed with Svites due to the location of the residence and the steep slope of the hill. It was Russo who recommended Svites bring his case for an exemption before borough council.

Councilwoman Gail Nolf agreed with Russo and Svites.

"I think sometimes common sense has to rule over technicalities," said Nolf.

Council unanimously agreed to grant Svites an exemption to the sidewalk requirement, pending a legal opinion and borough staff inspecting the property.

In other business Rebecca Harney, representing Braveheart Highland Pub, 430 Main St., requested council grant a permit allowing part of Main Street to be closed for a fall outdoor family event hosted by the pub, to be held sometime in October. The event will offer live music, entertainment and beverages.

Council Vice President John Bate told Harney it would be difficult to close Main Street. Harney presented council with the alternative plan, which includes opening the rear of the building and closing down the rear end of the parking lot.

Police Chief Robert Shupp told council he will meet with Harney to discuss the logistics of the event further.

Also during the meeting, Hellertown resident Robert Linney applauded council, Public Works Director Tom Henshaw and Shupp for their efforts to improve pedestrian safety within the borough.

Linney also asked council to consider implementing a smoking ban in and around the Farmers Market area.

"I think it would be appropriate to ban smoking, so it would not be an issue," Linney said.

Bethlehem teams look for wins in week 2

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

It wasn't how Joe Henrich thought the 2012 Bethlehem Catholic football season would start for the Golden Hawks when they opened with a 35-26 loss to Pocono Mountain West last Friday night at Notre Dame-Green Pond.

But after trailing 21-6 at halftime, a fire from Becahi's players was prevalent, which was something that hasn't been seen in awhile from the brown and gold.

The Hawks (0-1) battled back to draw within 28-26 in the fourth quarter after quarterback Anthony Trapani found Chris Figler on a 71-yard throw, but the needed two-point conversion for Becahi was no good.

The momentum that was built off nearly coming back quickly evaporated when the Panthers (1-0) answered less than two minutes later with a 48-yard TD throw from quarterback Jeffrey Krishik to Jordan Hardy to put PMW back ahead by nine.

"I was a little surprised at how we came out and played," said Hawks head coach Joe Henrich. "It wasn't for lack of effort from our guys because the enthusiasm and energy were great. But when it comes to playing under the lights, you have to be ready.

"I hate to use inexperience and youth as an excuse, but we made some mistakes and it hurt us. It's part of the learning process and I think we had a lot of guys who started the game in some awe of playing on Friday night."

Henrich now hopes this week's Saturday night encounter with Emmaus (1-0) will be a more fluid process for his group as they take on the Green Hornets in their Lehigh Valley Conference opener.

Emmaus knocked out Germantown Academy 40-0 last week and Henrich knows it's the start of another grueling nine weeks on the calendar.

"I think our guys will be hungry to prove they're better than what they showed against Pocono Mountain West," he said.

After week one of football, what did we learn? That a lot of our local teams lost.

Not that we have to hit the panic button just yet, but it wasn't your typical start to the season. Three of the top-five teams started with losses and will be looking for redemption.

CROSS COUNTRY

Freedom boys win Lion Invitational

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcald@tnonline.com

For the second year in a row, Freedom's boys' cross country team won the Lion Invitational Cross Country Meet last Friday at Moravian Academy.

"It was a very good start to the season. I'm very pleased," said Freedom coach Bob Thear.

Chris Kelly led the boys' team with a second-place finish in Class AAA, third place overall, in 16:53. "After it settled in, I was really happy with our team's performance. 'Champions' is nice to say. It really shows what we can do," Kelly said. "My goal was to break 17, and once I saw I did that, I was really, really, really happy."

Also competing for the Patriots were Ben Ziegler (17:29), Dan Quigley (17:30), Robbie Bogardo (17:41), Doo Park (17:42), Tommy Salerno (18:39), and Kevin McPeck (19:11).

Thear wanted the boys to work together as a pack, stressing not to overexert themselves in the first mile, thereby being able to pick off the people who ran too hard.

Kelly said, "I went out a little faster than I wanted. I wanted to be tenth at the mile, but the first mile was faster than I expected. At the two mile mark, I started picking off a few kids who were falling off. I passed the last guy at the three mile mark."

Kelly, Ziegler, Quigley,

Bogardo, and Park finished in the top 25 out of more than 160 runners.

"It was a good, positive start (to the season). We're definitely not resting on our laurels, and we'll keep working," said Thear.

Alex Fitch finished first for Liberty with a time of 17:38. Ian Sell finished the race in 18:14, Matt Buell in 18:27, and Matt Allred in 18:30. Will Masemore ran the race in 18:33, and Collin Dugan in 19:01.

Runners for host Moravian Academy were Alec

Talsania in 17:36, Corey Husick in 18:07, Casey Parent in 19:10, Daniel Snyder in 19:11, Josh Aurand in 19:22, Gareth Messman in 19:33, and Craig Appel in 21:07.

Runners for Bethlehem Catholic were Quinn Stasa in 20:03, Chris Landolfi in 21:07, Eric Braun in 21:08, Dominick Santanasto in 21:12, Mason Angstadt in 21:20, Patrick Langen in 22:31, and Tommy Horner in 23:00.

Pates Shaina Palmer 2nd

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcald@tnonline.com

Freedom cross country runner, Shaina Palmer, took second place in Class AAA and fifth place overall at the Lions Invitational Cross Country Meet last Friday at Moravian Academy.

Freedom coach Bob Thear said, "It was a good start for her. She was only 15 seconds off her personal record, but even with that, she's in a great position."

Palmer finished the race in 20:26.

Palmer said, "I was a little disappointed with my time. I was kind of tired, and I have allergies right now, and it was hot. I could have done better."

Palmer's strategy was to stay with the front of the pack. "I tried to go out strong but not too fast. I tried to stay pretty consistent. I tried to stay with the front-runners because you don't want them to get too far ahead," said Palmer.

Also from Freedom, Caterina Atiyeh finished the race in 22:42, followed by Bridget Tarnowski in 22:49. Alexa Deemer's time was 23:34, and Morgan Lukievics finished in 24:01.

Also running for the Patriots were Sarah Callahan with a time of 24:28 and Kelly Kopko with a time of 27:16.

Palmer said, "We were worried at the end of last year because we didn't know who our coaches would be. I think we got pretty lucky."

Bethlehem Catholic's

Kassi Yocco came in 14th place overall for the Hawks in 21:06. Olivia Zemanek finished in 21:47, followed by Cecelia Zemanek in 21:51. Margaret Zemanek's time was 26:15, and Megan Tucker's time was 26:16.

Also running for the Hawks were Abby Moninghoff with a time of 28:14 and Anne Fecanin with a time of 29:48.

Persa to speak at clinic

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

If you're looking for ways to increase your mental toughness, focus and discipline, Jason Brader, a Bethlehem native and owner of FASST Performance, will be holding his Clutch Performance Clinic on Sept. 9 from 11 a.m.-12:30 p.m. at his facility.

Former Liberty and Northwestern University quarterback Dan Persa will be the highlight of the 90-minute session as he'll talk about his tenure as the starting quarterback for the Wildcats, as well as his battle with injuries and the recovery process he's going through in hope of landing a spot in an NFL training camp next season.

"We're going to be sharing real life experiences with Dan about how to come up big in the clutch, along with the physical and mental process that are associated with it," Brader said. "We'll discuss research on how people come up big in different high pressure situations, as well as to why people fail in those situations. It'll be a great learning experience for anyone who is interested in becoming more successful."

Some of the key points of the session include strategies to increase focus during physical preparation, developing discipline, task versus outcome focus on impact performance and developing a plan for each individual to optimize success.

"We've done goal setting before but we wanted to do something where attendees can take the information we provide and use it as a tool in their respective field," Brader said. "Developing these type of habits and focus is a skill set that you can train for and we want to help provide individuals with those tools."

For more information about the event or to register, visit www.fasstperformance.com and click on the link for camps. Find the clinics tab to get more information for registration.

TENNIS LHS girls win two

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcdonald@tnonline.com

The Liberty Hurricanes scored its first girls' tennis victory over Whitehall last week, 5-2, followed by a 6-1 victory over Pleasant Valley the next day.

Liberty Coach Leo Schnalzer said, "It was nice to get our first win. The individual matches were closer, and I think the girls obviously felt good about it."

By the time the week was over, the Hurricanes had played four matches.

"I think it's too many. We don't get a lot of time to go over some things, but we got some singles wins which was nice because we struggled the first two matches," said Schnalzer.

Against Whitehall, Kaitlyn John and Samantha Peterson won their matches at number one singles, 6-1, 6-1 over Colleen Tobey, and at number two singles, 7-5, 6-2 over Brianna Bennicoff, respectively.

Peterson said, "She kind of hit higher shots, so it's hard to win the point, but then I got it in the second set."

Later in the match, John and Peterson teamed up at number one doubles to defeat Eliman Nazif and Tobey, 6-2, 7-6 (7-4).

Other doubles winners for the Hurricanes against the Zephyrs were Kelsey Eagan and Lizzie Peters at number two, 7-6, 2-6, 6-2, and Allison Dobias and Claire Labanz at number four, 6-4, 3-6, 6-1.

Labanz said, "We kind of just got it together. We always talk."

Dobias and Labanz also won their match against Pleasant Valley, 6-4, 6-1.

Dobias said, "We had confidence. She has good ground strokes, and I have good volleys, so it just works out well."

Also last week, the Freedom Patriots pulled out a 4-3 victory over Central Catholic, as all singles players won their matches for the Patriots.

Flannery Johnston defeated Linda Nguyen,

6-3, 6-1 at number one, Kaleigh DiNoto defeated Josie Airoidi, 6-4, 6-2 at number two, and Federica Maranzana defeated Jen Hildebrandt at number three singles, 6-4, 6-7 (4-7), 6-1.

Later, Johnston and DiNoto teamed up at number one doubles to defeat Airoidi and Nguyen, 6-1, 6-4.

Bethlehem Catholic scored a 6-1 victory over Allen last week as all of the Hawks' doubles teams won over the Canaries.

Alex Madison and Sophia Perez won 8-2 at number one doubles. Taylor Treadwell and Julia Atiyeh won 6-0, 6-0 at number two. At number three, Emily Hozza and Ally Setcavage prevailed 6-0, 6-0, and at number four, Haley Turnbach and Lauren Wells had a 6-1, 6-1 victory.

In singles play, Nina Kopy defeated Keri Hartz, 6-3, 6-3 at number one singles, and Allison Barczynski defeated Rebekah Garcia 6-1, 6-0 at number three singles.

Mixon named Woman of the Year

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcdonald@tnonline.com

Former Freedom High School swimmer and 2012 Misericordia University graduate, Chelsea Mixon, has been named the 2011-2012 Middle Atlantic Conference Woman of the Year.

"I'm astounded. I just feel very blessed and honored that I was chosen," said Mixon.

A social work major, Mixon combined excellence in the pool, classroom, and her community to be granted the honor.

Under head swimming coach, Jason Morini, Mixon was a two-time MVP and helped the Cougars to MAC championships in the 200 medley relay and the 400 medley relay.

"Swimming and being part of the team probably made the biggest difference in college. It was a place where I could put my motivation and ambition toward something," Mixon said.

This year, Mixon was second in the conference in the 50 free and third in the conference in the 100 free. Mixon also holds the university's record in the 100 free and was part of five school relay records.

Also taken into account for Mixon's Woman of the Year Award was her community service, which included an internship with the Noxen Community Outreach Project during her senior year.

"It was a blessing to be part of the internship and spearhead different projects. I built close relationships with people in that community, and I'm excited to see where things go there this year," said Mixon.

Mixon helped establish a food pantry, clothing bank, children's library, mentoring program at the local elementary school, big brother/big sister program, and visitation of the elderly and homebound in conjunction with a local church.

"Going into senior year, I didn't know how I was going to juggle swimming, my internship, and [my classes], but my coaches had early morning swims at the crack of dawn for me," said Mixon.

Academically, Mixon earned a 3.96 GPA, receiving the Alpha Delta Mu Award for highest academic achievement in social work.

Currently, Mixon is working toward a master's degree in social work at Bryn Mawr College.

This month, the NCAA will announce its top 30 Woman of the Year honorees, ten from each of the three NCAA divisions.

"We've now gone through the first game experience and they will be better a second time around. I think they'll process the game at a slower pace this week and that's big because when you're playing your first game at varsity, it can be tough to acclimate to the speed of the game."

Becahi wasn't the only team to fall flat in their opener, as Freedom and Liberty both lost on the road.

The Hurricanes fell to State College 26-7 and Freedom lost a heartbreaker to East Stroudsburg South 16-14, as Cavs' kicker Kubilay Kochar nailed a 21-yard field goal with 15 seconds left to lift ESS to victory.

Liberty now travels to Whitehall (0-1) this week in a difficult contest, since the Zephyrs will be hungry for a win after losing at Spring-Ford last week. Freedom hosts Central Catholic (1-0) on Friday night looking to grab their first LVC win of the year.

Diehl's harness factory

Karen M. Samuels
Columnist

The photograph accompanying this column was taken on March 22, 1915, in front of 33 West Broad St. It shows the Diehl Saddle Factory and on the right a sliver of the Lorenz Theatre and a young boy holding a wheel. The pile of bricks out front and the boarded-up windows indicate the building was under construction. The Bethlehem Redevelopment Authority demolished these buildings for redevelopment in the 1970s. However, the site sat empty for several years. It eventually became a Park & Shop until the Liberty Center was built on the site in 2001.

It can be difficult to research an old photograph of an ordinary street scene, but with census reports and city directories we can learn a little about the people and their use of the buildings. By 1893, Richard J. Diehl had set up his harness factory in the three-story building pictured below. He was one of five harness makers in Bethlehem at the time.

Richard's parents, Benjamin and Judith Diehl, owned a farm in Lowhill, Lehigh County. His father also was the local post rider. As Richard had 15 siblings, it was unlikely he would be able to support himself working on the family farm. He apprenticed as a saddler until his early 20s at his uncle Thomas Diehl's saddle shop on Main Street, Bethlehem. Next Richard worked as a saddler in Lyons Station, Berks County, where he met his wife, Emeline Bachman. Emeline was also from a large farming family.

Their plan to set up their own store in Bethlehem would place them far from farm life and into a bustling city. They lived around the corner from the shop on New Street and had a son, Willis, in 1875, then a daughter, Mary, in 1880. Willis worked alongside his father, first as a saddler then as a clerk. Mary married Thomas Leopold Weir, who was one of five boarders in 1910 residing in the Diehl home. He worked as a machinist for Bethlehem Steel. The couple had two daughters.

Initially the harness business was a lucrative business for the Diehls. Harnesses have been made for more than 6,000 years and each harness is designed for the specific job a horse will do. Bethlehem had three harness makers working in the village as early as 1759.

Harnesses, an arrangement of leather straps, usually fall into three main categories. A horse wearing a ridge type collar harness could do the work of 50 men on a farm field. The breast collar harness, which rests above the horse's shoulders, is used with lightweight carriages. The full collar is generally used with heavier carriages and wagons.

In the 1920s, the demand for harnesses dwindled when Model T cars became wildly popular. Almost everyone could afford the average price of $300. Richard sold his business equipment and stock to George J. Guth and Harry S. Guth in 1923. Their business was known as Guths Luggage and Leather Goods. Willis converted the family Broad Street property into an apartment house called "Diehl Apartments" and lived there until his death in 1959. Richard and Emeline both passed away in 1931. Grave markers for the entire family can be found in the Nisky Hill Cemetery.

The sliver of the Lorenz Theatre we see in the photograph may have been the reason the photographer was See WEEK on Page A12

Demolition equipment removes the former Jack Jones Buick showroom building at Broad Street and Third Avenue to make room for a new three-story medical center. Owned by Novak Ventures, Ed and Kathy Novak of Lower Saucon Township, the project at the 321 W. Broad St. property is seen as a welcome replacement of the antiquated 1921 building. "We expect reconstruction to start in the next 60 days and completion by the second quarter of 2013," said Lou Pektor of Ashley Development, which is overseeing the revitalization project.

ANOTHER VIEW

Can't we all just get along?

Although they've been up in arms about nearly every other Abe Atiyeh zoning proposal, Bethlehem citizens had few complaints about a proposed 150-bed residential treatment facility at 825 12th Ave. It's an isolated location at the former Synthetic Thread property, where Atiyeh had originally planned apartments.

Bernie O'Hare
Guest columnist

Even Stewart Early, a thorn in Atiyeh's side in previous zoning requests, told Atiyeh he was pleased.

Although zoners granted Atiyeh the necessary variance, it was conditioned on his agreement to withdraw a multitude of other appeals for residential treatment centers, including one to be located right by Bethlehem Catholic HS.

But then Atiyeh decided to appeal the decision, even though it gave him precisely what he wanted. That's because Atiyeh believes zoners have no legal authority to force him to withdraw one set of zoning appeals in order to get relief in an unrelated request.

Now Bethlehem has fired back. On Aug. 24, the city decided to appeal the Zoning Hearing Board's decision too. Bethlehem's new zoning ordinance, which the administration supported, provides for treatment centers like the one at 825 12th Ave. So essentially, the city is challenging its own zoning ordinance.

So Atiyeh is appealing a decision giving him the relief he wanted while the city is challenging its own zoning ordinance.

Does any of this make any sense?

SAVING GRACE

A politically correct pen

My first grade teacher had a distinctive looping handwriting. I remember the stars that would appear atop my papers after she had corrected them. The stars were in red ink, as were the corrections she made. Always.

It was in the first grade that I took my first tentative foray into writing. When asked to write a sentence about the dog that attended the fire drill — my Scottish Terrier, that had inadvertently made a show-and-tell appearance which coincided with a routine fire drill — I wrote three. The paper was subsequently corrected in red ink.

The red ink didn't curtail my writing. I went on during elementary school to write plays for my friends, and myself, to star in. And later, I wrote the anguished love poems of a smitten 13-year-old girl.

During high school, I wrote countless essays and that dreaded first term paper, which included the requisite note cards.

Janis Adams
Columnist

These, too, found corrections in red ink strategically scattered throughout the pages.

Despite the red ink and all that it implied, I continued to be a prolific writer.

The red ink continued to appear throughout college, only it was to be found in a large, exuberant style from the hands of my favorite writing professor, who with great care honed my writing craft while allowing me to keep my voice. And that pen still appeared well into my early writing career. Writing and editing, it was there. The red ink.

Never once did I feel hampered or stifled or limited or stunted by the traditional hue of corrective ink.

As a freelance editor, I have clients who have different preferences as to style guidelines, AP, Chicago and the like, and how they desire corrections to be indicated. However, it has always been stipulated that red ink be used for marking.

However, all that changed with the introduction of the politically correct purple pen.

I received an offer for ongoing work through a large publishing firm. The editing that I would be required to do seemed quite routine; nothing different from what my prior experience had dictated.

Then, the UPS package appeared.

As I always like to receive a package, I eagerly tore off the wrapping. Once the box was opened, I was taken by surprise to find a plethora of purple-inked pens. Every style and every make of purple-inked pen, thick and fine point, even those with a comfort grip.

Along with the package of purple-inked pens came a distinct politically correct message. Red was out, purple was in. Red ink was aggressive, red ink implied a demeaning and threatening message. Of course, this connotes a politically incorrect message which is inappropriate for the workplace.

Admittedly, I took up the purple pen for those pieces submitted to me for editing from this particular publishing firm, not out of agreement with the premise that a red-inked pen was politically incorrect, but because that was the policy of the firm.

Political correctness is all the rage. But when taken too far it becomes political absurdity.

Have the grace to temper political correctness with a rationality that does not belie its purpose.

The festival was held outside the College Center on NCC's Main Campus at 3835 Green Pond Road in Bethlehem Aug. 30. Close to 11,000 students are furthering their education at Northampton Community College this fall.

Commissioners bolster financial support to law

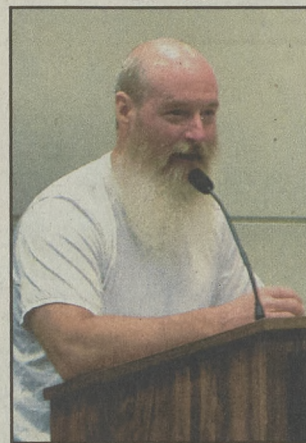

By DANIEL MINQUEZ
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Lehigh Valley Commissioners augmented funding to the offices of public defender, district attorney, and county coroner at its Aug. 22 meeting. According to Commissioner Percy Dougherty, crimes, including homicide, are up in the Lehigh Valley.

"The number of cases the public defender handles has increased drastically," he said. "It's almost guaranteed that the public defender is going to be back to us for more funding by the end of the year."

The board unanimously approved seven resolutions, two of which channel money to the coroner's office for advanced analysis of DNA evidence and transport of the deceased. The other five assist the public defender and district attorney with increased case loads, as well as covering the costs of an e-filing system for legal documentation.

Later, a bill that would grant funding for community revitalization to Whitehall townships and Coopersburg and Emmaus boroughs was given its first reading. Emmaus and Whitehall stand to receive $15,000 each if the grant passes. Coopersburg stands to receive $2,000.

Discussion centered primarily on the grant to the Borough of Emmaus, which would be administered by the Emmaus Main Street Partners to provide revolving loans to businesses in the borough. The loans would be backed by banks on the condition that the borough itself contributes money to the program.

Commissioner Scott Ott argued that such a contribution should come from the borough of Emmaus, not from county taxpayers.

"The banks want to see community involvement" Ott said, "but we're not giving them that, we're taking money involuntarily from farmers in Lynn Township and saying it's the stake Emmaus is putting up and that's not true."

Emmaus resident John Donches addressed the board and sided with Ott.

"This is taking money from everywhere you get taxes from, earmarking it and giving welfare to certain areas, I think we should chip in our own if we want something in Emmaus."

Virginia Savage, who is the county community revitalization and development manager, argued in support of the bill, telling the board, "This [grant] is just one piece of the puzzle and one piece they're short on." The vote on this bill will take place at the next commissioners meeting Sept. 12.

DA clears Easton officer in shooting

By BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Northampton County District Attorney John Morganelli would rather have an injured criminal than a dead police officer. At an Aug. 30 news conference, the prosecutor announced that no charges will be filed against an Easton police officer who recently shot a fleeing criminal suspect.

This shooting, which occurred Aug. 21, happened during an evening in which police received several complaints about shots fired. Officer Eric Campbell, on patrol in Easton's south side, spotted a group of individuals that included the suspect ed shooter. But when Officer Campbell exited his patrol car, one of them, Nelson Mayers, fled.

While giving chase, Officer Campbell saw Mayers put his hand in the waist area of his pants. Campbell saw a black object in Mayers' hand when he turned to face him. Mayers even extended his arm, which led Campbell to believe he held a handgun.

Campbell fired twice, with one shot hitting Mayers in the leg. Police then discovered that the object Mayers was holding was a black cell phone, not a gun.

At St. Luke's Hospital, medical staff discovered that Mayers had secreted heroin in his buttocks.

Morganelli ruled the shooting was justified. Officer Campbell was responding to night calls about gunshots being fired and had seen some of the casings. He knew that people in that area were armed. Mayers not only fled from Campbell, but acted in a way that led the officer to believe a gun was being pointed at him. And Easton has had a recent surge of shootings.

Police Chief Carl Scalzo, who sat with Morganelli during the news conference, noted that Officer Campbell is on paid administrative leave, and his department is still conducting its own investigation of the incident. He added that, before returning to duty, Campbell will receive a psychological evaluation.

The theater offered one screen and 1,100 seats. The patrons usually left through the emergency exit doors to Guetter's Alley. The theater's name was changed to the Nile in 1925. The movie advertised on the sign, "Man From The Sea" was a short film starring Kempton Greene and Earl Metcalfe and released in 1914.

The heat is on for West Nile Virus

Lehigh County experts advise mosquito eradication

By BUD COLE
Special to The Press

West Nile Virus (WNV) has become a national health problem this year despite the fact that many parts of the United States are experiencing moderate to severe drought.

As of Aug. 28, there have been 48 states reporting West Nile Virus infections in people, birds or mosquitoes. A total of 1,590 cases of West Nile Virus in people, including 65 deaths, has been reported to the Centers For Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). The cases reported are the highest number reported to CDC through the last week in August since West Nile Virus was first detected in the United States in 1999.

Last year, rainfall in the Lehigh Valley was more than 26 inches above normal. This year, rainfall in the Valley is about three inches below normal.

You might wonder what a lack or abundance of rainfall has to do with WNV.

Whatever the amount of rain, it fills natural vessels like the holes in trees and hollowed-out areas in the ground, as well as man-made objects like birdbaths, wheelbarrows, flowerpots and other containers. Areas filled with stagnant water provide the perfect nursery to breed mosquitoes.

Moreover, the recent mild winter and spring prevented many of the adult Culex mosquitoes that normally die from the cold to survive through the winter. These mosquitoes, plus the population numbers that normally survive the winter, have multiplied the overall total amount of adult mosquitoes this summer.

According to Louise Bugbee, Lehigh County West Nile Virus Coordinator, there are more than 50 species of mosquitoes in Pennsylvania. She and her staff of one, Assistant Director Jeff Carroll, have identified 28 different species of mosquitoes in Lehigh County this year.

Louise Bugbee, Lehigh County West Nile Virus Coordinator, prepares a Gravid mosquito trap.

"Not every mosquito species can act as a vector for all the diseases that mosquitoes can carry. For example, Anopheles mosquitoes are the vectors for malaria. The Culex species acts as the main vector for West Nile Virus and also dog heartworm," Bugbee explains.

"Culex mosquitoes are peri-domestic - they live in close association with humans. These are the mosquitoes that breed in the water in old tires, rain gutters, tarps, and children's toys - anything that can hold water. It is imperative that individuals dump all sources of standing water," Bugbee stresses.

Temperature is a big influence in mosquito development, according to Dr. Michael Raupp, an Entomologist at the University of Maryland. A recent study of Culex mosquitoes found that it took 27 days for a Culex mosquito to transform from egg to adult at a temperature of 59 degrees Fahrenheit. It took only seven days for the same mosquito species to grow from egg to adult at 93 degrees Fahrenheit.

The study shows that several generations of mosquitoes can be produced during the same time period at high temperatures as can a single generation at lower temperatures. High temperatures this summer have mosquitoes completing their lifecycles at a record pace.

Hot wet weather provides the ideal recipe for spawning massive numbers of mosquitoes. The males and females consume large quantities of carbohydrates during the first few days of their lifecycles. Plant nectar and aphid honey provide much needed carbohydrates. These sweet sources satisfy the males, but the females also desire animal blood. The animal blood provides the protein for females to produce eggs.

Says Bugbee, "Various mosquito species have different breeding habits. Some species lay their eggs in moist soil while some lay their eggs in standing water. Female Culex, also known as northern house mosquitoes, lay their eggs in water including water-filled containers and standing water on the ground."

The eggs are laid in clusters called rafts. Each floating raft contains about 150 eggs. Larvae hatch from the eggs and go through four molts as they increase in size. They then become a pupa from which adults emerge and fly off from the breeding site to carry on the reproductive cycle.

Cancer survivors take flight

Butterfly release, one-woman play provide community

By DEB BOYLAN
Special to The Press

Traditional treatments for cancer primarily focus on healing a person's body. But often the patient needs emotional support as well.

Wellness and a holistic approach to cancer is the goal of the Cancer Support Community of the Greater Lehigh Valley.

The Cancer Support Community, formerly the Wellness Center, is located in the stately Anneliese B. Vollrath house, 3400 Bath Pike (Route 512), Hanover Township.

The non-profit organization offers programs in a home-like setting focused on the social and psychological needs of the patient, their families and survivors. Group activities reassure cancer patients that they are not alone.

The Lehigh Valley chapter of the Cancer Support Community is part of a larger international organization sharing the mission to tend to a cancer patient's mental and spiritual well-being.

"We offer many different programs," says Jen Sinclair, Program Director of the Cancer Support Community. "In addition to support groups, we have yoga, cooking classes, and crafts. We are always looking into ways in which we can expand our offerings."

Monarch butterfly enjoys Butterfly Bush before heading south for the winter.

Migration of the monarchs underway

This spring was the warmest in 117 years of record-keeping and the warmest 12-month period ever recorded in the United States.

In response to the warm conditions, plants and insects made early appearances. Plants bloomed from a modest two weeks earlier than normal to as much as six weeks earlier than in previous years.

Most insects, including the monarch butterfly, kept pace with the early blooming. Many monarchs made the trip north from Mexico two to three weeks earlier this spring. The early arrival to their northern breeding ranges raises the possibility of a large fall monarch migration and perhaps the last big migration of this decade.

Climatologists are predicting future summers to be hotter and accompanied by extensive periods of drought. If these predictions come true it will tragically affect monarchs and many other wildlife species.

The monarch is one of the most common butterflies and probably the one butterfly species that most people can identify. Monarchs belong to the milkweed family, Danaidae. The family includes the queen and viceroy butterflies.

Monarchs are the only butterflies that truly migrate. Some monarchs travel up to 80 miles a day while migrating approximately 2,000 miles to the mountains of Mexico.

BUD'S VIEW

By Bud Cole

They spend the winter on tree trunks and branches with hundreds of millions of other monarchs that left their summer homes before the cold northern fall and winter temperatures.

These long-distance travelers rely on stored body fat to survive the winter. Most monarchs mate before they leave Mexico on the way to their northern home ranges. This migrating brood lives about eight months.

The migrators produce offspring that emerge during the summer and live about two to three weeks. This is just long enough to mate and lay the eggs that will develop into this year's migrating brood.

The female monarch lays about 400 to 600 eggs, one at a time on the leaves of the milkweed plant. Pinhead-sized eggs hatch in three to five days. The tiny caterpillars, also called larvae, eat their egg cases before gorging themselves on the milkweed leaves.

As the caterpillars eat and grow, they shed their outer skin five times. After two weeks, the two-inch long caterpillars are about 3,000 times their original weight. This would be equivalent to a 150-pound person weighing 450,000 pounds after two weeks of binging.

After satisfying its hunger, the satiated caterpillar crawls to the underside of a twig or leaf where it spins a tiny silk button. Hanging from the button in a "J"-shape, it sheds one more time, revealing a green pupa case called a chrysalis (moths spin a cocoon).

As the chrysalis hardens, a pattern of gold dots begins to form on the upper surface. It is during this 10- to 14-day pupal stage that one of the true miracles of nature takes place. The green and black striped caterpillar emerges as a beautiful adult monarch butterfly.

When the adult emerges from its chrysalis, it hangs upside down until enough fluid is pumped from its body to its wings. Finally, the wings unfold, harden and become ready for flight. Adults feed on flower nectar.

Late summer changes in length of daylight and temperature trigger the beautiful and graceful monarch butterflies to begin swarming together to form huge migratory flocks. An estimated 250 million or more monarchs flee the cold northern weather by migrating to roosts in the mountain fir forests west of Mexico City.

Allentown is located at about 40.6 degrees north latitude. According to the Monarch Watch website, an organization that monitors monarch migrations, the peak time for observing monarchs in the Lehigh Valley is from early September to the end of the month.

Nature centers host monarch-tagging programs before the monarch flocks leave the area. Each tag is about the size of a thumbtack head. Each tag has three letters and three numbers.

The tagging program compares the area of capture and tagging to the point of recovery for each tagged monarch. Data from the recovered monarchs is used to determine the migration routes taken, the possible influences of weather on the migration and the survival rates.

Many questions remain about the monarch's migration. Tagging programs and follow-up studies will hopefully clear up the mysteries of the migration.

The Bertsch-Hokendauqua-Catasauqua Watershed Association will tag monarchs during a hike Sept. 15, which is "Know Your Watershed Day," on the Mary Immaculate Center property in Allen and Lehigh townships, Northampton County.

Surviving a storm

When it comes to hurricanes, there are two major types of people.

One group is adventurous enough to think hurricanes are just one more adventure.

The other group gets anxiety ridden as a hurricane nears.

I used to belong to the adventurous group. Because we usually vacationed at the Outer Banks of North Carolina during hurricane season, we were there during four or five hurricanes. We regarded each one as an adventure with never a thought given to danger.

In fact, one year as people were evacuating and driving off the island, our Pennsylvania friends, Franck and Jan, were driving onto the island to be with us. We had a great time, except it was hard to get food because restaurants and supermarkets were closed because of the hurricane.

From that year on, whenever a hurricane was due to hit the Outer Banks, we made jokes about wanting to drive there.

I no longer find anything to joke about when it comes to hurricanes. I've gone from adventurous to keen anxiety. Maybe it's my age. Maybe it's living in Florida. Or maybe it's because I wised up the first year I bought a house here.

That year, 2004, there were three hurricanes that hit us in various degrees. After Hurricane Charley, I drove with tears rolling down my face through ruins where houses used to be. My home wasn't damaged but devastation all around me taught me how vicious hurricanes can be.

With Hurricane Isaac scheduled to affect us, I started panicking days before it was set to arrive. I called to have my lanai screening reinforced and did everything I could to prepare my house for high winds.

Then I went to the supermarket and did what everyone else was doing — buying enough food and water to last a small army through a week. Then I worried I still didn't have enough food and emergency supplies so I went out and bought more.

Along with everyone else I stayed glued to the weather channel. If you don't have enough anxiety before you listen to the dire predictions, those weather guys will raise your fears.

In my area, we were only expected to get 40 to 50 mile an hour winds along with eight inches of rain. But by the time I listened to the dangers of storm surge, flooding and tornadoes, I was worried.

The last storm, which had 40 mile an hour winds, blew away part of my screening and landscaping. With the expected hurricane, I wanted my hurricane shutters put up, but people insisted we wouldn't need them.

We didn't.

What was supposed to be heavy winds and rain was like any other storm. Our area was spared.

My daughter Maria and I did get a little adventurous during the full day and night of rain. Tired of being indoors, we put on bathing suits and rain hats and relaxed at night in our hot tub.

We thought at that point the really bad weather would arrive in the middle of the night. Even when it didn't get much worse for us, the weather channel kept showing areas that got hit.

I had to stop watching TV because I can't bear the thought of all those homeless people in Haiti suffering even more as their tents blew away. And how could I rejoice in not getting wallowed by a hurricane when other areas got pounded?

But the sun came out here and we all got back to business as usual.

All this hurricane angst has me thinking how lessons learned apply to other areas of life.

Sometimes we think disaster is coming. We worry. We fret. We waste perfectly good days worrying about something that MAY happen. When it doesn't, we find something else to worry about.

How much of our time do we spend worrying about things that may never happen?

Logic tells us it's senseless to worry before we know what exactly we are facing. But some of us do it anyway.

I never used to be a worrier. With age, I'm changing. I hate it and I fight it. But I still do more fretting than is absolutely necessary.

My husband says, "It's senseless to worry about anything. Either what we dread will never come about ... or, it won't be as bad as we fear."

That usually turns out to true.

There are people living here for decades who have never prepared for a hurricane. They don't buy non-perishable food. They don't stock up on batteries. They don't put up hurricane protections. And, year after year, they are safe.

"One of these days, you'll be sorry," I tell them. Obviously, we all have to strike a good balance between caution and senseless fear.

Maybe next time I'll get it right.

Types of bariatric surgery detailed

Q. I'm 69 years old and I'm considering surgery for obesity. Am I too old for this?

There is no upper age limit for this type of surgery. However, the procedure is riskier for anyone older than 65.

Obesity surgery, also known as bariatric surgery, limits your food intake. Some operations also restrict the amount of food you can digest. It is designed for men who are at least 100 pounds overweight and women at least 80 pounds overweight.

Surgery is an extreme measure for people who can't lose weight through dieting and exercise. Recent studies suggest that this kind of surgery may reduce death rates for the obese.

Now for some anatomy.

When we swallow, food moves down the esophagus to the stomach, where a strong acid continues the digestive process. The contents of the stomach contents move to the duodenum, the first segment of the small intestine. In the duodenum, bile and pancreatic juice speed digestion.

The jejunum and ileum, the remaining two segments of the nearly 20 feet of small intestine, complete the absorption of almost all calories and nutrients. The food particles that cannot be digested in the small intestine are stored in the large intestine until eliminated.

There are four kinds of obesity surgery that are used in the United States:

Roux-en-Y Gastric Bypass reduces food intake and absorption. This is the most common obesity surgery. In gastric bypass surgery, the stomach is divided into two parts. Food is rerouted from the smaller upper part of the stomach, called the pouch, to the small intestine. Food no longer travels through the remaining part of the stomach.

Adjustable Gastric

Band limits food intake with a band around the top of the stomach. The size of the restriction can be adjusted with a circular balloon inside the band.

Duodenal Switch removes a large portion of the stomach, reroutes food away from much of the small intestine and also reroutes digestive juices.

Vertical Sleeve Gastrectomy involves removing a large portion of the stomach and creating a tubular gastric sleeve. The smaller stomach sleeve remains connected to a very short segment of the duodenum, which is then directly connected to a lower part of the small intestine. This operation leaves a small portion of the duodenum available for food and the absorption of some vitamins and minerals.

Obesity surgery may be done through a traditional abdominal opening or by laparoscopy, which requires only a half-inch incision. The surgeon uses the small incision to insert instruments and a camera that transmits images to a television. Most bariatric surgery today is done laparoscopically.

Many people who have bariatric surgery lose weight quickly. If you follow diet and exercise recommendations, you can keep most of the weight off. The surgery has risks and complications including infections, hernias and blood clots.

One study of bariatric surgery showed that patients lost an average of 61 percent of their excess weight. In addition to weight loss, these patients received the health benefits that go with it. More than seven out of 10 patients with diabetes, elevated cholesterol and high blood pressure improved so much that they needed less or no treatment for their conditions.

A one-night-only reading of "8," Dustin Lance Black's new play chronicling the challenge to California's Proposition 8, will be presented at 8 p.m. Sept. 8 at Civic Theatre of Allentown's 19th Street Theatre, 527 N. 19th St., Allentown.

Proceeds from "8," presented through a special agreement with American Foundation for Equal Rights (AFER) and Broadway Impact, benefit the Pennsylvania Diversity Network.

The production of "8," directed by William Sanders, Civic Theatre's Artistic Director, includes Lehigh Valley LGBT activists and organizers Liz Bradbury, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Diversity Network; Adrian Shanker, President of Equality Pennsylvania; and Stephen Libby, Lehigh Valley LGBT activist.

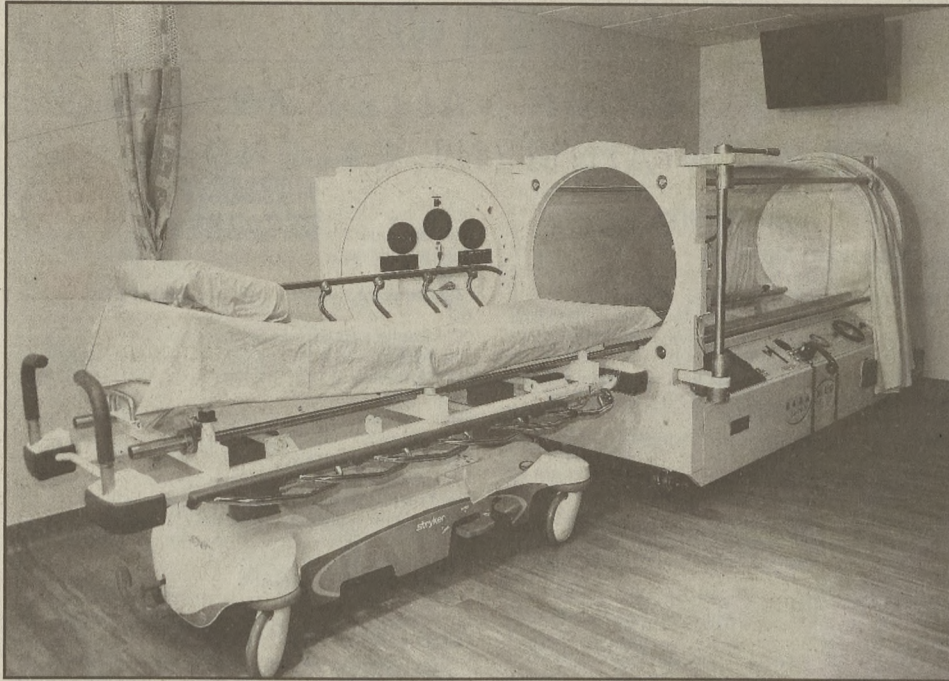

The Civic production also includes Matthew

Hogam, Aidan Nuell, JoAnn Basist, Bill Joachim, Will Morris, Josh Neth, Melisa Klausner, Tesia Nicoli, Will Windsor Erwin, Gary Gaugler, Sharon Lee Glassman, Barry Glassman, Sue Sneringer, Troy Brokenshire, Jason Sizemore, Justin Brehm, Troy Brokenshire and Mike Febbo.

"8" is an account of the Federal District Court trial in Perry v. Schwarzenegger (now Perry v. Brown), the case filed by AFER to overturn Proposition 8, which took away gay and lesbian Californians of the freedom to marry.

On Feb. 7, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit issued a decision upholding the historic August 2010 ruling of the Federal District Court that found Proposition 8 unconstitutional.

Hyperbaric oxygen treatments are now available at St. Luke's University Hospital - Bethlehem as part of the relocated Wound Management Center.

St. Luke's - Bethlehem relocates wound center

St. Luke's University Hospital - Bethlehem has opened a new Wound Management Center, replacing the location at St. Luke's Union Station on South Side Bethlehem.

The new Wound Management Center is at St. Luke's University Hospital - Bethlehem, 801 Ostrum St., at the "A" Entrance at the Priscilla Payne Hurd Pavilion. Hours are 8 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Monday - Friday.

Wound centers treat patients with non-healing wounds often complicated by diabetes, vascular problems and other underlying diseases.

"Wound care is about quality of life," said Carol Kuplen, RN, MSN, president of St. Luke's University Hospital - Bethlehem and Chief Nursing Officer, St. Luke's University Health Network.

"Relocating the Wound Management Center to St. Luke's University Hospital will provide closer proximity to the various specialties that are needed to help diagnose and care for each patient. In addition, we are now able to offer hyperbaric oxygen therapy to help speed wound healing."

Hyperbaric oxygen can treat problem wounds, bone infections and the effects of radiation, according to Robert Toth, RRT, CHT, coordinator of the hyperbaric medicine program.

The Bethlehem center is part of a Wound Management program throughout the St. Luke's Network. In addition to the Bethlehem site, Wound Management Centers are at St. Luke's Quakertown Hospital; St. Luke's Allentown Hospital; St. Luke's Miners Hospital, Coaldale; St. Luke's Warren Hospital, Phillipsburg, N.J.

"St. Luke's Wound Management Centers are set apart from other wound centers with the coordination of services for our wound patients," said Joanne Labiak, RN, BSN, CWOON, CWS, Director of Wound Management for St. Luke's University Health Network.

"We make patients' appointments for necessary testing, hyperbaric treatments and home visits. We help patients more easily manage their respective conditions by coordinating care with long-term care facilities, hospital admissions, oncology and emergency departments, as well as surgical services," Labiak said.

Patients may refer themselves to St. Luke's wound centers if they have a wound that has not shown significant improvement in two weeks or has failed to completely heal in four weeks. Patients should also work with family physicians or other specialists for referrals.

Appointments may be made in Bethlehem by calling 484-526-2440.

Second quarter housing sales up 16.7 percent, LVAR reports

The Lehigh Valley Association of Realtors (LVAR) has released a new report on housing market data today that confirms a strengthening housing market.

The initial quarterly report lists positive indicators showing second quarter 2012 home sales have increased 16.7 percent over second quarter sales the previous year.

Pending sales were up 25 percent forecasting the potential for increased sales in the coming months.

An additional sign that the housing market is on the road to recovery is the decrease in inventory of homes for sale, down 16.6 percent over last year.

The housing affordability index is up 7.1 percent at 196. This index measures housing affordability for the region.

An index of 120 means the median household income is 120 percent of what is necessary to qualify for the median-priced home under prevailing interest rates. A higher number means greater affordability.

"The increase in the housing affordability index is good news for homebuyers," said Ryan Conrad, CEO of LVAR.

The average number of days on the market until a home is sold has decreased 4.5 percent from second quarter last year.

"The slight decrease in market time is a plus for people selling their homes," said Conrad.

The average sales price has increased 2.8 percent.

The new report will be released on a quarterly basis to examine trends in the industry.

"As the lead source of real estate information in the Lehigh Valley, LVAR will provide its members and the media with analysis of our local housing market in a quarterly snapshot," said Conrad. "We will continue to share our research as a service to the community," he adds.

The new quarterly report compliments, but will not replace, the monthly market updates LVAR currently produces.

The data was compiled based on household income and interest rates from hsh.com and huduser.org.

'Safety' guarantees some fun

"Safety Not Guaranteed" is a hybrid film. It's part indie film, part mumblecore and part science fiction.

The film, while it doesn't always work, is a charmer, mostly for its off-hand, casual and sometimes clunky screenplay, directing and acting.

The story centers on a Seattle monthly (we presume) magazine where the editor (Mary Lynn Rajsckub, in what amounts to not much more than a cameo) assigns a reporter, Jeff (Jake M. Johnson) and two interns, Darius (Aubrey Plaza) and Arnau (Karan Soni), to write an article about the person who placed a classified ad seeking a companion for a traveling mission.

"Safety Not Guaranteed" states the ad — hence the film's title.

Off go the trio to Ocean View, Wash., not unlike Dorothy, the Tinman and Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz."

What about the Lion, you might ask?

That would possibly be Kenneth (Mark Duplass), who placed the advertisement. He works at a home supply store, drives a beat-up yellow Datsun Z sports car, lives in what appears to be an abandoned house and, yes, is apparently working on some sort of time-travel gizmo.

And what a gizmo it is. We won't play spoiler. You will have to see it to believe it, but it is worthy of Dr. Emmet Brown's (Christopher Lloyd) contraption in "Back to the Future" (1985).

"Safety Not Guaranteed," not unlike this summer's "Moonrise Kingdom," imparts that sense of discovery. That being said, as with "Moonrise," you will either really like "Safety," react with an "eh," or really not like it.

Put me in the first camp. Here's why: The characters in "Safety" are among the Kings of Quirkdom, in the tradition of those in "Sunshine Cleaning" (2008), "Juno" (2007), "Little Miss Sunshine" (2006) and "Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind" (2004).

Do you see a "sunny" theme here? And this, in "Safety," filmed in the cloudy and rainy Northwest.

While "Safety" has no links, really, to these aforesaid films, it does share the sensibility of film-makers and actors not trying too hard. The film-makers don't play it safe. "Safety" could be compared, in a way, to contemporary rock groups who eschew corporate, designer label or mainstream trappings.

"Safety" is amusing in its own way. The performances seem particularly fresh. The actors don't really seem to be acting.

Aubrey Plaza ("Scott Pilgrim vs. the World," "Funny People," TV's "Parks and Recreation," Upright Citizens Brigade Theater) is an intriguing presence as the intern, with a look of forlorn insolence and a resemblance to a young Mackenzie Phillips.

Jake M. Johnson ("21 Jump Street," "No Strings Attached," "New Girl") as the magazine writer, plays dislikable really well, so convincingly you can't much stand him.

Mark Duplass (director, with Jay Duplass, his brother, of "Jeff, Who Lives at Home" and "Baghead") plays Kenneth, the guy who placed the time-traveler ad, like a teddybear with a gun. You never quite know what is going on between the ears of his disheveled head.

Director Colin Trevorrow, in his theatrical movie debut, working from a screenplay by Derek Connolly, also in his big-screen debut, keeps "Safety" right on the edge of believability.

One of my quibbles with the film is that the magazine writer is tooling around in a Cadillac Escalade SUV. Unless he is independently wealthy or perhaps an established writer working for The New Yorker or Vanity Fair, this seems a, ahem, stretch, to me — especially at these prices at the gasoline pump.

The other has to do with the film's parallel storyline, concerning the character Liz (Jenica Bergere), a former high school classmate for whom Kenneth is still carrying the torch. She works in a beauty salon (which she apparently does not own, although this is not clear) and lives in a restored craftsmen bungalow. One could chalk it up to inheritance, thriftiness or the divorce settlement she received from her ex, a professional athlete.

That said, "Safety Not Guaranteed" is worth taking the chance. Don't worry. You won't get hurt.

"Safety Not Guaranteed," MPAA Rated R (Restricted. Under 17 Requires Accompanying Parent Or Adult Guardian) for language including some sexual references; Genre: Comedy; Run time: 1 hr., 26 min.; Distributed by Film District.

Credit Readers Anonymous: Mark Duplass sings "Big Machine," written by Ryan Miller, over the "Safety Not Guaranteed" end credits.

Box Office: Because of early Labor Day holiday deadline, Aug. 31 box office results were not available at the time of publication Unreel, Sept. 7:

"The Words," PG-13: Bradley Cooper, Dennis Quaid, Olivia Wilde and Zoe Saldana star in a romance-drama about a writer at the peak of his literary career.

"The Cold Light of Day," PG-13: Bruce Willis, Sigourney Weaver and Henry Cavill star in an action-thriller about a Wall Street trader's family being kidnapped while on a sailing trip in Spain.

"Bachelorette," R: Kirsten Dunst, Isla Fisher and James Marsden star in the comedy about friends asked to be bridesmaids of a high school woman they made fun of.

"Hello I Must Be Going," R: A romantic comedy starring Blythe Danner, Melanie Lynskey, Christopher Abbott and John Rubenstein about a divorcee who moves back in with her suburban parents.

"Rec 3: Genesis," R: A couple's wedding reception gets creepy when the guests become ill in the horror-thriller.

Karimloo at Musikfest Cafe

Ramin Karimloo

Ramin Karimloo, who played the Phantom in "The Phantom of the Opera at the Royal Albert Hall," which was telecast on PBS, including PBS39 this past March, for his musical's 25th anniversary, performs at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 12, Musikfest Cafe at ArtsQuest Center, SteelStacks, Bethlehem.

He has been critically acclaimed as one of, if not the, greatest Phantoms of all time.

Sony Masterworks released Karimloo's debut album, "Human Heart," in June. The recording includes songs that Ramin has performed on stage, including "Music of the Night" from "The Phantom Of The Opera," as well as "Til I Hear You Sing" from its sequel, "Love Never Dies."

The CD also includes new songs from writers such as Ryan Tedder and Greg Wells (Adele, Leona Lewis), new takes on songs from Muse and Bryan Adams, original material from Karimloo and a new song from Tony-Award winning songwriters Duncan Sheik and Steven Sater ("Spring Awakening"). Karimloo is an Iranian-born Canadian vocalist and performer who made a big impact on London's West End for his work as the Phantom in "The Phantom of the Opera" and Jean Valjean in Cameron Mackintosh's West End production of "Les Misérables."

He originated the leading role in "Love Never Dies," sequel to "The Phantom of the Opera," in 2010, for which he received an Olivier Award nomination.

His 12-date tour begins Sept. 5 in Atlanta and concludes Sept. 21 in Albany, with stops in Toronto, Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, among other cities.

Ginsburg's realism at Baum

The Baum School of Art, 510 Linden St., Allentown, is presenting "Max Ginsburg: The Social Realist Master," Sept. 12 - Oct. 19 in the David E. Rodale and Rodale Family Galleries.

Ginsburg, a native of New York City, is one of the most highly-respected and accomplished social realist American painters. He credits his father, Abraham Ginsburg, a portrait painter, for providing him with a strong, traditional artistic foundation.

The paintings in the exhibition give graphic evidence related to his strongly-held feelings about peace and justice and his deep outrage to war. His social and political awareness grew out of his personal experience with anti-Semitism, the Great Depression of the 1930's, and the United States' Civil Rights movement during the 1960's.

Many of his paintings portray life in the streets of New York. Much of the street life reflects unglamorous urban realities, but his work also expresses the joy of life. Many of his subjects are people we can identify with: real people with regular lives.

Ginsburg says of his work, "I have lived and worked in New York all my life. As a New Yorker, I feel a deep and personal connection to this rich, energetic and beautiful city with its amazingly diverse population. My objective is to paint about the people of New York, realistically and with compassion."

He taught for many years at The Art Students League of New York, the School of Visual Arts, and the High School of Art and Design. During his extensive career he has exhibited widely and has received many awards. His work is included in major museums and collections.

Recently, he had an exhibition at The Butler Institute of American Art. Three of his paintings from that show, "Bus Stop," "War Pieta" and "Foreclosure," are included in a tour of other American realist painters of five museums in China.

In addition to solo exhibitions, his work has been included in both juried and invitational exhibits that include the National Academy of Design, the Academy of Arts and Letters, the Museum of the City of New York, the New York Historical Society, and the Salmagundi Club.

Ginsburg has recently published an art book of his paintings from 1956-2011, "Max Ginsburg Retrospective," and a DVD that includes a painting demonstration, interview and documentary, "The Legacy of an American Painter."

Ginsburg will demonstrate painting a portrait of a live model, 3 - 5:30 p.m. Sept. 12, followed at 6 p.m. by the opening reception of his exhibition. He will discuss and explain his painting procedures and materials during his demonstration, for which there is no charge.

A two-day workshop, "Painting from Life," will be held 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. Sept. 29 and 30.

On Oct. 13, Ginsburg will be a guest of honor at Baum's Annual Gala.

"Several WNV-carrying mosquitoes feed on bird blood. Birds are the reservoirs for WNV. Although humans are a dead-end host — the virus cannot be passed back to the mosquito from an infected human — birds can pass the virus back to the mosquitoes.

"WNV is an Old-World disease. The native birds in the Old World countries were immune to the disease. Crows and other North American native bird species do not have a natural immunity. WNV kills many native birds.

"Many of the Culex mosquitoes overwinter as adults in relatively even temperature areas such as caves, root cellars and other sites where they will not freeze," Bugbee continues.

Raupp adds, "The more mosquitoes there are, the greater the likelihood that WNV will be transmitted from bird to bird. Many of the bird-feeding mosquito species also bite humans. The incidence of human infection rises with the increase of infection in the birds and the larger mosquito populations.

"This scenario is underway in several areas of the country. Most of these cases have been in the southern and central regions of the United States."

We must all become aware of the WNV problem and do our part to eliminate the standing water sources for mosquito-breeding. Be sure to clean your rain gutters, recycle old tires, empty birdbaths at least twice a week and eliminate water-filled containers. This has to be an ongoing task each time it rains. If possible, it is a good idea to eliminate the containers completely.

"Late August is typically a time when the amount of human cases starts to escalate quickly. This annual trend is most likely due to gradual amplification of the virus over the course of the summer in bird populations, leading to the increases in infectious mosquitoes," says Laura C. Harrington, an associate professor of entomology at Cornell University.

"As a consequence, we are likely only at the beginning of a significant upward trajectory in human cases. With no vaccine and no specific treatment for WNV, the best prevention is to minimize exposure to mosquito bites through use of repellents, limit outdoor activity and eliminate mosquito breeding-sites," says Harrington.

Bugbee says WNV should not be taken lightly because everyone is susceptible.

The WNV program is funded by the Pennsylvania

Department of Environmental Protection, which advises counties to undertake spraying to reduce the numbers of adult mosquitoes. Because Culex mosquitoes are crepuscular (most active at dusk and dawn), spraying is most effective between 8 and 10 p.m. Bugbee and Carroll perform mosquito surveillance throughout Lehigh County to determine areas of high risk. Spraying is conducted when necessary.

Mosquitoes tend to begin feeding around dusk. It is best to avoid being outside at this time. If that is not possible, it is advised to wear light-weight, long-sleeved shirts and long pants when working outdoors. Read directions carefully before applying mosquito repellants to clothing and bare skin.

If you dine outdoors, use a small fan to create a slight breeze. The breeze will greatly reduce the number of mosquitoes in the immediate area.

Bug lights are not a deterrent to mosquitoes because mosquitoes are not attracted to light. Most of the bugs attracted and killed by bug lights are harmless insects like moths, lacewings and craneflies.

Northampton County disbanded its WNV Department last year because of budget concerns. Carbon County does not have a WNV program.

dmoody@cancersupport-glv.org, 610-861-7555, ext. 39.

"Susan's Undoing," a performance piece about a woman's cancer experience, will be presented at 1 p.m. Sept. 22, Lehigh Valley Charter High School for the Performing Arts, 675 E. Broad St., Bethlehem.

The one-hour performance, written and performed by cancer survivor Susan Chase, uses music and original compositions by Philadelphia composer Justin Solonyka, as well as dance and first-person monologues.

The performance is free. Seating is limited. For reservations, call Sinclair;

610-861-7555.

Sinclair says events such as these can counter the isolation that a person diagnosed with cancer feels, which can hinder recovery.

"We want the individuals we serve to engage in activities that they will find enjoyable and that will help them to get their mind off their cancer, even if it is just for a little while," says Sinclair. "It helps them to be around others who are experiencing a similar situation."

The parent organization was founded in 1982 in Santa Monica, Calif., by Dr. Harold Benjamin to "combine the will of the patient with the skill of the physician."

Realizing that the mind is a powerful healing tool, the organization strives to aid the individuals it serves in taking a "patient-active" approach to his or her illness and recovery.

In 2009, the group joined forces with Gilda's Club, founded in honor of the late comedienne Gilda Radner, who died of ovarian cancer in 1989. The combination of the two agencies made it the largest cancer support organization in North America.

"We rely on fundraising and the generosity of our corporate sponsors and donors to fund our programs," says Sinclair.

"With everything that a person dealing with cancer has to worry about, we feel that they should not have to be concerned with paying for our services."

MUHLENBERG

Tuttle reception

An artist's reception for "Comings & Goings," an exhibition continuing through Sept. 23 that covers about 30 years in the work of Kevin Tuttle, will be held 4:30 - 6 p.m. Sept. 5, Martin Art Gallery, Baker Center for the Arts, Muhlenberg College, 2400 Chew St., Allentown.

Tuttle's work is informed by literature, poetry, Greco-Roman painting and sculpture. Tuttle is a Muhlenberg College art department drawing and sculpture lecturer.

The reception and Martin Art Gallery events and programs are free and open to the public.

ANNIVERSARY

Scheck
Bethlehem couple celebrate golden anniversary

Frank J. and Judith A. Scheck, of Bethlehem, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Aug. 18 with a buffet luncheon at the Hotel Bethlehem.

After the luncheon, there was a gathering at the home of their son, Jeff, and his wife, Julie, of Bethlehem.

The couple also has a daughter, Kerry, and her husband, Robinson Cooper, of Dublin, Ohio.

Judy is the daughter of the late Maude and Floyd Warnke. Her husband is the son of Mary Scheck and the late Frank Scheck.

They are the grandparents of Kailin and Kendall Cooper, Christian Scheck, and Maria and Michael Germanetti.

The Schecks were married Aug. 18, 1962, in St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Frank J. and Judith A. Scheck Bethlehem, by the Rev. John V. Peters. The couple will take an anniversary trip to Cape Cod.

Six bands in We Rock benefit

By DEB BOYLAN
Special to The Press

Rock music for a cause is the theme of We Rock's concert, 1 - 9 p.m. Sept. 8, MainGate nightclub, 17th and Liberty streets, Allentown.

The concert benefits Lehigh Valley Health Network's Breast Health Services. We Rock has held biannual charity concerts for the past six years.

We Rock was organized by Matt Wolf, better known in the Lehigh Valley music scene as Matt Metal, host of a long-running radio show on Lehigh County Community College radio station WXLV.

"I don't do this on my own," he said of We Rock. "It's a bunch of people from the Valley pitching in for the cause."

We Rock was born six years ago when Wolf and a group of friends got together to discuss what they could do to help worthwhile causes in the area.

"I used to run a golf tournament for pediatric cancer," said Wolf. "One day I was sitting around with a bunch of friends discussing what else we could do and we came up with the idea for We Rock."

We Rock also holds an event in April on behalf of the Lehigh Valley Chapter of Autism Speaks. The beneficiaries have remained consistent throughout the years.

"It was a mutual decision to support Breast Health Services for the September concert," said Wolf. "All of us in the group had lost someone to breast cancer."

We Rock features a lineup of six local bands, including Psych, Nuff Sedd, Endzone, Cherry Bombs, Social Call and the Dave Goddess Group.

"We hope to see everyone come out for this," said Wolf. "All the bands have donated their time and Dominic [Germano, MainGate owner] has allowed us to use his club free of charge."

The Dave Goddess Group is fresh off its recent CD release, "Something New."

Goddess is well-known in the region from his former role as front man in the 1980's rock band, the Daddy Licks Band.

The new CD features classic rock devoid of pretension or posturing. The Dave Goddess Group has been performing since April 2011 and has opened for the likes of Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes, Foghat and Blue Oyster Cult.

"Our [current] lineup is my favorite ever," said Goddess.

"I've been working with Tom Brobst, our sax and keyboard player, since before the Daddy Licks' days. He's the soul of the band. Everything he plays comes from somewhere down deep. People connect with the raw emotion he puts into everything he does."

Goddess feels it is important to give back to the local community, hence his involvement with We Rock. "As musicians, we feel we have a larger responsibility. Any time we have the opportunity to help others, we try to do our part," he said.

Goddess is familiar with playing for large crowds. "We [Daddy Licks] played many concerts, and opened for many national acts," he said. "Some of those crowds were in the 5,000-plus range. I think the biggest crowd we played for was a WZZO event at a lake somewhere in the Lehigh Valley. There were maybe 12,000 people there."

Goddess is never one to rest on his laurels. He is already planning the follow-up to "Something New."

"I have been writing and working with the band on new material. I feel really good about our new songs. I hope to get into the studio in the fall to record a few tracks. We'll see what happens after that," he said.

Songs for soup: "Big Bowl of Music," a benefit for Trinity Soup Kitchen, will be held at 4 p.m. Sept. 9, Trinity Episcopal Church, 44 E. Market St., Bethlehem.

John Beacher, who has performed at Musikfest and Godfrey Daniels, will sing original songs, ranging from love ballads to a fusion of hip-hop, jazz, blues and rock.

Also performing are The Druckenmillers, who have performed traditional music for more than 40 years.

A reception follows. Ticket information: 610-867-4741, ext. 308

Cycle for homeless: The inaugural "RAV Rumble" motorcycle cruise Sept. 23 at Tuskes Community Park, Route 248, Upper Nazareth Township, benefits Third Street Alliance for Women and Children of Easton and Victory House of Lehigh Valley for men and veterans in Bethlehem.

Registration starts at 9 a.m. and the round-trip ride kicks off at 11 a.m., followed by an afternoon picnic sponsored by Carrabba's Italian Grill of Easton.

In the alternative, the appellant seeks a use variance related to Section 12.26(c)(1) and a special exception/variance to Section 12.36(a)(5) regarding buffer strip requirements, and/or any review approvals necessary through Section 12.25(e)(7) because of this existing large farm property being non-conforming in that it has multiple single family detached dwellings. The subject property is zoned "R-H", Rural Holding.

ZHB-2012-29: The appeal of the Me & AJ Inc. (c/o UCC Direct) seeking relief to renovate certain areas and expand operations of the Grille 3501 restaurant located at 3501 Broadway. If applicable, the appellant also seeks a Special Exception Use approval pursuant to Section 12.33(p), or if not applicable, a Use Variance, regarding impervious surfaces in excess of 10,000 sq ft in the aggregate (s/a 12.33(p)(3) & (4)) regarding creating more parking lot area, et al. The subject property is zoned "R-4", Medium Density Residential.

ZHB-2012-30: The appeal of equitable owner Painting & Decorating by Shane, LLC (Gary G. Schweikert - record owner/seller) seeking relief to change the use of the property located at 1446 N. 18th Street from Jack's Auto Trim, to a painting contractor business who would store related ladders, hardware and power equipment. There will also be a small administrative office, but no retail sales. The appellant seeks a favorable Special Exception Use review through Section 12.26(c), or in the alternative, through Section 12.27(a) that the proposed use is sufficiently similar in character and impact to a listed permitted use, namely, a Hardware & Paint Shop. The subject property is zoned "NC", Neighborhood Commercial.

All above-referenced properties are located in South Whitehall Township, Lehigh County, PA.
