The vigil at St. John African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church in Bethlehem was sponsored by the local NAACP chapter.

Lee invited the attendees to express their sorrows with prayers expressions, scriptures and songs. Sheets of paper were passed around the packed church, printed with the ment. was changed to "In memory of the 'Charleston Nine.'"

Throughout the vigil, the speakers focused not on feelings of anger at the young man responsible for this tragedy, but rather feelings of hope that it will bring racial problems in the United States to light, prompting necessary solutions.

"This act, which was done in an effort to separate us, divide us and start a race war, has failed. Rather than separate us, it has brought us all closer together with a mission: to find out what happened and find out what's wrong with our country today so we can no longer see acts like this," said Bethlehem

Police Chief Mark DiLuzio.

The Reverend Edward Thompson of the Second Baptist Church of Bethlehem said the first step to fixing the problem DiLuzio spoke of is to acknowledge that learned racism is at its

"When we were kids, it used to be that 'sticks and stones would break our bones but names would never hurt us. Biggest lie. It's called racism," Thompson said. "If we're going to fix a problem, if we're going to heal, then we've got to understand what the problem is. The problem is racism, that it's being taught from childhood on.

The prominent message shared by the speakers and left with those attending was the importance of showing compassion to other humans and trusting in their faith.

According to Bishop Hopeton Clennon of Central Moravian Church in Bethlehem, faith and compassion are always options.

"We have choices," Clennon said. "We can take a path that seeks revenge, that perpetrates hate, that seeks to get even with those who

"If we light a candle here in Bethlehem," he continued, "maybe we can shed light on finding a path that leads to more trust in God and strengthening the love that we have in each other."

The Reverend Clinton Bryant of St. Paul Baptist Church in Bethlehem also participated in the service, along with the Reverend James Jackson Jr., pastor at St. Paul Baptist Church in Bethlehem; Laura Lawrence of the Baha'i faith; the Reverend Lester Wilson, presiding elder of the A.M.E. churches; the Reverend Melvin Tatem, pastor at Grace Deliverance Baptist Church in Bethlehem; the Rev. Daniel W. Brettell, pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church in Fountain Hill; Millie Nelson, Bethlehem NAACP vice president; and Winston Alozie, minister of music at St. John A.M.E. Zion Church.

Unity was one of the reasons many of the people filled the church's pews and additional folding chairs. Presbyterian chaplain Sue Bennetch of St. Luke's in Bethlehem said she attended to show solidarity, especially since she was not able to travel to South Carolina.

"I think that unity and solidarity are very important," said Jake Glessner, another member of the vigil audience. "As a white male, we need to really get a glimpse of what others' experiences are like.'

After the service, Lee said that although she is still mystified by people's reluctance to recognize the race problem, she was pleased with the turnout at the vigil.

Church members (from right) Lori Carter, Wandelyn Enix, Shelley Dewitt, Robin Alozie and Michelle Williams-Lopez sing during the vigil under the direction of Winston Alozie, minister of music at St. John A.M.E. Church in Bethlehem.

"There are people in Bethlehem who have come from surrounding areas who are sympathetic with the cause and the slaughter and massacre in Charles-ton," Lee said. "Their attensympathy as we are and that was impressive. We are going to have to continue to sit in conversation about the things that are happening in our city and the world.

Open Space Coordinator Bryan Cope told council that this property is only about a half-mile away from the environmentally sensitive Hexenkopf Slope and Rock area. That's a 1.6 billion-year-old (pre-Cambrian granitic) formation that houses Hexenkopf Rock and acres of surrounding forest, wetlands and steep slopes. (Review of Google maps clearly places it more than a mile away). The Lehigh Valley Planning Commission has given this area high ratings in its natural resources plan. A landlocked parcel of about 200 acres, immediately behind the Glovas tract, was preserved in 2004.

Williams Township did vote to contribute $48,000 of its own Earned Income Tax money to the deal. But Supervisor Vince Foglia, who voted to preserve after securing hunting rights, is having second thoughts. "It is all a scam," he said of the county's open space program. "The whole thing

Williams Township is contributing nearly $48,000 to this deal, that's less than half of what is being sought from Northampton County. "It would be nice if Williams Township matched the grant," said Ken Kraft, who also questioned how many lots could really be developed there.

"Find out how many lots are developable and we'll preserve those," suggested Kraft.

Lamont McClure then immediately moved to table the matter, and was supported by Kraft, Benol, Phillips, Vaughn and Glenn Geissinger.

This vote is a departure from last year's 5-4 vote to bail out failed golf course developer Alexander Patullo in Lower Saucon Township. He ended up getting $1.775 million from various government sources for a golf course.

Lower Saucon officials voted recently to preserve 76 acres next to that golf course, which is now considered a preserve and will be used for birdwatching, hiking, cross country skiing and fishing. But at the same time, they are working on plans to expand the IESI Bethle-

Pennsylvania's steer clear law requires motorists to move to a lane not immediately adjacent to an emergency response area. Such emergency response areas include locations where police are making traffic stops, where highway or construction workers are involved in emergency assistance or where tow trucks are responding to disabled vehicles.

If drivers cannot move over because of traffic or other conditions, they should slow down to a "reasonable and prudent" speed, according to the law.

The law applies any time an emergency vehicle has its lights flashing and where road crews or emergency personnel have lighted flares or have posted signs or other traffic control devices.

Failure to move over or slow down can result in a summary offense with a fine up to $250. And fines will be doubled for other traffic violations occurring in these areas. If the violation leads to a first responder being injured, a 90-day license suspension could result.

By PETER CAR pcar@tnonline.com

arrun Hilliard got a phone call from his agent and left his Bethlehem living room right before the Detroit Pistons selected him with the 38th pick in the second round of last Thursday's NBA Draft. The Liberty graduate knew his name was going to be broadcast across the country, but wanted to watch the reaction of his family through the window of his home.

Shortly before midnight, you can say that the Hilliard household made a lot of noise and Hilliard took it all in from a distance. It was a surreal night for one of Bethlehem's sons, and one that he will always remember.

"When the first round was going on, my anxiety was through the roof," Hilliard said. "I went for a run up to Fountain Hill just to calm my nerves. Then the second round got started and I got the call from my agent and he told me the Pistons were going to take me. Six local high school soccer players recently competed and won the US Youth Soccer Olympic Development Programs Region 1 Tournament. US Youth Soccer ODP is the original Olympic Development Program and the only elite player development program that can claim members of Major League Soccer, as well as a majority of current and past national and youth team members, as alumni. These boys are local athletes competing at a very high national level. The team was undefeated in the tournament which was held over two separate weekends and beat teams, from NY, Western PA, VA and MA. The six boys are teammates on the Eastern PA State Youth Association ODP team and all play for local club Lehigh Valley United. Each player also plays for various high schools in our area. The six players are from left to right: Jake Stengel, MF, Parkland; Tyler Madeira, MF, Parkland; Tanner Shane, MF, Moravian Academy; Pierre Reedy, F, Kutztown; Colin Muller, MF, Liberty and John Eltringham, goalie; Freedom.

Freemansburg Connie Mack team fighting on

By JEFF MOELLER Special to the Press

Freemansburg Connie Mack manager Keith Buss could envision his current season before it actually did.

With a number of players from last year's squad advancing to the next level, Buss believed his squad would take some time to develop. Having three wins heading into this weeks' play, Buss has kept a realistic perspective of the situation. Last season, Freemansburg finished with a 6-12 mark. Their overall team depth also has wallowed as they have suited anywhere from 14 to 18 play-

"One of the biggest things about Darrun over the years is how his role changed with his team and he was able to really always add what his team needed," Pistons General Manager Jeff Bower told the Detroit Free Press. "Whether it was scoring, or getting the ball to other people or getting a big offensive rebound. He's a versatile guy, but above all else he has an incredile respect for the game both in how he plays it and how he approaches it with his work ethic. Those were some of the things we really liked about him."

Hilliard's journey to the NBA is a typical example of what talent, desire and work ethic can lead to and he hopes people can recognize the simplicity of hard work paying off.

Senator Lisa Boscola (D-Northampton) and Senator Pat Browne (R-Lehigh) voted in favor of House Bill 911 June 25.

House Bill 911 updates the state's 911 system and preserves the City of Bethlehem's and the City of Allentown's stand-alone 911 system with the goal of creating a regional Lehigh Valley 911 Center with Lehigh and Northampton counties. The bill received a unanimous vote and will be sent to the governor for his signature.

Representatives from the cities of Bethlehem and Allentown and counties of Lehigh and Northampton will be commissioning an independent study to evaluate the four 911 centers. The study will explore how the cities and counties can work together as a region.

After a fire back in November forced Steve Behmlander to close the laundromat portion of his Bethlehem Star Car Wash and Laundromat, he has reopened with brand new equipment. With customers finishing up their spring cleaning, he said the new large dryers are proving useful for comforters and other bulky items that are no longer needed for the season. In addition to being larger than the old dryers, the new equipment is low-energy and "green" and, according to Behmlander, "the best equipment in Bethlehem." He chose the location on the corner of Long and Raspberry streets due to the "good, clean, close-knit community" and is offering his customers a dollar off all washes every Wednesday. Above: Steve Behmlander, owner of the Bethlehem Star Car Wash and Laundromat and Broadway Car Wash and Laundromat in Fountain Hill, next to his new washing machines and friend Scott Becker at his Bethlehem location. The two spaces were originally purchased for the car washes, but Behmlander felt the community could use more laundromats.

Let's begin to look inside ourselves to end racism

ifty-one years after pas-sage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, America still suffers from the devastating social cancer of discrimination and racism.

Recently, the news inundated us with images and stories of the Charleston, S.C., church massacre and the announced removal of the Confederate flag from the State House grounds in South Carolina.

On June 17, Dylann Roof walked into the Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Charleston, where he shot and killed nine African American members and injured a 10th person who were peacefully attending a Bible study. The church is one of the country's oldest African American churches - one with a long history of engaging in civil rights.

We recently learned Roof was a high school dropout who was perceived by some as a loner and who began exploring and sharing racists thoughts and views on the world.

After his capture by police in Shelby, N.C., photos on the Internet surfaced showing Roof clad in the Confederate flag and clothing bearing racist mes-

Has this landmark piece of legislation truly stamped out overt and more subtle forms of racially motivated actions by public and private groups and private citizens?

Why does America, after five decades, continue to produce the Roofs of the world?

Racism includes both direct and institutional effects and causes.

The institutional causes of racism will not be cured until some of us first look deep into ourselves and discover and accept that our thoughts, views and actions fuel racial tension and inequality, both parochially and nationally.

Scientists generally agree children are not born with a predilection toward racist thoughts and views. Children, scientists have also shown, do not see the color of the person they come in contact

It is only through familial upbringing, our interactions with our peers and our exposure to the world around us we develop a potentially negative perception of those who do not look and act like us.

I firmly believe if we raise our children to look at the character traits of another person, rather than the person's skin color, our children will grow up to be far more inclusive and accepting of others.

I also believe our country must find ways to stem the countless outlets disseminating racially explosive doctrines, while still balancing core First Amendment rights to freedom of speech and expres-

Will any country or nation on this planet entirely eliminate racism? Absolutely not.

However, as Americans, we can put our best foot forward in beginning to embrace and love those who are not like us.

We can begin to encourage and help those who may be less fortunate and privileged, despite the color of their skin.

Martin Luther King Jr. once said, "Darkness cannot drive out darkness; only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate; only love can do that."

Let us begin the process of curing and ridding ourselves of racism by spreading light rather than darkness and loving rather than hating one another.

We must take action, both within ourselves and through societal and governmental channels, to begin to end racism.

As President Barack Obama so eloquently said at the funeral of the Rev. Clementa Pinckney, church pastor and one of the nine killed that evening in

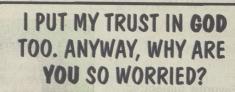

To settle for symbolic gestures without following up with the hard work of more lasting change, that's how we lose our way again. It would be a refutation of the forgiveness expressed by those families if we merely slipped into old habits whereby those who disagree with us are not merely wrong, but bad; where we shout instead of listen; where we barricade ourselves behind preconceived notions or wellpracticed cynicism.'

'Hello,' spectacle

Muhlenberg Summer Music Theatre promises dazzling production to tell compelling story

By MAKENNA MASENHEIMER Special to The Press

The wonderful thing about an iconic show like "Hello, Dolly!" is that it pretty much sells itself. Since opening on Broadway in 1964, Jerry Herman's 10time Tony Award-winning classic has enchanted the eyes, tickled the funny bone and touched the heart.

The difficulty lies in crafting a production that lives up to such a grand reputation. In his 35th annual season, Muhlenberg Summer Music Theatre Director, Charles Richter, armed with a talented cast and crew, is up to the challenge. "Hello, Dolly!" runs July 8 - 26, Baker Theatre, Trexler Pavilion for Theatre and Dance, Muhlenberg College, 2400 Chew St., Allentown.

"I saw the original production many, many years ago and I was dazzled by the spectacle and the music and the dancing. It was a musical that I always thought would take a huge effort to put it on, and I think this year we're ready to do it," Richter says.

"Hello, Dolly!" is set in New York City at the turn of the century and follows the escapades of widowed socialite-turned-matchmaker Dolly Levi as she "arranges things like furniture and daffodils and lives." She sets about to find a wife for Horace Vandergelder, a bad-tempered "half-a-millionaire" hay and feed merchant, but secretly plans to snag him for her-

As the musical unfolds, the brash Dolly weaves a tangled scheme involving Vandergelder, his niece and her beau, his two store clerks, a milliner and her assistant. She humorously simultaneously trying to set up the other couples.

The backdrop to all of the plotting is an extravagant set designed by Campbell Baird, who at one time worked with original scene designer, Oliver Smith. It's a big part of creating the spectacle, Richter says, adding that it "epitomizes Broadway in its Golden Age.

"Grimm!" retelling: The Doppelskope Theatre Company's world premiere children's musical, "Grimm!," continues at Muhlenberg Summer Music Theatre (MSMT), through July 25, Studio Theater, Trexler Pavilion for Theatre and Dance, Muhlenberg College, Allentown. The hour-long show brings puppetry, music and interactivity to classic fairy tales as they've never been told before. Brothers Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm use their Story Machine to capture daydreams and make them into fairy tales. Everything goes awry when the machine breaks, releasing colorful, fuzzy stories into the world. It's up to the audience to help the brothers rescue the stories and keep them from unraveling. Doppelskope, with director Ora Fruchter, who co-wrote the musical with her Doppelskope partner, Christopher Sheer, with music by Toby Singer and lyrics by Fruchter, created last year's MSMT world-premiere children's musical "Gruff!" After the show, children may meet the cast and participate in a 45-minute workshop. The show is recommended for ages four and up. Tickets: muhlenberg.edu, 484-664-3087

Wishing you many golden hours

Experienced photographers watch for "the golden hour" because they know that's the best time REGARDS to take photos.

Often called "the magic newsgirl@comcast.net hour," that's the time right after sunrise or an hour before sunset when light is at its golden best.

The golden hour about an hour before sunset is also one of my favorite times to be on the beach. Maybe it's the slight stillness of the air and the beauty of the light that appeals to me.

Or, maybe it's knowing the end of the golden day is approaching that makes it so special for

When things are about to end it makes us appreciate them all the more. We want to hang on to what's there. I know I never want to leave the beach during that hour.

There are golden hours in life, just as there are golden hours at the beach. They are magical times so perfect that we wish we could paste them in a scrapbook so we can hang onto the moment forev-

Many of my golden hours are just simple, perfect times — times when I know I'm experiencing the best of life.

Last Friday was one of those times.

My friend Jeanne and spent the day together, swimming in my pool then shopping at a new consignment shop.

For dinner we went to an old Florida restaurant on the water. Jeanne was wise to want to skip the air-conditioned dining room in favor of eating watched osprey make playing hide and their way back to their nests while a musician with a great voice entertained softly.

I told Jeanne if we had all the money in the world we couldn't have enjoyed a more beautiful background for our dinner.

That same week I had a golden day with my husband. We went to Sarasota with friends to a special dance right on the waterfront at the Ringling

Museum. The Ringling mansion made a perfect backdrop on one side while Sarasota Bay made another perfect picture in front of us. Add to that the Latin music of an eightpiece orchestra, and it preserve days like that so I can enjoy them forever.

Now that I am older I am much more cognizant of hanging on to those moments, or at least capturing them forever in my mind.

I'm sure I had many, many golden moments when I was younger. But I am equally sure I rushed about from one activity to another activity, not taking as much time as I should have to relish the golden moments that were mine to enjoy.

I just got an email from an East Penn Press read-er who wrote: "Now that I am retired, I have time to appreciate the little things in life that bring smiles. We spend so much of life 'doing' that we miss the meaningful quiet moments.

That's so true.

If you are lucky enough to have children in your life, you have golden moments drop in your life on a daily basis. I knew that was true when my kids were small, and I knew it all the more when grandchildren came

Going to the store is a routine thing. But a memory that will always be precious to me is holding 4-year-old Emmy's hand as we walked to Sam's Club, making up games as we walked. When she said, "You're fun, Nonna," it was like I was given the world's best accolade.

By the time we get grandchildren, we are more aware of the passage of time. We know childhood is all too fleeting, so we hang onto every moment we have with our grandchildren.

When I think of precious moments with them, it is the everyday, simple things that come to mind: Perfectly content, we singing Grayson to sleep, with Cameron, walking through a meadow with Emmy, standing next to Sophie in church during her Confirmation. They are all moments pressed Life today is more hectic than ever and it seems harder than ever to make a living. Each parent has so many demands on his or her time. There are so many "must dos" that weight us down.

Sometimes, in all that busyness, the simple act of just enjoying time with a child gets lost.

I just had the pleasure of spending last weekend with my daughter Andrea and her family. We spent all day Sunday sitting in a gym watching 14-year-old Sophie play in a basketball tournament. I had more fun watching the last intense game than I have in seeing an NBA playoff.

Sophie was great that day, but in my mind, her father was even more impressive. In order to be with her for the two-day tournament, Greg had to put off writing a project that had to be turned in before Monday. When we got home from the tournament, instead father on a bike with a very of heading straight to his It's been decades since I young child for his passen- office to write the business had that experience with ger. he finally had time to complete his own project.

I have to admit that after spending all weekend with my daughter while a project for work had to be finished, I would have done it as soon as I got home.

But Greg has different values. He never wants to tell a child, "I don't have time for you.'

The next morning I told Greg I admire the way he gives his children a most precious gift - the gift of his time.

"I'm at the stage of life when I know it's not important how much money you make or what you accomplish. It's little moments being with family that really matter," he said.

No wonder he's my favorite son-in-law.

He laughs when I say that because he's my only son-in-law. But my admiration is sincere. I admire and applaud every father who knows that the opportunity for "father's day" is every day. But time flies, kids grow up and the opportunity to spend time with family It's the wise father who knows that.

'Inside Out': Emotional rescue

"Inside Out" is an animated look inside a preteen girl's brain, with individuals or creatures depicting five emotions: REVIEW
Joy (voiced by Amy Poehler), Sadness (Phyllis Smith), Fear (Bill Hader), Anger (Lewis Black) and Disgust (Mindy Kaling).

The 11-year-old girl, Riley (Kaitlyn Dias), is going through a difficult time much to the consternation of her parents (Diane Lane and Kyle MacLachlan) after the family moves from Minnesota to San Francisco.

"Personality islands," the "control console," "core memories" and the "train of memory" are shown and explained.

Pete Docter (director, "Up," 2009; "Monsters, Inc.," 2001; original stories, "Toy Story" series, "Wall-E," 2008; "Up," 'Monsters, Inc.") wrote the story and screenplay and directed "Inside Out" with co-director Ronaldo Del Carmen.

Actors doing character voices include Richard Kind, Paula Poundstone, Bobby Moynihan, Flea, John Ratzenberger, Frank Oz, Rashida Jones and Laraine Newman.

While the voice talent is plentiful, it doesn't translate into memorable characters as in most contemporary animated films because the actors' voices and personalities don't inform the animation (as did, for example, Eddie Murphy as the Donkey in "Shrek," 2001, and Mike Myers as Shrek). The dialogue, observations and plotline of "Inside Out" aren't particularly insightful, interesting or humorous. While

DevonHouse Senior Living hosts flower show

Handicapped Accessible

PRESS PHOTOS BY JIM MARSH

The Emmaus Garden Club presents its spring flower show recently, at Devon-House Senior Living, 1930 Bevin Drive, Salisbury Township, with the theme "Weddings in Bloom." ABOVE: Polly Kummery, 95, center, a six-month resident at DevonHouse Senior Living, Salisbury Township, visits an exhibit at the Emmaus Garden Club spring flower show held at the assisted living facility. Rosemarie Ebersole, left, of Salisbury Township, serves as chair of the event and Lori Hamm, of South Whitehall Township, serves as president of the garden club. Kummery is a former Emmaus Garden Club member.

Of special interest is the exhibit of several wedding dresses showing design variations for brides through the decades. Some of the wedding dresses on exhibit belonged to residents or widowers who reside at DevonHouse. One of the wedding dresses was first worn in a 1950 wedding in Mt. Joy, then again by the bride's granddaughter at a home wedding in Breinigsville in 2011. RIGHT: John Buricsh, formerly of Allentown and a current resident at DevonHouse Senior Living, poses with the wedding dress of his late wife, Mary Buricsh, during the Emmaus Garden Club flower show. Buricsh and his wife were married in 1953 at Sacred Heart Church in Allentown. Buricsh served with the U.S. Army Third Infantry in World War II and fought in the Battle of the Bulge in Europe in December 1944.
