John F. Kennedy, captured in an electronic encyclopedia, presents his famous inaugural speech at the touch of a key. An on-line network links every student, every teacher, every administrator in the school district. Hand-held computers replace class lists and grade books, automatically calculating student progress.

It's not the future of the Bethlehem Area School District. Instead, it is a technological reality some students will begin to experience this year, as schools begin to make use of $8.5 million in bond money set aside by the board of directors last May.

Back in the classrooms this fall, some changes will be visible. Liberty High School, for example, will welcome students back to two brand new and two upgraded computer labs. Lincoln and Marvine elementary schools will have one computer per classroom instead of one computer per grade.

But the district's computer revolution, which touches kindergartners to high school seniors in 24 schools, is also a revolution of ideas. Though computers have been used in the district for years, the $8.5 million initiative brings with it changes in curriculum and teaching methods in a move to fully integrate the technology into the classroom.

The tyranny of vacations

E.B. White lamented once that his time off was preceded and followed by a frenzy of work.

He enjoyed, then, not a real vacation but only "the sensation of one," he said.

In the '90s we don't have to be brilliant essayists to feel we are unable to tear ourselves completely away from our work and go on a real holiday.

As my vacation was approaching, I carried a rebellious idea that I would simply put down my pencil, pick up my jacket and walk out the door.

In this space would be a note: Scharf is on vacation. He just up and left. Sorry.

But in the end, when it came time to march, I wimped out.

When asked about my column, I answered that I would send in some vacation musings.

Well, here's the first one, borne of irritation as I sit on vacation staring at the shackle that is connected to my desk and is now gently tugging at my ankle: The next vacation you take, make it a real vacation, not just a sensation of one.

Walk into your boss's office and announce that the definition of a vacation is not fitting the work of two weeks into one, freeing the other week for recuperation.

No, a vacation is a vacation; it's meant for recreating our spirits and it shouldn't be tainted by work, even the dubious sort that I get paid to perform.

The public toilets on the New York Thruway flush automatically. You sit, do your business, arise and whoosh, a sensor of some sort is magically triggered.

At the sink, the mere act of placing your hands beneath the spigot activates the flow of water.

I mention this here because, frankly, it made a rather profound impact on the Scharf family as we made our way to the Green Mountains of Vermont.

The technology impressed the adults somewhat more than the kids.

"Hey, did you check out those toilets? They flushed automatically!"

My 10-year-old daughter spent the next few hours quietly writing a screenplay titled "The Beverly Hillbillies Visit Vermont."

There are few things more welcome in this life than the voice of a waitress, soothing your traffic-frazzled nerves with the motherly phrase, "What can I get you, honey?"

But, nothing to me sounds more rude, patronizing, even demeaning, than a customer's "Hey, get me some ketchup there, will ya, honey?"

Both phrases are heard in equal measures on this trip.

Travel this great country and you'll see signs of what make this country so great.

After a 10-minute delay, the source of an interstate bottleneck is discovered on a specially trussed flat-bed trailer.

It's an enormous yacht. As we make our way around it, I notice the back of it looks like the back of a house — elegant French doors opening up to an expansive patio.

The ship's name says a lot about the American psyche. Painted across the stern is Finally Satisfied, II.

TEMPLETON GROWTH FUND

Think Big.

Templeton Growth Fund seeks capital growth by investing in stocks and debt obligations of companies and governments of any nation.

(215) 366-0361

The 1-, 5- and 10-year average annual total returns were 10.9%, 11.6% and 15.1%, respectively. Returns for the period ended 6/30/94 include the maximum 5.75% initial sales charge and assume reinvestment of dividends and capital gains at net asset value. Prior to July 1, 1992, fund shares were offered at a higher sales charge. Thus, actual total return would have been somewhat less than noted above. Past performance cannot guarantee future results.

Fund share prices and returns will fluctuate with market conditions, currencies, and the economic and political climates where investments are made. Thus, an investor's shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost.

Technology, good and bad

Computers are not televisions, but their promises can be just as seductive — and hollow.

To read today's headlines offering visions of shimmering new worlds built on nothing more than silicon and electrons, you'd think CD-ROMs will be to modern humanity what O.J. Simpson is to "A Current Affair."

There is much good on the electronic information frontier — direct and immediate access to unfiltered information; new and challenging forums of ideas and opinion; communities, of a kind, rekindled across phone lines and video terminals.

There's much bad, too.

The chaos of unfiltered information already threatens the very integrity of the largest structure on this new frontier — the Internet. Most of these new forums are filled with ideas from the simply trite to the downright sordid. And how healthy are "communities" comprised largely of faceless, nameless citizens commenting publicly, and often viciously, from the safety of private desktops?

It is too easy to invest great faith in the pledges of promising technology.

The quick seduction comes from a long-abiding sense of loss, of things once good now gone bad. Like neighborhoods that once were the functioning expressions of the concept of community. Like schools that were once capable and empowered to teach students who were eager to learn. Like the denizens of government who once did the bidding of constituents — who once voted — or were relieved of that privilege.

Not all of these things are gone altogether. But there are enough pieces torn out to make many of us shiver at what little protection these institutions now offer. And yearn for their return.

Now, many in the media, in our schools, in our governments say they see those missing pieces, and perhaps some we never imagined we had lost, returning on an ever-swelling tide of bits and bytes. It is so promising, they believe, they have committed billions, and will commit many billions more, to catch this new wave.

The Bethlehem Area School District is now embarking on a multimillion plan to bring the highest of high technology into classrooms here.

In Janet Worsley's story this week on the district's embrace of this new technology she quotes two school officials who embody the debate — and the danger — tugging at our faith in the coming information age.

• "At the end of the class, you take the information and dump it into a computer, and it tells you who has mastered what goals."

• "In the rush to get the technology to the kids, it's important not to leave out the people..."

Depending on which of these two poles we stand nearest to in the coming years, some of the lost fragments of our tattered institutions may well be within our reach through the help of this powerful new tool, or forever lost amid the detritus of yet another promising, but misapplied technology.

No, computers are not TVs.

Not yet.

Festival's tunnel of love

Dear Sir:

I hope it is not too late to share with you my recommendation as to where to find romance at Musikfest. I was too busy volunteering to send you a note sooner.

I have been a volunteer since 1985. In 1989, I was selling sodas at Americaplatz and I met a woman selling tickets at the adjoining stand and wanted to ask her if she wanted to tour the festival after our afternoon shift. Since she and I are both Italian, I suggested we go buy a cannoli; she accepted, and we spent the rest of the evening platzing.

After a while it started to rain, so we ducked into the tunnel next to Foy Auditorium, which connects the backyard of the Brethren House with Main Street. One of the day's strolling musicians, a group called "Daybreak," which plays traditional Irish and English folk music on hammer dulcimer, guitar and other instruments, also retreated to this location, renamed it "Tunnelplatz" and began to play. We stayed for an hour or so, and we both realized that this had become one of the most romantic locations imaginable, with the echoing music blending with the sound of the rain. We made arrangements to continue seeing each other.

One year later, to the day, we were scheduled to work together at Musikfest, again at Americaplatz. Before our shift, we decided to spend a moment in the tunnel. I proposed and she accepted. We later spent our break together; while we were walking it began to rain, so once again we ducked into the tunnel. Unbelievably, the group "Daybreak" was scheduled for that time and had set up in the tunnel once again. When we told them our story, they dedicated a song to us. They also played at our wedding.

Therefore, my suggestion for where to find romance at Musikfest — Tunnelplatz.

Musikfest is too much

Dear Sir:

As the dust settles over Musikfest, I feel I must share some thoughts.

We in Bethlehem have a wonderful musical heritage, and I believe in the first few years that's what Musikfest celebrated. With numerous articles and letters in the Valley newspapers over the past couple of weeks, I'm afraid it should be renamed Musik-carnival. Downtown residents STILL complain about parking for themselves, trash and human waste in their yards; three women were assaulted; two food stands were shut down; and now someone is suing the police. I make no judgment about the last two because I don't know who is right and who is wrong. I just know that our lovely city DOES NOT need this kind of publicity!

I suggest that the fest planners should review the situation in depth. The almighty dollar should not be reigning as king.

Respectfully,
Ellamae Youst

Sister City thanks

Dear Mr. Scharf:

On behalf of the Bethlehem-Tondabayashi Sister City Commission, thank you and your staff for your excellent coverage of the visit of the five students from Tondabayashi, Japan. Janet Worsley was most helpful.

We know many people saw the articles and were very pleased at the attendance at the Tea Ceremony. And all coverage of this important cultural exchange program is helpful in our work to inform Bethlehem residents of the opportunity to learn more about Japan, its people, and its unusual customs.

Thank you for helping the Commission accomplish its goals.

Sincerely,
Joan Lardner Paul

Legacy

Histories and legends

in days gone by

BY CHARLES G. HAFNER

Many lessons learned in only one room

The one-and-a-half story, one-room schoolhouses where rural children for generations received their basic elementary educations, are now extinct. They have been converted into private homes, and a few are now museums.

One of the last operational one-room schools was the Lower Saucon Township school on top of the Wyandotte Street hill at the present Puggy Lane turnoff to Mountain Drive. The building was leveled when South Mountain Drive was built for Research Center traffic. But the memories of those of us who attended that school include vivid recollections that remain despite the numerous intervening years. Officially it was named Lehigh Mountain School.

The beginning of school then, as now, brought mixed emotions. It meant an end to the carefree caprices of summer; a return to the regimen of school with new vistas and challenges of new courses (something to be approached with some anxiety and trepidation); a return to the welcome company of some classmates rarely seen all summer; and perhaps a new teacher.

Immediately inside the school

Charles G. Hafner is a retired social studies teacher who lives in Bethlehem front door was a vestibule or coat room. On hooks along walls we hung our coats. A door directly in line with the front door opened into the schoolroom. Inside rows of desks paralleled the sides of the building. In the center of the room a table top sandbox divided the room. The teacher's desk was front and center, directly in line with the door and sandbox and in front of the blackboard. Pictures of Presidents Washington and Lincoln hung symmetrically over the blackboard, and an American flag, used for the morning pledge of allegiance, was in the front of the room.

The desks, now antiques, each had an open shelf under the desktop. Both shelf and desktop were secured to the back of a solid wood seat in front, forming, when in line, a series of seats and desks. The shelf held books, tablets, etc., and a student's lunch. The top had a groove for a pencil and, in the upper right, a hole for an inkwell. The opportunity for mischief and inclination to disaster led to the removal of the inkwells leaving the bare hole. A few new desks, each with a separate chair and lift-top desk attached by olive-colored tubing, were added. They went to the fourth-graders, privileges of seniority.

Lavatories were matching wooden outhouses of a standard design with a privacy shield protecting the front door of each one. They were located at the rear of the school play area.

A high green metal shield provided a protective barrier around the classroom stove. The coal bin was in the basement.

The school was clean and fresh, one of the distinct advantages of a mountaintop location. School had a distinctive and familiar smell of chalk, ink, books, paper paste and crayons.

We carried our lunches, but could, with permission, go over to Hugh Cannon's Texaco Station. There we could each get a half pint of milk and a graham cracker subsidized by a government relief program.

To regard the teachers who taught in those one-room schools as heroes would not be gross exaggeration. With limited resources and under often adverse circumstances, they rendered a highly important service of great value. They had sole responsibility for 40-plus students, four grades with usually separate preparations. Each teacher was principal, counselor, nurse, and custodian as well as teacher. They taught everything from basic courses to art, music and penmanship; put on plays and programs on holidays; and directed playground games.

The teachers I was fortunate to have were among the best, including college and graduate school, the latter more learned and profound, but the former exceedingly talented, skilled and diligent.

Mrs. Nicholson, Mrs. Heater, Miss Weber and Miss Edith Levine were outstanding professionals. In a community where education was valued but resources and cultural exposure necessarily limited, they were bright lights, guides, albeit inspirations, opening our best way to a better, richer world.

Miss Weber, now Mrs. John Schaeffer, was a diminutive young lady recently out of college. Then, as now, she was a pert, cheerful person, and a skilled and diligent teacher. Although she taught us only briefly, she is one to be remembered with much appreciation and fond respect.

Miss Edith Levine deserves a special place on our pedestal of unsung heroes. A bright young lady in every good sense of the term, she was alert, intelligent, attractive, and talented. She was our teacher for several years and conscientiously worked at it. You sensed you only hurt yourself when you disappointed her.

There are good memories of days in her classroom. One example is the spring each student planted a seed in soil placed in half of an eggshell. The shells were put in egg cartons and left on a window sill at school. Each student watched his or her seed germinate and grow, then took it home to plant. We experienced the pride of accomplishment and the elation of being part of the wonder of creation of new life.

School was an important part of the celebration of holidays with appropriate art work and cutout figures of pumpkins, witches, pilgrims, turkeys, Santa Claus, Christmas trees, etc. — the best of them decorating windows and the classroom. There were also party times before major holidays, and on Valentine's Day there was the all-important Valentine deposit box.

Spankings were extremely rare but not unknown, nor illegal. They were more likely to be inflicted by parent than teacher. Being a serious school nuisance was usually to discredit oneself, could result in ostracism and adversely reflected on one's family, something acutely felt and earnestly avoided. We had our share of mischief and were graded for "deportment." My report cards had an undue number of checks for "whispers too much."

Those school years were a wonderful time of learning, something of vital and lasting value. To our parents and our teachers, those gallant and gifted ladies who prescribed and directed our education, we now most highly commend you and thank you.

The week's news in review

Aug. 31-Sept. 6

AROUND THE CITY

Marktplatz ends early

The Bethlehem Tourism Authority ended Marktplatz seven weeks earlier than planned. Aimed at bringing more Saturday shoppers to the Downtown, Marktplatz began in May and was supposed to have run into October.

Authority Chairman Eric Ruth said that while the food vendors along the Broad Street Plaza Mall did attract people, "there was just not enough volume to support the vendors."

Marktplatz started with about 15 vendors and ended with about 12. The goal next year will be to attract about 30 vendors in addition to corporate sponsors, Mr. Ruth said. He said a wider variety of foods and entertainment will be added as well.

Crackdown on cracks

City Council's public works committee unanimously recommended the Public Works Department be allowed to fix the sidewalks of property owners who fail to make repairs and send them the bill.

Interest-free loans could be available to property owners who can't afford the work. Others will have liens placed on their property.

Firefighters test

The Bethlehem Fire Civil Service Board approved a plan to make prospective firefighters go through an endurance test before they join the force and face ongoing tests thereafter.

The fitness test would be given to applicants after Jan. 1. Firefighters hired after Jan. 1 would also have to pass the test twice a year to keep their jobs. The firefighters union may oppose the testing, which faces city council consideration.

St. Luke's addition

The state Department of Health is reviewing plans by St. Luke's Hospital to put up a one-story building for outpatient services near the Route 512 entrance to Lehigh Valley Industrial Park IV.

The $3 million project would house services now performed at leased facilities. The 35,000-square-foot building would be paid for with hospital expansion funds, according to administrators.

Assault sentencing

Northampton County President Judge Robert A. Freedberg sentenced Gary Paul Mayers, 20, of the 1100 block of Minsi Trail

Street, to one to two years in Northampton County Prison for a Nov. 5 assault.

The attack by Mr. Mayers and Jared Henninger on Larry Geiger, of the 300 block of East Locust Street, required the placement of pins, plates and mesh in Mr. Geiger's face. Mr. Geiger had asked a group of young men to curb their language when he was attacked, according to police.

Bicycle Corp. filing

Bicycle Corp. on Brodhead Road filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, claiming assets of $6.3 million and liabilities of $10 million.

The plant manufactures about 60,000 bikes per year with models ranging from 10-speeds to mountain bikes.

The company's owners are suing its chief lender, Meridian Bancorp., alleging they were duped into purchasing the ailing company in 1991.

Garage work ending

After nearly a year, restoration work at the Walnut Street Parking Garage is coming to an end.

The original $1 million project - to replace deteriorated concrete and remove rust from support beams - was completed in August. An additional $5,990 project to apply sealant to the asphalt decks is under way and will end when parking lines are repainted.

Love and money trial

A three-week trial involving two Lehigh University students, love lost, and accusations of extortion ended in acquittal.

Hsiu-Chih Hsieh of Bethlehem was accused of blackmailing her former boyfriend, Osamu Akutsu, in the Lehigh County Court trial. Ms. Hsieh is from Taiwan and Mr.

Akutsu is from Japan. He claimed the woman demanded $52,000 to keep their affair a secret from his parents, who had arranged a marriage.

Ms. Hsieh claimed the payment was made to keep her from suing Mr. Akutsu for physical abuse.

IN THE SCHOOLS

NCC ups class size

The Northampton Community College Board of Trustees decided last week to increase lecture class sizes from 35 to 38 students, and lab classes from 24 to 26 students.

The change was made in order to avoid overload fees, the money paid to teachers when classes are larger than the allowable size.

In most cases, said spokesperson Fran Szutar, class size will not increase, but the college will no longer have to pay the teachers extra for two or three students.

The American Federation of Teachers Local 3579 is contesting the change.

Hillel House renamed

Lehigh University's Hillel House has been renamed the Jewish Student Center as the result of a recent vote by the Jewish Student Advisory Council.

The center was created to enrich Jewish life on campus socially, culturally and religiously. The center will continue to support the Hillel Society, a student organization which holds events such as Shabbat dinners and Hanukkah parties.

Star Beauty defaults

The Star Beauty Academy of Bethlehem came in third in the state in the percentage of students who did not repay their student loans in 1992, with a default rate of 52.2 percent, according to the U.S. Department of Education figures.

Jim Mannon of Star Technical Institute Inc. in New Jersey, which owns the school, said his company was not managing the school until 1992, and the figures could be attributed to the previous administration. He said 12 or 13 students were to begin repaying loans, and the total amount defaulted on was $24,000.

Moravian College, Lehigh University and Northampton Community College all came in under 10 percent.

Nature

The
of Bethlehem

wildflowers

By ARLENE KOCH

Fall brings wild roadside bloom

I was driving into town early one morning this week, my mind filled with thoughts of things that had to get done, when I lost my train of thought as I noticed a particularly striking stand of wildflowers. In that "never-touched-by-human-hands" strip of land that exists along the edges of most roads grow some of the prettiest flowers around.

Arlene Koch is president of the Lehigh Valley Audubon Society.

A lot of these little horticultural oases are at their best in the early morning hours because one of the most dominant species in them is the evening primrose. This plant, which grows to be more than five feet tall, has beautiful yellow, 2-inch-long, trumpet-shaped flowers on a tall vertical spike. But what makes these flowers most interesting is that they don't open up until after the sun goes down at night and then they usually stay open until late the next morning.

What's even neater about these lemon-scented blossoms is that, with a little patience, you can actually watch them unfurl. At just the right second in time the closed petals will begin to separate slightly and then suddenly open wide to expose the full flower. This doesn't take long, only a mere matter of seconds, but it's like watching slow motion photography up close.

A few years back some friends were visiting and I made them go into my wildflower garden to watch this spectacle. The guy, not necessarily known for his patience, was very skeptical and got really rammy after five minutes of waiting for the light to get down to where it triggered the flowers' opening. His wife, though, insisted that he stay to watch in the rather buggy garden and, when finally one of the flowerheads began to open, he looked astonished. They have since planted some evening primroses in their own back yard.

For the flower purists out there, the evening primrose is a member of the "Onagraceae" family and is not related at all to the true primroses. The plant got its name from some long since dead European botanist because it reminded him of the scent of primroses back home.

Five-foot-high jewelweed plants are also now blooming in other more shaded and wetter roadside areas. Often called the "touch-me-not" plant, its spotted variety has golden orange flowers and the pale species' flowers are yellow. It's not uncommon to see a patch of one color blooming right next to the other one.

If you're into watching birds, particularly hummingbirds, you could almost certainly find one or two feeding on the jewelweed flowers. It's a documented fact that they are specially adapted for pollination by hummers and that these tiny birds migrate south following blooming stands of jewelweed.

The stems of the touch-me-not plant have medicinal value. They are soft and translucent and contain a juice which relieves itching from such things as poison ivy and athlete's foot. Many has been the time I've been out walking and used this liquid on unprotected skin that's brushed up against something irritating. Once the plant was really helpful in alleviating the pain of a bee sting that I couldn't treat properly until I got back home.

The most intriguing part of this plant, however, are the seed pods from which it gets its name. When the capsule is ripe, its elastic sides burst open, launching the seeds into the air. This capsule is really sensitive and responds immediately to the touch, making it a great tool to use in entertaining and at the same time teaching young children about nature. I might add that it's also fun just to do this for no reason at all.

The jewelweed blossoms represent a passage in time for me. When I'm driving down a road somewhere and it's bordered in shades of yellows and oranges from these plants, I know that autumn is not too far away. September has arrived, hawks are beginning to move in earnest on the ridges, and it won't be long before oranges and yellows will be on all the trees.

Coming events

At 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 24, Cindy Ross will present an outdoor program in the amphitheater at Hawk Mountain Sanctuary called "The Colorado Trail: with Llamas and Children." Cindy will talk about the 470-mile trek she, her husband, and her two young children took in the wilderness of the Rocky Mountains. No reservations are required for this program and there is no fee. The sanctuary can be reached at 756-6961.

The Lehigh Valley Audubon Society will lead a birding trip to Bake Oven Knob at 9 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 18. This is the peak time for broad-winged hawks, with ospreys and kestrels also being plentiful. A bald eagle sighting is very possible. Meet at the K mart shopping center parking lot on Tilghman Street, just west of Route 309. Contact Pauline Morris at 435-9134 for more information.

Bird watch

A Rufous Hummingbird, an extremely rare species east of the Rockies, paid a week long visit to a feeder in Bucks County recently. Although 99 percent of the hummingbirds seen in the Lehigh Valley, as well as the East Coast, are ruby-throats, once in a while a rare stray will venture through our area and actually be seen by someone who recognizes it as something unusual. Dozens of lucky birders were able to view this western rarity but its presence was not put on any birding hotlines because that most assuredly would have attracted hundreds of visitors to the private home.

Robert C. Lovinggood

By CHRISTOPHER JUDD

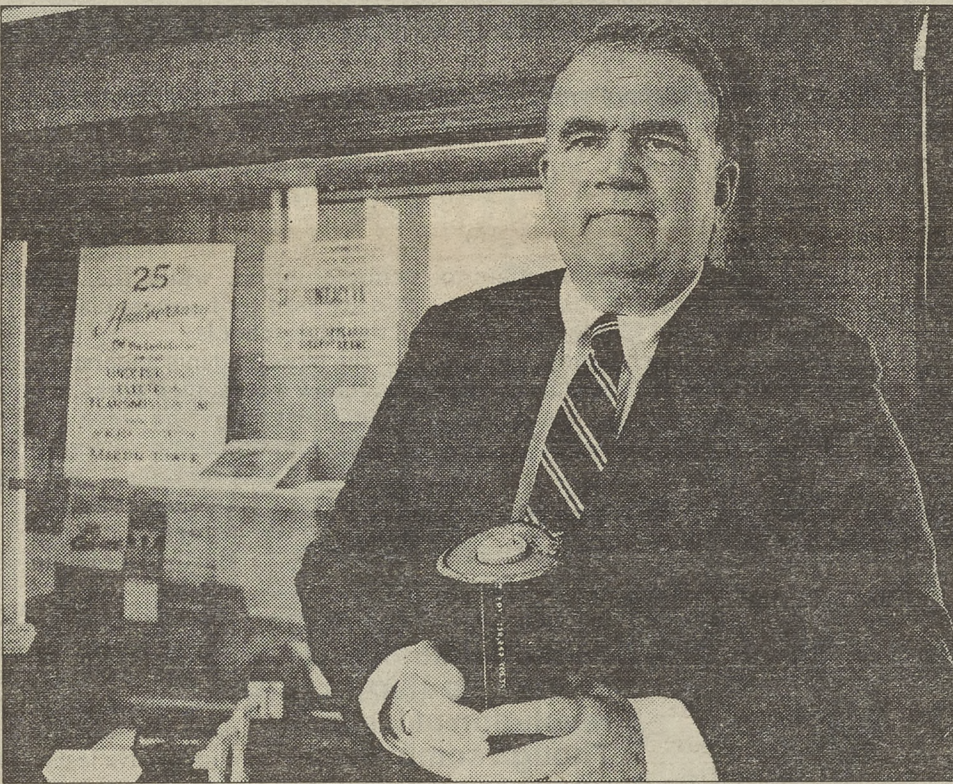

Robert C. Lovinggood, 58, is a substitute teacher who 25 years ago convinced the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. to put underground two miles of transmission lines that would run from a substation behind First Presbyterian Church to the then-proposed Martin Towers building. Mementos from the 1969 campaign can be seen in a display at City Hall this month.

Why?
Safety and beautification of went to Europe and saw lines underground there. My father also had interest in power lines in Johnstown. He advocated underground lines.

What was the moment in which you realized you had convinced PP&L to undertake this million-dollar project?

One day, I called Scott Kress, who did P.P.&L's underground work, and he slammed the receiver down on me. I called Scott back and said, "I've won, haven't I?" And he said, "Yes. Every foot is underground."

Monocacy Park. Above-ground towers would have divided the park in half. Monocacy Park is larger than Central Park in New York. There would have been huge, green towers with upswept arms in addition to 30-foot clearing on either side.

How did you pull it off?

I wrote letters to the editor. Bumper stickers — "Save Monocacy Valley, Demand Underground Power." Newspaper advertising. I talked to P.P.&L. I just talked it up.

What made you such an expert on underground utility lines?

It goes back to 1957, when I

Bob, we like the park too, but we don't to pay more for electricity?"

Umm, there was some of that. It was minimal. One person said, "Bob, every time I see my rate go up I think of you." But, bear in mind, later the PUC would require all developments with five or more lots to have underground lines, and the utility has to pay for it. I helped push that, so that got me some sympathy. A lot of these people moved into those developments. Before the change, PP&L would charge $300 per lot for underground lines.

The cables look heavy to hold. Are they?

They are.

Once the initial towers went up, can we assume other utility poles would have been added?

Yes. That's a good point because the towers would have created a "corridor of power." There would have been additional poles for low-voltage usage.

So, you're grandfather was an honorable?

He was the mayor of Johnstown, Pa. He ran for governor in 1915.

What's the origin of the name "Lovinggood?"

It is English, Scottish and Irish. Some German.

Besides taking on utility giants, you also helped move a bridge, right?

I helped move the old Township Line Road Bridge to Sand Island a few years ago. It made "Invention and Technology" magazine in a story on saving cast iron bridges.

You're not one of those chronic, attention-seeking activists are you?

That's right. The issue was safety and beautification. I've lived on Center Street 54 years this Labor Day. My parents built the house in 1940.

And you really do like Martin Towers, don't you?

Absolutely. Look back over the 25 years. It has brought Fortune 500 companies that wouldn't have otherwise come here — Union-Pacific, Dunn & Bradstreet. I've heard from many people who worked at Bethlehem Steel that, if not for Martin Towers, the company would have moved its headquarters to Burns Harbor or Sparrows Point.

Do you drive around now and see places where underground lines should have been used?

Very much so. A good example is the Lehigh Valley Hospital Center in Allentown. They have all those lines and so many red lights on them it looks like a Christmas tree.

BASD's on-line revolution

From the cover

Nitschmann Middle School, along with Asa Packer Elementary and Freedom High, is a pilot school where technology is already making a difference.

Soon the three schools will be linked by fiber optic cable in the beginnings of a districtwide computer network. Thomas Kartsotis, principal of Nitschmann, said the system should be on-line in the next few months.

Within the schools, the network can be used to post daily bulletins, keep track of attendance, cafeteria counts and bus schedules. At Nitschmann, Mr. Kartsotis said, each student will get a folder on the network in which to save assignments and projects, creating a comprehensive electronic portfolio.

Kids will be able to send messages to teachers and to each other on the system — and even use the library card catalogs and computerized encyclopedias without leaving the classroom.

The network will also serve as the district's on-ramp to the information superhighway, allowing students access to information from sources around the world.

Learning profile system

Nitschmann and Asa Packer are also breaking ground with another pilot program, the learning profile system.

With the system, teachers can program class lists and objectives, such as comprehension or vocabulary, into the hand-held Apple Newton computer. As students discuss issues or answer questions, the teacher can keep an accurate, up-to-date tally of which students show what skills.

"At the end of the class, you take the information and dump it into a computer, and it tells you who has mastered what goals," said Mr. Kartsotis.

The system can be used to evaluate students in gym and home economics classes, as well as the academics. So far, four teachers at Nitschmann have been trained to use two Newton computers, and more are learning.

Liberty High School's new computer lab, part of the school district $8.5 million technology initiative.

The technology initiative is also putting powerful tools, such as CD-ROMs, into the hands of teachers and students.

"CD-ROMs allow teachers to work on projects time inhibits right now," said Jill Moran, a math teacher at Nitschmann, "You can cross reference information so quickly, and there's a vast amount of information available."

itself to a Macintosh or an IBM platform. The Macintosh, with its colorful graphics and easy-to-use mouse, is ideal for elementary schoolchildren, while the IBM PCs are used for business classes in the high schools.

"The more students understand about how a computer works, the easier it is to move between different computers and different programs," said David Shelley, principal of Northeast Middle School.

In addition to freeing more time for the teachers, computers also pave the way for cooperative learning as students work together to solve problems.

"It does change (the teachers') role, because we are no longer the only knowledge source," said Ms. Moran.

Teachers, too, are learning from the students, as

For example, Ms. Moran said, a student researching Beethoven on the computer would not only read a biography of the composer, but hear excerpts of famous works. An entry on the Apollo moon landing includes video footage of the event, in addition to the background information.

The district has not committed well as each other. Ms. Moran, who has a masters from Lehigh University in educational technology, has set aside one period of her school day to act as a problem-solver for the rest of the teachers.

Computers may also bring greater motivation into the classroom.

"Kids and computers, they're like little magnets," said Scott Garrigan, a district computer specialist, "They seem to attract each other."

Mr. Shelley, at Northeast, has seen the attraction as well. "Even the toughest, roughest kids will sit at the computer all period, on task, doing something," he said.

Curricula change

Course offerings are also changing. In the middle schools, one quarter of Introduction to Computers is now part of the sixth grade language cycle, along with French, Spanish and German.

At Liberty High School, typing will be taught for the first time on computers — the old Apple IIe models which used to be used for Introduction to Computers.

Now business students will tackle basic computing on 30 new Macintosh Power PCs, learn databases on 30 new IBM clones, and receive mini-lectures via laser disc, said one teacher in the department.

Three new courses, Desktop Publishing, Introduction to HyperCard (a tool which allows students to manage information and graphics) and Microsoft Word (word processing), are being offered this fall for the first time at Liberty.

Mr. Burkhardt, principal of Liberty, said the new labs were a logical next step in the development of education. "It would be very short-sighted if we didn't give kids this capability," he said.

He said he expects $1.5 million of the technology bond will be spent at Liberty in the next three years.

A master plan, which outlines goals for the district, was developed by the district's technology committee, overseen by Anthony Villani, director of secondary education.

According to the guidelines, a primary student should be able to understand how to save and retrieve data on the computer, load software and print text.

Children are also taught to use a simple word processor, create art on a draw-and-paint program, and conduct a simulated science experiment.

Middle school students will be able to use a scanner, CD-ROM technology and create reports with desktop publishing. By high school, students will be using the Internet, creating multimedia reports and writing programs.

Born out of necessity

The $8.5 million must be spent within three years. Because personnel costs and other factors are not included in the bond, Superintendent Thomas Doluisio said a total of about $10 million would be spent within that time frame.

Mr. Doluisio, who appointed the committee, said the plan was born out of necessity.

"Technology is here and it's not going away," he said, "It's an obvious new addition to our daily lives. We need to have our students competitive."

Each individual school is responsible for planning the use of technology within its own walls. Most schools are taking it slow, as teachers and administrators learn more about computers, software and new teaching methods.

Rebecca Bartholomew, principal at Lincoln Elementary School, said he staff plans to spend the year deciding what software to purchase. "This is more of a study year for teachers, rather than to change everything," she said.

The school district hosted more than 30 workshops last spring, followed by 10 this summer. Due to popular demand, four more were added to the schedule.

"It's been very, very successful," said Mr. Kartsotis about the workshops. "Even the most reluctant person, once they get a basic orientation, they get addicted to it."

The workshops offer a basic introduction to computers as well as training in specific software packages to parents and administrators. "In the rush to get the technology to the kids, it's important not to leave out the people who make the decisions," said Mr. Garrigan.

Mr. Garrigan called this school year a "period of digestion." "The payoff will come in the coming year and beyond," he said, after teachers are trained to use the equipment fully.

The computers are purchased through the Pennsylvania Educational Plan for the Purchase of Microcomputers, a project that collects bids from dealers throughout the state in an effort to get the lowest prices on quality equipment.

At the moment spending is slow as most schools are working to adapt to the new technology, train teachers and plan for the future.

According to Angelo Speziale, coordinator of the technology program, $1.6 million — or about 19 percent of the bond — has been spent to date on close to 600 computers and equipment such as

"Technology is here and it's not going away. ... We need to have our students competitive."

Thomas Doluisio

printers, desks and chairs.

He expects, with personnel and other costs, the district will have spent $10 million by the end of three years.

Mr. Speziale, dreaming of the future, said he'd like computers to become as necessary to schoolchildren as notebooks are today. "I'd like to see a kid have a portable computer to take home at the end of the day," he said.

Becahi's QB takes after dad

BY TOM HARPER

Some years ago, a quarterback named Dan played with the Los Angeles Rams for three years in the NFL, after an impressive career at the University of West Virginia. He would later play in the Canadian Football League as a member of the Saskatchewan Rough Riders before eventually hanging up his cleats.

His son was too young to remember his father ever taking a single snap from center, although his mother tells him, yes, he was often in the stands cheering his father like any admiring son would.

In future years the son would learn the level of his father's talents by watching old game footage, but not just to watch in awe. He studied the techniques his father used to throw a crisp spiral, learning the fundamentals necessary to being an effective quarterback. From that young age, he aspired to follow in his dad's footsteps and become a quarterback in the NFL.

The son's name was Dan Kendra III.

The once-awestruck son has now become one of the premier prep quarterbacks in the nation.

His sound fundamental play, strong arm and deft running ability have earned him recognition among the top sports publications in the world. The Sporting News, USA Today and Street & Smith, to name a few, have listed the budding star as one of the best quarterbacks in the country.

Team to beat

Dan and his Bethlehem Catholic teammates opened the 1994 football season last Friday night with an overpowering 52-13 win over Monsignor Bonner. He ran for two touchdowns, including a nifty 45-yarder off an option play, and threw for two more, including an 86-yard hookup to receiver Jim Brady.

Dan Kendra

one of the teams to beat, not only in the East Penn Conference, but potentially in the PIAA state playoffs.

Yet the hype and fanfare surrounding both Dan and his squad haven't seemed to leave any imprint on the young signal caller's psyche.

"I don't even know half of the publications I'm in," he said. "(The recognition) hasn't hit me yet. I've seen some of the articles, but I really don't read them at all."

This is not your typical play-to-the media humility schtick. He really doesn't read what's written of him. He's more content to immerse himself in the joys that come with being a teenager. He prefers snowboarding in the off-season, an interest he acquired when "I saw it once on ESPN about five years ago." He's perfectly content just to hang out with his friends or spend time with his steady girlfriend, Christy Cochran, Becahi's star volleyball player.

But it's football that has thrust Dan Kendra III into the national spotlight. As the starting quarterback for the Golden Hawks all four years of his high school career — an impressive feat in its own right — he has thrown for over 4,300 yards and 41 touchdowns, including the Monsignor Bonner contest. He has also rushed for over 1,250 yards and 21 scores as the orchestrator of the Golden Hawks' highly effective option offense.

'Controlled wildness'

It's football that has led or will lead him on a tour of some of the country's elite football programs. Notre Dame, Penn State, Florida State, North Carolina, Florida — and, of course, West Virginia — are just some of the names on his college shopping itinerary.

He calls his style of play "controlled wildness," tempering his emotions while simultaneously firing up his teammates. "I'm a very aggressive leader, but for a quarterback, I'm calm when I call plays. When the play starts, it's 100 percent fast speed."

He said his versatility gives him an edge when scouts come for a look-see. "A lot of quarterbacks have good arms. They can throw the heck out of the ball, but they can't run. I can run, so with our strong team, who are (opponents) going to stop? Recruiters have told me that my running puts another aspect into the offense, and that's what they're looking for."

It's no wonder that his speed has indeed given him an edge. He began his football career as a full-back/halfback in sixth grade while playing for the Bethlehem Steelers, a 125-pound boys team. He didn't play the following year because his weight was up to 145, too heavy to play for the squad.

His career as a quarterback began in eighth grade, when he played for Becahi's freshman squad. His father worked with him to improve his mechanics, while his coaches helped to iron out the other flaws in his game.

The results are impossible to ignore.

Add to his football education the regimen of proper nutrition and weightlifting he undertakes — he bench presses 370 pounds and squats more than 500 pounds — and it's no wonder why the college scouts have all but knocked down his door.

Still, Dan knows that, after all is said and done, it was his father who made him the athlete he is. "He taught me everything I know as a quarterback. Scouts have said I'm so fundamentally sound. That's from my dad."

The son is still in awe. This time around, however, people are in awe of the son.

Callanetics class

The Bethlehem Bureau of Recreation will be sponsoring a 12-week session of callanetics beginning Tuesday, Sept. 13, at the DAR House on Eighth Avenue.

The class will be offered Tuesday and/or Thursday from 5:15 until 6:15 p.m. The cost is $30 for one night per week and $45 if you register for both nights.

The class will be taught by Janine Turczyn and is open to both men and women. The class focuses on muscle toning, building stamina and coordination and increasing endurance and flexibility.

Anyone interested in participating may register by calling the Recreation Office at 865-7081. Class size is limited, so registration will come on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Bethlehem Catholic's Dan Kendra — lining up for the snap against Monsignor Bonner — is one of the most highly recruited quarterbacks in the nation.

- ★★ — Doesn't stink
- ★★★ — Worth the ticket price
- ★★★★ — Worth seeing twice
- ★★★★★ — Drop-dead classic

NEW THIS WEEK

NEXT KARATE KID (PG) — Ralph Macchio is gone, but this black-belt coming-of-age story keeps on kicking in this, its fourth installment. This time Hillary Swank is the kid and Pat Morita returns to supply the philosophy
AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; United Artists, Allentown; United Artists, Easton

GOOD MAN IN AFRICA (R) — Sean Connery is the good man in this movie about a disgruntled diplomat in Africa trying to do the right thing in bad times. Also stars Louis Gossett Jr., John Lithgow, Diana Rigg. Directed by Bruce Beresford ("Driving Miss Daisy").
General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

CONTINUING

A SIMPLE TWIST OF FATE (PG-13) — Steve Martin stars as a simple man leading a hermit-like life who, one night, finds a beautiful baby at his doorstep. He raises her as his own until the biological parents turn up and demand their child back.

United Artists, Allentown

BARCELONA (PG-13) — A smart and funny film that follows the exploits of two witty — and often despised — cousins in a sultry, beautiful seaport town in Spain. Taylor Nichols and Chris Eigeman play the Navy officer and salesman duo, who come to some surprising and hilarious conclusions about love, beauty and disco.
The County Theater, Doylestown; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

CAMP NOWHERE (PG) — This is what happens when there's no adults around to tell the kids to behave responsibly and do the right thing. It's also the premise behind this silly movie, starring Christopher Lloyd.
AMC Four, Palmer; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

CLEAR AND PRESENT DANGER (R) — Harrison Ford stars in this political thriller about a shadow government that can order military strikes where and whenever it wants. But this time, something goes dreadfully awry.
AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; The Boyd, Bethlehem; General

Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; United Artists, Easton

COLOR OF NIGHT (R) — Bruce Willis goes for erotic thrills instead of pyrotechnic ones in this thriller about a psychologist who takes over the therapy group of a murdered friend. Jane March, Ruben Blades and Lesley Ann Warren are co-stars.
AMC Four, Palmer; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; United Artists, Allentown

CORRINA, CORRINA (PG) — After the death of a little girl's mother, her father finds a nanny to help fill some of the gaps left behind, but she ends up filling much more. Whoopi Goldberg is the wacky but warm nanny.
United Artists, Allentown

FORREST GUMP (PG) ★★★★★ — This magical movie is destined to be a great American classic. Its only fault is that it is about 20 minutes too long. But the story is so compelling, so delicious, it's perfectly understandable why its creators were reluctant to end it. An absolute must see. G.S.
General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; United Artists, Easton

FRESH (R) — In the violence-strewn streets of Brooklyn, a young man battles to save himself and his family from the ravages of gangs, drugs and despair. Stars Sean Nelson, Giancarlo Esposito, N'Bushe Write, and Samuel L. Jackson.

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

THE LION KING (G) ★★★★★ — Disney presents its 32nd full-length animated film, about a lion cub who learns how to take his place in the circle of the world's events. The richly animated tale follows Simba from his carefree days as a cub, to the tragic death of his father, the king, to his battle to win back his rightful place in the world. D.R.
AMC Four, Palmer; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall

MILK MONEY (PG) — In this film by director Richard Benjamin, a trio of pre-pubescent boys pool their milk money to solve the mystery of girls by hiring a hooker. They get robbed, but are taken under the wing of a big-hearted hooker played by Melanie Griffith. One of the boys sees through her rough veneer and decides she'd be perfect for dad, played by Ed Harris. You can bet the last of your cookie jar stash on where "Milk Money" goes from there.
AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; United Artists, Allentown; United Artists, Easton

NATURAL BORN KILLERS (R) ★★★★★ — A triumph of contrasts, Oliver Stone's latest cautionary epic mixes chaos with coherence, primal anger with sitcom humor, and TV news violence with soap-opera drama into a disturbingly hypnotic whole. Though it often threatens to disintegrate into a long MTV video, "Killers" emerges as an important film unlike any you've seen before. Exemplary performances throughout, from Woody Harrelson Juliette Lewis as the image-cluttered serial killers as video heroes, to Robert Downey as the tabloid TV reporter from hell, to Tommy Lee Jones as a prison warden with freon for blood. D.R.

AMC Four, Palmer; AMC Tilghman 8, South Whitehall; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

TRUE LIES (R) ★★★★★ — Arnold Schwarzenegger ("Last Action Hero") and James Cameron ("Terminator") don't ask you to suspend belief to enjoy their latest explosion fest, they sort of put a gun to your head and demand it. So, of course you will, and once you get over the tack-on plot of a man hiding his spying ways from his wife, you become a willing victim of two-and-a-half hours of some of the best action ever captured on film. Jamie Lee Curtis is superb as is Tom Arnold. No doubt, the best film of the summer. D.R.
AMC Plaza Theatre, Whitehall Mall; The Roxy, Northampton

9.5 YOUR MOM SURE WAS CHEERFUL THIS MORNING. HMPH. I'VE NEVER SEEN HER HUMMING AND SASHAYING AROUND THE KITCHEN LIKE THAT. HMPH. HOW LONG HAVE WE BEEN WAITING FOR THE BUS NOW? ABOUT TWO AND A HALF HOURS. I THINK MOM PUT ME OUT HERE THIS EARLY ON PURPOSE.

9.6 HI, CALVIN! AREN'T YOU EXCITED ABOUT GOING TO SCHOOL? LOOK AT ALL THESE GREAT SCHOOL SUPPLIES I GOT! I LOVE HAVING NEW NOTEBOOKS AND STUFF! ALL I'VE GOT TO SAY IS THEY'RE NOT MAKING ME LEARN ANY FOREIGN LANGUAGES! IF ENGLISH IS GOOD ENOUGH FOR ME, THEN BY GOLLY, IT'S GOOD ENOUGH FOR THE REST OF THE WORLD! EVERYONE SHOULD SPEAK ENGLISH OR JUST SHUT UP, THAT'S WHAT I SAY! YOU SHOULD MAYBE CHECK THE CHEMICAL CONTENT OF YOUR BREAKFAST CEREAL. THEY CAN MAKE ME GO UNTIL GRADE EIGHT, AND THEN, FFFFT, I'M OUTTA HERE!

9.7 CALVIN, WOULD YOU LEAD THE CLASS IN THE PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE? NO! WHAT DID THE SUPREME COURT DECIDE ABOUT THAT? IS THIS A PRAYER? DON'T YOU HAVE TO READ ME MY RIGHTS? I DON'T KEEP UP WITH THIS STUFF! I'M JUST A KID! I'M ONLY HERE BECAUSE MY PARENTS MAKE ME GO! I DON'T WANT TO BE A TEST CASE! I DON'T EVEN KNOW WHAT COURT DISTRICT I'M IN! CALL ON SOMEONE ELSE! CALVIN? *SIGHHHH* I CAN'T BELIEVE IT'S NOT EVEN 8:15 YET.

Homesellers:

The Bethlehem Star in conjunction with The Express-Times now has a program for home sellers that carries with it a guarantee. A guarantee that if you or your real estate agent places a homeseller's ad with us and it doesn't sell within four months, we will continue running your ad until it does (or until you decide to take it off the market). Oh, there's a lot more, too. Like a combined circulation of more than 100,000 with nearly a quarter million impressions. And a place to run a picture of your home, so prospective buyers can appreciate its good looks. (All the ads in this showcase are examples of this new offer.) To learn more about this NEW guaranteed sale advertising program from The Star and Express-Times, contact your local real estate agent.

Look for it every week...in
