

Wolfe, Marjorie

Nurse Returns From Overseas Duty NOV 22 1943

Lt. Marjorie Wolfe, native of Bethlehem, was one of two nurses pictured with a Philadelphia blood donor who made his 1000th contribution. The photograph, distributed throughout the country by International Pictures, appeared in a recent issue of the Bethlehem Globe-Times.

The Army nurse, on sick leave, was in Australia when she was stricken in March. She is serving in Northern Liberties Hospital until she is able to return to active service abroad. Lt. Wolfe enlisted December, 1941. She was sent overseas the following May.

A daughter of J. Homer Wolfe, who lived at 252 East Union Street, Bethlehem, until he moved to Allentown three years ago (118 North Fifth Street), the nurse attended Bethlehem schools, being graduated from Liberty High School in 1935. She was graduated as a nurse from Northern Liberties Hospital, Philadelphia, serving there until she joined the Army.
