Five Veterans AUG 18 1944 Coming Home On Furloughs

Five local soldiers are among the group of overseas servicemen who are being returned for furloughs under the rotation plan of the Army. The idea of rotating troops is to offer them recognition for their service during the war and on active war fronts.

Included in the group are the following:

Capt. G. Z. Traeger, Corps of Engineers, returning from 25 months overseas in the North African Theater of Operations. He arrived at Camp Upton, L. I., recently, prior to reaching his home at 204 East Market Street, where he will visit his wife.

Pvt. James D. Arner, Army Air Forces, returning from 6 months overseas in the American Theater of Operations. He arrived at Daniel Field, Ga., recently, prior to reaching his home at 61 West North Street, where he will visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Arner.

Pfc. John F. Miller, Field Artillery, returning from 30 months overseas in the Southwest and Central Pacific Theaters of Operation. He arrived at Fort George G. Meade Md., recently, prior to reaching his home at 466 Birkel Ave., where he will visit his brother, Carl W. Miller.

Sgt. Orrin E. Blair, Quartermaster Corps, returning from 28 months overseas in the American Theater of Operations. He arrived at Fort George G. Meade, Md., recently, prior to reaching his home on Route 1, Bethlehem, where he will visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Blair.

Staff Sgt. Edward Gregory, Ordnance Department, returning from 30 months overseas in the American Theater of Operations. He arrived at Fort George G. Meade, Md., recently, prior to reaching his home at 547 Park Place, where he will visit his parents.
