BASD Board approves contracts

Resident questions safety of students' COVID shots

BY THERESA O'BRIEN
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The BASD school board met June 21 to approve a multitude of contracts and a few salary adjustments. Many contracts were renewals of ongoing relationships, but several were new items funded by grants from the state's allotment of the federal Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief II and III programs.

All measures but one passed 5-0. Item 13.02, a recommendation to appeal the assessed value of 36 parcels of commercial property, met with opposition from board president Mike Facinnetto, who stated his view that the current economic situation makes it inappropriate to seek more money from these landowners at this time.

Of the roughly $2.2 billion Pa. received from the federal Coronavirus Response and Relief Supplemental Appropriations Act's ESSER programs, BASD will receive $15,889,038 (ESSER II) and $32,116,071 (ESSER III), for a total of $48,005,109. As described in the district's budget book, $11.5 million is being spent on summer enrichment and academic ramp-up programs to help students returning to school in the fall get back on track. The district is also using federal money to provide professional development to staff in the areas of math, literacy, and Multi-Tiered System of Supports (MTSS) for students' social and emotional needs. Tutoring programs funded by federal relief money will be offered all year.

The board approved several professional development and consulting vendor contracts, including Grading Rx to advise the district on a multi-year program to change the grading system in middle and high schools, Southern Regional Education Board (SREB) to train middle school math teachers ($132,000), Houghton Mifflin Harcourt to train high school math teachers (approx. $51,000), and Step By Step Learning (SBSL) for a variety of literacy training services (approximately $2.2 million).

Julie Bailey, president of the Foundation for the BASD, presented the board with a check for nearly $175,000. This year, in addition to funding field trips and supporting Project Lead the Way, awards were made from the Foundation to support new initiatives including dual See BASD on Page A2

NATANILA AGENTIS 'God brought me back to school'

BY TAMI QUIGLEY
Special to the Bethlehem Press

It was an act of her birth mother's love that ultimately led Natanila (Nati) Agentis to Lehigh Christian Academy (LCA), where Christ's love is the heartbeat of the school.

Natanila was one of four graduates composing the school's Class of 2021, and the school's commencement exercises June 4 at Cedar Crest Bible Fellowship

Church in Allentown is a world away from her native Ethiopia, where, she says, "God saved my life."

Natanila was being raised in Ethiopia by her mother, Meseret Teshome, and her grandpa. After he passed away when Natanila was in second grade, her mother faced severe financial hardships, struggling to pay for food and her daughter's school. She also faced a cancer diagnosis. Though young, Natanila saw her mother toiling to provide for her daughter.

"It was the worst year for me," Natanila says.

So the young girl did something she thought would help - for six months she only drank water and ate very little to help save her mother money.

"If I was hungry, I'd take a nap, so it didn't matter if I was hungry or not," Natanila says. "I locked myself in a dark room. I had a broken heart."

It was at this point Natanila credited God with saving her life. Her mother got her to a hospital, where she almost died. The doctor and his wife were very kind to her, and the Ethiopian Orthodox Church was very supportive and became like a home to her.

'It's not hopeless. It's not easy'

BY LANI GOINS
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Gabriel (Gabe) Shellock was an average kid, who fell apart in high school.

He attended Liberty HS in Bethlehem. He describes the classes as large, and himself as "lost" in the back of the classroom, but he doesn't blame class sizes or companions for his addictions. He sees his own mental health as the culprit.

Things came to a head when the house alarm sounded late one evening. Gabe's step-mother went to shut it off and found her son. Gabe says she brought him up to his father.

"I think he's high," she said.

Fortunately, Gabe's parents were supportive. They found Kolbe Academy, a small high school run by the Diocese of Allentown just off Bridle Path Road in Bethlehem. Its mission is to treat high school-Gabe entered the Kolbe Academy in his 11th grade year. Initially, it was a good fit for Gabe. Then COVID-19 struck. Gabe attended a few online classes, but slipped into addiction again.

He attempted suicide three times. He overdosed and spent some time in the hospital, but he didn't lose his connection to his school.

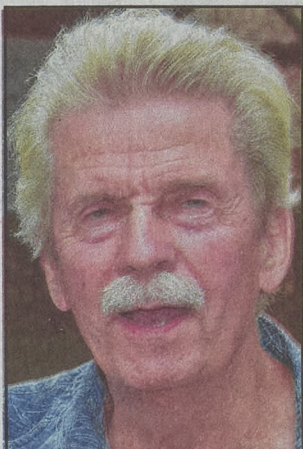

Kolbe staffers kept in regular contact with him, and as he recovered, he was able to keep up with his schoolwork. He credits the Kolbe Academy staff for sticking with him and describes the staff as supportive and listening.

Gabe has now been sober for over 387 days. He received acceptances to five colleges, and scholarship offers from four. His plan is to start at Northampton County Community College, so See GABE on Page A2

Homicide plea

Lehigh County District Attorney Jim Martin has announced Jahmel Anthony Crews, 27, pleaded guilty in a 2019 homicide on Airport Road.

According to Martin, on Oct. 23, at approximately 1:03 a.m., members of the Allentown Police Department found Yaret Rivera, 22, of Worcester, MA, in a parking area with a gunshot wound to the chest. Rivera died from his injuries and his death was ruled a homicide by the Lehigh County Coroner's Office.

An investigation revealed that Crews and his alleged accomplice, Walter Martinez, 27, caused the death of Rivera while in the commission of a robbery. Martinez is charged with criminal homicide, robbery and conspiracy to commit robbery, all felonies of the first degree.

Crews' sentencing is scheduled for Aug. 11.

tanila, her mother had started the process to give her daughter a better life. She was placed in an orphanage for two and a half years. Across the Atlantic, Nate and Melanie Agentis of Bethlehem started the paperwork to adopt her in 2014, but since it is a long process, she didn't arrive here until July 4, 2017.

Natanila was welcomed into the Agentis family, which includes the couple's other children Lola, Logan, Riley, Mayzee and August.

"Bethlehem is nice. I like walking and seeing people," Natannila says. "We have a nice big yard where I play with my siblings, and I also take them to the park."

Natanila began her education here in the English as a Second Language (ESL) program at Northampton HS, where she was enrolled for her first two years in the United States. In the fall of 2020, she joined all her siblings at LCA, which has held in-person classes throughout the COVID-19 pandemic.

Natanila said she never thought she'd be able to go to a Christian school because of the ESL program, but LCA also offers the program.

"When I first came to LCA, I was so nervous. I didn't know how I'd connect with people," Natanila admits. "In the public school, I sat in the back of the library, but here I'm more connected with people."

Natanila was in the chorus at LCA, as she had been in public school. She wanted to play basketball at LCA, but chose not to so she could concentrate on her studies. Natanila previously participated in gymnastics locally and says, "I dream to go back."

Natanila has been very happy at LCA. As her education in Ethiopia was limited, she says, "God brought me back to school."

Melanie Agentis said Natanila faced challenges because her education in Ethiopia was curbed, but she not only met those challenges but triumphed over them with hard work and, as Melanie says, "the awesome team of people that have helped her to achieve those milestones" in her educational journey.

"The thing I like best here is Chapel Wednesdays," Natanila says, "when students and teachers share and ask people to pray for them. The teachers really connect with the kids. We share what's going on,"

"We call it fellowship - to be here and care for one another," says John Moser, director of development, of Chapel Wednesdays.

"We accentuate character at this school," Moser continues. "It's not a list of do's and don'ts, but Biblically looking at what a godly man or woman is like."

"Natanila's smile lights up the room, and joy oozes out of her," Moser says, adding that it's been beautiful to see her "transformation and reclamation."

"She's going to be tough to lose," he says. "She may think others have had a big impact on her, and that may be true, but she has had a massive impact on us here."

Natanila's birth mother, Meseret, remains in Ethiopia. Though it still hurts Natanila to lose her, they keep in touch by phone.

The graduate's future plans?

"I want to go to college and study nursing to help people," Natanila says.

"Natanila certainly is a very fortunate young lady having been through a difficult childhood," Moser says, "but we are sure many good things are in store for her."

enrollment, the Zen Zone at Marvine ES, and conversation-starters on issues of race and discrimination.

During the public comment portion of the evening, Fountain Hill resident Iris Kale read a statement highlighting risks of COVID-19 shots and questioning the promotion of these shots at clinics facilitated by the school district for children as young as 12. "Unprecedented pressure is being exerted on children to take experimental biological products," Kale said, noting, "only 1,100 children were followed for two months [before the emergency use authorization in children 12 to 15]," and asking the board whether parents are being given information on reporting vaccine injury via the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS).

Board president Mike Faccinotto noted the passing of Walter Pocalyko, who was on the last Bethlehem Township school board and the first BASD school board, and who championed the name "Freedom" for the township's new high school.

Full details of all items are available online (<https://go.boarddocs.com/pa/beth/Board.nsf/Public>). The board will not meet in July. The next meeting will be at 6 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 9.

"We still struggle with racism today," said Rayah Levy, the master of ceremonies on Juneteenth eve. She was speaking to over 100 celebrants who gathered that evening at Bethlehem's sculpture Garden next to city hall.

In a joyous get together, a crowd comprised of different races and cultures, academics, politicians and local citizens listened to music, were entertained by dancers, and listened to speeches. They were all commemorating the first, national holiday of Juneteenth.

"Never forget the millions of people who were enslaved," Rayah Levy said. "Let's take a step back in history and remember all who were enslaved."

"We must not forget our history," said Levy. "We must teach it and we must say it loud. We must say it out loud and continue to share our history because it is extremely, extremely important to not forget our history."

She said Africans were living in Bethlehem in 1741. "Esther Lee's family came here in the 1800s. There is history here. And we must learn the history. We must learn about where we live."

Bethlehem NAACP Chapter President Esther Lee said, "We have begun to work together to accomplish our ends. There is much to be done in the Lehigh Valley. We do it within our own city."

Labor Secretary Walsh lauds city's industrial/arts fusion

BY NATE JASTRZEMSKI
njastrzemski@tmonline.com

As part of the Biden administration's big push to pass the massive American Jobs Plan, aimed at rejuvenating the national infrastructure, Labor Secretary Marty Walsh visited several Lehigh Valley locations June 2, with no fewer than three stops in Bethlehem.

The $4 trillion plan includes infrastructure money for roads and bridges, broadband access, and the childcare economy, but while standing at Lehigh County Courthouse in Allentown, Walsh told a small audience his department's portion of plan will also heavily focus on healthcare workers and long-term care facilities, both of which will require renewed investment as the massive Baby Boomer generation passes retirement age.

Walsh said, "We should make sure when our loved ones go into a long term care facility that they get the treatment and the care and the love and the respect, and that the person that's helping them and the person who is working with them is treated with respect as well. With a good wage, with health care, with a pension and the opportunity to raise a family."

Earlier in the day he visited old Bethlehem Steel Corp. sites with local officials and took a walking tour of the Hoover-Mason Trestle. Along the way, he learned of the blast furnaces' history and the years of effort by the city and cooperating organizations to refurbish parts of the dilapidated structures for modern use.

Walsh told the Press Bethlehem and the Lehigh Valley are good examples of how a region can recover from the loss of old heavy manufacturing, and the lessons learned here are applicable elsewhere. The former Boston mayor said, "Repurposing a building for historic preservation is incredible. Bringing arts and culture and the historical aspect of the Bethlehem Steel is an amazing idea. A lot of this can be done around the country."

"When you think about revitalization and job training, workforce development, [you're] thinking about getting people into an industry that is not extinct. It might be different than it was 50 years ago, but there's still a big need for manufacturing. I think the American Jobs Plan is perfect for a town like this."

Walter Felton of the Allentown NAACP came with other Allentown NAACP members show solidarity with Bethlehem's NAACP going to have be a give and take. And you know where the giving is going to have to come from. I don't have to remind you it's a white man's world. So, we need to get busy doing what we have to.

"I enjoy doing things. I will never sit down and let someone else do the job that I can do. I would not have done well during slavery because you had to be submissive. I'm not even submissive today and I'm an old woman. I would admonish people to stay strong and come together more in what we're doing. People, don't be afraid of one another. We are all fighting for the same cause. We can all work together and we can educate one another and move forward in improving the Bethlehem area. If we deal with one place at a time, we will make accomplishments. Don't try to take on the world. You know everyone wants to come together. We will move forward one with the other. It's never going to happen with me sitting on my side and you sitting on yours."

"We have to be vigilant to make sure that freedom rings," said state Representative Stephen Samuelson, one of several local politicians to attend the event. "Jim Crow laws took a century to get rid of. We see voting rights being chipped away."

Attendees got a history lesson from Rabbi and Northampton Community College professor Sholomo Levy.

"Every civilized country ended slavery before we did," said Rabbi Levy.

He went on to describe the history of several emancipation proclamations and military orders that were issued during and immediately following the Civil War.

General Gordon Granger's proclamation was different from Lincoln's in that it claimed "absolute equality in personal rights and rights of property" for the newly freed slaves.

Union General Gordon Granger landed in Galveston, Texas, and on June 19, 1865 proclaimed that all enslaved persons were thereby freed.

Granger's General Order No. 3 proclaimed the news more than a month after the formal end of the Civil War and two years after President Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. Granger's general order and his enforcement of it ended slavery in Texas. The date began to be celebrated as Juneteenth.

"Black people did not receive equality then," argued Rabbi Levy. Instead, they found themselves "sharecropping," which he called "legalized peony [sic]" which led to a "system of debt."

He also reminded the audience that a proclamation is an executive order, not a law. It took a constitutional amendment to end slavery in the United States.

Walter Felton of the Allentown NAACP came with other Allentown NAACP members to demonstrate solidarity with the Bethlehem NAACP.

Poet Abigale Brown read Amanda Gorman's inaugural poem, "The Hill We Climb."

Philadelphia-based dance troupe En L' Air Company provided entertainment for the event. The dancers include Shairah Kibler, Nadya Cherry, Amaya White and Cabria Thompson. The director of the troupe is Christina M. Talley.

Bethlehem Mayor Robert Donchez and Northampton County Executive Lamont McClure each declared that June 19, 2021 would be known as "Juneteenth Day" in their respective jurisdictions.

Business loss recovery plan explained

BY LANI GOINS
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The latest round of government assistance for small business has arrived. It is part of the American Rescue Plan. Called the Restaurant Revitalization Fund, or RRF, it allocates $9.5 billion of assistance. Unlike past assistance, this assistance is intended to make up for business losses during the pandemic. U.S. Representative Susan Wild led a virtual education session on the Rescue Plan.

It is only available to businesses that are still in operation. Permanently closed businesses are not eligible. There are also limits on how many locations a business may have to be eligible. However, businesses that have not yet opened, but have incurred expenses in 2021 are eligible to apply.

The first assistance will be distributed to business owners in specific Priority groups: Veterans, Women and socially or economically disadvantaged small business owners. If a small business is owned by a group, at least 51 percent of the group's owners must be part of one of the categories. This applied to the first two weeks of the program. As of now, all small businesses may apply.

The funds must be used on expenses incurred between Feb. 15, 2020 and March 11, 2023. Once the funds are received, recipients must use them by March 11, 2023.

There are four different calculations that may be used to determine the amount of assistance sought. All are listed on the SBA website. Specific documentation is needed to apply, and businesses may want the assistance of their accountant.

Funds will be distributed until they are exhausted. To apply, visit restaurants.sba.gov or use your point of sale vendor. Phone applications are accepted, but take more time. The phone number is 844-279-8898.

Smoke Alarms

Smoke alarms are a key part of a home fire escape plan. When there is a fire, smoke spreads fast. Working smoke alarms give you early warning so you can get outside quickly.

FACTS

- A closed door may slow the spread of smoke, heat, and fire.
- Smoke alarms should be installed on every level.
- Roughly 3 out of 5 fire deaths happen in homes with no smoke alarms.

Stingrays are back in action

Ethan Kocon, Stingrays head coach, talks to his team.

The Bethlehem Stingrays summer swim team competed in its first home meet of the season on June 24 and defeated the Whitehall Waves, 457-135, at the newly renovated Memorial Pool on Illick's Mill Rd.

"This facility the city built, it's definitely state-of-the-art. It's a really fast pool," said Stingrays head coach Evan Kocon. "The kids love the blocks. Anytime the kids go to a pool with wedges on the blocks, they get all excited. So it's cool, and I think the kids are very, very excited after two years ago, being at Stark (Pool) for training and not having any home meets, and then last year not having a season. It's really cool for the kids to come back and have this opportunity, not only to swim together again, but in a brand new pool, so that's huge."

The Stingrays' home used to be the pool on Jacksonville Rd. in Hanover Township, but costly damage shut the pool down two years ago. That's when the Stingrays practiced at Stark and traveled for all of their meets within the Suburban Swim League of the Lehigh Valley.

Last year was COVID season, but now Coach Kocon has found himself with a huge roster of 130 swimmers between the ages of eight and 18 with the exception of college freshmen Samantha Taylor and Trevor Lenig.

"Thanks to our league agreeing to let seniors from last year compete again, Sammy's swimming and coaching, so she came back, and Trevor Lenig came back, so it's nice to have them here and let them wrap up all their time with us this year," Kocon said.

Kocon is also assisted by Diana Kocon, Elyssa Kocon, Laurie Muller, and Chris Black.

"We only started last Tuesday (June 15) and fortunately we had a bye that Thursday, and our first meet was just this Monday (June 21) at Lower Macungie, which rained and then we made it up last night," said Kocon. "In seven days of practice, the improvement's huge. We swim 95 to 105 kids, just because people go on vacation and it's summer swimming, and you can't fault them for that. We're fortunate that we're deep in almost every age group."

Bethlehem's first place girls finishers against Whitehall were 100 free relay: Sophia Heiserman, Anna Stewart, Evelyn Gould, Aly Yerk (2:11.12); 50 free: Nat Brezinsky (29.47), Talia Lehr (31.26); 100 medley relay: Keira Darcy, Alina Scott, Bella Heiserman, Lydia Stewart (1:38.40), Elizabeth McClarin, Leah Onia, Audrey Bloss-Ferry, Laney Stewart (1:11.09); 200 medley relay: Sammy Taylor, Sarah Park, Lehr, Brezinsky (2:15.63); 25 breaststroke: Yerk (23.56); 50 breast: Laney Stewart (47.58), Katie Bruno (41.44), Morgan Muller (40.85); 100 IM: Bloss-Ferry (1:25.12), Amelia Paxton (1:29.39), Sammy Taylor (1:13.58); 50 butterfly: Bloss-Ferry (36.22), Brezinsky (33.79), Lehr (32.13); 25 backstroke: Heiserman (24.44); 50 Back: Onia

Lehigh 12U team gets a 3-0 victory

BY KATIE MCDONALD

Over the course of five innings, Lehigh Little League 12U pitcher Brayden Kashner tossed 14 strikeouts in Lehigh's 3-0 victory over Pennridge in the PA District 20 12U Little League All-Star Tournament, which opened this past Saturday.

"At nine [year-olds], our season ended at Pennridge, and at tens, our season ended at Pennridge, so I think that was part of the reason Brayden had the mentality he did: give me the ball and I'll give it what I have," said Lehigh manager Mike Kashner.

After Kashner struck out Pennridge's first three batters in the top of the first inning, Lehigh's Willie Cruz led off the bottom of the first with a double to right center.

"It felt pretty good to start the game off with a hit," said Cruz, who then scored on an RBI single by Kashner.

"The top of the order couldn't hit me so when they were starting to bunt, it kind of threw me off, but I battled back," said Kashner, who struck out Pennridge's next three batters. "I took a deep breath, and I just tried to focus on Andrew's glove and the strike zone, and I got through it."

that was the turning point of the game.

"He's been in tight situations before, and normally he finds a way to grind it out, and he was able to do that. Normally, and I'm proud of him for this, he's a guy that shines brightest under the biggest lights," he said. "What I love about him, and not just because he's my son but from a coaching perspective, I love his competitiveness. He wants the ball, he wants to challenge guys, and if

Summer hoops season continues

The LVHN Jamfest was held over the weekend and Nazareth came away with the championship crown following a 53-44 win over Gov. Mifflin. The 16-team tournament featured two Bethlehem teams as well, as Bethlehem Catholic and Freedom both took part in the event going 1-2 in tournament play.

The Hawks lost to Northampton and Pocono Mountain West, sandwiched by a 61-55 win over Dallas. Head coach Scott McClary has been happy with the progress of his team this summer over the past two weekends of tournament play.

"I felt very good about our performance over both weekends at the varsity level," he said. "We competed very well with nationally ranked teams in Philly Live 1 and 2. The local games in which our varsity played, we won. When we had to send our JV guys, we did not win, but that was expected. We are now dealing with some injuries which will leave us shorthanded for the remaining summer league games, but that gives other players some opportunity to play and grow."

Freedom fell to Gov. Mifflin in their opener and came back with a 46-36 win over Roberto Clemente before bouncing out of the tournament in heartbreaking fashion, as Palmerton topped them 38-37 with a buzzer-beater defeat.

Both teams will continue their summer action this week with the Cedar Beach Summer League. Becahi sits tied in fourth place at 4-2 in the Large School Division and Freedom was 4-3 coming into the week. Liberty is 3-3 and a spot behind Freedom in the standings.

Cup softball team falls in a shootout

kmcaldonald@tnonline.com

Lehigh Valley advanced to the semifinal of the Carpenter Cup Softball Classic but lost to Mid-Penn, 11-8, last Thursday at FDR Park in Philadelphia.

"Sometimes you get in a slugfest," said Lehigh Valley head coach Blake Morgan. "I think Mid-Penn was able to match our scoring, and they had the last at bat. Their pitching was a little deeper than other teams we faced, but we did a good job offensively."

Lehigh Valley led 6-3 after three innings with triples delivered by Northwestern Lehigh's Marissa Christman and Northampton's Devyn Demchak.

In the sixth inning, Christman's hit tied the game 8-8, but Mid-Penn came back to win.

"I don't think I saw Marissa stop smiling," said Morgan. "They were all great. They just relaxed and enjoyed each other."

While there was no question about the talent Lehigh Valley carried, one never knows what the chemistry will be on a team that's never played as one unit.

"We were rewarded because this group was awesome and seemed to enjoy themselves. Even after they gave up some runs, they would be talking, and laughing, and cheering," Morgan said.

Although the world's COVID days are dwindling, they're not gone, and creating a team wasn't as easy as it may have seemed; for example, Morgan found himself without a catcher until Easton's Rozalee Negron stepped up.

"Roz had a phenomenal series," said Morgan, "and it was nice to have Allen represented on the team (by Nora Zekaria)."

Lehigh Valley reached the semifinal after defeating Mercer County, 10-3, also last Thursday.

man Ben Miller made a backhanded catch in foul territory.

"The first game of districts, the draw, when you see you play Lehigh, it's a great environment, but it's certainly nothing I would've signed up for. Unfortunately, this is déjà vu for us," Coach Croyle said. "When we were 10, we opened up against Lehigh, and they beat us the first game. We then put a string of wins together and played them again later and were lucky enough to get a win. At the same time, I hope to see them again. We move forward. We have to go through the loser's bracket. We just keep on playing."

Coach Kashner also hopes that Lehigh will see Pennridge again. "They're a really good baseball team.

Celtic Classic returns in September

Celtic music and bagpipes will be heard and the Highland Games Athletes will be throwing the caber when the Celtic Classic Highland Games & Festival returns to downtown Bethlehem Sept. 24-26. In its 34th year, Celtic Cultural Alliance (CCA) announced the return of the Celtic Classic, the largest free Celtic festival in North America, after last year was canceled due to COVID-19.

"We realize it has been a challenging year for local businesses, vendors and performers, and we look forward to the return of Celtic Classic to not only celebrate Celtic culture with the people in our region, but to support our community economically," stated Jayne Ann Recker, executive director.

Celtic Classic hosts the U.S. National Highland Games Championship, which features the top 10 pro athletes in the United States competing for the title at Celtic Classic. Selected top Pipe bands from the East Coast will compete on Saturday and Sunday for awards.

For Celtic music fans, five stages of performers engage the audiences with traditional Celtic, Celtic rock and folk. Crowd favorites such as the Kilmaine Saints and Seamus Kennedy will be returning, while up and coming performers such as Fig for a Kiss and the Chivalrous Crickets will bring new energy to the weekend. Having played in 2018, Celtic Aire, the premier Celtic band of the United States Air Force, will be performing on Saturday and Sunday.

A highlight of the weekend, the Showing of the Tartan parade, will step off at 11:30 a.m. Sept. 25. It includes pipe bands, high school bands, dignitaries, and the Scottish clans and Celtic societies.

The Celtic Heritage Hollow programming continues to focus on the culture of the seven Celtic nations. This area will have children's activities, Celtic societies and clans, and several cultural competitions. The Irish 69th, a Civil War reenactment group, will be having an encampment for the first time in over a decade.

"Celtic Cultural Alliance will continue to follow the latest CDC, state and city health department standards to ensure the safety of our patrons, volunteers, food vendors, retail merchants, and performers," added Recker.

The 34th annual Celtic Classic runs from Friday, Sept. 24 through Sunday, Sept. 26 in downtown historic Bethlehem. For more information, directions, volunteering opportunities and the weekend's schedule, log on to www.celticfest.org. For up-to-the-minute information and updates, follow Celtic Classic on Twitter (@CelticClassic) and friend them on Facebook (facebook.com/CelticClassic).

Vacation with ponies

We took our first vacation in years recently. James, my youngest, had never seen a beach. Erick likes horses. Samantha, the oldest, wanted to stay fairly close to home. So we went to Virginia for a few days. We had been to Shenandoah a few times, and that was Erick's first choice. But Sam said no, we've been there before.

So we went to Chincoteague, sort of. We stayed in a lovely AirB&B a bit more than 30 minutes away. We made multiple trips to Chincoteague and Assateague. James finally got to go to the beach. We found a bookstore. The older kids, Sam, her boyfriend Cam, and Erick, visited a brewery. And on our last day, we saw the ponies! In the best possible way. A small southern herd was grazing in a field. They were far enough away to not be bothered by people, and close enough for photographs.

I also took some work and schoolwork with me. So did Sam. We were only there for a bit less than three days, but even that bit of time reminded me that my daughter and I are very much alike.

Schoolwork actually seemed easier. I don't know if it was that I was working in a familiar chapter, that I was more relaxed, or because the adult "kids" kept James occupied. Whatever the reason, it felt good to understand the material.

James and I went swimming at a pool. It was basically a refresher course for James. His last swimming lessons were before the pandemic.

All in all, we had a great trip. It felt too short to me, but everyone left happy. That's amazing.

ST. LUKE'S IN THE WORKPLACE

Program protects 'industrial athletes'

Two years ago, you would have found Athletic Trainer Nilvia Vasquez working with student-athletes at Parkland High School, evaluating an injury, treating a sprained ankle or performing therapeutic exercises with them.

But these days she spends much of her time on the brewery floor at Samuel Adams in Breinigsville, teaching employees how to properly lift a case of Hard Seltzer, performing ergonomic assessments or reviewing injury and lost days reports with managers.

Vasquez, 27, who has a master's degree in athletic training from Moravian College, is the first resident in St. Luke's pioneering Athletic Training: Prevention and Wellness Residency program. A first-of-its kind nationwide, the program is currently under review for formal recognition by the Commission on the Accreditation of Athletic Training Education.

According to Kyra Dodson, MS, LAT-ATC, CEAS II, Manager of Occupational Medicine, Prevention and Wellness, who currently serves as the residency's program director, workplace musculoskeletal disorders cost companies more than $60 billion each year in medical and insurance expenses and lost production time.

Blending formal education with practical on-site work experience, the new Athletic Training: Prevention and Wellness Residency program is the culmination of a collaborative effort combining the disciplines of athletic training and occupational medicine. The overarching objective is injury prevention by creating a healthier and safer workplace, which translates to "lost time" reduction and other cost savings benefits for employers.

"This seamless fusion of two proven disciplines to create this new and unique specialty is akin to blending the finesse of ballet with the calisthenics of football to develop more graceful transitions on the gridiron," Dodson said.

St. Luke's clients employ factory workers, police and fire personnel, among other "industrial athletes" who are at risk for developing musculoskeletal injuries, such as muscle sprains, strains and overuse injuries.

"This program has driven engagement across the plant, leading to positive, sustainable results across safety, quality, production, all focused on the well-being of our employees," said Mike Malchitsky, Senior EHS (environmental health and safety) Manager at Samuel Adams. "It brings an expertise and toolset to the Environmental Health and Safety (EHS) program that we do not have in-house."

As Vasquez approaches the completion of her one year of residency training, with much of it spent at Samuel Adams, she continues to build her knowledge in injury prevention, workers' compensation, and the legal issues germane to the industrial setting. Of them all, she said, "injury prevention at work is the simplest, yet the most powerful tool we can utilize to ensure a safe workplace."

The care you TRUST.

Mark Powell had a clot removed from an artery to his brain following a major stroke. "My stroke came on suddenly, like a bolt from the blue. I trusted in St. Luke's Neurosurgical Associates to save my life and restore my mobility. Today, I'm alive and living my best life."

MORAVIAN ACADEMY NOTES

By Neha Skandan

Leaving a lasting legacy, embarking on an exciting adventure

Seniors, congratulations! We finally made it, especially during an unprecedented year. When we did not know what the future would look like, we worked as a team to persevere. Looking back, we realize that there are countless memories classmates have treasured throughout the years, from when we met each other at freshman orientation to cherishing one of our final moments at our senior day. We have arrived at the finish line of our high school adventure and have opened the doors to a new beginning that will carry us to greater heights.

The Moravian Academy class of 2021 graduated June 5 with a special baccalaureate ceremony the evening before Commencement. As we bid a fond farewell to our Moravian community, seniors took the time to reflect on the plethora of opportunities that have enabled us to forge our own paths as we now enter the new chapter of our lives. Seniors recalled moments unique to their high school careers, and how they have shaped their personal journeys.

"I will be forever grateful to have had the opportunity to be a member of the girls soccer team for my final year at Moravian and serve as a senior captain, although COVID-19 threatened this possibility," said class president Luisa Capobianco. "I will always appreciate the camaraderie of my teammates and our admirable ability to persevere through safety protocols, various quarantines, and emerge district champions for a third year in a row!"

Luisa's leadership and determination throughout high school have taken her to the University of Notre Dame, where she plans to major in business.

For Deborah Katz, Moravian Academy's Theater Department has guided her to grow as a performer, and she intends to pursue her passion by attending Wagner College to study vocal performance and theater studies.

"I am changed for the better because of MA Theater - emotionally, physically, and as a performer," Deb reflected. "I really enjoyed Coda Red this year, especially our concert. It was insanely hard to be able to practice and I am grateful we finally got the opportunity to perform after all of our hard work."

Within these specific activities are valuable lessons of core qualities that seniors will carry throughout life. Lila Mangino will also be attending Notre Dame and highlighted how serving as senior class vice president has allowed her to gain numerous leadership skills.

"I learned the hard work, perseverance and positivity it takes to put something together, whether it is a senior class event or a spring concert performance," Lila said. "From these opportunities, Moravian has prepared me to be a collaborator and has helped me to find my passions and what I love to do."

Josh Sobiech, who will attend Champlain College to pursue game design, can attest to Moravian's emphasis on collaboration through leadership.

"The class structure and all of the group work were definitely highlights of my time at Moravian," Josh said. "Working in a group is imperative to doing something right, which is what I have learned through the countless group projects."

Specifically, seniors celebrate all of these special moments due to the incredible support and dedication from teachers and faculty, who worked very hard to ensure that we would experience a memorable year and treasure our entire high school experience. Moravian Academy's values of curiosity, creativity, empathy, and perseverance are well embodied by the Class of 2021, who hope to leave a lasting legacy and embark on an exciting adventure ahead.

Yours truly is passing the baton to other Moravian Academy students, as she will attend Johns Hopkins University this fall to study public health and pursue the pre-med track. I hope to continue to stay in touch with you through special articles. Thank you for reading my articles over the years and for all your support.

Fireworks public use guide offered

HANOVER (NORCO) TWP

The state legislature approved the sale and use of fireworks a few years ago, but they allowed municipalities to enact their own ordinance that dictates how and when they can be used. Hanover Township, Northampton County, enacted legislation in 2018 that outlines when fireworks can be used in the township and the restrictions.

Fireworks scare not only dogs but have potential serious side effects for those who suffer from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. Fireworks may result in flashbacks for veterans.

Fireworks in Hanover are permitted as

Consumer fireworks; conditions of use: A person who is at least 18 years of age and meets the requirements of this article may purchase, possess and use consumer fireworks. Consumer fireworks cannot be ignited or discharged in the township, except between 4 and 11 p.m. July 3 and 4, 2021. Use of consumer fireworks is strictly prohibited at all other times. A person may not intentionally ignite or discharge consumer fireworks on public or private property without the express written permission of the owner. Consumer fireworks or sparkling devices within, or throwing consumer fireworks or sparkling devices from, a motor vehicle or building; into or at a motor vehicle or building or at another person; while the person is under the influence of alcohol, a controlled substance or another drug; and consumer fireworks within 150 feet of an occupied structure.

Any person, copartnership, association or corporation who violates this chapter shall, upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to pay a fine not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, plus the costs of prosecution.

The Colonial Regional Police Department is responsible for enforcing the fireworks restrictions in Hanover Township. Call the non-emergency number, 610-759-2200, and identify individuals using fireworks in noncompliance with the ordinance. When calling, be willing to identify yourself, the violators and, if necessary, be willing to appear as a witness for the police.

COVID-19 MEMORIAL: POPPIES, LANTERNS

ArtsQuest, New Bethany partner

In honor of those affected by COVID-19, ArtsQuest and New Bethany Ministries are joining forces to present Poppies of Remembrance, Lanterns of Hope, with proceeds benefiting both organizations. Poppies of Remembrance, Lanterns of Hope features small paper bags illuminated by votive candles participants can purchase and set up at home during the last weekend of Musikfest in August.

The lanterns will honor lives touched by the pandemic and can be dedicated to a loved one lost, those still struggling with the virus' effects or a hero fighting the pan-demie on the front lines. Lanterns are available for purchase in sets of six for $9 per set.

"Poppies of Remembrance, Lanterns of Hope was created to give us all a moment to pause and collectively remember all those we have lost during this pandemic and to also thank all of those who've carried us through these trying times. In order to strengthen our community, it is important that we mourn together, heal together and have hope together," said ArtsQuest president and CEO, Kassie Hilgert. During the Poppies of Remembrance, Lanterns of Hope event, Musikfest performers and attendees will be asked to #PauseTheMusik for a moment of silence in recognition of those we have lost during the worldwide COVID-19 pandemic.

"New Bethany Ministries is proud to partner with ArtsQuest and engage our community in a brilliant display of recollection and respect," said Marc Rittle, executive director of New Bethany Ministries.

Buildings throughout the Lehigh Valley will light up red in collaboration with ArtsQuest and New Bethany Ministries. Confirmed organizations include City Center Allentown, Moravian College, Lehigh Valley Health Network, Blast Furnaces, Nitschmann Middle School and St. Luke's University Health Network. Tony Todd, "How I Learned What I Learned," through July 11, Pennsylvania Shakespeare Festival, DeSales University.

Tony Todd

His love of theater brings film star to Pennsylvania Shakespeare Fest

Although he may be most recognized as the hook-handed ghoul from the "Candyman" film franchise, veteran screen and stage actor Tony Todd shrugs off his horror movie fame.

"I've done a few horror films," he says. "I've done more than 200 films, but I always come back to theater. Theater is my first love. Theater has nurtured me."

Todd is performing in his first live theater production since being sidelined by the pandemic more than a year ago.

He stars in August Wilson's "How I Learned What I Learned," through July 11 at the Pennsylvania Shakespeare Festival, DeSales University, Center Valley, Upper Saucon Township.

The one-man show was originally performed by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Wilson and follows the playwright's life and artistic journey growing up in Pittsburgh's Hill District.

For Todd, it is familiar territory. He has had a lot of experience performing in Wilson's plays. He starred in Wilson's "Fences," about Troy Maxson, a star of the Negro Leagues whose career ended before baseball was integrated.

The play was the second in Wilson's series of 10 plays, known as The Pittsburgh Cycle, which chronicle the experiences and heritage of the black community in the 20th century.

Todd was originally supposed to once again star in a production of "Fences" last year at the Pennsylvania Shakespeare Festival before the season was canceled because of the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic.

The actor worked one on one with Wilson when Todd originated the title role in the world premiere of Wilson's "King Hedley II" in 1999.

"It was quite amazing," Todd says in a phone interview. "August was still alive and I took two years off from films to do that project. So, I know a bit about his quirks and mannerisms. But it's his words that are front and center in this play."

Also at PSF is director Christopher V. Edwards, who was to have directed the summer 2020 "Fences."

"It's been fantastic," Todd says. "It's been a great collaboration with Chris. We only had two weeks to rehearse, but I had started working on the script from home. Once I got here, we fleshed it out."

Todd says that although "How I Learned What I Learned" is technically an autobiography, it is "more about the characters August met at a pivotal time in his life and who created an impact on him."

Todd says in the play he talks about these many characters and then "inhabits them."

"There is a beautiful sequence about August's mother Daisy Wilson when she won a Speed Queen washing machine," he says.

He also portrays a heroin addict, an illiterate man, a nun and the many women, good and bad, in Wilson's life.

"Everyone has both good and bad," Todd says. "It's the human cycle. When you watch the play, you never know where August is going, and then you realize it's not where he's going, but the cornucopia of human experience."

He says the play features projections of moments from Wilson's life. The set is anchored by a writing desk with an old-fashioned typewriter.

"The remnants of his plays are all around like the circle of life," Todd says. "He is giving honor and homage to the people who gave his life meaning."

He says it has been very exciting to be back on stage after being sidelined for so long.

"I was even looking forward to the tech rehearsals because that's when you see the magic come to life," he says.

Todd says that despite his success in film, television and with voice-over work, he has always returned to the stage.

"Theater saved my life," Todd says. "In high school, I was going through a growth spurt and was awkward. One of my teachers gave me a copy of 'The Tempest' and it was like reading a graphic novel."

That experience led the six-foot-five actor to study theater at the Tony Award-winning Eugene O'Neill National Actors Theatre Institute in Connecticut.

"It was a fabulous program and the rest is history," he says. "I got my first film role when Oliver Stone saw me in a play and put me in 'Platoon.'"

Stone saw Todd's performance in "Johnny Got His Gun" at New York's

Richard Wolfe, owner-manager, Roxy Theatre, Northampton, reopening July 2, after coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic-mandated shutdowns.

The Roxy roars back July 2 with 'Cruella'

"We're finally there." Thus spoke Richard Wolfe, who celebrated 50 years in 2020 as owner-manager of The Roxy Theatre, 2004 Main St., Northampton.

The movie theater reopens with "Cruella," July 1-7. Expected next is "Spirit Untamed."

The landmark 550-seat Lehigh Valley movie theater closed March 15, 2020, because of the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic shutdown.

"Those things in and of themselves made it almost impossible for us to run our concession stand because of our limited space."

"The state changed the requirements as of June 28. They were doing away with all of the capacity and social distancing restrictions."

"So, therefore, now when we do open July 2, we can literally go back to the way it was before any of this happened."

In the more than 15 months that it has been closed, The Roxy has made-do on rentals of the theater for private screenings and rentals of its marquee for birthday, wedding and anniversary greetings.

"The vast majority was for movie rentals," Wolfe says of the screenings. "We were averaging six a week"

"We actually had two rentals for one person." What were the most popular 'You show it, I will come' movies?

Make wedding gift check easy to cash in

Dear Jacquelyn,
My nephew is getting married later this summer. I would like to give a check as a gift. Should I write the check to the bride or the groom, or both? I don't want them having trouble cashing the check. What is the proper way to make out a check for a wedding gift?

Dear Reader,
A wedding gift of money is a fantastic and thoughtful way to help a newly married couple start a savings account or buy a new home.

For a couple starting their lives together, it

RESPECTFULLY YOURS
By Jacquelyn Youst

can be far more freeing than a coffemaker ever could be. It also helps if you are unsure of what to give. Checks take the guesswork and worries away from the giver.

However, if the check is made out incorrectly it can quickly lead to a headache. The couple might not be able to cash the check, leaving them in the uncomfortable position of asking you to reissue the check.

If you want to make it easier on the couple, you can simply address the wedding gift check to the groom only. Consider leaving the bride off the check unless you're positive of what her post-wedding name will be.

If you feel this might offend the couple that are eager to share everything, there is another option to consider. Instead, make the check out to Jane Doe or John Smith. By using "or" instead of "and," you'll make it easier for the bride or groom to cash the check.

If you want to avoid the issue altogether, you can always give cash.

This eliminates the possibility of name error and makes your gift immediately available.

Your thoughtfulness and thinking ahead will eliminate any undue awkwardness for the couple.

Respectfully Yours,
Jacquelyn

Celebrating life even in tough times

When was the last time you celebrated life — your life!

When was the last time you saw a day of life as something to celebrate?

What does it take for you to think a day deserves to be celebrated?

Perhaps you'll say it takes a special occasion such as a birthday. Or, spending time with someone you love.

My friend Andy just had a celebration so significant he had to post it on Facebook.

He was celebrating the fifth anniversary of the worst day of his life.

Not too many of us would celebrate a day so bad it's memorable.

But Andy didn't want to forget the day he was at his lowest point in life.

He was lying in a hospital bed feeling so miserable he said he didn't care if he lived or died at that point.

He didn't say it out loud but Andy might have thought life was unfair.

A bachelor at 60 years of age, he finally found a woman he wanted to marry. They had a simple ceremony with a magistrate and thought they were lucky to have found each other.

Just one month after their marriage, Andy knew he wasn't so lucky after all when he was diagnosed with esophageal cancer.

He knew he married the right woman as she proved to be his unfailing support system through his war with cancer treatments.

Little by little, Andy won that war.

"I credit my wife and God for getting me through it," he said.

Five years later, he's still filled with gratitude. "Life is good," he says, "and every moment is precious."

Every moment is precious.

Through the past five years, that's been the uppermost thought in his life.

He didn't just beat cancer and then go on with his life. I don't think surviving cancer changed him into a thankful person. He's always been grateful for each day of life.

Now though, he's more vocal about his feelings of gratitude.

When he says "every moment of life is precious," it's more than just words.

As I've watched him through the years I see so many instances where he refuses to waste a day harboring bad feelings.

He holds on to each day as something precious, something to cel-

Celebrating the fifth anniversary of what he calls "the worst day of his life" just reminds him how fragile life can be ... and of our need to cherish every single day.

He celebrates not just the good days or the special days. Like he says, every day of life is a gift. Last week I wrote about Ken Ryno and his spectacular recovery from life as a quadriplegic. For more than two decades of not being able to move a muscle after a motorcycle accident, he never stopped trying to work his muscles.

Finally, after 24 years his persistence was rewarded and he was able to walk again.

While I was so impressed with Ken for not giving up, I was moved even more by his love of life and by the joy that radiates from within him.

Just in case you're thinking that joy was there only because he could walk again, please take note of what happened years later when failed back surgery again took away Ken's ability to walk.

His joy and his gratitude for life remained.

He's been through more medical trauma than most people will ever encounter. It doesn't take away his appreciation for life.

He and his wife, JoAnn, never waver in their strong faith.

"We hold onto all the joy and we love every moment of every day," says JoAnn.

Are you seeing a theme here?

I hope you realize I'm not just writing about those who make it through illness and infirmity.

This is about those who appreciate all of life. Regardless.

Regardless of setbacks.

Regardless of hardships.

Regardless of loss.

Regardless of changes hard to accept.

Isn't that the challenge for each of us?

It's easy to love life through the good times and the highs.

But isn't it harder to maintain our appreciation of life when everything goes wrong?

That's the challenge we each need to overcome.

Daughter may be too young for team sports

Q: My strong willed four-year-old daughter wants to stop playing in her soccer program even though she has four games left. I told her that she had to go because she had made a commitment to the team. She went, but just refused to play. What do I do?

At four, your daughter is a little young for team sports and the concept of responsibility to a team, said the Family Project panel.

"She has no idea what commitment is. Right now her responsibilities are going to the potty and eating dinner," said panelist Mike Daniels.

Forcing her to stay on the team could have the unfortunate effect of teaching her that "mom will make me sit through things I don't like so I don't want to sign up for anything ever," panelist Chad Stefanyak said.

"Try not to see this as defiance but as independence, because she's making her own decision. It is absolutely appropriate developmentally at this age for a child to not do something if she doesn't want to do it," Daniels said.

Teaching her commitment and to stick to something she started is a good lesson when she's older but now is not the time to teach that lesson, said Stefanyak.

"The is the age when a child should be engaged in running, jumping, climbing and free play. She just may not be ready to take on a team sport. It is great, that you are concerned about teaching her about commitment, but at four she can't quite wrap her brain around it," said panelist Denise Continenza.

Stefanyak suggested asking the daughter what she doesn't like about playing soccer with her team.

"Maybe she doesn't like the coach. Maybe she doesn't like how much time it takes. Maybe she has a problem with some of the other kids. But if you force her to do this it will be miserable for you both, Stefanyak said.

Start a conversation about this Daniels said.

"Say, 'It sounds like you don't think soccer is much fun.' Acknowledge she isn't having fun and let it be OK for her to tell that it's not fun," Daniels said.

The concept of team play and commitment is only just developing at this age, Continenza said.

"Don't give in to parental peer pressure to start children playing sports so young. If she doesn't want to play a sport at this age, that's OK. Free play is still the best for children," Continenza said.

It's understandable that you want your daughter to be around other kids, but you don't want her turned to trying new things, Stefanyak said.

This week's panel: Pam Wallace, program coordinator, Project Child, a program of Valley Youth House; Denise Continenza, extension educator; Chad Stefanyak, school counselor and Mike Daniels, LCSW, Psychotherapist.

Relax, control anxiety with techniques

Q. Are there some good ways to control anxiety without resorting to medications?

You can control anxiety by employing relaxation techniques. When your body is relaxed, breathing slows, blood pressure decreases, and you feel better. This is called the relaxation response, which is the direct opposite of the stress response.

Relaxing can counteract the effects of long-term stress, which may contribute to depression, digestive disorders, headaches, high blood pressure and insomnia.

The techniques I will mention here should not substitute for seeing a doctor about a medical problem. Relaxation techniques are generally considered safe for healthy people, but you should tell your health-care providers about relaxation methods you are considering.

The following are some techniques:

Meditation: Meditation is used to redirect your attention away from the noise of the mind to the inner self where there is silence and peace. There are many types of meditation. You can do it as long as you like.

There are many devices for moving your attention away from your mind. You can count your breaths, repeat a word or sound to yourself, concentrate on a pleasing mental image, chant out loud, recite a prayer over and over.

Most meditation is done sitting in a quiet place. Slow, rhythmic breathing is an important element of meditation.

Deep-breathing:

With deep-breathing, you consciously slow your breathing and focus on taking regular and deep breaths. I like the 4-7-8 technique. You inhale slowly through your nose for a count of 4, hold your breath for a count of 7, and then exhale slowly through your mouth for a count of 8.

Guided Imagery: Also known as visualization, guided imagery is a technique that involves focusing upon images that make you happy. These replace thoughts that are negative and stressful.

Progressive Relaxation: For this relaxation method, you focus on tightening and relaxing each muscle group. Progressive relaxation is often combined with guided imagery and breathing exercises.

Biofeedback: Biofeedback is a technique that you can use to learn to control your body's functions. You're connected to electrical sensors that help you receive information about your body. The feedback helps you focus on making changes in your body, such as relaxation.

Autogenic Training: Autogenic means something that comes from within you. In this relaxation technique, you use visual imagery and body awareness to reduce stress. You repeat words or suggestions in your mind to relax and reduce muscle tension.

Self-Hypnosis: In self-hypnosis you produce a trance-like state in which you have heightened focus and concentration.

Hypnosis is usually done with the help of a therapist using verbal repetition and mental images. When you're under hypnosis, you usually feel calm and relaxed, and are more open to suggestions.

Tai Chi: Tai chi (tie-chee) is practiced in China. A person doing tai chi progresses slowly and gracefully through a series of movements while breathing deeply and meditating. Tai chi has been called moving meditation.

Yoga: Yoga refers to traditional physical and mental disciplines that originated in India. Proper yoga practice combines: physical postures that participants flow into and then hold before proceeding to the next posture; a focus on breathing techniques that make participants more aware of their bodies, and deep meditation and relaxation.

Massage: There are more than 80 kinds of massage that manipulate soft tissue. The purpose of massage is to relax the tissue, increase the flow of blood and oxygen, and decrease pain.

What is your favorite cartoon? Why is it your favorite? Use examples to back up your opinion.

SNOOPY

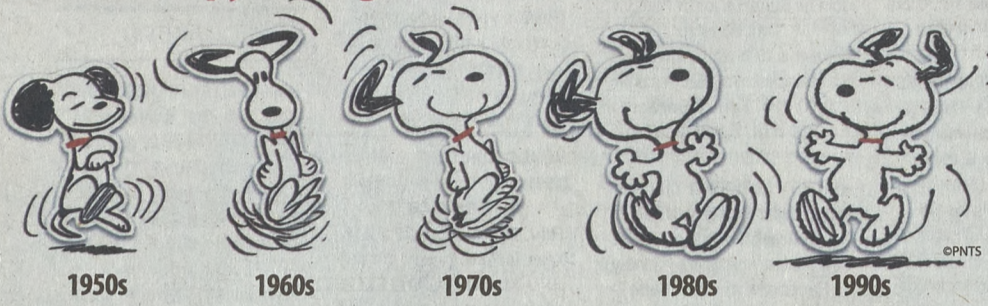

THE MOST FAMOUS BEAGLE EVER!

Snoopy was created as a cartoon character by Charles M. Schulz in 1950. Snoopy is based on a real dog. Schulz had when he was a teenager, named Spike. Spike had a white body with black ears (like Snoopy!) and was a very smart dog—also like Snoopy!

Spike's name was also used for one of Snoopy's brothers. In the Peanuts comic strip, Snoopy's brother Spike lives in the desert and sometimes talks to the cactus!

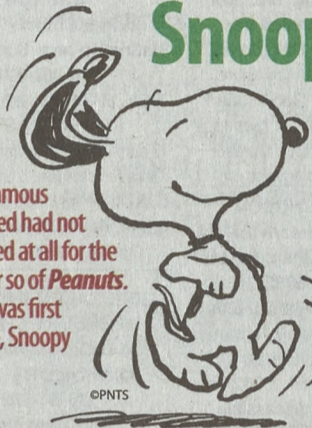

Snoopy Through the Years

Snoopy started out as a small puppy in Peanuts and acted a lot like a real dog. But as the Peanuts comic strip developed, Snoopy grew up, stood on two feet, climbed on top of his doghouse, and had wild, imaginative adventures! Compare the versions of Snoopy. Circle three things about Snoopy that stayed the same through the years.

Snoopy and Woodstock

Although Snoopy is perhaps the world's most famous beagle, his breed had not been mentioned at all for the first 10 years or so of Peanuts. And when he was first called a beagle, Snoopy denied it!

How did Snoopy "meet" his little bird buddy, Woodstock? Woodstock was born in a nest built on Snoopy's stomach one day while he was napping on top of his doghouse. A mama bird laid two eggs in the nest, and two chicks hatched. One of the chicks flew away.

But the other couldn't quite fly right and never seemed to want to go far. That little bird was Woodstock. And Snoopy and Woodstock soon became best friends.

Imagination Takes Flight!

As he sits on his doghouse, Snoopy imagines himself to be much more than just an ordinary dog. One example is the World War I Flying Ace shown above, who is always in search of his enemy, the dreaded Red Baron.

Which of the characters below has Snoopy pretended to be? Do the math under each character below. If the answer is an even number, circle that character in green. If it's an odd number, cross it out in red crayon.

What does Snoopy teach children?

Snoopy teaches us that having an active imagination is not only fun, but important. Snoopy is very creative. He loves to write stories. He also paints, performs puppet shows (which he calls "Pawpet Shows," often retellings of his favorite movies), and he dances a lot.

And Snoopy spreads love and friendship throughout the Peanuts comic strip, especially when he kisses Lucy, even if she doesn't like "dog lips."

Snoopy makes mistakes, too. He often forgets the name of his owner, Charlie Brown. Circle every other letter to find out what Snoopy calls him instead.

The Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit begins construction

The Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit, 3461 S. Cedar Crest Blvd., Emmaus, has started construction on a renovation and expansion of its worship center. The worship center was originally built in 1980 and was in need of an update. The $1.8 million project seeks to expand, renovate and refresh the worship center and lobby; enable livestreaming of services and events and bring the worship center to current Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 accessibility standards. Construction includes replacing the pathway from the parking lot to the worship center with an ADA accessible ramp; adding a new vestibule at the worship center entrance; adding a two story 20 foot by 40 foot addition on the Cedar Crest Boulevard side of the building and installing new carpeting, furniture, audiovisual equipment and lighting.

Until the construction is complete, they will utilize a large tent, recently set up in the church parking lot, for meetings and worship services. The congregation looks forward to occupying the worship center in the late fall during its 60th anniversary year. Until then "All are Welcome" to join them for worship in the tent 8:45 a.m. and 10:15 a.m. Sunday mornings.

upload into our server.”
Some 30 years ago, in the pre-digital movie theater era, Wolfe drove regularly to Philadelphia to pick up two film canisters, each containing two to four reels of celluloid film, and each weighing 20 to 40 pounds.

“Now the movies come in a little box delivered by FedEx or UPS,” says Wolfe.

He not only picked up movies for The Roxy, but for delivery to the Emmaus Theater; The Strand, Kutztown; Shankweiler’s Drive-In Theatre, Orefield, North Whitehall Township; The State, Boyertown; The Grand, East Greenville; The Key, West Hazelton, and the Allen Theatre and Franklin, both Allentown, and The Movies, Hellertown.

Most of these movie theaters have reopened, with the exception of the long-shuttered Allen, Franklin and The Movies.

Shankweiler’s; Becky’s Drive-in, Lehigh Township, and the Mahoning Drive-In Theatre, Carbon County, reopened in June 2020 to ride the pandemic-driven drive-in movie revival.

Wolfe says that according to recent figures compiled by the National Association of Theatre Owners, 70 percent of movie theaters have reopened in the United States. Owners of the Mahoning Valley Cinema, Carbon Plaza Mall, announced April 21, 2020, that it would not reopen.

The pandemic paradigm shift from theatrical to streaming and video-on-demand distribution of movies may have been put in fast-forward.

“A lot of these movies are going out streaming the same day they are in theaters,” says Wolfe.

Walt Disney Motion Pictures Studios is releasing many movies as streaming-only or theatrically and the same day on Disney+.

Paramount Pictures will stream movies 45 days after theatrical release on Paramount+.

Warner Bros. Pictures is releasing movies simultaneously theatrically and on HBO Max, the latter for 30 days only, but is reverting to theatrical-only releases in 2022.

Universal Pictures is releasing movies theatrically and streaming 17 days later.
Sony signed a deal for its films to be released theatrically and on Netflix in 2022.

“All of them are streaming before I can play them. Because I don’t normally get to play them until week six,” says Wolfe. The Roxy is an intermediate and second-run theater.

As of June 28, the Pennsylvania Department of Health is not requiring the wearing of face masks for those vaccinated nor social distancing in seating. Persons who have not received the COVID vaccination are to wear face masks. It’s based on an honor system.

Wolfe doesn’t expect ticket or concession prices to increase at The Roxy, where a movie ticket is $3.

“I just got my new candy order yesterday and only one item went up in price,” says Wolfe.

“Comeback Comedy Series,” 7 p.m. July 8 and 22 and Aug. 5 and 19, will be presented by The Comedy Shop, which produces comedy shows in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, including the Mauch Chunk Opera House, Jim Thorpe, and The Newtown Theatre, Bucks County.

The tradition of concerts at The Roxy is returning.

“We have a couple concerts scheduled tentatively for this fall, an oldies concert and country concert, produced by Bill Reese,” announces Wolfe.

“We’re going to be doing more live attractions than what we’ve done in the recent past.”

The Roxy, which opened in 1921, was host to a legendary WSN concert series 1973 to 1975 headlined by the likes of Billy Joel, Bruce Springsteen, Blood Sweat & Tears, and KISS.

The Roxy’s famous marquee, featured in books and national publications, became a valuable asset during the pandemic.

“The first marquee rental was May 30 of 2020 and the last date will be June 30. And it’s been rented every single day,” says Wolfe, adding, “I had a lot more people who wanted to rent days than the days that I had.”

Several weddings were held in The Roxy, says Wolfe, “And we had our very first wedding reception.”

The Greater Lehigh Valley Realtors held an event in The Roxy. “That was kind of by accident. It was a cold, blustery day. I saw them setting up across the street at Tepes Realty. I said, ‘Why don’t you come over and do it in the theater?’” Wolfe recalls.

After “Cruella” and “Spirit Untamed,” Wolfe doesn’t know what film he will book.

“Most of the films that opened in the last two months were R-rated or horror films or were R-rated horror films. We generally don’t do well with those,” says Wolfe.

Movie times at The Roxy are 7 p.m. Friday - Thursday, and 2 p.m. Sunday and 1 p.m. Wednesday.

“Normally we run two shows on a Friday and Saturday night,” Wolfe says.

Pre-screening music on the new theater organ at The Roxy will be played by Bernie Anderson.

Changes have been made to the stage area for more space, stage lighting and curtains to accommodate concerts.

“Everybody I’ve talked to thinks we’re going to be mobbed when we reopen. I don’t think that’s the case,” Wolfe says of July 2.

“We got to the point where we got very comfortable doing what we were doing. We were not making any money, but we were covering our expenses,” Wolfe says.

He hopes that if and when he shows “A Quiet Place, Part II,” it won’t be quiet in The Roxy movie theater:

“I’m not sure when we reopen that we’ll make enough to cover expenses. It’s a little scary.”

Westbank Theater in 1986, and offered Todd the role of Sgt. Warren in Stone’s breakthrough film.

Todd, with an acting career spanning more than 30 years, has 236 films to his credit on the Internet Movie Database website, including Oliver Stone’s Academy Award-winning “Platoon” (1986), “Lean On Me” (1989) with Morgan Freeman, and Clint Eastwood’s “Bird” (1988).

Todd is best-known for his title role in the “Candyman” theatrical feature film series (1992 - 1999). Todd reprises his role as Daniel Robitaille-Candyman in what’s billed as a “spiritual sequel” to “Candyman,” set for release Aug. 27, with a screenplay co-written by Jordan Peele (Oscar recipient, original screenplay, “Get Out,” 2018).

Todd played William Bludworth in the “Final Destination” movie franchise (2000 - 2011) and voiced The Fallen in “Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen” (2009), for which the opening sequence was filmed at the former Bethlehem Steel Corp. south side Bethlehem plant, now the site of SteelStacks.

On television, he had recurring roles on all three new versions of “Star Trek,” a recurring role on “Boston Public” and guest appearances on “Law & Order,” “Homicide: Life on the Street,” “The X-Files,” “24,” “21 Jump Street” and many more.

On stage, Todd won a Helen Hayes Award for his performance in Athol Fugard’s “The Captain’s Tiger.”

Todd, who says he is enjoying the peaceful vistas of the Center Valley countryside, has worked in the region before.

In 2009, Todd portrayed boxer Jack Johnson in “Ghost in the House,” written by “Ghostbusters” Ernie Hudson and Frank Megna, which was performed at Kutztown University. In 1908, Johnson defeated Tommy Burns to become the first black heavyweight boxing champion.

The production was brought to the region by James “Doc” Ogden, a retired marketing professor at Kutztown University, and his wife Denise Ogden, an associate professor in marketing at Penn State Lehigh Valley.

Todd says the group is in talks to film the play. “I have some connections here,” Todd says. He says the best part is doing what he loves after “a year of lock-down and talking to my cats.”

“It’s wonderful to interact with the other actors and see the joy in their face as they are going to rehearsal,” he says. “There’s a happiness floating around.”

The performance of “How I Learned What I Learned” runs 90 minutes with no intermission. The plays contains adult subject matter, strong language and is recommended for ages 13 and older.

Because of licensing restrictions, the performance will not be available online, as are some of the other shows this summer at PSF.

There will be limited capacity and social distancing for the audience. Theater-goers are required to wear face masks during the performance.

The PSF 2021 Season Sponsor is Douglas Dykhouse. The Associate Season Sponsors are Linda Lapos and Paul Wirth, Kathleen Kund Nolan and Timothy E. Nolan, the Szarko Family, and Harry C. Trexler Trust.

“How I Learned What I Learned” previewed June 29 and 30. Opening night is July 1. The production runs through July 11. Curtain time is 6:30 p.m., Main Stage, Labuda Center for the Performing Arts, DeSales University. Tickets: www.pashakespeare.org; 610-282-9455

Honors graduate Thanh Huynh is flanked by, from left, mom Phuong Nguyen, sister Annie Huynh, brother Ken Huynh and his uncle, Henry Ross. One of the school's top 10 scholars, Huynh plans to study computer science at Boston University.

Graduate Kyleigh Brown cradles her Female Athlete of the Year 2020-21 award as her large family surrounds her. Six of her siblings attended Bethlehem Catholic. Although undecided on a major, Brown plans to join the Lehigh University volleyball team.

From left, National Honor Society members Marcela Bañuelos and Jaden Spigner pose for a family photo op. Bañuelos received five college scholarships to attend Chestnut Hill College, where she will pursue forensic biology. Spigner will attend Franklin & Marshall College to study biology. She also explained that the ribbons worn by them and their fellow grads are in memory of Gabriell Marie Meixell, who passed away in April 2021 at age 18.

Ashley K. Lebron, selected student

Parents: Rosalys G. Paredes

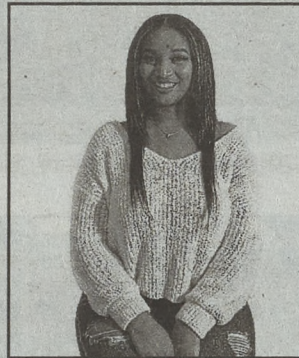

Post-high school plans:

Attend Pennsylvania State University majoring in secondary education with a concentration in social studies. I am also being honored at Penn State as an Education Equity Scholar.

Word that best describes my classmates: Resilient

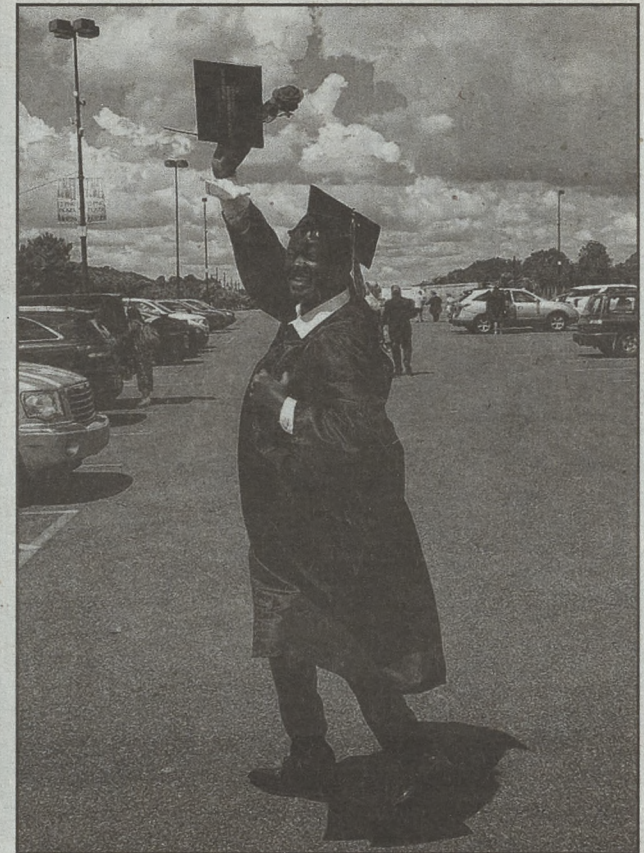

Fondest senior year memory: Literary Arts Senior Night. This event was virtual but we spent about an hour and a half, just reliving our time as students at Charter Arts. I got to share my writing process with our families and friends who couldn't be more than happy to hear it, as well as reminisce with my classmates about our last four years as Literary Artists, and all the moments we shared in class together, as well as outside of school.

A message for incoming freshmen: Do it all. When you first go to high school, you don't really want to get involved in anything because you want to get a feel for the environment and everything around you. While that is totally understandable, I really recommend that you join clubs and you participate in schoolwide events because those are the memories you will take with you and look back on when it's time to go. High school is going to fly by faster than you think, so just do it all and be involved. Go to the dances, and watch the shows. Be there and support your friends in everything they do because those are the people that are going to help shape your view of life and yourself sometimes too! High school is the last time you'll be able to do things as kids before you get hit with adulthood. Live it up and don't waste your time wondering "what if" or saying "but," because those "what if" and "but" moments tend to be the best ones of your life.
