THE BUSIEST ROOM IN THE VALLEY

More than 45,000 people were treated in the emergency room at St. Luke's Hospital last year, making it the busiest ER in the Lehigh Valley.

Dr. John Patterson, chief of emergency medicine at St. Luke's Hospital, (left) looks over a patient's chart in the hospital emergency room.

BY JANET WORSLEY

You never know what's going to come through that door.

That, according to Dr. John Patterson of St. Luke's Hospital, is the best — and the worst — part about working in the busiest emergency room in the Lehigh Valley.

In an average 24-hour period, the St. Luke's emergency room sees the arrival of more than 120 patients, each with a different predicament, some on the verge of death. As chief of the unit, Dr. Patterson has made the uncertainty and chaos of emergency medicine, and the split second decisions that go along with it, his own.

"When you first start out," he said, "it's scary. Now, it's fun."

Fun?

"It's sort of an adrenalin thing, I guess," Dr. Patterson said. "When someone's not breathing, and I can do something to make them breathe again, that's a great feeling."

A nose for a story

St. Luke's is something of a theme in this week's Bethlehem Star. The hospital is the subject of our cover story and this week's editorial.

Personally, every time I hear the name St. Luke's, I'm reminded of the following experience there:

It was the 4th of July, 1992. The city fireworks had just ended and my family and I were gathering our blankets from our customary viewing spot in a parking lot near the Steel's South Side offices.

As usual, the show was top notch, worth the kids' long, antsy wait and even worth the traffic jam I was anticipating on the ride home.

Then, as we made our way through the crowd to get to our car, my 6-year-old son initiated the following conversation:

Ethan: "I think I have a rock in my nose."

Mom: "What?"

Ethan: "I think I have a rock in my nose."

Mom: "Jerry, did you hear this?"

Me: "What?"

Mom: "Our son thinks he has a rock up his nose."

At this point I brought the march to the car to a halt.

Me: "He thinks what?"

Gerald Scharf is editor of The Bethlehem Star

Mom: "Ethan, tell your father."
Ethan: "I think I have a rock in my nose."

Me: "What in the world do you mean you think you have a rock in your nose? Do you or don't you?"

Ethan: "I don't know."
Me: "Argh! DID YOU PUT ONE IN YOUR NOSE?"

Mom: "For heaven's sake, yelling at him isn't going to help anything."

I gingerly pinched the bridge of his nose between my fingers.

Me: "I don't feel anything."
Mom: "I think we should take him to the emergency room."

Me: "Argh! The emergency room! It's the 4th of July! We'll be there for hours!"

Mom: "Well, what do you suggest?"

Me: "Ethan, blow your nose and see what happens."

He did. Nothing happened.

Me: "Now look here, boy. Don't make me go to the emergency room for nothing. Do you have a rock in your nose or not?"

Ethan: (In a tone suggesting that the question was completely out of the blue.) "I don't know."

It took an hour to get to St. Luke's through the traffic. We waited about an hour to see the doctor.

He sat Ethan down, produced a long pair of tweezers and promptly recovered a perfectly round pebble from my son's nose.

The Doctor: "Hey! You did have a rock in your nose, Ethan!"
About a month later I got a bill for $80.

The Bach Choir scholarship fundraiser for its 1995 trip to Germany brought several hundred fans to Cedar Crest College last Friday for a special auction.

Some of the more interesting items auctioned off were:

- A Washington afternoon with U.S. Rep. Paul McHale, $350.

- Party bartending service by Mayor Ken Smith and Dr. Eugene Witiak, a local veterinarian, $400.

- One hundred pieces of sushi, made to order for your party, $140.

- Conduct The Bach Choir of Bethlehem and the Bach Festival Orchestra during the festival highlights concerts next month, $3,300.

Word on budget: Cut it

BY JANET WORSLEY

As discussion continues on what Superintendent Thomas Doluisio has called his most unpopular budget to date, the Bethlehem Area School Board is preparing to make some tough decisions.

During two public hearings in the past few weeks, members of the community have protested the proposed $92.8 million budget, which calls for a tax increase of 19 percent.

"It must be cut," said school board member John Spirk, a sentiment that has been echoed again and again by board members, senior citizens and the unemployed.

Mr. Spirk said that he will recommend cutting some of the 75 percent of the budget devoted to salaries and benefits. "Fewer people have to do more," he said.

He also said that the board should look more closely at programs for disruptive teens and preschoolers for possible cuts. "At age three, the child should be the parent's responsibility," he said.

It is the young people just starting out and the older people with fixed pensions that Mr. Spirk sympathizes with. "They can't afford the taxes anymore, and I have to agree with them," he said.

"I'm going to fight to get the taxes reduced," he said, "I may not get the votes, but I'll be heard."

William Heske, one of the newer board members, said that though all of the items in the budget have merit, the price tag is definitely too high. "The only direction it can go is downward," he said.

The cuts will be difficult, he said, but can be made intelligently. He expects some of the personnel costs to be cut. "I don't think some of the staff increases proposed will fly," he said.

"Some programs are working well, but I'm not sure if we can afford to keep them," he said, citing the program for troubled teens.

Mr. Heske has asked the administration to determine the cost per student of that and other programs.

Mr. Heske said the school district cannot increase the burden on taxpayers with the budget. "We have a lot of problems in our society, and they are reflected in the schools," he said. "It is unfair that property owners should have to shoulder the majority of the responsibility for those problems."

Unlike others who felt the administration presented an unreasonable budget for the board to cut, Mr. Heske disagreed.

"If you don't ever see the program, you don't know what the cost would have been," he said. "There would be no choice involved."

Board member Shirley Bilheimer also said the tax increase would be too much to live with.

"We cannot have a tax increase of any sort," she said.

Last year, she said, the school district was able to keep taxes down with few cuts by drawing on its fund balance. This year, the administration has already included $4 million from the fund balance in the budget, leaving the district without a safety net.

Mrs. Bilheimer said she would listen to all of the evidence presented at the budget hearings before deciding what cuts to make. "I will agonize over every cut I have to make or vote on," she said. "They will come hard."

In particular, she is concerned about making a decision on Reading Recovery, an expensive one-on-one reading program for elementary children. "I support it in

"I will agonize over every cut I have to make or vote on. They will come hard."

tions for cuts. "We have three or four new board members this year, and I would like to hear more from the board before remarking on that," he said.

Craig Zeiger, president of the Bethlehem Teacher's Association, said the union's position on the budget will be released Monday. "The executive council is still studying the budget," he said. "We haven't completely finished formulating our conclusions."

The board will make a decision to tentatively adopt the budget on May 16. Final budget approval.

St. Luke's staff delivers

It happened on a foggy Tuesday night, about 10 p.m. You may have been turning in at that time, or perhaps watching television.

Sharon Wolfe was at work. She was attending the Caesarean birth of Antonia Spano at St. Luke's Hospital. Insofar as any birth can be routine, Antonia's appeared to be just that.

Dr. Richard Baker was attending to Antonia's mother, Karen Spano, whose ultrasound examination a few weeks before hadn't hinted at the potential tragedy awaiting the end of her pregnancy.

Antonia arrived with what Dr. Baker described as a smile.

Nurse Wolfe took her to a warming table where she would be examined and then cleaned up before being presented to her mother.

Part of the examination is an assessment of the baby's health, which is quantified on a scale of zero to 10. A 10 is perfectly healthy. Antonia scored a zero.

At one minute after birth, Antonia's heart was not beating and she was not breathing.

Nurse Wolfe and nurse Patricia Bates then went about the delicate, extraordinary task of reviving a 6-pound newborn infant.

One administered oxygen; the other used two fingers to perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation on Antonia's tiny body.

Five days later Antonia would become one of the youngest children in history to undergo a heart transplant.

The heart of a New Jersey infant, who died of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, was used to replace Antonia's defective heart.

At this writing, Antonia is in serious condition at St. Christopher's Hospital in Philadelphia.

Her surgeon reports that Antonia is making progress and that he is optimistic about her recovery.

Our hopes and prayers go out to Karen and Michael Spano. Any parent — anyone who has loved a child — must feel an empathic connection with this young couple from Bethlehem's West Side.

As we root for this child's quick recovery, we also share this community's great measure of pride in the staff at St. Luke's.

Antonia Spano may have run into a bit of bad luck as she entered this world.

But her luck took a great turn for the better when she found herself in the hands of Sharon Wolfe and Patricia Bates and their colleagues at St. Luke's.

Objects to Star editorial

Dear Editors,

Your editorial of April 21, 1994, slandered me by referring to me as thick-headed and a kook because I persistently oppose the mandatory community servitude program of the Bethlehem Area School District (BASD). I request that in the future you provide substantive arguments in favor of forcing students into involuntary servitude rather than resorting to ad hominem attacks on those you cannot logically refute with rational arguments.

I will continue to oppose BASD's servitude program until it is eradicated because, unlike many people today, I have read and understood the meaning of the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution. These documents name the principles by which free people everywhere must live if they are to remain happy, free and alive. The supreme principle of a civilized society is that government has only one essential function — the defense of the inalienable rights of its citizens.

I will never cease my opposition to violations of individual rights like involuntary servitude because human freedom, prosperity, happiness, and life itself all require as their foundation inalienable individual rights. I am afraid that I must remain committed to the principles of those outdated kooks: Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, George Mason, and George Washington.

A vote for Ferraro for state senator

To the Editor:

I am writing this to let the people of Bethlehem know that I believe Peg Ferraro would make a fine state senator for the citizens of the 18th District. I've known Peg Ferraro both personally and professionally for many years. We have worked together in the Nazareth School District, and I coached her youngest son in football. Without a doubt she has the necessary real life experiences to make decisions that will affect us all.

Many of you may know her name because she is a member of the Northampton County Council. However, Peg Ferraro's experience in public service began at the township level more than 20 years ago. Since that time she has climbed the ladder of local government. Along the way, Peg had raised a family and has also enjoyed a successful career as an educator, always serving the community honestly and admirably.

Peg Ferraro is a real person and has demonstrated her ability to listen. I have seen Peg treat her students as if they were her own. The care and compassion she shows them should be a prerequisite for our leaders in Harrisburg.

Now it is time for Peg Ferraro to take her real-life experiences to the state Senate. I know Peg will fight for the citizens of Bethlehem. It is her goal to enable the people to take their government back and to end politics as usual in Bethlehem.

Sincerely,
Dick Ortwein

Baha'i leader offers corrections

Dear Editor:

I am writing to correct some comments in your coverage of the Baha'i Faith in last week's feature, "Keeping the Faith." I was incorrectly identified as the founder of the local Baha'i community. While I was an elected member of the first local assembly of the Baha'is of Bethlehem in 1974 and continue to be active in the Baha'i community of the Lehigh Valley, I am not in any sense the local founder. The Baha'i Faith has no clergy. Its affairs are administered by elected assemblies at the local, national and international level.

Secondly, the Baha'i teachings go beyond mere toleration of differences. Baha'is believe in the validity and relatedness of all of the world's great religions including Judaism, Christianity and Islam. Baha'is likewise believe in the oneness of humanity and are committed to working towards eliminating prejudice and promoting unity among the diverse religions, races and nations.

I would finally like to say that I enjoyed reading the "Keeping the Faith" article, which serves to illustrate the strong commitment to religious values found in Bethlehem.

Sincerely,
James P. West
Whitehall

UNICO honors students, resident

BY JANET WORSLEY

The Bethlehem Chapter of UNICO, a nationwide service organization, will name its Man of the Year and honor several students with scholarship awards at their Annual Spring Dance on Friday, May 6.

The president of UNICO National, John Botti, will be the main speaker at the event, which will be held at the Glass Slipper in Bethlehem.

UNICO, which means "as one" in Italian, is composed of Italian men and men married to women of Italian descent. Individually, the letters stand for the ideas of unity, neighborliness, integrity, charity and opportunity.

The group gives special recognition to outstanding individuals as well as contributions to charities, such as Dream Come True, the Good Shepherd Home, Toys for Tots and the National Cooleys Anemia Fund. Their motto is "Service Above Self."

Four local high school students have been chosen to receive the Bethlehem Chapter's eighth annual scholarship awards of $600 each. The awards are based on academic record, extracurricular activities and need.

Nicole Russo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nichlos Russo of Bethlehem, will receive the award for Freedom High School. Other scholarships will be awarded to Bethlehem Catholic High School student Robert J. Curzi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Curzi of Bethlehem; Saucon Valley High School student Cory A. Wohlbach, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Wohlbach of Hellertown; and Liberty High School student

John T. Moschella, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Moschella of Bethlehem.

The Marconi Scholarship Award, funded by the Bethlehem, Easton and Roseta UNICO chapters, will go to Stephanie Piccarelli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Piccarelli of Bethlehem. Ms. Piccarelli, who is graduating from Northampton Community College, will receive a $600 award to continue her studies at Penn State University.

William "Bill" Dick of Bethlehem has been selected as UNICO's Man of the Year for his service to the community. Mr. Dick is a volunteer at St. Luke's Hospital, Gracedale Home of Northampton County, and Holy Family Manor in Bethlehem, as well as the American Red Cross and the Visiting Nurse Association Hospice program.

In 1993, he received the Distinguished Service Individual Award from the Pennsylvania Association for Volunteerism and a Certificate of Appreciation from the Department of Aging for Northampton County.

Lehigh to hold convocation

Bank assists Hispanics

BY JANET WORSLEY

The Hispanic American Organization is not only teaching the unemployed how to earn a paycheck, it's also giving them some advice about what to do with it.

With the help of Keystone Savings Bank, the HAO has included in its Workers Dislocation Program seminars on basic banking and finance issues.

The seminars, conducted by employees of Keystone Savings, teach the unemployed about different types of bank accounts, affordable housing plans and how to balance a checkbook.

"Dislocated workers have all the initiative to be financially successful, they just haven't acquired the proper tools," said Frank Kutteroff, president of Keystone Savings Bank.

The Workers Dislocation Program re-educates individuals who have been laid off and cannot find work in their field. The 24-week program retrains people on computers, teaches them interview and resume skills, then helps them to find a job through a job development department.

Keystone volunteered its time to the HAO after one of their students was placed as a teller at the bank. Other companies, such as Allstate Insurance and Prudential, also give seminars as part of the mainly Hispanic program, which comes free of charge through the HAO.

First it's scary, then it's fun

BY JANET WORSLEY

Ten years ago, Dr. Patterson said, emergency medicine was haphazard, far from the science it is today. People who could not get jobs elsewhere, or staff on rotation from the hospital, worked in the emergency room. On average, those employees lasted six years.

Dr. Patterson has been there for close to 13 years, and during that time emergency medicine has become a board-certified field. "It's an exciting specialty," he said, "It's also a hectic one."

It's when the situation starts to feel out of control that Dr. Patterson feels the stress, and the fear, of his job. There is no way to stop the flow of patients coming through that door.

"It's sort of like a McDonald's on the interstate," Dr. Patterson said, because of the unpredictable numbers of patients. "Five people will register in one hour, and then 23 the next."

One weekday afternoon, a rush of patients hit. Each of the emergency room's 18 care areas were filled, each blue curtain sheltered a patient. To add to the turmoil, the hospital itself had reached capacity, so patients waiting to be admitted lined the hallways of the unit; there were no beds to put them in. More patients were arriving by the minute.

By afternoon, the unit had handled three cardiac patients and faced one death. Though scheduled for an administrative day, Dr. Patterson had joined the fray of white and blue coats hurrying around the central station of the emergency room.

Janice Bauer, director of emergency services, said doctors and nurses are often called in when the going gets rough. "You have to gauge what you do, what's necessary," she said. "The meetings can wait."

Waiting is hardest

Behind one of the drawn blue curtains sat AnnaMae Glosek, watching over her husband, Joseph, who had been brought in hours before for high blood pressure and a low pulse. Though she was worried and hungry, Mrs. Glosek said, she was trying to be patient.

"I'm upset, I'm concerned about him, but I know he's being taken care of," she said. "The hardest part is waiting for the doctor to come."

In the hallway beyond her, a man snored loudly, fast asleep despite the activity around him. "At least he's content," Mrs. Glosek said.

Dr. John Patterson, above, chief of the unit at St. Luke's and a 13-year veteran of the emergency room, likes the pace in the busiest facility in the Valley. When beds are full, however, the crowding and waiting can be trying on both medical personnel and patients, like the woman at left, sleeping in the waiting room as she waits to be admitted.

A few feet away, Mary Jane Trembley waited with her mother, Dolores Merwine, who had come into the hospital to have some tests done. Though they had come through admitting, they ended up in middle of the emergency room simply because there was no place else to put them.

Mrs. Trembley was impressed by the activity around her. "It's very busy," she said, "but I guess that's the way it goes. Sometimes they have nobody, sometimes cold rail of the bed, shaking.

The waiting room can seem threatening as well. Mark and Patty Solda of Bethlehem were among those waiting one late weekend night. They had brought their neighbor's 7 year-old daughter in for stitches in her chin. Though the couple was not overly worried about the girl's condition, they said the emergency room can take its toll.

"It's probably the most uncomfortable situation you'd ever want they have an overpopulation."

The hustle of the emergency room is often frightening for patients. En route to a different wing for testing, an elderly woman on a stretcher was left alone for a moment in the midst of the crowded emergency room. She looked around desperately for a familiar face; her own was pale and drawn, made alien by the bluish tubes in her nose. Her lips quivered as her hand gripped the to be in," said Mr. Solda. "You really aren't communicated with."

Mrs. Solda agreed. "People aren't themselves when they're in here."

Everyday emergency

Evening staff nurse Dana Bensinger said the shock of the unexpected crisis and unfamiliar surroundings can be traumatic for everyone involved in an emergency room situation.

"Everyday occurrences can turn into an emergency," he said. "No one in the morning wakes up and thinks they're going to end up in the emergency room."

Personally, Mr. Bensinger was drawn to his job by the faster pace and unexpected nature of emergency room work. "I thrive on the stress," he said.

In the spring, Mr. Bensinger said, the unit sees a lot of out-of-shape "Archie Bunker" types who aren't used to the physical exertion.

"They want to get out and play sports, then they fall down or strain muscles and end up here," he said.

Helping to save patient's lives, Mr. Bensinger said, was rewarding, but not all cases have happy endings.

"The most difficult part is when you just can't do anything," to save a patient, he said. "For me, that's the hardest thing."

Cases climb

In 1993, the unit saw a total of 45,000 patients, a number that has increased steadily by 10 percent a year over the past decade. Life-and-death situations, or "class one" patients, make up 5 percent of the emergency room cases.

Dr. Patterson said that a higher than average percentage of the unit's serious cases are cardiac related, due to the large population of elderly people in the area.

"We don't have much of a knife and gun club here," said Dr. Patterson. Victims of violence or serious accidents are usually taken to one of the area's trauma centers, which are equipped with helicopter pads. St. Luke's helipad is expected to be finished later this year as part of the construction of a new south wing for the hospital.

A quarter of the cases seen in the emergency room are considered "class two." Though class two patients have been stabilized and are not in immediate danger, the patient's condition could deteriorate quickly to class one status.

A majority of emergency room cases, about 70 percent, consist of minor traumas, such as broken bones, cuts and scrapes or other non-life-threatening situations, classified as "class three."

This group includes what Dr. Patterson termed "medical-legal" patients, those who seek basic medical care in the emergency room with their insurance coverage as if it were a clinic. By federal law, the emergency room cannot turn patients away.

"This is their only, or their most convenient, option," Dr. Patterson said, for some have no other access to affordable health care.

As a result, Dr. Patterson often sees familiar faces in the emergency room, and acts as a family doctor of sorts. "I thought I'd miss having patients who knew me," he said. "I get a great reward out of that."

Shad festival to highlight fine cooking

BY JANET WORSLEY

To the Lenni Lenape, the American Indians who first lived in the Bethlehem area, the arrival of the shad was a sure sign of spring. Now, the seasonal migration of the fish has evolved into the 17th Annual Shad Festival, presented by Historic Bethlehem Inc. and the Delaware River Shad Fisherman's Association.

The festival, which will be held

Saturday, May 14, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., celebrates the return of the shad to the Valley's rivers with a professional cook-off, wine and shad tastings, and activities for the whole family, located in Bethlehem's 18th Century Industrial Area.

This year, the emphasis of the festival is on the culinary delicacy of shad. Wine tastings, presented by Alton Long of the American Wine Society, are being offered at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The first tasting will feature the wines of Pennsylvania, with applewood smoked shad roe, smoked shad fillets and other gourmet dishes for $13. The second, for $16, features the same foods coupled with expensive wines.

At 1 p.m., smoked shad will be served with a selection of beers from American micro breweries, presented by John Hansell. The tasting is offered at $13. The professional cook-off, with chefs from the Hotel Bethlehem, Youell's Oyster House and Glasbern, will be held from noon to 2 p.m.

Throughout the day, specialists from the Bureau of State Parks will be showing children how to fish, while teaching them about the importance of clean water. In the children's art tent, kids can make projects which explore the themes of ecology, fish anatomy, and the beauty of waterways.

Demonstrations of rod building, fly tying and fishing techniques will take place throughout the day, and lectures on shad restoration and sport fishing will be held in the afternoon. At 3:30 p.m., the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission will demonstrate "stream shocking," or sampling a portion of the Monocacy's trout population.

The reservation deadline for the festival is May 2, and tickets are nonrefundable. For more information, call 691-5300 or the 24-hour Shad Hotline at 954-0577 or 954-0578.

Moravian Academy is offering a selection of summer programs open to children ages prekindergarten to high school. The programs, which are open to the public, begin June 20 and last until August 12.

The programs include day camps, which feature sports, swimming, drama, crafts and field trips. A science camp for children entering grades five to eight is offered, complete with field trips to the Philadelphia Zoo and several other science spots.

Art camp, French camp and computer workshops are available for younger children. Two sessions of soccer camp will be offered in June, and in July, there are academic classes in math, English, study skills and SAT preparation. A summer stage workshop is also being presented, with classes in acting, speech and theater games. For a free catalog, contact Cathy Spallitta, director of Summer Programs, at 691-1600.

The Rev. J. Thomas Minor, director of Reeves Library at Moravian College, will speak on "Books and the Education of American Women" as part of a chapel service remembering the founding of the school.

The Founder's Day activities celebrate the efforts of Countess Benigna von Zinzendorf, who founded a Moravian girl's school May 4, 1742 in Germantown. The school was the forerunner of today's Moravian College and Theological Seminary. The service will be held Thursday, April 28, at 12:30 p.m. and is free.

A bicycle tour for AIDS awareness makes a stop in Bethlehem on Thursday, April 28. The West-East Foundation—made up of bicyclists Rich Kelleman, Matt Jette and Jamie Long—will be at the Holiday Inn East, Routes 512 and 22, for the 7:30 a.m. meeting of The Bethlehem Morning Star Rotary Club.

The group's local appearance is just one stop in a 25-day, 1,500-mile trek from Athens, Ga., to Boston and eight states in between. The riders have stops scheduled at seven major universities and several service organizations in an attempt to promote AIDS awareness and to raise money for AIDS outreach services and the West-East Foundation.

For more information, call 867-8883.

The annual awards ceremony of Lehigh University's department of military science will honor 32 local students who participate in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at Lehigh on Monday, May 2.

Several community organizations, including veterans groups, academic societies, and service societies will present awards for achievement at the ceremony, which will be held at 4:30 p.m. in Packard Laboratory Auditorium. The event is open to the public. For more information, contact Maj. Scott Taylor at 758-3273.

Registration for the Freedom High School Exploring Childhood Nursery School for the 1994-95 school year will be held on Wednesday, May 11, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. in Room 104.

Children must reside in the Bethlehem Area School District and be 4 years of age by October 1. Parents will need an immunization record and copy of the child's birth certificate on the day of registration. Acceptance is on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, contact Diane Luhrs at 867-5843.

On Saturday, May 7, at the Wildlands Conservancy in Emmaus from 9 a.m. to noon, two certified Master Gardeners will conduct a program on "Spring Sprouts." They will give an in-depth look at gardening with native plants for natural landscaping. Members can attend free of charge and the fee is $2 for nonmembers. Call 965-4397 for further information.

The Lehigh Valley Audubon Society will conduct a birding trip to the Unami Valley Creek area in Montgomery County on Saturday, April 30. Participants are to meet at the K-Mart shopping center on Tilghman Street just off Route 309 at 6:30 a.m. Gary Freed will be the leader of the trip. The public is welcome and no fee is charged. Call 253-6377 for more information.

Candidates vie in primary

BY CHRISTOPHER JUDD

On Tuesday, May 10, Pennsylvania voters go to the polls to pick nominees for the U.S. Senate, Congress, governor, lieutenant governor, state Senate and state House of Representatives. The Bethlehem Star spoke with candidates in the 18th District State Senate and 135th District State House races.

The 18th State Senate District includes Bethlehem, Bethlehem Township, Freemansburg and Hellertown boroughs and the eastern portion of Northampton County. It also covers seven municipalities in Monroe County.

The seat is being vacated by longtime incumbent Democrat Jeanette Reibman of Easton, who is not seeking re-election. The Senate term is six years and the post includes a salary of $47,000 a year plus expenses.

In the Democratic primary:

Robert Freeman, 38, of Easton, has been a member of the state House of Representatives in the 136th District for 12 years. With strong labor and environmental credentials, Mr. Freeman has been eyeing Mrs. Reibman's seat for years, but loyally bided his time.

Freeman

A shop steward and party volunteer before his first bid for the state House in 1980 at the age of 22, Mr. Freeman has long been an advocate of an active government that "looks out for the little guy," as he describes it. This cast him as a liberal in previous races.

However, he now embraces three stances that have long been popular with conservatives. He supports a cut in Pennsylvania's corporate net income tax from 12.25 percent to 10.5 percent. He also supports restoring the net operating loss carry-forward provision, which lets businesses spread large capital costs over several years instead of having to pay all at once.

He wants to ban the burning of hazardous waste in cement plants. He also wants to encourage businesses to reuse old industrial sites by limiting the environmental liability they face to only the waste they produce, not the pollution that already exists at the site.

Re-elected to his seat five times, Mr. Freeman is opposed to limiting the number of terms a state lawmaker can serve.

"I say, let the people decide," he said.

There may be members of the House who served fewer years than Mr. Freeman and attracted more attention. However, few were turning away perks for as long as he. Mr. Freeman hasn't leased a car at taxpayer expense since taking office in 1983, long before perks-bashing became politically fashionable.

Jim Mazza, 52, of Bethlehem Township, is head football coach and director of development and community relations at Notre Dame High School. A former Northampton County councilman, he ran unsuccessfully for county executive in 1989, losing in the primary.

Mr. Mazza proposes a new state lottery to fund basic education and reduce the reliance on local property taxes. The former business owner also proposes establishing a commission of business executives, college professors, accountants, journalists and other citizens to perform an audit of state spending.

Mr. Mazza's tax cut proposal goes further than Mr. Freeman's, slashing the corporate net income tax rate to 8.5 percent over four years.

On crime, he proposes mandatory jail time for people who commit a crime with a gun and wants parents held responsible if their child brings a gun to school. Mr. Mazza also supports more work for convicts to pay their victims.

In the Republican primary:

Peg Ferraro, 55, of Bushkill Township, has been a Nazareth Area School teacher for 21 years and is in her second term as a Northampton County councilwoman at-large. She points to her two countywide election victories as evidence of her strength as a Senate candidate.

Ms. Ferraro said she supported a House-approved tax reform measure that would allow municipalities to institute a local income tax or sales tax in return for a repeal of nuisance taxes and proportional reductions in property taxes. The measure was not supported by her opponent, state Rep. Joseph Uliana, in the House.

The proposal later stalled in the Senate.

"Joe stifled all dialogue for hope — all local options," she said.

Ms. Ferraro proposed an anti-crime package that includes carrying out death penalties after appeals have been exhausted; mandatory sentences for drug crimes that can't be bargained; adult trials for students who bring a gun to school; and after-school and weekend boot camps for juvenile offenders.

To reduce teachers strikes, Ms. Ferraro, an eighth-grade English teacher, proposes incentives for school boards and teachers to reach contract agreements by July 1, when schools' fiscal years begin.

Joseph Uliana, 28, of Laurel Street in Bethlehem, is waging his fourth campaign in six years. In 1988 he was defeated in his bid for the state House of Representatives seat in the 135th District. He was victorious in 1990 and re-elected in 1992. His Senate campaign has been endorsed by the Northampton County and Bethlehem GOP committees.

Mr. Uliana supports a reduction in business taxes, but calls restoration of the net operating loss carry-forward "at least as important" because it would allow businesses to more easily add new equipment, generating more jobs.

As a member of the House, Mr. Uliana said he supported $290 million in spending cuts.

Although he supports welfare reform, Mr. Uliana said the state's medical assistance program "needs major overhaul," including more use of managed care and claims that are handled like HMOs.

On crime, he supports enforcement of the death penalty and mandatory sentences and advocating more personal responsibility.

"I actually have to commend President Clinton on his approach to preaching responsibility, although it sounds more like Bush-Quayle to me," he said.

Uliana

He said he supports, but hasn't endorsed, Tom Ridge for governor.

The 135th State House District includes Hanover Township, Northampton County; most of Bethlehem; the Sacred Heart Church area of Bethlehem Township; and the Seidersville district of Lower Saucon Township.

In the Republican primary:

Martha Cusimano, 51, was born in Buffalo and for the last 23 years has lived in Hanover Township. She spent a decade handling requests, complaints, and information as St. Luke's Hospital's director of community relations.

When asked during a recent interview why she entered what is her first political race, Mrs. Cusimano said "I was recruited by people in the community."

Later, she elaborated: "I did not seek this job. I am running because people in this community wanted a person with strong experience and integrity, who could win this seat in November. Mayor Ken Smith ... encouraged me to run. Elmer Gates, Edward Donley ... have supported my candidacy."

Mrs. Cusimano, whose husband, James, is superintendent of education for the Diocese of Allentown, said she was shut out of the party process that landed Northampton County and Bethlehem GOP party endorsements for her primary opponent, Pam Opp.

She supports term limits in the House and Senate, limiting members of both houses to 8 years in office.

She supports a 2.25 percent reduction in the corporate net income tax rate and would recoup some of the lost revenue by selling off state assets, including liquor stores, and eliminating legislators' walking around money, or WAMs. She said the combined savings would be $670 million.

The week's news in review

April 21-27

AROUND THE CITY

New leader picked at largest steel local

Members of the United Steelworkers union at the local Bethlehem Steel Corp. plant wrapped up a third round of elections by voting in a new leader of its largest local.

Dan Mills defeated Local 2599 President Donald Trexler 597-494 to end hotly contested races — the first since management announced a modernization plan would be scraped and an additional 500 jobs would be eliminated.

Mr. Trexler's running mate, Bruce Hagenbuch, was re-elected vice president over John Toggart. Recording secretary Charlie Kelly and financial secretary Gene Crone were also re-elected. Tim McNally won a seat on the grievance committee. Incumbent committee member Frank Behum did not retain a seat. Locals 2598 and 2600 also voted in several new members, however the presidents did not change.

Bethlehem takes wait-and-sue stance

Hellertown can send its trash to the Chrin landfill in Williams Township until the Bethlehem landfill opens in August, city officials said last week. When the municipal site opens, Hellertown must honor its contract with the city or face a lawsuit, Mayor Ken Smith told city council.

The borough abandoned the agreement after the state ordered the city landfill closed in 1991. It later signed a five-year contract with Chrin at lower tipping fees than the city offered.

Bethlehem is relying on Hellertown's contract to help it pay off a $33 million bond issue to expand and improve the landfill. Contractor bids were higher than expected. Council last week approved an ordinance transferring an additional $1.55 million to the project.

Lawyers claim politics cost them their jobs

Five Bethlehem attorneys have filed a federal lawsuit against Northampton County, County Executive Bill Brackbill and Public Defender Brian M. Monahan, claiming they lost their jobs as assistant public defenders because they are Democrats.

Seeking reinstatement and financial reimbursement are former public defenders Stephen L. Shields, Glenn M. Goodge, Richard J. Jacobs, Barbara O'Neill Reinhart and Nicholas M. Zanakos, along with two Easton attorneys. The seven claim they were not retained by the Republican Brackbill administration because they campaigned for, or otherwise supported, Mr. Brackbill's opponent, incumbent Jerry Seyfried.

The attorneys were all political appointees of either Mr. Seyfried or previous Democratic administrations.

Court orders warrant signed in capital cases

The Commonwealth Court case of Morganelli vs Robert P. Casey ended with a victory for the Northampton County district attorney over the governor.

In a precedent-setting ruling, the court said the governor has delayed review of two local death penalty cases for too long and ordered Mr. Casey to do what Mr. Morganelli of Bethlehem has requested for more than a year: sign the death warrants for Joseph Henry and Martin Appel.

Mr. Henry, convicted of the April 5, 1986 rape and murder of Lehigh University student Jean Ann Cleary, ran out of appeals in 1991. Mr. Appel, who shot three tellers to death during a June 7, 1986, Bath bank robbery, ran out of automatic appeals in 1988 and has asked to be put to death.

Hearings delayed in police shooting

Hearings for two city men charged with possessing stolen guns were postponed on Monday until the hearing for their alleged companion, who was shot by a Bethlehem police officer on March 7, can be scheduled.

Michael J. Mills, 19, of 3011 East Blvd., and Rafael Perez, 18, of 610 Fiot St., were to have gone before District Justice Barbara Schlegel. The two suspects will join Nigel Harvey, 19, in a joint hearing, the date of which has not been set.

The prosecution has also asked Northampton County Court to disqualify Mr. Harvey's attorney, Gary Asteak. The district attorney's office contends Mr. Asteak has a potential conflict of interest because a former member of his office represented officer Jack Fliter in divorce litigation. Mr. Fliter is the patrolman who shot the fleeing Nigel Harvey. State officials concluded the shooting was justified.

Bethlehem baby sets transplant mark

At the ripe old age of 2 weeks, Antonia Spano continued her recovery from heart transplant.

The daughter of Karen and Michael Spano, of 718 13th Ave., received a new heart on April 16 when she was 4 days old, making her the second youngest heart transplant recipient in U.S. history and the youngest on the East Coast. A California boy received a new heart when he was 3 hours old.

Antonia was born with a defective heart on April 12 at St. Luke's Hospital. She stopped breathing soon after birth and had to be revived. The transplant was performed at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children in Philadelphia.

Man rammed cruiser, made threats, cops say

Bethlehem Township police said a 32-year-old Bethlehem man cited for reckless driving got even with police by ramming a cruiser.

Police said Denis Marrah of 2139 East Blvd. was stopped on April 18 and cited after he nearly struck a patrol car in the township. Two days later, police at the station on 5th Street heard a crashing sound outside and found Mr. Marrah behind the wheel of a car ramming a parked police cruiser.

Police said Mr. Marrah smelled of liquor and threatened officers, who later found four .22-caliber bullets in the man's pocket and a .22-caliber gun in his car. Mr. Marrah was taken to Norristown State Hospital for evaluation.

WLVT appoints interim manager

WLVT-TV hired an interim manager and devised a method to handle the departed president's new salary.

In action last Wednesday, the board of directors approved the hiring of Robert T. Weed, 63, as interim manager of Channel 39. Until his retirement in 1989, Mr.

Weed, of Bethlehem, was a vice president for Reckitt & Coleman Inc.

Mr. Weed will be paid $7,000 a month until a permanent replacement for departed president and chief executive officer Shel Siegel is found.

The station also announced a designated giving program in which contributors can earmark their pledges exclusively for programming. The move is in response to the backlash that came after the board agreed to hire Mr. Siegel as a $11,316-a-month consultant.

Weapons: Pit bull better than gun

A South Side man who answered his door to find a gun in his face fended off his assailant with the help of his pit bull. Edwin Echevarria, 24, told police an armed man forced his way inside after Echevarria responded to a knock on the back door of his home at 635 Atlantic St. on Thursday morning.

Mr. Echevarria said he grabbed the .22-caliber handgun and wrestled with the assailant. One shot was fired, striking the door, before the pit bull joined the fray. The dog attacked the assailant, allowing Mr. Echevarria to take the gun. He said the gunman fled east on Pfeifle Street with another man who was wearing a ski mask.

IN THE SCHOOLS

New school district initiatives defined

The school district's plan for the future took shape last week as officials discussed how to spend the $1 million of the budget allocated for new initiatives.

The proposal calls for six elementary guidance counselors, three new teachers and an administrator for the district's developing technology program. Money is also included for reading specialists and training consultants, conferences and fees.

The plan reflects the recommendations of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools and the district's own Strategic Plan Oversight Committee. Superintendent Thomas Doluisio said the program will require little modification in September of 1995, when Outcomes-Based Education is scheduled to begin.

Broughal fires spark investigation

Two fires at Broughal Middle School have resulted in a joint fire and police investigation, police said.

carpet and a bulletin board on the third floor of the building were ignited within days of each other. In both cases, teachers pulled the fire alarm and evacuated the building.

Principal Joseph Santoro and City Fire Marshal Richard Adams spoke to students at an assembly, asking them for information about the fires.

Board hears reactions to school budget

Bethlehem residents spoke out against a proposed school district budget of more than $92 million at a budget hearing before the school board. The budget, which calls for an increase of 3.83 mills would cost taxpayers $191 more per $50,000 of assessed property.

The crowd of mainly senior citizens complained that the school district was taking advantage of people with fixed incomes and urged the board to make cuts. A younger, unemployed man also told the board that the tax increase was not reasonable.

A final hearing will be held Monday, May 2, at 7 p.m. in the Liberty High School Amphitheater.

Superintendent says schools are in trouble

Today's schools are suffering from a value crisis, Superintendent Thomas Doluisio told the Bethlehem Jaycees in an address last week.

There is cause for alarm, Mr. Doluisio said, as children's ethics and values are being replaced by the demands of a society that prefers MTV to literature, short-term gratification to long-term success.

Mr. Doluisio also defended some of the expensive programs included in the new budget as solutions to problems such as school dropouts and the effects of drugs, parent divorce and teen pregnancy on students.

Primary candidates

Mrs. Cusimano also supports capping local property taxes in favor of income and sales taxes.

While she is one of the few candidates to point out that crime was actually down by almost 4 percent in Pennsylvania last year, her campaign targets school crimes. She would have Pennsylvania adopt a California program that protects students who report drug dealers and gun toters. She also wants students who bring guns to school to be tried as adults.

Pam Opp, 38, of Bethlehem, is in her second year as chairwoman of what she calls "the most hated government body around here," the Bethlehem Parking Authority. She is also state Rep. Uliana's administrative assistant in the 135th District. Mrs. Opp said she is counting on the good feeling many have towards her boss to rub off on her.

Mrs. Opp wants to lower the corporate net income tax and reform workers' compensation insurance. She also proposes selling off state assets to recoup revenue.

Mrs. Opp, whose husband, Jeff, is chairman of the city GOP committee, says experience and party loyalty should win her the GOP nomination.

As Mr. Uliana's assistant, she handles questions and complaints about state programs.

"And I have stuffed envelopes" for the party, she said. "My kids have stuffed envelopes. When I was asked to run for city council, I ran." And she almost won.

She opposes term limits. She wants fewer plea bargains in the courtrooms and supports financial restraints for women who have additional children while on welfare.

In the Democratic primary:

Lisa Boscola, 31, of Bethlehem entered the race known by some as the former deputy court administrator for Northampton County, and by others as the sister of Wil Stofko, unsuccessful candidate for mayor.

Through an active primary campaign, Ms. Boscola has succeeded in getting her name and ideas into the newspapers.

The wide range of proposals she unveiled include: consolidating school districts to reduce administrative costs; cutting benefit increases to discourage women from having children while on welfare; reducing the corporate net income tax to 9 percent — the same rate in neighboring New York and New Jersey; setting up registration tables in public places to increase voter registration; and increasing income taxes to pay for a uniform judicial system that would eventually lower costs.

Boscola

Ladd Siftar, 48, of Bethlehem, runs a title insurance company on East Broad Street. He has been a member of Northampton County Council for 14 years and has been an unsuccessful candidate for county executive and state representative.

He is vice president of the County Commissioners Association of Pennsylvania and would become president next year — unless he wins his current race.

Mr. Siftar has run a relatively quiet campaign, holding fewer news conferences than his opponent. A week after a thief broke into the family truck and stole $300 worth of compact discs, he outlined his anti-crime proposals.

Unlike other candidates, he says mandatory sentences have not worked. Deterrence is the key, he says, and better policing, education and jobs programs would make a difference.

Mr. Siftar also blasted unfunded state mandates. He said Harrisburg has continued to reduce its funding for courts and education while increasing the mandates local governments must follow in both areas.

He supports local tax reform and says that while the measure before the Senate is not great, it is the best so far.

He said the state should do more to use technology in reducing the cost of government. He said a computer system installed in the county helped uncover millions of dollars in court fines.

Siftar

"As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is for life."

Opp

It began when I was young and needed advice about birth control. You know, I can still remember my first visit. They sensed I was nervous, but their kindness made me feel comfortable and secure. And they offered a wide range of affordable services that covered all my special health care needs.

When I could afford to go somewhere else, I stayed. Planned Parenthood people are sensitive, courteous and as professional as can be. And everything is confidential.

Now that I'm older, I still go to Planned Parenthood for their midlife services, as they're as caring as ever.

I'm glad I've stayed with Planned Parenthood all these years. They're committed to the special health care needs of women of all ages. They really are for life!

Waiting for Godot

Touchstone Theatre, 321 E. Fourth St., Bethlehem, 8 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, 2 p.m. matinee Sundays, 5/3-5/21, $10-$14, 867-1689.

Imagine a winding, lonely road. A bare tree. A surreal landscape.

And two half-tramp, half-clowns. And then imagine waiting. For a long time. Maybe forever.

If you do, you may find yourself somewhere near the tragicomic terrain of Samuel Beckett's 1953 classic "Waiting for Godot," which opens Tuesday at Touchstone Theatre.

If your theater-going mostly entails traditional musicals and dramas, Beckett's play may seem strange at first. But eventually the witty dialogue and self-conscious passage of time will draw you in and involve you in ways peculiar, entertaining and magical.

Touchstone ensemble members Mark McKenna and Eric Beatty, both graduates of the Lecoq International School of Theatre, use a bit of Charlie Chaplin, a dash of Laurel and Hardy, and a pinch of vaudeville to bring the two characters to life on the theater's intimate stage. The characters are so rich in comic material, they have been portrayed by such great funny men as Steve Martin and Robin Williams.

A weekend of new classical

With the overwhelming popularity of Baroque and 19th century composers, it's easy to forget that some the greatest and most moving music ever written calls the 20th century home.

Both Moravian and Lehigh, along with the Allentown Symphony Orchestra, arrive this weekend to remind us.

With two performances of German composer Carl Orff's cantata "Carmina Burana," the Lehigh University Choral Arts, under the direction of Steven Sametz, and Allentown Symphony Orchestra unfold the folk-based rhythms and dissonant harmonies of what has been called "one of the most exciting pieces of the 20th century." Despite its modern structures, "Carmina Burana" borrows lyrics found in a Benedictine monastery in Bavaria and is based on Latin, Old German and Old French poems. It should also be pretty familiar, as parts of the work have been used in several recent film and television productions.

At Moravian, violist Scott Rawls, and pianist Leander Bien, both of the college's music faculty and both with extensive performance experience here and abroad, will play works by Ernst Bloch, Paul Hindemith and Dmitry Shostakovich. Even closer to our time and place are pieces by Larry Lipkis, the college's composer-in-residence, and David Saturen, another faculty member.

So rollover Beethoven. The 20th century is back.

"Carmina Burana," Lehigh University Choral Arts and the Allentown Symphony Orchestra, 8:15 p.m. Saturday, Packer Memorial Church, Lehigh University; 8 p.m. Sunday, Allentown Symphony Hall, 23 N. Sixth St., Allentown, $10-$8, 758-3839. "Musically Speaking: A Recital of 20th Century Music," violist Scott Rawls and pianist Leander Bien, 4 p.m. Sunday, Peter Hall, Main and Church Streets, Bethlehem, $5-$2, 861-1650, 861-1491 evenings and weekends.

Roots Music Spring Festival

Friday and Saturday, The Acorn Hotel, 451 Lehigh St., Allentown, 437-1180.

There is no finer way to celebrate the coming of the most fertile season than with the fecund sounds of roots music — reggae and the blues.

So that means there's few better worshipping grounds than the Acorn Hotel this weekend, when the Roots Music Spring Festival brings some of the best reggae- and blues-tinged tunes to the Valley.

Friday kicks the whole thing off with foot-tapping and blood-pumping rhythms of Queen Bee and the Blue Hornet Band with special guest the Billy Hector Band. Get warmed up with a blues happy hour from 7-9 p.m. and cool off on the recently reopened outdoor patio.

On Saturday, George Wesley and the Irietations do not plan to slow things down with their traditional island beat. Helping them maintain that authentic beachfront feel is a free Caribbean happy hour from 7-9 p.m. complete with Jamaican brew and punch.

It's must be spring, mon.

Queen Bee

Recent works by Mary Lou Cummings

Bethlehem Town Hall Rotunda, 10 E. Church St., opens Sunday through 5/31, reception 2-4 p.m. Sunday, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday-Friday, 395-2608 or 437-4471 Ext. 517.

The dark, looming towers of Bethlehem Steel reflect dreamily in the shallow waters of a pastoral river. Threatening clouds embrace a rolling, lazy field of green and yellow. Suddenly realistic and sharp onion domes stand stark amid borders brimming with defiant women workers and the propaganda-propelling sculpture of communist workers.

The sometimes realistic, other times impressionistic, always personal and wide-open world of Mary Lou Cummings opens at the city Rotunda this weekend.

Ms. Cummings primarily considers herself an en plein air painter, capturing the light and moods in the fields, rivers and beaches where she finds herself. She also finds inspiration in the art and architecture of foreign lands, which she portrays in strict detail and historic accuracy.

Fortunately, much of her talent stays here at home, where she is a member of the Bethlehem Fine Arts Commission, the show's sponsor. A graduate of Moravian College, she has also studied at Carnegie-Mellon University, the Baum School of Art, and with nationally recognized artists throughout the country.

15 questions

Wendell S. Sherman

By CHRISTOPHER JUDD

Wendell S. Sherman, 67, has been director of public works since 1983. The Trenton, N.J., native spent 30 years at Bethlehem Steel before joining the city. He is married with three children and six grandchildren.

How much did removing all of that snow cost the city this year?

Basically, the total was around $500,000. We just submitted to the state a request for $346,000 in reimbursements.

How much was budgeted beforehand?

Well, we budgeted about $220,000 from our liquid fuels account.

How will the city make up the difference — through the state?

That'll go a long way. We did transfer work from other projects.

What was your first city job?

Right here. I guess I've been here longer than any other public works director. I'm on my third mayor.

Are you registered to vote in the primary?

Yes I am. I consider that a privilege.

Your department removes snow and puts up Christmas decorations in the winter, what do your men do in the summer?

This is the largest single department in the city. It takes up approximately two-thirds of the city budget. It includes the engineering department, streets, the water system, sewage system, the landfill, the electrical bureau...

What's the one dish your wife makes that you really don't like?

After being married for 42 years she tries to make me what I like. And she knows what I don't like.

What were your thoughts

Andrew Shumack

People don't know what it takes to keep a city like Bethlehem running smoothly, says Director of Public Works Wendell S. Sherman.

when Richard Nixon died?

People remember him for Watergate. But I feel he was a good president. He supported those people who worked for him — probably to the point that he said things he shouldn't have.

What does it take to have a pothole filled?

There are two ways. One is that everyone in the department has the responsibility to report potholes in their travels through the city. The second way is people report them. Once located, we have a minimum of one crew, an average of two, and as many as five or six at one time repairing potholes.

How many of the complaints that you receive are from repeat complainers?

I would say probably half are people who would call to complain about anything. There are maybe 5 percent that you can recognize their voice.

Would the proposed increase in tourism make your job more difficult?

I think tourism is very important to the city. I do think it has to be done right by keeping in mind the people who live here 12 months a year.

Any changes in the snow removal process planned for next year?

We just had a meeting... We have to remember that this was not a typical year and we can't panic. But, there are a few things we're considering. Over the years we've increased snow emergency routes to the point that we cannot handle them all. It doesn't mean we won't clear these routes. We're also looking at alternate-side parking on snow routes. We have to first talk to cities that have it.

Do you hold out hope that Hellertown will agree to use the city landfill before the issue ends up in court?

I hold out hope, yes. We've always gotten along in the past. I think we will work things out.

Will the city have enough users to pay for landfill expansion?

We've already planned for all of the waste generated within the city to go to the landfill. Only 5,000 tons comes from outside the city. I'm confident we'll be able to meet that.

Do most residents understand what it takes to run the city?

I don't think the average person understands what it takes. I know in my previous time, I was a critical as everyone else. When I came here I found lots of qualified people who do their job.

NEW THIS WEEK

PCU (PG-13)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley; United Artists, Easton

The cup that holds your coffee is a threat to the environment, the hamburger in your bun comes courtesy of a murdered animal, and the girl that you've asked out is a woman, you clod. You've just had your first lesson in political correctness from Port Chester University — or "PCU."

Starring Jeremy Piven ("Judgment Night," "Singles"), David Spade (from "Saturday Night Live"), and Jessica Walter ("The Group," "Play Misty For Me"). Screenwriters Adam Leff and Zak Penn last collaborated on their first original screenplay, "The Last Action Hero."

The Favor (R)

United Artists, Allentown; AMC Four, Palmer Township

Class reunions are bad enough, but it gets even worse afterward. And it all starts with a favor.

Elizabeth McGovern is a woman who agrees to a strange request from her best friend (played by Harley Jane Kozak) about another man, and the trouble in this comic chain of misunderstandings and misinformation begins.

Brad Pitt ("True Romance," "A River Runs Through It") also stars

No Escape (R)

United Artists, Allentown; United Artists, Easton

It's 2022. You've done something unspeakable. Now you're going to a place even more unspeakable — prison.

In this tale of good bad guys and really baaaaad bad guys, Ray Liotta ("Goodfellows") is one of the former trying to save his skin from the latter in a futuristic prison with no walls and no guards and almost no hope of survival.

Dowell ("Four Weddings and a Funeral") and Drew Barrymore ("Poison Ivy"), chaps, spurs, ten-gallon hats and all, go out to settle the score in this feminist-revisionist western.

Don't you dare call them little ladies, you sexist varmint.

Brainscan (R)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; United Artists, Easton

Frank Langella played one of the creepiest Dracula's ever way back when. Now he's back in "Brainscan," which promises to be an interactive trip to hell.

This gruesome car wreck on the information superhighway finds a bunch of hormonally charged teens accidentally unleashing electronic evil while playing a virtual-reality game.

Four Weddings and a Funeral (R)

The Boyd, Bethlehem; General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; County Theater, Doylestown; AMC Four, Palmer Township

Director Mike Newell has given us something truly unique: a love story presented in an unusual and fabulously clever manner.

Hugh Grant is splendid as Charles, an Englishman who is consistently late and completely incapable of committing to a serious relationship. As the film opens, Charles rushes to a wedding, in which he is the best man, dressing en route and naturally forgetting to bring the wedding ring. After the somewhat improvised ceremony, he meets Carrie, a lovely, somewhat frisky American vixen played by Andie MacDowell. Smitten by the American's charm and blunt nature, Charles falls easily into her arms, only to watch her leave for home the next morning.

The remainder of the movie follows Mr. Grant as he goes from wedding to wedding to funeral to wedding. Nearly every scene takes place either in or around a chapel, and at every ceremony he runs into Carrie. This fiendish plot technique, the magic of screenwriter Richard Curtis, allows us to watch as Charles slowly comes to understand the meaning of true love, overcoming his natural fears of devotion.

Really the only poor performance is by Andie MacDowell, who seems to think her beauty can compensate for her lack of acting effort. Fortunately, despite top billing, her character is seen rather infrequently.

Director Newell hinted with his "Enchanted April" that he can bring the charming, if occasionally stuffy, appeal of uppercrust English life very successfully to American audiences. With "Four Weddings and a Funeral" he has proven this, fourfold.

The Inkwell (R)

United Artists, Allentown

The year: 1976.
The place: Martha's Vineyard

The cast of "PCU," a college comedy opening at General Cinema Theaters, Lehigh Valley Mall, and United Artist Theaters, Easton.

The people: Budding young adults about to come of age.

The result: They find out a lot of scary, sad, sexy and funny things about life.

Surviving the Game (R)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall

The icy Rutger Hauer ("The Hitcher") and a truly psychotic Gary Busey ("Under Siege") are the nasties who pursue rap bad boy Ice-T in this action-thriller about five hunters who seek the ultimate "kill" by hunting a human being. One of them has a conscience that gets in the way. But not for too long.

Cops and Robbers (PG)

United Artists, Allentown; United Artists, Easton

In an effort to bring Chevy Chase back from the dead comes the comedy "Cops and Robbers." With help from the brilliant, if neglected, Jack Palance, "Cops" places Palance in the role of the straight-laced police officer who must move in with a family to keep an eye on the house next door.

This could be Chevy's last chance.

White Fang 2: Myth of the White Wolf (PG)

AMC Four, Palmer Township

This is the sequel to the 1992 adventure "White Fang," about a boy and his half-dog, half-wolf and their adventures in the wild. This time the fearless pair must help save an Indian tribe from starvation by finding caribou.

Directed by Ken Olin, the film stars Scott Bairstow as the kid, Charmaine Craig, Alfred Molina and Geoffrey Lewis.

Threesome (R)

United Artists, Allentown

Yet another hip Generation-X flick. This one finds two guys and a gal accidentally thrust together into one apartment. She's beguiling and feisty. He's gay and in lust with the other he, who is in lust with the feisty female ... or is it she's in love with the semi-closeted gay roomie ... or ... ?

Nevermind, it's cool, it's bohemian, it's full of meaningful literary references and it's soooo '90s, the era when it's hip to be confused.

Starring Lara Flynn Boyle, Josh Charles and Stephen Baldwin as the threesome. Andrew Fleming directs.

Major League 2 (PG)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley; AMC Four, Palmer Township

Charlie Sheen, Tom Berenger and Corbin Bernsen are back on the roster this season with the return of the jock-humor baseball flick.

Once more, "America's favorite team" promises to come at you with tobacco juice a-flyin', crotches a-scratchin', and slapstick a-plenty. Even Bob Uecker shows up for a swing or two at humor.

The War Room (NR)

County Theater, Doylestown

Sometimes disturbing, more often hilarious, "The War Room" is a documentary with an attitude in the vein of "Roger and Me." We are taken into Command Central for the Clinton campaign, where Gen. James Carville and First Lt. George Stephanopolous chart out the rocky, sound-bitten course to the presidency.

From the first minutes when Clinton hushes a boisterous hotel room as listens silently to that first call about that other woman, to the final frenetic, tear-filled moments on election night, this insider's glimpse of Carville (The Ragin' Cajun) and his diminutive but intensely loyal henchman peels back the skin of politics, and — surprisingly — we find people.

Mighty Ducks 2 (PG)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; AMC Four, Palmer Township

Those slipping, sliding, slap-sticking Ducks are back on the ice for some more sampling from the classic kids-vs.-adults move "Bad News Bears."

This time fame is theirs, along with all the temptations and silliness that entails. The bad guys in this version are — guess the Cold War has left us without a ready supply of goons — those nasty foreigners from Iceland.

Emilio Estevez ("Repo Man") returns for another batch of abuse as the begrudgingly kind-hearted lawyer-turned-hockey-coach. And all those little ill-behaved (but, darn, if they ain't cute) kids are back, too.

Naked Gun 33 1/3: The Final Insult (PG-13)

General Cinema, Lehigh Valley Mall; United Artists, Easton

Three words for the type of humor presented in the three Naked Gun films: lowest common denominator. This is by no means a criticism.

In "Naked Gun 33 1/3", allegedly the final installment in the trilogy of Lt. Frank Drebin, the boys from TV's short-lived "Police Squad" are up to their old tricks, as well as a few new ones. Leslie Nielsen, the incorrigible Drebin, has gone into retirement and now plays house-husband for his lovely wife, Priscilla Presley. Naturally, O.J. Simpson and George Kennedy manage to talk Drebin out of his pink slippers and back into a squad car, being as he is the only one incompetent enough to catch the bad guys, in this case a group of terrorists.

The plot is, at best, predictable, which is fine because it really is the least important facet of the film. The fun lies in watching the brutal onslaught of sight gags, physical comedy, and general silliness we have all grown to love (or hate). Fortunately, director Peter Segal and producer David Zucker were smart enough to show no pride; this movie is ridiculous, it is meant to be, and they milked it for every chuckle they could get, no matter how cheap. Unfortunately, many of the gags have gotten a bit tired. Granted, the dramatic conclusion at the Academy Awards show is a stroke of brilliant comedic lunacy, but still a large portion of the movie is like eating leftovers ... for the third night in a row.

Philadelphia (PG-13)

United Artists, Allentown

Jonathan Demme, the director of the Academy Award winner for best picture of 1991, "Silence of the Lambs," returns with, believe it or not, the first mainstream Hollywood film to deal with the touchy subject of AIDS. It's been over 10 years since the disease first began claiming its victims.

The story explores both the isolation AIDS sufferers feel, and suggests that if homophobic hysteria didn't surround the disease then AIDS discrimination might not exist.

In the City of Brotherly Love, Tom Hanks portrays hard-working gay lawyer Andrew Beckett who is fired from the firm where he works after being diagnosed with AIDS. Beckett decides to sue the law firm that wrongfully discriminates against him.

After nine lawyers refuse to take his case, Beckett finally hires Joe Miller, a heterosexual, homophobic personal injury lawyer played by Denzel Washington. Jason Robards, Mary Steenburgen and Antonio Banderas also star.

Schindler's List (R)

United Artists, Easton

Director Steven Spielberg once again turns his creative eye toward making a serious, mature film. By some accounts, it looks like he's finally gotten it right with this three hour, 15 minute epic about the Holocaust, filmed in black and white. Themes of corruption, greed and unintentional heroism are explored in this story adapted from Thomas Keneally's book about a German industrialist who exploits Jewish slave labor, but grows over time to sympathize with the camp victims.

On Deadly Ground (R)

The Roxy, Northampton

Action-film star Steven Seagal returns to the silver screen after his last commercial success, "Under Siege," in another big budget action blockbuster. Seagal, in his directorial debut, casts himself as an oil-rig worker who winds up fighting with his bad guy ex-boss (A greasy-looking, dark-haired Michael Caine) who's messing up the Alaskan wilderness.

Our hero teams up with environmentalist Joan Chen ("The Last Emperor," "Twin Peaks") to protect the area's people. Expect lots of gunplay and things that blow up real good amidst the consciousness raising.

Far Away, So Close

County Theater, Doylestown

Director Wim Wenders brings his much-awaited sequel to "Wings of Desire." Continuing the poetic tale of the angels who walk among humans, and the longings of each, Wenders constantly probing camera follows the path of a "fallen" angel.

Peter Falk returns to the sequel, which has added Willem Dafoe and Lou Reed to the cast.

Bonn, Germany, in a World Cup Tournament as a member of the under-15 U.S. Fencing Associa-

Jedediah Dupree is a foilist in the sport of fencing, and a very good one at that. The Moravian Academy 14-year-old will compete Saturday in Bonn, Germany, in a World Cup Tournament as a member of the under-15 U.S. Fencing Association National Team.

four boys to make the historic team thanks to his outstanding performances in three qualifying competitions in Indiana, Chicago and Arkansas, the last held in February.

He left Sunday from JFK Airport at 5:15 p.m. and flew with his teammates to Deutschland.

For two days out of the week, Jedediah Dupree's life has become routine.

Every Tuesday and Friday afternoon, he rushes home from school and gets his necessities together.

It's time for practice.

His parents prepare picnic-like dinners to take in the car, a 1993 Volvo station wagon that has already accumulated over 50,000 miles for Jed's extracurricular activities.

The car is warmed up and ready to go — to Manhattan. Practice begins at 6:30 and can run as late as 10:15. He'll be more concerned with sleep than his studies on the way home — school makes no allowances for athletics — so he knows that his homework should be completed on the trip up. That is, of course, if his car sickness doesn't affect him first.

What does he think of his hectic schedule? "I would do this every night of the week if I could."

Jed, a 14-year-old freshman at Moravian Academy, spends Tuesday and Friday afternoons at the New York Fencer's Club in Manhattan improving on every lunge, riposte and parry.

He is a foilist in the sport of fencing, and a very good one at that. Jed will compete Saturday in tion National Team.

This is the first year that the age category will compete for international honors. Jed is one of both excited and apprehensive about the trip. "I feel really lucky to realize that they (the United States) have started to send kids over to Europe at an earlier age. I have no clue how much better they (Europeans) are."

Sightseeing will be minimal, as Jed says he and his team will focus on watching their opponents perform.

The Europeans may have a surprise waiting for them in Jed, who was taught by his father how to fence at the same time Jed learned how to walk. William B. Dupree, a pathologist at the Lehigh Valley Hospital Center, was a standout foilist at Dartmouth College, where the fencing program is no longer in existence.

"I didn't quite know what I was doing," Jed said about his earliest recollections of his start in the sport. "I thought it was fun."

Fun, perhaps, and also rewarding. At his first-ever competition, the seventh annual Santelli Open Junior Foil Championship in New York in the spring of 1988, Jed, then a third-grader, took first place among a total of 30 kids.

He later took top honors at the Clarion Cup in Colorado, and soon the interest in the sport became passionate. He has since earned numerous trophies, medallions and certificates in the five years he has competed on the

Liz Brode

By TOM HARPER

A history lesson: Who had never won the Patriot League women's lacrosse championship until this year? Lehigh.

Who was the major reason for that? Junior Liz Brode, of course. The junior co-captain scored four goals, including the game-winner with 33 seconds to go in regulation, and added an assist in the Engineers' 14-13 decisive win at Lehigh on Tuesday to earn them their first-ever Patriot League championship.

Lafayette had won the past three titles before Lehigh pulled the upset.

Ms. Brode, a native of Blue Bell, Pa., totaled seven goals and two assists in three games last week.

For the season, the 5-foot-9-inch attack winger leads the Engineers (9-5, 4-0) with 59 points, 42 goals and 17 assists. In Patriot League action, she leads the team with 15 goals and ranks second on the team with four assists.

Her high-scoring profile doesn't stop there. Heading into last week's action she ranked fifth in Division I competition in total points.

"She's well up there in league and national statistics, but it's not her scoring that impresses me so much," said Coach Jackie Keeley. "It's her overall game. She goes end to end for us. She can go deep into a defense and become an extra defender."

"She came into the program as a freshman with average skills. Her work ethic has allowed her to progress to the point where she is today."

Ms. Brode and her teammates still have a chance to gain a berth in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championships on May 13-14. The Engineers will learn of their fate on May 2.

national circuit.

His success is not limited to fencing, however. Jed played last year for the under-13 state select soccer team, and is currently traveling around Pennsylvania trying out for the under-15 squad. This season for Moravian Academy, which won the District XI Class 2A title, he was named the team Most Valuable Offensive Player.

Still, his preference would be fencing. "Fencing is more of a mind-body game. You have to be thinking all of the time; it's extremely taxing. Soccer is more of a team sport. There is a little pressure taken off you as an individual."

Fencing has been called by some as chess standing up. That's right. It is one of the most fiercely individual sports, a craft in which precision and exact, fluent movement are the fundamental principles of technique.

From a historic perspective, the sport has carried a nobility and sophistication about it since its birth in France in the late 1800s. Dukes would learn the sport as a means of defense, and of social status. A cut from a blade on the face from a bout signified rank and wealth.

Today, the attraction fencing once had falls in the face of ignorance. Olympic coverage of the sport, if any, appears somewhere in the late-night time slot, when the only people awake are insomniacs and partygoers whose interest in the sport ranks far beneath table dancing and emptying glasses.

The beauty and elegance does not, however, escape the eyes of aficionados like Jed. And through his own accomplishments, he hopes to bring some well-deserved attention to his sport.

"I want to make people in the area aware of fencing," Jed said. "Usually, I have to explain to people what fencing is about."

Some time down the road, this soft-spoken two-sport athlete may compete in the Olympics, where the United States has not a medalist in fencing since 1964. He may just carry home the gold and return to the Lehigh Valley.

Until then, he'll just have to worry about car sickness, long practices — and about being the best young foilist in the area.

Schedule of featured courses:

- Woodland Hills Country Club – 5/5
- Center Valley Club – 5/12
- Locust Valley – 5/19
- Southmoore Golf Course – 5/26

TIPS FOR PLAYERS

This par 71 course has been around for over 65 years – and its many mature trees and shrubs have made it increasingly challenging.

Teeing off on most holes requires more accuracy than distance. Bunkers – there are 46 in all – on the fairways are frequently deep and devastating to scores.

Doglegs abound on the course. But the bend of nearly every dogleg is reachable with a 3 wood from the tee. Average golfers should leave their drivers in the bag on this course. That will help keep them out of the woods.

The easiest hole on the course is deviously followed by the hardest. The fourth hole (par 4, 328 yards) is considered the easiest, despite its slightly elevated tee and sloping green from back to front. It is the second shortest par 4 on the course. The shortest is the seventh (318 yards).

But then there is the fifth hole, a 433-yard, par 4 gem that includes three bunkers at the green and an out of bounds area that stretches for the last 100 yards of the hole on the left side. The second shot here is crucial. Use a medium/long iron and try to land the ball on the front part of the green.

The longest hole is No. 2, which stretches for 610 yards (par 5) and also includes an out of bounds area on the left side of the fairway. Keep your second shot to the right side to avoid the trees.

A small pond guards the green on the 14th hole (rated the second hardest on the course). This hole demands a straight tee shot. Then you must decide to either go for the green on your second shot, and risk dropping it in the pond, or lay up in front of the pond. Remember: no guts, no glory.

Only two of the back nine (the par three 15th and 17th) are under 300 yards. The slope on the 15th green is fearsome. The 17th has a wickedly deep trap and trees on the left of the green. Either hit the green or be right on this hole.

Sandwiched in between is the 515-yard, par 5 16th hole. The third shot is important here because, in addition to being well-bunkered, anything hit long beyond the sloping green (from back to front) can result in an easy double bogey. Stay below the hole here; the same rule applies for the 18th as well.

The 13th (the third most difficult) provides a challenge with its uphill layout. A long tee shot to the left will enable you to see the elevated, well-bunkered green on the second shot. A slice off the tee here guarantees a bogey at best.

BY CHARLES G. HAFNER

Irishman's ode contained code

Among the most richly memorable experiences of time spent in the early 1950s in Washington, D.C., were the summer evening concerts by the armed forces bands on the bank of the Potomac River. Hearing one of their renditions of the national anthem there — Lincoln Memorial to the rear, Lee Mansion lighted high above the opposite shore overlooking Arlington Cemetery, with Iwo Jima Memorial in clear view nearby, and the lights of Memorial Bridge individually reflected on the river's rippling waves — is indeed an impressively moving experience. May it ever be so for all who would recall and reflect with intelligence and perceptive sensitivity on all that is involved in that experience.

I also remember people I worked with. Recently I took out a valued book by a former colleague, Winifred Schumann's

Charles G. Hafner is a retired social studies teacher who lives in Bethlehem

"Miscellany of Poems, 1798-1968." Winifred and her husband, Al, worked in our office. We corresponded with cards, etc., for some time after I left the agency, but as years passed communication declined. In 1969, I received notice of the publication of Winnie's book, the first of several, and wisely purchased it. Winnie, both artist and poet, and well accomplished at both, was a former biology teacher from Tennessee. Half of the book consists of Winnie's fine poems. The other half contains poems by her ancestor Anne Stuart, cousin of Prince Charles, and poems by her grandmother, Euphemia M. O'Connor. There is only one poem by Winifred's great-great-great uncle Arthur O'Connor, but the story of that poem is fascinating.

As soon as Arthur O'Connor landed safely on French soil, he sent word back to his comrades in the Irish Rebellion with instructions on the right way to read his poem.

George, Scotland. En route to his new prison, he wrote and distributed a poem that dramatically attested to his loyalty to the English Sovereign and repudiated the revolution. With the published reversal of his loyalty, the British released him, and O'Connor fled to France.

As soon as he landed safely on French soil, he sent word back to his comrades in the Irish Rebellion with instructions on the right way to read his poem, which turned out to be a remarkably brilliant ruse and clever piece of political poetry. When read according to his code (first line of first verse, first line of second verse, etc., alternating verse and line accordingly) the poem became a praise of the rebellion and repudiation of the King of England.

- "A Political Poem"
1. The pomp of courts and pride of kings
  3. I prize above all earthly things.
  5. I love my country, but the King,
  7. Above all men his praise I sing.
  9. The royal banners are displayed
  11. And may success the standard aid.
  2. I fain would banish far from hence
  4. The rights of man and common sense.
  6. Confusion to his odious reign
  8. That foe to princes, Thomas Paine!
  10. Defeat and ruin siege the cause
  12. Of France, its liberties and laws!

Read in numerical sequence (Arthur O'Connor's code) the poem is a proud pronouncement of Irish patriotism. Thus a brilliantly creative literary effort won Arthur O'Connor his freedom and a proud place in Irish history as a leading patriot, a literary talent that would continue on to a distant descendant I had the privilege and good fortune to know.

Arthur O'Connor, who became a general of the French army, was awarded the Knighthood of St. Louis, married the daughter of the Marquis de Condorcet and bought the old French castle, Mirabeau. The Irish historian, D.J. O'Donoghue, in 1906 said of O'Connor, "General O'Connor's career in the French service would have been more notable but for the inveterate dislike of Napoleon for this officer." Winifred Schumann proudly closes her commentary on her famed ancestor, "Arthur O'Connor lived and died a fighter for the rights of liberty and freedom for all men in Ireland and France."

Camouflage serves the woodcock well. This one was found at Wild Creek Reservoir in Carbon County.

elusive woodcock

BY ARLENE KOCH

Hiding out in the open

When I purchased my first set of bird call tapes my husband laughed. I would sit for hours listening to a faceless voice announce the name of the bird, which was then followed by a taped recording of the bird itself.

Arlene Koch is president of the Lehigh Valley Audubon Society.

Taken away from their habitat, some of these songs are pretty funny sounding, to say the least. But to David, nothing came close to being as funny as the nasal "peent, peent" call of the American woodcock. He thought it was so funny, in fact, that once he even played it for some friends who had come to visit, much to my embarrassment.

Even though woodcock breed in every county in our state, it's not really that easy to find them without a little effort. The time and place have to be just right.

The person most likely to know where they can be found would probably be a small-game hunter.

The first tales I ever heard about the strange behavior of this chunky little bird came from conversation between my father and his brothers many years ago when they used to meet at our house to hunt for small game together on the first day of the season.

The best time of the year to find woodcock is between late March and early May. The birds migrate up from the south very early in the year and the males start their courtship ritual as soon as they find a suitable spot. As dusk approaches, the male woodcock ascends to the sky, his wings making a twittering or trilling sound. When he reaches the desired height, he goes into an elaborate flight display, flying around in circles calling, and then he suddenly plummets back toward the earth. As he comes down fast in a ragged zigzag motion, his wings now make a whistling, almost warbling sound.

This behavior is sometimes repeated over and over again in the first hour of darkness and can be seen and observed as late as the second week of May, even though some birds are on eggs by that time.

But in order to observe this spectacle you first have to know how to find this long-billed little shorebird that's adapted so well to living in upland habitat. And doing so isn't always easy, because the habitat woodcock need is rapidly disappearing.

These members of the dowitcher family require a number of things to make them happy. First of all, they need an open, shrub-free area in which the male can do his thing.

This open spot is called a "singing ground" and can be as small as one-eighth of an acre if other requirements are met. It must be accompanied by shrubby thickets or young trees not too far away where the bird can make its nest. And the soil in the singing ground must be moist because woodcock feed almost exclusively on earthworms.

Meeting all those requirements in our increasingly suburbanized world is anything but easy, so it's not surprising that the woodcock population is in decline and will probably remain that way. Not too long ago, abandoned farms left to grow over offered ideal habitat for these birds, but now this land is often being turned into housing developments. And the farms that do remain are big because they have to be in order to survive, meaning that there are acres and acres of large open fields with no surrounding vegetation. Woodcock will not breed in a place like that. That's why it's hard to find them in the Amish country surrounding Lancaster.

When you get that close to a woodcock it's impossible to misidentify it because of its long bill, its bulkiness, and its fat head with the large "pop" eyes. And I can't think of any other bird that would be in that habitat which would let you practically walk right up to it before it took off.

Locally woodcock are present in Jacobsburg Park and on the Walter Tract on South Mountain near Emmaus.

news & notes

Bird watch

Spring migration activity has birders in the area very busy. Favorite birding spots are seeing visitors like they haven't seen since last fall. Early warblers such as the pine, palm, yellow-rumped, and yellow are being reported, and it won't be long before some of the more unusual ones show up. That will happen as soon as the leaves bud out and insects start collecting around them. In the Bethlehem area, Monocacy Park is a great place to bird.

A few feeders in the area have reported evening grosbeaks making short visits. These birds with the big bills are definitely just passing through back to the northern woods, as are the pine siskins and the few common redpolls that are still around.

Eastern meadowlarks, on the other hand, are coming in and setting up territories. This large brownish and yellow songbird inhabits open fields and brushy areas and can be seen and heard singing from low perches. The fields surrounding Leaser Lake are home to a good population of them, but they can be found in any similar habitat.

Green Pond, south of Route 22 near the Route 33 intersection, is still a hot spot. This week an osprey, a great egret, common snipe and a cattle egret were there. The cattle egret is a medium-sized white heron with a buffy crown of feathers on its head and is a rare visitor to Northampton County. Local birders who keep county lists were clamoring to see this bird this week, but it didn't stay around long.

The spring hawk migration is at its peak, with the broadwing movement underway. Two hours one morning this week on Baer Rocks, which is about a mile along the Appalachian Trail southwest of the parking lot for Bake Oven Knob, produced the following birds: 11 osprey, 43 broadwings, 3 sharpshin hawks, 3 redtail hawks, 1 northern harrier, 2 Cooper's hawks, 13 double-crested cormorants, 9 common loons, and a variety of smaller migrating songbirds. This raptor migration peters out by the second week in May but can be fantastic the last two weeks before it ends.

INTRODUCING VOLVO AFFORDABLE PRICING.

Reality usually seems to have a subtle, deflating quality to it. An almost given acceptance of what could have been, especially to the needs of a family on a budget.

Bet with Volvo's Affordable Pricing Program, which is available on all our 1994 cars, that changes. Now the attainability of the Volvo 940 becomes more of a reality than ever before.

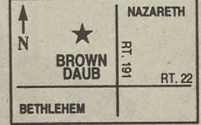

Because not only does the Volvo 940 offer safety features you would expect of cars priced higher, these features are all standard as well.

The rationale? Certainly nothing earth-shattering.

Simply, to make our reputation for safety more attainable to those people who value that quality in an automobile.

Drive safely.

CONSIDER THAT...

• Deiter Brothers and Walters Oil have each been in business for more than 65 years here in the Lehigh Valley.

And we'll be here to take care of your heating or air conditioning for decades into the future. (Not every contractor can honestly promise you that.)

• We don't cut corners! Because we buy in volume direct from the manufacturers, we don't have to cut corners on installation quality to deliver competitive prices and value.
