

Brubaker, John H.

Sought the Enemy, Meets Mom While in Brubaker's Command

News dispatches last week told how Lieut. Col. John H. Brubaker, of Easton, formerly commander of Battery C, 213th Anti-Aircraft Regiment of this city, had been showered with novelties by the natives on the Isle of Gozo, because Tony Pace, one of his men, was among the soldiers in the Bofors defense. Tony and his pals went out to rout the enemy from his home town and after they had cleared it, the young soldier found his mother, pictured with him above. Pace came to America 15 years ago to seek his fame and fortune. He enlisted and wound up in Brubaker's outfit.

September 2, 1943