NORCO Council rebukes its GPA

Seeks resignations

BY BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

In a strongly worded resolution that reads more like an indictment, Northampton County Council issued a harsh rebuke to the county's embattled General Purpose Authority (GPA) at its June 21 meeting. By an 8-0 vote, with Peg Ferraro abstaining, members are asking for the resignations of GPA Chair Shawn Langen and GPA solicitor John Lushis. They have also requested this independent body to refrain from marketing public private partnerships, also known as P3s, to other entities.

How do you celebrate freedom?

Earlier that day, Ferraro resigned from the GPA, followed by J. Michael Dowd. Both are former county council presidents.

Northampton County's seven-member GPA, first established in 1999, has traditionally acted as a conduit for both taxable and tax exempt bonds to help finance public and private projects, mostly with hospitals and universities. It also provides loans and grants. All this changed in 2016, when it became the lead agency in a public private partnership plan (P3) to refurbish or replace 33 county-owned bridges at a cost of $38 million, with the work to be done by Kriger Construction. Although the bridge project itself appears to be on track, the problems began when former Executive John Brown decided to employ John Lushis - already solicitor for the GPA - to research an expansion of P3 to other projects without approval from county council.

Lushis and his law firm (Norris, McLaughlin and Marcus) have received $813,039 from their affiliation with the GPA in 2016 and 2017. This includes $153,343 for "special legal services" in 2017. This arrangement was contrary to the county's Administrative Code. There was no competitive negotiation, no written See NORCO on Page A5

U.S. Air Force veteran Alan Yuknis puts the finishing touches on his display, after having had to replace parts of it that were removed by somebody over Memorial Day weekend. He says he has installed a security camera and is looking into other security measures to deter any future dishonoring of his family's salute to military veterans and those who serve in law enforcement.

Restoring the respect

BY DANA GRUBB
Special to the Bethlehem Press

When Bethlehem Township resident Alan Yuknis awoke Memorial Day, he found that somebody had broken off the toy M-16 rifle and removed the plastic military helmet from a roadside display he had installed at the corner of his property, which honors men and women who serve in the military and law enforcement.

Originally, the display was set up only on Memorial and Independence days but in 2017 Alan and his wife, Carol, decided to let it stand year round. Up until this past Memorial Day, all he had received were compliments. Then the aforementioned items were stolen, along with the blank dog tags draped over the rifle.

Yuknis has restored the display, and he says he'll continue to do that despite the recent thievery. In addition, he has installed a security camera, since cameras at the nearby Bethlehem Area Vocational Technical School were unable to show who or at exactly what time the pieces were stolen from his memorial.

His daily reminder to all passersby is back in order and the former Air Force SP (security police) sergeant says he will continue to show those who have served and still serve the respect and honor they deserve.

Church garden continues to grow

BY MARK KIRLIN
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Christ Lutheran Church's "Love Grows Here" community garden in Hellertown is a multi-faceted organic only garden intended to provide fresh vegetables for those in need in the community, as well as to teach responsible planting techniques.

Originally, the church had a garden half the size in the front. In October 2017, the church started construction to move the old garden to a larger area in the back of the church property. The new site allows for more crop planting and easier access for vehicles bringing supplies in and out.

A team of at least two dozen volunteers consisting of family and friends of the church built the new garden. In addition, the old beds, which were made out of wood, were replaced with aluminum siding donated by Kunsman Roofing, with assistance from Kevin Gough. Each bed measures 12 feet long by 3 feet wide.

The garden project is spearheaded by Angela Drake, who is the Community Garden Project leader, with assistance from Nancy DeVogle and Lou Savant. According to Drake, the garden helps supply local food banks and two senior housing centers. Plans are also in the works to bring vegetables to homebound seniors.

In addition to donating fresh produce, Angela and the others help assist those who want to learn more about organic gardening. Topics covered include pest control, soil control, planting techniques, gathering, timing of harvests and ways to keep gardens organic by avoiding pesticides and synthetic fertilizers.

Crops are grown between March and November and donations to the community are made between May and November. Crops are often changed and rotated. The current set of crops includes kale, lettuce, melon, snap peas, spinach, red cabbage, beets, cauliflower, carrots, lima beans, broccoli, cucumbers, egg plants, peppers, tomatoes, squash and blueberries.

In addition to maintaining the community garden, volunteers at Christ Lutheran also make meals for New Bethany Ministries in South Bethlehem. The church also donates non-perishable foods to New Jerusalem Food Bank, helps build houses for Habitat for Humanity, holds bingo and social events for seniors at the Front Street apartments, along with other various outreach activities.

Who Can Pay So Much?

Dr. Oswald J. Smith told of a Russian Czar who loved to disguise himself and mingle with his subjects. One night, while visiting barracks, he noticed a young officer asleep at a table with a loaded revolver and a note listing a number of gambling debts. Under the long list of debts the officer had written, "Who can pay so much?" Stooping over, the ruler wrote under the question, his own name--Alexander, and quietly left. When the officer awoke he picked up the revolver and raised it to his forehead. Before pulling the trigger, he glanced once more at his list of debts. Startled, he saw the Czar's name boldly written there. He realized the Czar had been there! He dropped the gun; and sure enough, the next morning a messenger came with a bag of money from the Czar--enough to pay his debts!

Each of us has an enormous debt of sin that we are utterly unable to pay. Upon conviction of our massive debt of sin we ask the terrifying question, "Who can pay so much?" The answer comes from God's Word: Christ! "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them" (2 Cor. 5:19). The account is settled when we confess and repent of our sins believing in Christ's atoning death on the cross and receiving Him as our Savior. "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John 1:12). In our church we sing a chorus written by Ellis J. Crum, "He paid a debt He did not owe, I owed a debt I could not pay; I needed someone to wash my sin away. Now I sing a brand new song--Amazing Grace. Christ Jesus paid a debt that I could never pay."

contract, and nothing is on file in Procurement. Though Brown paid over $100,000, he never sought council approval. No final report was filed.

When Lamont McClure took office as county executive, he stopped paying Lushis's bills, as well as another set of bills from GPA Chair Shawn Langen. The GPA responded by hiring yet another set of lawyers from Philadelphia in April, who billed $30,000 for 20 days of work, and are seeking permission to sue the county.

In the meantime, former executive Brown and Lushis have been marketing P3 projects to other entities.

Calling the GPA a "rogue authority," Executive McClure asked council to review what is going on, and Finance Committee conducted a meeting on June 20. GPA Chair Shawn Langen had complained that the meeting would be nothing more than a "dog and pony show," but at a special meeting convened June 18, he reluctantly agreed to attend.

When it was established during that meeting that former executive Brown was paying Lushis in contravention of the Administrative Code, and from a fund that was supposed to be used for a jail study, Council President Ken Kraft called it a "misappropriation of county funds. This is spending something we never approved," he declared. "What we approved was an update to a decade or so old jail study that was done under the John Stoffa administration," added John Cusick. "At no point was it ever brought to council that this would be done as part of a P3 project."

Throughout the meeting, GPA Chair Langen kept suggesting that county council lacks the understanding that he and his board has of high finance. But when Lori Vargo Heffner asked Langen to tell Council what he does that makes him so qualified, he refused.

"I'll answer questions as they relate to the finance of this project," he told Heffner. "I have about 12 more minutes before I have dinner for 10 people. You gave me less than a week's notice during working hours"

Heckman then reminded Langen that he got plenty of notice but said he wanted a formal letter. "You were aware that we wanted to have this, so please, let's stick with the facts," Heckman admonished him.

Bob Werner, who proposed and was a strong advocate for a bridge bundling project in 2013, supported the P3 for bridges. But he now is leery of P3, and who is benefiting. He mentioned that Lushis went to Columbus, Ohio, to pitch the mechanism "This thing has been abducted and kidnapped by a couple of people for profit," he asserted.

In recent months, Executive McClure has appointed two new members - Frank Pintabone and Paul Anthony - to the GPA. The sudden resignation of Peg Ferraro and J. Michael Dowd means McClure is now in position to appoint two new members. Having made four appointments to a seven-member board, McClure appears to be in a position to stop P3 marketing and excessive legal bills.

Finding freedom every day

How do you celebrate freedom?

In the mid-20th century members of my family and I would often gather midday on July 4 to watch the television broadcast of the movie musical "1776."

Holiday picnics and fireworks would happen later in the day.

Among my favorite scenes in the musical remains the discussion among John Adams, embodied by William Daniels, Thomas Jefferson, portrayed by Ken Howard, and Benjamin Franklin, played by Howard Da Silva, about choosing the national bird. Adams prefers the eagle. Jefferson suggests the dove. Franklin backs the turkey, describing it as "noble...native American...the sustenance of our original settlers" and "an incredibly brave fellow."

I don't know about you, but I'd never thought of a turkey as a "brave fellow."

In her book "The Glorious Fourth: An American Holiday, An American History" researcher Diana Karter Appelbaum details the actual scene set to music described above. Congressional debate about what would become the Declaration of Independence ended on the evening of July 4, 1776, a Thursday and "America officially became an independent nation," Appelbaum writes.

News of the break with Great Britain spread through the colonies, officially via copies of the document, then read aloud. Celebrations, according to Appelbaum, began in Philadelphia, Easton and Trenton, N.J., July 8, a Monday. Appelbaum described the scene in Philadelphia, where bells rang all day long, crowds gathered, the militia paraded and celebrants built a bonfire to burn a wood carving of the coat of arms of King George III, monarch of Great Britain at the time.

Since then, those in the United States of America have marked the anniversary of the nation's birth with parties and picnics, bike parades, concerts, fireworks displays and celebrations of all kinds. Lincoln biographer Ronald C. White Jr. notes the cornerstone of the Washington Monument was laid July 4, 1848. Abraham Lincoln, then a member of Congress, was present.

Lincoln revered July 4, according to many biographers and his own writings and speeches. It is July 4, 1776, which Lincoln references at the start of the Gettysburg Address. And the room where the Declaration of Independence was signed in Philadelphia's Independence Hall was a stop on his trip by train as president-elect from Springfield, Ill. to Washington, D.C., for his inauguration in February 1861. Writer Daniel Stashower describes Lincoln, from witness accounts, as emotional, "his head bowed before the portraits of Jefferson, Adams and Madison."

In his remarks at the scene, according to Stashower, Lincoln said, "I never had a feeling politically that did not spring from the sentiments embodied in the Declaration of Independence." Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation would echo Jefferson's declaration when it became federal law Jan. 1, 1863, a Thursday, declaring freedom for all slaves in slave-holding states.

Lincoln's document would spark celebrations of its own, significantly one in Texas more than two years later.

On June 19, 1865, a Tuesday, Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger, Headquarters District of Texas, Galveston, issued an order that, "in accordance with a proclamation from the Executive of the United States, all slaves are free," See VIEW on Page A6

Firefighters complete training

BY JIM MARSH

Special to the Bethlehem Press

Sixteen area volunteer fire departments added 26 firefighters to their ranks when the new firefighters completed a rigorous five-month course and received their certificates of completion June 19 at a ceremony held at the Lower Macungie Township Community Center.

This was the ninth annual Bucks County Fire Academy course held twice a week from January to May at the Allentown Fire Academy, at the Allentown Fire Department Mack Station at 1902 Lehigh St., near the Queen City Airport.

The 192-hour course is held in Lehigh County annually for area volunteers so they do not have to travel to Bucks County Fire Academy in Doylestown, an hour to an hour-and-a-half each way, as was the case until Lower Macungie Fire Department Chief Dave Nosal initiated the arrangement in 2009 for the Bucks County unit to come to Allentown.

Nearly 300 Lehigh County area volunteers have received the local training since the program was initiated.

The Public Safety Training unit at the Bucks County Community College provides training for first responder units in 11 counties in southeastern Pennsylvania with national and state level fire, rescue, emergency medical and hazardous materials training, and professional certification. The certification is portable and recognized by fire departments across the country.

The firefighting skills training included building construction; basic interior firefighting skills; fire behavior; forcible entry; personal safety equipment; self-contained breathing apparatus; ropes and knots; search and rescue; vehicle fires; wildland fires; and hazardous materials.

Among training modules, in addition to the 112 hours in basic firefighting, the volunteers learned life-saving and first-aid skills, and learned how to recognize, evaluate and deal with hazardous material incidents. The hazardous materials training covered events as small as an antifreeze spill at a motor vehicle accident scene, to incidents as intimidating as weapons of mass destruction.

Lead instructor for the training was Lt. Christopher Groller of the Allentown Fire Department. He was assisted by several other state-certified trainers.

Jeffrey Broadhurst, of the Weisenburg Volunteer Fire Department was recognized by instructors as the most outstanding student in the course. Jason Jesmain, of the Emmaus Fire Department, was recognized with a spirit of leadership commendation.

Commencement speaker Douglas Snyder, a field supervisor with the Pa. State Fire Academy, challenged the graduate to always strive for the next level of training.

"If you get to the point where you think you know everything about firefighting," He warned, "it's time to get out of the fire service."

scholar Henry Louis Gates Jr. notes. Granger, Gates explains, was more than just a few months late. However, celebrations spread on what is now known as Juneteenth, an amalgam of the month and the day. A new anniversary of freedom was marked by readings of the emancipation document, religious sermons, picnics, games and parades. "Juneteenth celebrants dressed in their finest clothes" and floats featured such symbols as "the Goddess of Liberty," Gates writes of the holiday observances.

Iterations of freedom come in a variety of ways in the present day.

In recent years Independence Day celebrations have been broadcast on television and streamed from such locations as Philadelphia, Boston and Washington, D.C.

Professional athletes have expressed their concerns for freedom in symbolic gestures before games. Musicians have composed songs to demand freedom on behalf of others. Sculptors, painters, dancers and other artists have used their talents to express their perspective of freedoms lost, gained and expected. Actor Howard Da Silva, the actor who played Benjamin Franklin in the movie "1776," mentioned above, lost his freedom to work in the film industry for nearly a decade after he was blacklisted in the wake of testifying before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in 1951. Da Silva eventually was cleared of all charges in 1960 and resumed his film career, including his starring role in "1776."

And in their mission, the U.S. armed forces protect the freedoms guaranteed in the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence.

However, it is often in the seemingly mundane events day to day where celebration of freedom is made poignant.

On June 25, a Monday, several Emmaus High School students stood before East Penn School District directors to express their concerns about the freedoms of fellow students and friends potentially being treaded upon.

"We embrace our differences," Jeremy Sanville, president of the EHS Class of 2019, is quoted in a June 27 article in The Press.

Independence Day is a national holiday where freedom should be celebrated with fanfare, parades, picnics, music and fireworks. But freedom also is lauded every day in brave acts such as those of Jeremy Sanville.

So, again, how do you celebrate freedom today? Tomorrow? Every day?

Freedom's varsity cheerleaders recently returned from Pine Forest cheerleading camp where they won multiple awards.

The Patriots took the top spot as overall game day champions.

"That's a pretty big one. There were a lot of good teams," said Patriot coach Breanna Bishamber. "The girls work on a new routine and build on their skills, and then get evaluated on that and perform it."

The squad of 16 also won first place in game day small varsity and first place in sideline chant.

"The judges were looking for strong voices, tight, sharp motions, and their interaction with the crowd," Bishamber said.

The Patriots took overall second place in rally routine and second place in cheer.

"I'm used to going to camp at the end of summer when they've had a chance to work together and get to know each other, but their skills are getting better now than they were at the end of last year," said Bishamber, who also saw the Patriots becoming a team. "They learned a lot of good stuff at camp."

Senior Tatiana Francis was named an 'All-American,' giving her the opportunity to go to London in the near future.

"It's a hard thing, and a lot of girls try out," Bishamber said.

In addition to camp and summer conditioning sessions which began last week, the Freedom cheerleaders are hosting several fundraisers.

This Thursday, Panera at 4442 Southmont Way in Easton will donate a portion of the proceeds from customers' purchases to the Patriots when customers present the flyer currently posted on the Freedom cheerleading twitter account.

Lehigh Valley's run in the Carpenter Cup Softball Classic came to a surprising end last week when Lehigh Valley lost a three-run lead in the seventh inning and was eliminated by Tri Cape, 8-7, on Wednesday at FDR Park in Philadelphia.

"They were a good team. We only beat them 1-0 the game before," said Lehigh Valley coach Blake Morgan. "They keep coming, and you have to stop them."

Tri Cape scored first, but Lehigh Valley took a 3-1 lead. The two teams traded runs and were tied 4-4 after five innings.

Mya Zettlemoyer (Allentown Central Catholic) broke the tie in the sixth inning with an RBI, and Lehigh Valley was back on top.

Lehigh Valley scored two more runs in the top of the seventh inning, making the score 7-4, but Tri Cape tied the game in the bottom of the seventh and then won on a 2 RBI single.

"If only you could take back a handful of plays," Morgan said. "These kids give up their time after a long high school season, a long summer season, and Mondays (the start of the Carpenter Cup) are usually their day off, but they played."

Kylie Hlay (Parkland), Peyton Stauffer (Salisbury), and Abbey Sechler (Parkland) all had triples against Tri Cape. Hlay's triple came in the seventh inning, and she scored Lehigh Valley's final run on a fielder's choice.

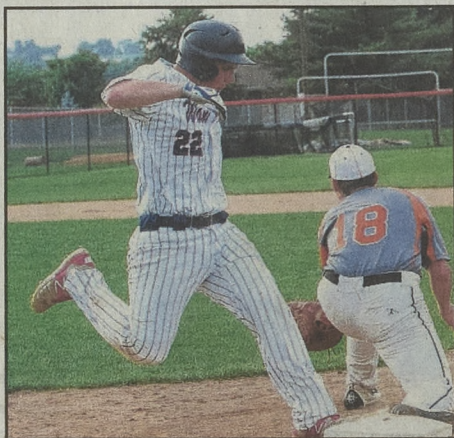

Kelly Dulaney (Parkland) and Hlay each had a double in the game.

The end of the road for Lehigh Valley came fast, and even after playing four games in one day, the team wanted to continue.

"They were great," said Morgan. "We have good softball in this area, and people look at the name on their jerseys, and I'm sure they think, do they play hard, do they play the right way, are they respectful?"

After Lehigh Valley coming in fourth the last two years Morgan would like to make a breakthrough, but more than anything, he will see next year as another opportunity to work with great kids.

It's coming down to the final week of the regular season for Norco Legion and the Wanderers are still jockeying for position with Nazareth and Northampton.

The Wanderers came into this week with a 12-3-1 record, good enough to be sitting in third place behind Northampton (11-3) and first place Nazareth (12-2).

Staying in the top-three would be ideal for head coach

Dwight Pulieri, but he's also more than happy with how this season has unfolded for his group.

"Going into every Legion season it's hard to really anticipate how the season will play out as far as wins and losses go," Pulieri said. "We felt in the beginning that if we had all of our players available we would be able to compete with anyone. But as it is with all the teams in our league that is not realistic. So to be this far into the season and to be where we are record-wise, we, as a team, are very happy."

The Wanderers have two games slated for this week, both against Wilson (4-8), which should help their status heading into the postseason.

"As far as the playoffs go, seedings are only seedings and what is more important is how you're playing as a team at that time," Pulieri said. "The playoff teams

FHS aims for an encore

BY PETER CAR

Freedom hopes it can muster together another impressive summer performance when the A-Town Throw Down takes place this weekend.

After the Patriots finished fourth in the Cedar Beach Basketball Showcase two weeks ago, Joe Stellato and the program are looking for an encore performance this weekend.

"SportsFest is always an exciting time for high school basketball fans," Stellato said. "We played great in Bash at the Beach and are looking forward to this upcoming weekend. We ended up in the semifinals losing to Emmaus by single digits. We are excited to give it another run and play different teams."

The Pates are in a pool with Hempfield, Palisades and Muhlenberg this week. Liberty and Bethlehem Catholic are also competing in the tournament, as the Hurricanes are paired up with Chambersburg, Notre Dame and Lincoln Leadership. Becahi has Hershey, Salisbury and Brunswick (NJ) to battle.

After having a slow start to the Cedar Beach summer league this year, Freedom found a way to turn up its play at the Bash at the Beach with a full-court press style.

Stellato knows teams will be more prepared for that this weekend, but still feels they have enough to make another run deep into Sunday's final day.

"I feel we do so well in the summer tournaments due to our coaching staff taking them very serious and demanding that all the players show up for the tournaments," he said. "A lot of teams do not have a full team and we also catch them off guard by playing a full-court game and pressure defense really giving teams a fit. We also have a lot of players that play AAU and have been playing in tournament format all summer."

In Lehigh Valley's third game on its second day in the Carpenter Cup Softball Classic last Wednesday at FDR Park in Philadelphia, Lehigh Valley had its biggest victory with an 11-0 win over Inter-AC/Bal. Perhaps it was the momentum Lehigh Valley was gaining after winning the first two games of the day, or the bonding that was solidifying by the time the third game rolled around that led to the shutout. "It happened fast, probably between the first two games [on Monday]," said Lehigh Valley coach Blake Morgan. "They started to talk more and bond." The game against Inter-AC/Bal ended in mercy rule after five innings. Hannah Palinkas (Emmaus) and Emily Silberman (Salisbury) pitched for Lehigh Valley. Silberman also had a double that scored three runs. Lehigh Valley scored seven runs in the second inning, one run in the fourth inning, and three runs in the fifth. Hannah Boggs (Northampton) and Abbey Sechler (Parkland) had two hits apiece against Inter-AC/Bal, who only had four hits in total.

was a force play," said Roche. By game's end, Lehigh Valley produced 13 hits, and Suburban One had six hits. Lehigh Valley scored its final run in the fifth inning. "We definitely came together on Wednesday, and our friendships were stronger, and I think that's why we played so well," said Roche.

Morgan Karasek (Bangor) had a triple, and Addie Roche (Bethlehem Catholic) had a base hit that scored two runs. Zariah Alvin (Easton), Mya Zettlemoyer (Allentown Central Catholic), and Karasek had two hits apiece against Burlington County. Burlington County came back with two more runs later in the game and finished with seven hits. "We were a little nervous about it, but we felt defensively really strong, and that we could knock down the balls they hit," said Roche. Burlington County had a total of seven hits, and Lehigh Valley had nine.

EYE ON THE IRONPIGS

Danny Espinosa to give Pigs, Phillies infield depth

BY CHUCK HIXSON
Special to the Press

With injuries to infielders Pedro Florimon and now J.P. Crawford, who could miss as much as six weeks with a broken hand, the Phillies went in search of some infield depth. Who they found was veteran Danny Espinosa, who turned 31 in April.

It was just in 2016 when Espinosa seemingly perked up his career when he hit 24 home runs with the Nationals. Before that season, Espinosa had 68 career home runs over six seasons with the Nats. One outstanding issue was the surging home run number made his average drop from a career .230 level from 2010 through 2015 to just .209 in 2016. Following that season, Washington dealt him to the Angles for Kyle McGowin and Austin Adams and things started to go downhill for Espinosa, who the Nationals drafted in the third round of the 2008 draft. The Angels released him last July after he hit .162 in 77 games. He signed a minor league deal with Seattle and returned to the majors for eight games and hit .188 with the Mariners. He was released in August and signed with Tampa Bay where he again played in eight games but hit .273 giving him some hope for the 2018 season.

Espinosa signed a minor league deal with the Yankees in January but was released two months later only to sign a minor league deal with division rival Toronto. In 13 games with Triple-A Buffalo, Espinosa hit .232 but was again released at the end of April. From there, it was another minor league deal, this time with the Dodgers and he played in 19 games and hit .150 before being released again at the end of May.

In signing with the Phillies, that makes seven organizations that Espinosa has signed with since the start of the 2017 season and he's played in the majors with three of them. When he signed, his 2018 minor league stats line was an unimpressive .190/.236/.276 for the 2018 season. In the majors, he's had 295 plate appearances since the start of the 2017 season and has hit .173/.245/.278 in those games with the Angels, Rays and Mariners.

"He's always been able to defend up the middle of the infield," said Pigs manager Gary Jones of Espinosa. "The bat has slowed a little and I think he got into a situation where maybe he was trying to hit everything out of the park, but he's a veteran guy and he's the type of player the organization needs right now with all of the injuries."

There's no indication that Espinosa will head to Philadelphia any time soon, but if there are any other injuries, it will give them an option other than Mitch Walding, who is limited to playing just third base and potentially, some left field. Espinosa has played all four infield positions and left field in the majors.

UP THE LADDER ... Pitchers Tyler Gilbert and Ranger Suarez were promoted from Reading to Lehigh Valley. Gilbert, a 24-year old lefty, was drafted by the Phillies in the sixth round of the 2015 Draft. After working as a starter for two seasons, he moved to the bullpen last year. In four minor league seasons, he is 16-19 with a 3.42 ERA. Suarez is one of the top pitching prospects for the Phillies and was 4-3, 2.76 in 12 starts with the Fightins. The 22-year old lefty will make his Triple-A debut over the weekend in Rochester.

Recreational boaters should be aware that PF&BC waterways patrolmen will be actively checking for BUI during the July 4 holiday week.

Outdoors: PFBC to crack down on BUI offenses

BY NICK HROMIAK
Special to the Press

As this is the July Fourth holiday week, the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission (PFBC) announced that their waterways conservation officers (WCO) will be focusing on keeping boaters safe by cracking down on boating under the influence (BUI).

The PFBC, in partnership with the National Association of State Boating Law Administrators, is working to increase boater awareness of the hazards associated with boating under the influence, and to decrease the number of accidents and deaths attributed to impaired boating and other unsafe boating practices.

According to Col. Corey Britcher, Director of the PFBC Bureau of Law Enforcement, alcohol impairs judgment and reaction time on the water, just as it does when driving a car, even more so because of the added stress of sun, heat, wind, and noise on a boat.

Said Britcher, "Choosing to consume alcohol while boating puts everyone at risk, including passengers and people in the water. Our goal is to remove anyone choosing to operate a vessel impaired and to keep everyone else safe."

Last year across the state, the PFBC reports that 15 individuals died in boating accidents. Alcohol was a contributing factor in three of the cases.

The agency puts boaters on notice that throughout the week, boaters will see an increase in the numbers of officers on the water and at recreational boating checkpoints. This effort will result in the removal of impaired operators, providing a safe and enjoyable experience for boaters this boating season.

So far this year, PFBC waterways conservation officers have arrested 12 individuals for boating under the influence:

- Allegheny County, Allegheny River - 2
- Centre County, Sayers Lake - 1
- Crawford County, Conneaut Lake - 1
- Huntingdon County, Raystown Lake - 3
- Dauphin County, Susquehanna River - 3
- York County, Susquehanna River - 1
- Union County, Penns Creek - 1

Waterways conservation officers arrested 68 individuals in 2017; 90 individuals in 2016; 48 individuals in 2015; 93 individuals in 2014; 90 individuals in 2013.

Broken down by region, WCOs in 2017 arrested the following number of individuals for BUI:

- 7 in Northwest Region (Counties: Butler, Clarion, Crawford, Erie, Forest, Lawrence, Mercer, Venango, Warren)
- 16 in Southwest Region (Counties: Allegheny, Armstrong, Beaver, Cambria, Fayette, Greene, Indiana, Somerset, Washington, Westmoreland)

- 14 in North Central Region (Counties: Cameron, Centre, Clearfield, Clinton, Elk, Jefferson, Lycoming, McKean, Montour, Northumberland, Potter, Snyder, Tioga, Union)

- 19 in South Central Region (Counties: Adams, Bedford, Blair, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon, Juniata, Lebanon, Mifflin, Perry, York)

- 6 in Northeast Region (Counties: Bradford, Carbon, Columbia, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Monroe, Pike, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Wayne, Wyoming)

- 6 in Southeast Region (Counties: Berks, Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Lancaster, Lehigh, Montgomery, Northampton, Philadelphia, Schuylkill)

"Many boaters may not know that the threshold for BUI is the same as with motor vehicles - 0.08 percent," said Britcher. "If you are found to be impaired and operating a boat you will be arrested."

The agency reminds boaters to remain sober while on the water and don't forget to wear a life jacket as 85-percent of drowning victims were not wearing a life jacket. And interestingly, 71-percent of deaths on boats occurred where the operator did not receive safety instruction. As such, the agency highly recommends taking a boating safety education course.

Charter Arts continues to BRIGHTEN STREETSCAPE

BY NATE JASTRZEMSKI

Those walking along East Third Street the last few years will have noticed significant changes in cleanliness and vibrancy, as entities such as the Ambassadors, Southside Arts District and the Charter HS for the Arts have worked to brighten the neighborhood. The school in particular recently began installing 14 new murals along its streetfronts. The art was created cooperatively with the community, but was actually made by teams of students.

The murals join other artistic and lively elements along Third Street. Artist Matt Halm said the project was highly collaborative, with student teams developing concepts and handing them off to be painted by others. At least 12 students worked on each mural, and all had to incorporate common themes, such as the rose, which Charter Arts students traditionally receive on their first and last days at the school.

Executive Director Diane LaBelle says the murals were developed by juniors and seniors from January through May, and installations will continue during the summer. The project cost $20,000, which was provided by the Pennsylvania Council for the Arts.

Artist and mentor Matt Halm says the students were asked what they wanted to say personally about the Southside community that's become home to their school. "The students were encouraged to say what they wanted to say about themselves personally, but also what they wanted to say about the school, what they wanted to say about the neighborhood. About the city."

BAVTS students win logo design contest

Contest winners Emily Adamson, Freedom-12/BAVTS Graphic Communications, third place; Timothy Mosser, Freedom-11/BAVTS Graphic Communications, first place; Mike Annunziata, owner of On Mission Sports; and Riley James, Saucon Valley-11/BAVTS Commercial Art, second place.

When Mike Annunziata, a local entrepreneur and owner of "On Mission Sports," was in need of a logo for his new LV business, he contacted local high schools with the idea of a logo design contest. He supplied all schools with the background information that "On Mission Sports" is an organization that exists to sharpen athletic skills, develop character on and off the field and inspire leadership in the next generation of student athletes. Bethlehem AVTS was one of the schools which got involved with the contest. Both the Graphic communications and commercial art classes submitted designs. All three winners were from BAVTS and the final design was a combination of the first and second place winners. Graphic communications instructor Dana Huber, says, "This wasn't an easy logo design, because it was a very vague concept, but the winning design depicted the concept of teamwork and giving a helping hand."

State police start body camera pilot program

Acting Pennsylvania State Police (PSP) Commissioner Lieutenant Colonel Robert Evanchick announced that the department has deployed its first body-worn cameras in three troops as part of a pilot program. Select patrol troopers in Troop B, Uniontown; Troop J, Avondale; and Troop T, Somerset have received the appropriate training and will wear the cameras while on duty through the end of 2018.

"I am an ardent supporter of the use of body-worn cameras by law enforcement," said Lieutenant Colonel Evanchick. "The real-world experiences and information learned through this pilot program will help the department fine-tune internal training, regulations, and processes to ensure the department is best prepared for wider implementation."

Last summer, the Pennsylvania State Police was awarded a $52,000 federal grant to develop policy and training surrounding the use of body-worn cameras. The grant funds were used to purchase approximately 30 body-worn cameras for a pilot study. Since then, the department has developed an interim policy regulating equipment use, data storage, and duties and responsibilities related to the new technology. The policy was created with input from the Pennsylvania District Attorneys Association, International Association of Chiefs of Police, American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and the Pennsylvania Chiefs of Police Association.

The procedure for individuals to request the release of footage from law enforcement body-worn cameras was established by Act 22 of 2017 and is posted on the Pennsylvania State Police website.

The significant cost of not only camera hardware but also data storage and bandwidth remain significant hurdles to widespread use of body-worn cameras within the Pennsylvania State Police, which has more than 4,300 enlisted members and patrols over 80 percent of the land area of the commonwealth. The department continues to explore all available funding options to help make department-wide use a reality.

America On Wheels

Allentown museum drives to 10th year as destination

BY WALLY ELY
Special to The Press

When Dave Bausch told me 20-plus years ago that there was a move underway to build a new automotive museum in Allentown, I was thrilled.

Bausch said they were looking into property at Lehigh Landing and the museum would be the keystone of the Allentown waterfront development.

Cars, driving and drag-racing have been part of my life, starting as a teenager on the team operating drag races at Convoir Airport (Allentown Queen City Municipal Airport) in 1955-56 as a member of the Lehigh Valley Timing Association. I operated a car wash-gas station and vehicle rental company in the 1970s. Then in retirement, I worked for an area Chevrolet dealership, transporting vehicles between dealerships and auctions.

Ray Holland donated the office building that formerly housed the Abogast & Bastian Meat Packing Company to the museum. Jack Curcio, former CEO of Mack Trucks, took hold of the project and ran with it. Building a museum board of community leaders was the focus to raise funds to bring the project to reality. A general manager was hired to coordinate financing, grant-writing and startup planning.

All that is history. Today, that old office building houses a world-class museum, America On Wheels, which is celebrating its 10th anniversary. What a masterpiece Curcio and his team created. They built a spectacular modern addition to the old classic office building and set in motion the activities necessary to opening a new cultural attraction in Allentown, Lehigh Valley and Pennsylvania.

In 2006, Linda Merkel, as Executive Director, took over responsibility for the day-to-day operations. In April 2008, the grand opening kicked off this new automotive historical center.

When you visit the site at Front and Hamilton streets you will see not only old and classic cars (plenty of them), but will view an exciting collection of automobilia and fine art.

The building is 43,000-square-foot. The museum has more than 23,000-square-foot of exhibit space in three main galleries and several smaller exhibits. There are more than 75 cars, trucks, motorcycles, and bicycles in the museum. Exhibits change every six months.

One of the notable innovations in the museum is the 1950s HubCap Cafe. This lunchcounter and dining room was obtained from a former drug store in Indiana and reassembled like new on the second level of the museum. America On Wheels makes the cafe available to the community for parties, receptions, weddings and meetings.

The South Gallery showcases Guy's Garage, where visitors view a complete old-time garage scene including the workbench and tools in addition to an antique car.

One of the earliest self-powered vehicles invented in the United States is on display. See AOW on Page B3

The laid-back sound of Chaise Lounge in 'Jazz Upstairs'

BY GEORGE VANDOREN
Special to The Press

Allentown's Miller Symphony Hall welcomes the Washington area ensemble Chaise Lounge to its "Jazz Upstairs" series in the Rodale Community Room, 7:30 p.m. July 13.

The sextet offers swinging numbers that feature vocalist Marilyn Older while spotlighting an all-star lineup.

Charlie Barnett, who plays piano, accordion and guitar with the group, writes the tunes. His background as a composer is voluminous. He's done more than 400 film and television show scores. He's received awards and Emmy nominations. His orchestral and chamber works have been performed around the globe. And he's arranged and produced pop and jazz records for numerous artists.

Barnett has also written a play, "Twelveness," dealing with Arnold Schoenberg and George Gershwin, their tennis matches, friendship and musical tastes, among other things. He's working with two collaborators on a musical, "19," about Alice Paul and the fight for women's suffrage.

Barnett's television credits include "Saturday Night Live," "Weeds," "Royal Pains" and "Archer."

Notable collaborations include a spoken-word piece written and performed with Dr. Maya Angelou.

Barnett has recorded scores of pop and jazz albums for labels, including Def Jam and Elektra. "I honestly don't like promoting this band [Chaise Lounge] as a jazz band," Barnett says in a phone interview. "In some ways, it's a chamber ensemble.

"We play jazz music for people who don't really care for jazz. In a way, it's as if you took singer-songwriter material and put it in the hands of six very good jazz musicians.

"Our sound is commercial jazz circa 1962. All the group members understand the showiness of it. They all came in loving Louie Prima and Astrud Gilberto. Most of my material is original, but it's all redolent of a previous era."

Of singer Marilyn Older, Barnett says, "Lyrically, I think Marilyn is some sort of genius in delivering a cool, heartfelt story."

The group's beginnings go back to when Older was working for Barnett. He notes, "She was doing all sorts of things. I would be writing a melody for, say, English horn. I'd ask her to sing this while I play this. Her center of pitch and her memory impressed me immediately.

"Later, when she was no longer working for me, she said she'd been listening to Astrud Gilberto. She asked if I was interested in starting a band. I had a number of other things going, but I couldn't say no.

"We wrote a song together for another project. I called some of my favorite session guys together. On our second gig, they said we should have a sax player. Lo and behold, 19 years later we're still together. The only difference is that we have a new trombone player."

Older has been singing professionally since she graduated as a music technology major from American University, Washington, D.C. She has written songs and performed with a variety of bands, including Nixon's Cat, Dead Girls & Other Stories and has toured as a pianist with Doc Scantlin's Royal Palms Orchestra. She's been nominated for a Wammy as the District of Columbia area's best vocalist.

She has contributed as a lyricist to Chaise Lounge's material and has written songs for a number of independent films. She's also director of the Holistic Practitioners' Business Association.

Drummer Tommy Barrick can be heard with a variety of acts, ranging from swing and jazz to Latin, funk and punk around the Washington, D.C., area. He's performed throughout the United States and Europe and can be heard on many television and film scores.

He's also a Wammy nominee and a five-time winner for his contributions to Washington, D.C., music scene. Barrick recently published his first percussion method book, "The Paradiddle Workbook."

Las Vegas native Gary Gregg performs with many Washington, D.C., ensembles, including The Cutaways, The Tuxedo Park Orchestra and his own sextet. He is in demand for his work on clarinet, tenor and flute.

Trombonist Joe Jackson attended the University of North Texas. He played in the One O'Clock Lab Band. He performed with the Maynard Ferguson Band throughout the United States and Europe and later joined the U.S. Air Force Airmen of Note. There he created the "Jazz Heritage Broadcast Series."

Jackson transferred to the U.S. Air Force Ceremonial Brass, but continued honing his big band chops with groups like the Woody Herman Orchestra and David Liebman Big Band. He joined Chaise Lounge in 2012. He's also done numerous arrangements and works with a number of Washington, D.C., area nonprofits, all of which serve roles in the education, rights and welfare of children in the United States and Africa.

Bassist Pete Ostle served in "Pershing's Own," playing with the Concert Band, Army Blues, Army Chorus, Army Orchestra, and Army Chorale during his 20-year military service tenure. He formed La Carte Brass & Percussion, for which he plays sousaphone.

He also leads the Tuxedo Park Orchestra, a 10-piece swing band. In addition, he plays double bass with a number of Washington, D.C., area orchestras. Ostle has a degree in arranging and composition from Berklee College of Music, Boston, Mass.

Of the band, Barnett says, "They're all cut from the same bolt of cloth. We're all interested in stories. When Gary plays a solo, he's not out to impress you with his chops. He's interested in telling a 32-bar story."

Barnett encourages prospective "Jazz Upstairs" attendees: "Come for a really nice date night out with a warm invitation written in every song. The audience will walk out of there in a better mood than when they came in."

Print it at Kutztown Folk Festival

BY KATHY LAUER-WILLIAMS
Special to The Press

Tucked between the hex-sign display and the horse-powered carousel at the Kutztown Folk Festival, a 100-year-old printing press clicks and clacks as it churns out hand-fed printed souvenirs.

It's the first time the historic cast-iron press is on display as part of the Pennsylvania-Dutch festival at the Kutztown Fairgrounds, through July 8.

The press is from the National Museum of Industrial History in Bethlehem and is part of a new exhibit on early printing at the museum through Oct. 31.

At Kutztown, visitors can operate the press themselves by depressing the foot pedal, and hearing the whir of the giant wheel that powers the press, as they print souvenir "Go Dutch" coasters.

"The advent of the printing press and the culture of the Pennsylvania-Dutch people have both left an indelible mark on the world today," says Steve Sha-radin, festival director. "The press provides visitors a unique perspective on what helped shape this country and offer a historic look into this influential industry."

There is no doubt the printed word revolutionized the spread of knowledge throughout the United States and the world, says Glenn Koehler, marketing and outreach coordinator for the National Museum of Industrial History.

"Printing became commonplace and it allowed the spread of information to everyone, including the common people," Koehler says. "Before that, printed material was only available to rich people."

The press on display at the festival is a Chandler & Price hand-fed platen jobbing press. The company was founded in 1881 in Cleveland, Ohio.

Koehler says the type of press, designed for small jobs such as newsletters, handbills and programs for theaters and churches, became known as the "Model T of the printing press."

The press which can churn out 1,000 prints an hour at full speed, is slowed down at Kutztown so visitors can see how it works. Historians will be on hand to talk about the process and the machinery.

The exhibit at the festival is in conjunction with the "Hot Off the Press: Printing and Papermaking" on display at the 18,000-square-foot museum at SteelStacks.

The museum's other galleries host exhibits on early machinery, Bethlehem Steel, silk manufacturing and the propane industry. For more information on the museum: nmih.org.

But for a sneak peek at what is on display at the museum, visit the Kutztown Folk Festival, the oldest continuously-operated folk-life festival in the U.S. The festival features Pennsylvania-Dutch food, more than 200 juried folk artists and traditional craftsmen, more than 2,000 hand-made quilts, antiques and collectibles, six stages of entertainment, and children's activities.

The changing face of childhood

I just read a magazine story that lamented the way today's children have computer games and electronic gadgets that gobble up too much of their time.

The writer concluded that while today's kids have more "things" than any previous generation, they don't have the wonderful childhoods of past generations.

One mother was quoted as saying it isn't true that today's kids no longer play with other kids as they once did because they keep themselves engrossed in computer games.

"My son and his friends play games with others, just like previous generations. The only difference is now it is done online. Perhaps that's better because they play with kids across the country — not just in their own town," said the mother.

In other words, there is no person-to-person contact.

I'm sure you've read or listened to research that shows the harm of too much electronic gaming for children. Studies show that causes poor social interaction and even changes the way brains are wired.

Psychology Today claims children's brains are much more sensitive to electronics use than most of us realize. It cites studies that show interactive screen time is more likely to cause sleep problems, mood changes and cognitive issues that can have a major effect on a child.

None of that is startling news. We've heard it all before. But it doesn't change behavior in most households.

A good friend of mine complains his computer-addicted son stays up so late at night that it's hard to get him awake for school. The son is a smart kid who used to get good grades. But not anymore.

But the father tells me he's OK with all that computer gaming time.

"I would rather have my son at home where I know what he is doing," says the father.

I recently read a Wall Street Journal article about the changing face of childhood that made me so sad I could barely finish reading it.

The conclusion of the article was that kids today no longer have a childhood. At least not a childhood as we once knew it.

In an attempt to protect children and keep them safe in what has become an unsafe world, many parents have had to resort to restricting kids from going outside without supervision.

The Journal calls it "The overprotected American child."

I was a bit stunned to read about the American Academy of Pediatrics advising parents to wait until a child is 10 before being allowed to walk to school, or anyplace else, without adult supervision.

Some states have passed laws stipulating at what age children can legally be left alone at home. According to the article, in Maryland that age is 8. In Illinois, it's 14.

The article also talks about the "Let Grow" trend that encourages parents to develop Play Clubs where children can play freely in a gym or playground with only one adult to act as a "lifeguard."

These are not preschoolers. They are 8, 10 and even older.

Until I read that extensive article, I had no idea how badly things had deteriorated for today's kids. I had no idea that in order to protect our kids we've had to take away their childhood.

I used to think the parents in my neighborhood that wouldn't allow their kids to walk one block to the bus stop were overprotective. Now, after reading the article, maybe they are just normal parents trying to protect their kids. Or are they? Is it overprotective to not let middle school kids walk a block?

I did ask one friend who lives near the school bus stop why she gets in the car every day to drive her 15-year-old son one block to the bus stop. She says it's because it's too hot to walk here in Florida.

I feel like I just got up from a decadeslong sleep only to discover it's a different world out there.

I've always believed childhood is one of the most precious gifts we are given in life. For those of us in what I call "my generation," childhood was a special, happy place.

Back then, we had so much freedom.

No one had to worry about us walking a few blocks. In my case, I walked from one end of the town to another. My only requirement was that I had to be home before dark. As I got older, even that restriction was lifted.

When I was a kid, none of us were given so-called toys or gadgets. We were given something far more precious — the freedom to go outside and make our own fun.

I was an avid reader from an early age. When I wanted library books, my mom didn't say, "I'll drive you there." I walked six blocks to the library, remembering to cross the busy highway at the red light.

When I wanted to go swimming at the pool a few miles away, I rode my bike.

It was all part of sweet, wonderful childhood.

It grieves me that many of today's kids are growing up without knowing the real wonders of childhood.

Those thrills and wonders aren't found on a computer screen. They're found in something magical called "outside."

I wish every kid could experience that magic. It's a magical world I still embrace, because once you've found it, you never want to let it go.

It's a 'Jurassic' sequel World,' after all

"Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom," sequel to "Jurassic World" (2015), is second in a trilogy, with "Jurassic World 3" set for 2021 release.

While "Jurassic Park," released in 1993, had lots of human drama, character interaction and peril, "Jurassic World" has the peril, but lacks the human element. It's a long way from the original Michael Crichton screenplay.

Director J. A. Bayona ("A Monster Calls," 2016; "The Impossible," 2012) moves the action along solidly, working from a screenplay by Derek Connolly and director Colin Trevorrow ("Jurassic World" director).

The dinosaurs are hauled away on a ship to a California estate (no, they're not going to stomp grapes at the Francis Ford Coppola Winery), following a volcanic eruption that destroys Jurassic Park on the fictional Isla Nublar, off the Pacific Ocean coast of Costa Rica. The ostensible goal is to save the clones of the ancient beasts. The secret plan is to auction them off to the highest bidder.

Chris Pratt (flat as Owen Grady until he kicks into action), Bryce Dallas Howard (wonderfully adept at providing the movie's emotional core as Claire Dearing), B. D. Wong (Dr. Wu), and Jeff Goldblum (Ian Malcolm, in what amounts to a cameo) reprise their roles.

In the "Kingdom" in supporting roles are Rafe Spall, Justice Smith, Daniella Pineda, James Cromwell, Toby Jones, Ted Levine, Isabella Sermon, and Geraldine Chaplin.

There's at least one terrific jump scare in "Fallen Kingdom" that made me jump in my theater seat. The depiction of the dinosaurs attacking, maiming and eating humans gets more violent, grisly and graphic as the film unreels. The Indoraptor, a dinosaur weaponized as a battle beast, is particularly gruesome. The battle between the Indoraptor and Blue the Velociraptor evokes the Godzilla milieu.

The computer-generated imagery, animatronics and puppets that depict the dinosaurs is superb. The dinos seem so lifelike. The movie is massive in scale and has several good set pieces, notably, the eruption of the volcano, the dinosaur auction, a scene at a diorama and dinosaur skeleton display that recalls the "Night At The Museum" movies (2006, 2009, 2014), and a sequence inside and on the rooftop of a castle-like Gothic mansion that recalls Universal Studios monster thriller-chillers.

"Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom" lacks the originality of the original released 25 years ago. And it doesn't equal "Jurassic World." It's simply a good sequel that sets us up for the next, hopefully, even better sequel.

"Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom," MPAA Rated PG-13 (Parents Strongly Cautioned Some material may be inappropriate for children under 13. Parents are urged to be cautious. Some material may be inappropriate for pre-teenagers.) for intense sequences of science-fiction violence and peril; Genre: Science-Fiction; Adventure; Run time: 2 hrs., eight mins. Distributed by Universal Pictures.

ry Nadig built the motorized carriage in his shop along Fourth Street in Allentown in 1889. At 129 years of age, the exact vehicle, not a replica, is on display for visitors to see.

The importance of Mack Truck "wheels" to the history of the city is not overlooked. Showing off their famous bulldog emblems, Mack trucks of all descriptions and Mack fire engines are eye-popping exhibits.

Memories of the community of 50 years ago, especially its drag-racing history, flow from the Lehigh Valley Timing Association (LVTA) tribute to club mentor and entertainer Dopey Duncan. Videos of the LVTA Convoir Airport Drag Races run continuously. The exhibit is in the main concourse.

The museum has hosted numerous car shows and displays in the parking lot at the building. These include the annual tribute to Dorney Park and Mahoning Valley racetracks and the Heavy Equipment Petting Zoo. Kids of all ages get the chance to see large construction vehicles up close, including the opportunity to climb on and let their imaginations run the equipment. "Cruising Returns to Allentown" will be held 4-8 p.m. July 21.

Keeping the exhibits new and fresh is a challenge, but a volunteer exhibit and collection's committee sees to it that new themes are scheduled far in advance to keep the showplace fresh and new.

On exhibit through October is "Cars of Rick Hendrick of NASCAR Fame."

In recent years, two heavy-hitters joined the America On Wheels effort. Italian businessman Nicola Bulgari and General Motors retired Vice President Ed Welburn have added their substantial clout to the museum efforts.

Bulgari's first service to the museum was financial, contributing a big reduction in the museum debt.

Meanwhile, Welburn created his first display by pulling "Transformer" pieces from all over the country. Visitors saw an exhibit that appeared at America on Wheels for the first time anywhere.

New neighbors RB Collection in the former A&B-Kline building are bringing antique auto sales and restoration services to Front Street, across from America On Wheels.

The mission of the museum is education. America On Wheels has provided schools an alternative, hands-on learning environment with creative projects and educational programs to supplement what the students are learning in school.

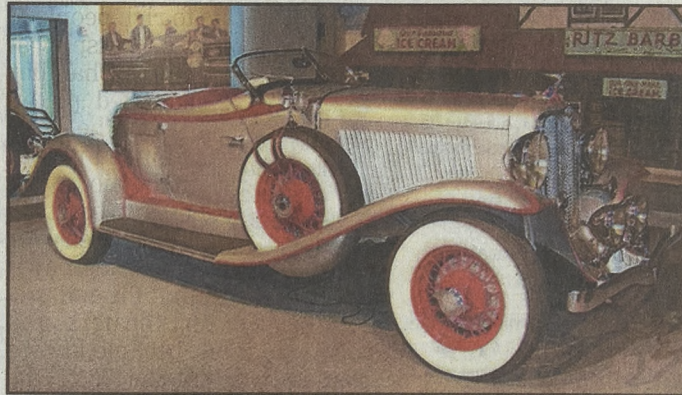

What a source of pride for citizens of Allentown to have an attraction of this quality, national in scope, right here in our city.

For 10 years, the museum remains volunteer-based. As a museum volunteer, I hope every family in the Lehigh Valley will make a habit of visiting America On Wheels once or twice a year to see the changing exhibits.
