STATE BUDGET FORUM - PART 1

How did we get into this mess?

By BERNIE O'HARE

Special to the Bethlehem Press

It was a tough crowd. More than 100 very concerned human services providers from all over the Lehigh Valley were crammed into Northampton Community College's Gates Center March 16 to question Pa. Gov. Tom Corbett's proposed $27.1 billion budget for next year, scheduled to take effect in July. Of the six panelists who spoke, only the governor's own Executive Deputy Secretary of the Budget, Peter Tartline, attempted to explain the logic of this spending plan.

In the first of a two-part story, Tartline explains the governor's rationale. In Part 2 next week, Lehigh Valley human services providers explain how funding cuts, which extend from an outright elimination of homeless assistance to a 76.7 percent reduction in mental health services, will hurt those who can least afford it.

How did the state get into this mess?

According to Tartline, revenues are simply $500 million below estimates as a result of the Great Recession. Pension costs have grown $486 million. In addition, because of mandated cost increases, Pennsylvania is looking at a $1.4 billion shortfall for the next fiscal year.

"You can do three things," Tartline explained. "You can cut costs ... You can reform programs, implement performance process improvements, management improvements. ... The third option is to raise your top line to improve your bottom line. You do that by raising taxes or improving the business climate."

Increasing revenue without tax hike

Given Pennsylvania's high corporate net income tax rate, Tartline said that any improvements in the See BUDGET on Page 4

Bus ads promise added revenue

By DOUGLAS GRAVES

Special to the Bethlehem Press

Soon the desperation of cash-strapped Bethlehem Area School District will have school kids surrounded by commercial ads while they are in the school buses, if the school board approves a new proposed policy.

The school district would retain control of the content of these ads so that tobacco, alcohol and other illegal-for-minors products are not advertised. The policy would exclude ads that promote hostility, disorder, violence and disregard for violations of legal obligations.

Vulgar and offensive, obscene or sexually explicit language would not be allowed. Promotion or denigration of any particular religion or religious practice would not be allowed. No promotion of gambling would be allowed.

Other restrictions may apply. Director of Human Resources Russell R. Giordano, who presented the draft policy to the Human Resources Committee March 12, was asked in a post-meeting interview, if, for example, ads pro-

Board to sue over Allentown tax grab

Although Allentown's Planning Commission unanimously approved new plans for a hockey arena during a hastily called meeting March 13, there was no need to rush. That's because Hanover Township Supervisors later that day authorized their solicitor to challenge the use of their own tax dollars to finance the project.

At high noon, when most people are at work, planners approved revised plans for redevelopment of a 5.1-acre square block along Hamilton Street with a hockey arena, seven-story hotel containing 180 rooms, seven-story office building and two parking garages. Two planners - Attorney Oldrich Foucek III and Mark J. Buchwalt - were forced to step aside because of their own involvement in the project. The four remaining members - Richard Button, Keith E. Hoeing, Christian J.

Brown and Martin Velazquez III - quickly gave their stamp of approval to what Allentown Mayor Ed Pawlowski has called a transformational project.

This green light came with virtually no inquiry, and over vociferous objections from Abe Atiyeh engineer David Harte. Atiyeh is a tenant of the Dime Savings Bank Building, which will be part of a planned hotel at the arena. He has already filed a land use See GRAB on Page A2 appeal n Lehigh County Court, challenging plans approved in January.

Harte complained about the absence of a plan to handle the increased traffic flow during games and other events at the proposed arena. A city engineer, Rob Hoffman, answered that an event management plan will be prepared. "Those details haven't been honed out yet," he added.

Harte also objected to inadequate parking at the site. Although the hockey arena alone has a 8,500-person capacity, the two garages planned for the facility only have capacity for 725 cars total. "Parking is very important, and there were no definite answers given on parking today," argued Harte.

But Planner Christian Brown, who called the project "fantastic," responded that hockey fans could simply park in nearby satellite lots and visit shops along their walk to the arena.

Brown added there are no parking requirements for downtown development.

Harte's biggest objection was that Allentown Commercial and Industrial Development Authority (ACIDA), which introduced the plans, does not even own the property.

"I want to know who is the applicant, and where is the deed for that property?" he asked. He added that city streets are included in this development plan, but no attempt has been made to declare them vacated.

Representing ACIDA, Attorney Tim Siegfried scoffed at Harte's objections, accusing him of attempting to interject "ambiguity" and "vagueness." Siegfried added that City Council is in the process of adopting an ordinance to vacate paper streets at the arena.

Harte is the only person to object to the latest plans, which were quickly approved after he made his concerns known.

Unknown to planners, Hanover Township's Board of Supervisors met on March 13 too.

They met in the early evening, when most people are home from work. Sitting in the audience was noted zoning and planning lawyer James Preston, who works in Solicitor Jim Broughal's firm.

Following an executive session, supervisors authorized Solicitor Jim Broughal to challenge the use of Hanover Township's earned income tax to finance any part of this project.

"Do we fight this?" Supervisor Steve Salvesen asked in February.

The answer is yes. Unanimously, supervisors authorized Broughal and DeVito to sue over the "misappropriation of Hanover Township's EIT by the City of Allentown."

Township Manager Jay Finnigan declined any further comment.

moting planned parent-hood would be allowed. He said "No." It was not clear what revenue the district might expect from advertising on buses. The school district has looked into selling "naming rights" to buildings and other school property.

In other business, the committee received a modification of the criteria by which they will evaluate the superintendent. If the new procedure is implemented, the old system of being ranked "0" (for unsatisfactory performance) through "4" (for superior performance) will be replaced with a system that does not assign a numerical score.

Instead, the "board shall evaluate the performance of the superintendent annually using established goals and objectives and management areas as the criteria."

Before the beginning of an evaluation period the "board and superintendent shall agree upon the criteria to be used for evaluation purposes."

A troupe of dancers from the O'Grady Quinlan Academy of Irish Dance perform their traditional Irish step dancing routine. State Representative Steve Samuelson and Congressman Charlie Dent watch from the Town Hall portico.

An average Celtic morning

Gray skies and a light drizzle March 16 only served to give the St. Patrick's Day flag-raising at City Hall a feeling of Irish isle authenticity. Mayor John Callahan wished attendees a "top o' the morning" and noted that it was just another "average Celtic morning." Despite the chill in the damp morning air, The Four Leaf Clovers performed the Star Spangled Banner and Irish melodies; Deputy Police Commissioner Craig Finnerty raised the Irish flag to the bagpipe strains of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," played by piper James Ruhf; and step dancers from the O'Grady-Quinlan Academy of Irish Dance entertained with their usual precision and flair.

Drum Major Jason Litz stands at attention as Pipe Major James Ruhf performs "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" during the raising of the Irish flag.

The Four Leaf Clovers, Peter Gambino, Dominic Behe, Vincent Behe and Alex Brown, perform the National Anthem and Irish songs. Mayor John Callahan, Police Commissioner Jason Schiffer and State Representative Steve Samuelson join them on the anthem.

Wearing green and looking jaunty, Celeste Behe and her daughter Helen and son Gerard attend to support siblings Dominic and Vincent, performing with The Four Leaf Clovers.

Laura Sommons is thrilled enough to dance a jig, but it is her daughter, Brooke, who is headed for the world championship of Irish dancers. Brooke and 14 other dancers from the O'Grady Quinlan Academy of Irish Dance head to Ireland at the end of March to compete.

The 13 girls and two boys will dance the treble jig in groups of three on the world stage.

"It's the hard shoe dance," Laura explained. "The one that makes the sound." Following a soft shoe dance, the judges will pick the top 30 percent for a recall individual dance and a chance to medal.

"This is an amazing year for us, to have so many qualifiers," Laura said, "because it's so hard to do."

She pointed out that, at the regional competition, each dancer from the Bethlehem school competed against 163 other dancers from the mid-Atlantic region that also includes New York, Maryland and New Jersey. But then, the O'Grady Quinlan Academy is certified with the Irish Dance Teachers of America.

The academy is located on East Broad Street, with a new location on Willow Park Road, and on the net at www.ogradyquinlan.com.

"There will be 185 dancers in Brooke's category of 'under 15,'" Laura said. "It's April 2; wish us luck!"

City planner Tracy Samuelson donned her finest kelly green hat and boa to watch the festivities.

Southside cleanup March 24

MAYOR'S SSTF

BY ALLY BRANCO
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Members of the Mayor's South Side Task Force met Feb. 28 to discuss changes and upcoming events.

Lehigh University is holding its annual cleanup Saturday, March 24. Volunteers will meet at Campus Square, where they will have breakfast waiting. The teams will head out at 10 a.m., clean their respective areas and return at noon.

There has been a change to the Health and Wellness Fair at Steel Stacks. The event will only be held April 21 but is still free for the community. The fair includes free medical screenings, seminars, demonstrations and guest speakers from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. A 40-inch flat screen TV, a Kindle and a 2-foot-high Aflac Duck will be given away. For more information on this event or to register, visit the Eastern Pa. Health and Wellness Expo website at www.ehpwe.com.

Northampton Community College's Southside campus held an open house March 2 featuring its new forensics science training department. The department is open to people already in the forensic field looking to further their education. The department is housed in the basement of the building and includes an apartment layout for crime scene training.

The next Mayor's South Side Task Force meeting is scheduled for March 27.

BUDGET

business climate will be felt long-term, not immediately. He also reminded everyone of Gov. Corbett's pledge against a tax hike. But the budget does include several proposals, most of them noncontroversial, to increase revenue by a total of $242 million.

For example, Corbett is proposing the elimination of a 1 percent discount provided to vendors who remit sales and use taxes on time. Their discount will instead be capped at $250 per month. This will add $41.3 million to the state coffers.

Another money-saving proposal is to fund Pennsylvania's popular Farm-land Preservation program with Growing Greener bond money instead of $20.5 million in cigarette taxes. That money will instead go into the general fund.

But there are two proposals that, according to Tartline, are quite controversial.

First, Corbett wants to redirect about $72 million from the Race Horse Development Fund to various agricultural and veterinary programs.

"The concept here is agriculture helping agriculture," Tartline explained.

Second, $59 million in tobacco settlement fund money will go into the state treasury instead of being used to fund research.

"We can forego funding basic research and instead put these dollars into direct services," reasoned Tartline.

Human services cuts

In a portion of the Executive Budget titled "Preserving the Safety Net," Gov. Corbett proposes a 20 percent reduction in the funding of seven separate human services programs. The monies will be provided in what is called a block grant, which does free counties from rigorous reporting requirements and provides more flexibility. But it's still $168.4 million less than it was last year.

In addition to these reductions, the General Assistance cash program, which helps 68,000 people statewide, will be eliminated, saving the state another $319 million.

A lawsuit challenging these cuts has already been filed in Commonwealth Court by the Disability Rights Network.

Education cuts

In addition to these cuts to human services programs, the Corbett budget is proposing 20-30 percent reductions in contributions to state universities, which will save the state $240 million.

How these proposed cuts impact the Lehigh Valley's poor, elderly and disabled will be covered in our story next week.

Burglaries

Lehigh County District Attorney James Martin's officed announced the arrest of a man suspected of dozens of burglaries throughout the Allentown-Bethlehem area.

According to a release, Herman Ojeda, 37, of 941 Turner St. in Allentown, was arrested for allegedly committing 41 residential burglaries and five attempted burglaries.

Ojeda was first incarcerated on an alleged probation violation because he was under house arrest while the burglaries took place, from October 2011 till mid-February.

Ojeda is suspected of stealing more than $98,000 worth of jewelry, electronics and handguns, some of which were discovered in his home and his girlfriend's car.

Fountain Hill Police arrested two young men after investigating two reported thefts from the same Cherokee Street address.

According to police, Jonathan Nunez, 19, of East Fairview Street in Allentown and Marvin Gilberto Benitez, 20, of East Allentown, were at the residence at different times in late January.

Nunez allegedly stole a guitar and amp and is charged with theft, receiving stolen property and false reports.

Benitez allegedly stole a laptop computer and was arrested on a warrant during a traffic stop.

Police said the items were found at local pawn shops.

CITY POLICE

Robberies

A 35-year-old man reported a robbery at the Easton Avenue CVS pharmacy around 7 p.m. March 13.

Police said the man was approached in the store parking lot by a man who demanded money and claimed to have a gun, though no gun was displayed.

Around 3:30 a.m. the following day an employee at the East Broad Street 7-Eleven reported the store was robbed. Police said a man entered the store displaying a black pistol and demanded the money from the register. He then fled the scene.

The latter suspect is described as a 6-foot tall Hispanic wearing a hooded light brown jacket.

Assault

Police arrested Tyrone Young, 37, of Mechanic Street, for attacking another man around 12:10 a.m. March 10.

According to police, Young and another man were on State Street and, for unspecified reasons, Young stabbed the victim in the chest.

Young was found by police later when his car ran out of gas on Daly Avenue.

Young is charged with reckless endangerment and aggravated assault.

Theft

An Allentown man who owns property in Bethlehem reported an alleged contractor stole money from his around 11 a.m. March 12.

According to police, the man wished to install a boiler at the Fifth Street Hotel and found a contractor on Craigslist. After signing a contract, however, the contractor cashed the $700 without performing the installation.

SAUCON VALLEY SD

At the Saucon Valley School Board Feb. 28 meeting Director Edward Inghrim recommended the school district consider implementing a policy of conducting drug tests for students involved in extracurricular activities.

According to Inghrim, he has been conducting informal surveys of students out in public concerning drug usage at the high school. His communications with students have revealed students are using or personally know others who are using or who have used drugs.

"I don't think Saucon Valley is unique," Inghrim said. "We have a problem with drugs."

While director Lanita Lum agreed with Inghrim, she felt testing should be taken one step further and encompass all high school students, not just those involved in extracurricular activities.

"Something needs to be done about it," Lum stressed, "but do it for everyone."

Saucon Valley HS Principal Eric Kahler told the school board if a student is suspected of using or selling drugs, a dog trained to detect drugs is dispatched to search the student's locker or in some cases, the student's vehicle. Kahler emphasized that lockers are searched by him and Assistant Principal Lorie Gamble personally, not by police officers.

Board Solicitor Mark Fitzgerald warned that the school district needs to be cautious regarding conducting drug tests. He said such tests might violate the U.S. Constitution by allowing for an illegal search and seizure, because drug testing requires drawing blood from an individual.

Fitzgerald said he would further research the issue to determine the constitutionality of drug testing students within the school environment.

The school board will take up the issue of testing students at a future meeting to discuss such issues as the location of the testing site, along with who would conduct the tests and what the consequences would be for students who test positive.

Also during the meeting, the board announced that roughly 700 seventh-graders will begin using iPad devices in their courses, beginning next year.

Assistant Superintendent Carl Atkinson and three school district staff members will travel to Burlington (Mass.) HS to observe a similar program the school is using integrating iPads into the school curriculum.

During the 2013 academic year, the use of iPads will be extended to eighth grade students and to sixth grade students. By the 2013-14 school year all high school students will begin using iPad devices.

Back in October the school board discussed integrating the use of technology into the school curriculum. The school district decided that an iPad, which will be used for instructional purposes, was a cost effective technology device because it utilizes less power and is sold at half the price of a traditional laptop.

How could Allentown divert earned income taxes intended for Lehigh Valley municipalities? Why would local taxes, some of which are set aside for open space, be diverted to finance a hockey arena and business improvements in Allentown's 130-acre Neighborhood Improvement Zone? What impact will this have on their own bottom lines?

These were just some of the questions that members of Northampton and Lehigh's County Tax Collection committees had for Allentown Finance Director Garret Strathearn during a rare combined meeting in February. Strathearn had few answers, but promised he'd be back in March. He asked only that all questions be reduced to writing and supplied to him in advance.

David Woglom, who administers the Tax Collection Committees, did just that. On Feb. 22 Woglom sent a 16-question letter.

"We need to know what the financial effect will be on our budgets, particularly during these challenging times," Woglom told Strathearn.

But when the combined Tax Collection Committees of Northampton and Lehigh County met again March 15 at Hanover Township Community Center, there still were no answers. No Strathearn either.

Steve Miller, solicitor to Lehigh County's Tax Collection Committee, told municipal officials that Allentown is still working on assembling the information.

"I don't think they're trying to stonewall," he assured everyone.

Miller also corrected some misinformation about the EIT collection process. Previously, municipal officials were told that EIT revenue would be refunded 100 percent.

"That's not quite the case," stated Miller, who noted there will be no refund unless the revenue is in excess of the debt service on bonds floated to finance the arena and other improvements. Miller said the debt service would be paid, proportionately, from both EIT and state tax revenue.

"Not good," said Upper Nazareth Township Supervisor Scott Sylvanius after the meeting.

Lehigh Township Supervisor Cindy Miller, who said her township is considering joining Hanover in litigation to stop this EIT diversion, was also disappointed.

"I'm more disappointed that this was enacted and nobody's prepared. Everyone was blindsided."

Woglom said he is hopeful there will be answers before the Tax Collection Committees meet again in April. But it's unclear whether those answers will be supplied before bonds are floated for the hockey arena project.

Perrucci pulls plug on plan

By BERNIE O'HARE
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Can just one person ever make a difference, especially when it comes to government?

Vicky Bastidas has made a difference, and against all odds. Developer Michael Perrucci has shelved plans for a high-density apartment complex in one of Bethlehem Township's few remaining rural areas. His decision is primarily the result of her efforts.

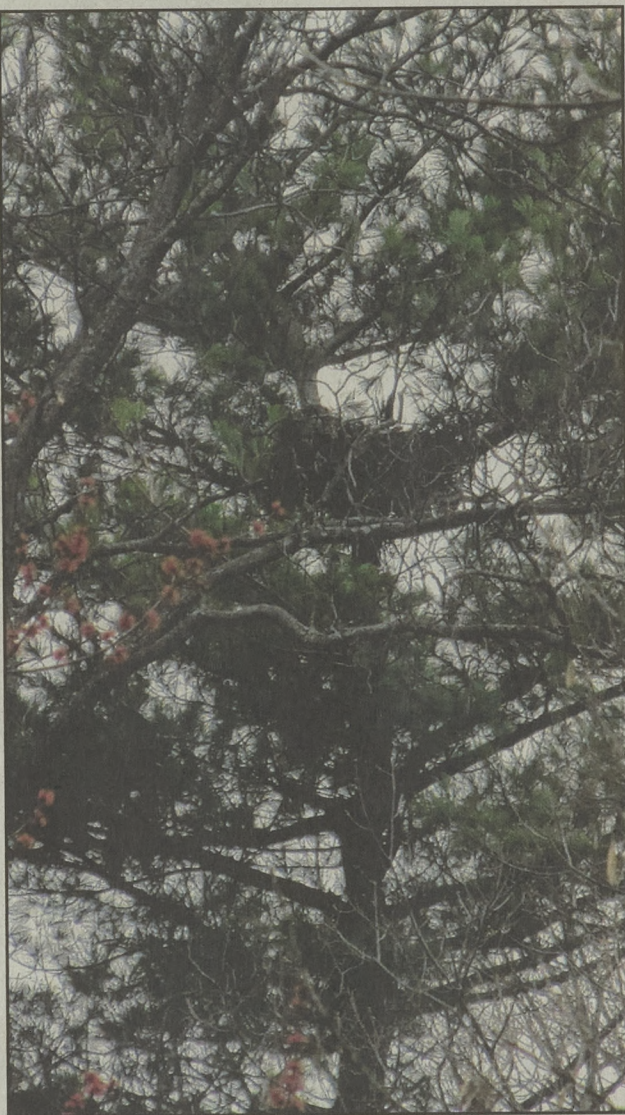

"You're a formidable adversary," he reportedly told her.

Perrucci's plan involved an area nestled between Bethlehem Township's 55-acre Housenick Park and Northampton County's 36-acre Archibald Johnston Conservation Area. He had hoped to build 420 apartments and a strip mall on lands owned by Central Moravian Church. Located in a zoned conservation area, the project would eventually need a zoning change from the commissioners.

Tom Nolan has been adamantly opposed to any zoning changes, but the remaining commissioners were at least open to the idea. They have shown resentment toward Bastidas, primarily because she is an outsider who lives in the city and not the township. Earlier this month, President Paul Weiss chided her for "baseless" comments when she stated that Northampton County is interested in preserving the land. Mike Hudak disputed her claim that the county had any interest at all in preserving the area.

But unknown to Weiss and Hudak, Bastidas had already spoken to Park's new residents

After reading (probably in The Bethlehem Press) that developer Michael Perrucci has abandoned plans for a high-density luxury apartment complex next to Housenick Park, two interlopers have moved in. They refuse to pay rent, have applied for no permits and are very nasty to their neighbors.

In fact, they eat them.

Two mature bald eagles (nest shown above) have moved into Housenick Park. They've been spotted dining on duck, as well as Monocacy Creek fish. So far, they've made no attempt to eat any Bethlehem Township Commissioners.

It's unclear whether this couple is married or just having a fling.

Northampton County Executive John Stoffa. After meeting with her on several occasions, Stoffa himself has become an enthusiastic advocate for preserving the area with the county's open space funding for environmentally sensitive land. He said he looks on the area as a possible "Central Park of the Lehigh Valley."

In addition to Stoffa, Bastidas also appeared before Northampton County Council. Although there was no formal commitment or even a vote, several members expressed interest in preserving the site, if only to alleviate the increased flooding in Bethlehem downstream. Bastidas also worked with the Nature Conservancy, Wildlands Conservancy and Monocacy Creek Watershed Association.

Development was being planned at a recharge point for the Monocacy Creek, where hundreds of small springs combine to replenish a Class A trout stream.

On a frigid February weekend, Bastidas somehow convinced commissioners Marty Zawarski and Phil Barnard to meet with her at nearby Housenick Park. After spending five hours with her, walking through the area and fighting off frostbite, they finally agreed the entire area should be preserved, if possible.

That effectively ended Perrucci's development dream.

Instead of being developed with high-density apartments, two newcomers have moved in, according to Bastidas. They have no deed or even a lease, but the pair of bald eagles has just finished building a nest.

Eternal Life – By Faith

The Bible says “ye may KNOW that ye have eternal life” (1 John 5:13), but many are not sure. Often the uncertainty is because we think it has to do with good works, and we're never sure we've done enough. God wants good works, but the Bible clearly teaches they don't save us.

Romans 3:20 declares, “by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin.” This simply says we aren't “made right” with God by doing what the law requires, but rather, God gave us the law so we realize we fall short and need a savior. It's so counter to how we naturally think! The problem with relying on good works is the sin problem still must be addressed. Our good works don't outweigh our bad! This passage goes on to say, “But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested...For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God...Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood” (Romans 3:21-25). We are made right “without the law!” We are “justified freely” without works!

When this became real to me it was so clear that I am not saved by my works, but rather by the work of Christ on the cross! Romans 4:5 states, “to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness.” Sin results in eternal death, but Christ took our penalty when he died on the cross. His blood is our atonement or payment.

But just knowing this isn't enough. Christ's payment isn't “automatically” applied to our “account.” It must become real through a personal transaction with God by faith! “For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast” (Ephesians 2:8-9). — Submitted by Gary Mescavage

TAX TIPS from IRS.gov

Tax Rules May Affect Your Child's Investment Income

Parents may not realize that there are tax rules that may affect their child's investment income. The IRS offers the following four facts to help parents determine whether their child's investment income will be taxed at the parents' rate or the child's rate.

1. Investment income Children with investment income may have part or all of this income taxed at their parents' tax rate rather than at the child's rate. Investment income includes interest, dividends, capital gains and other unearned income.

2. Age requirement The child's tax must be figured using the parents' rates if the child has investment income of more than $1,900 and meets one of three age requirements for 2011:

- Was under age 18 at the end of the year.
- Was age 18 at the end of the year and did not have earned income that was more than half of his or her support.
- Was a full-time student over age 18 and under age 24 at the end of the year and did not have earned income that was more than half of his or her support.

3. Form 8615 To figure the child's tax using the parents' rate for the child's return, fill out Form 8615, Tax for Certain Children Who Have Investment Income of More Than $1,900, and attach it to the child's federal income tax return.

4. Form 8814 When certain conditions are met, a parent may be able to avoid having to file a tax return for the child by including the child's income on the parent's tax return. In this situation, the parent would file Form 8814, Parents' Election To Report Child's Interest and Dividends. More information can be found in IRS Publication 929, Tax Rules for Children and Dependents. Watlington takes first in 100 breaststroke

Freedom swimmer, Seth Watlington, clinched a gold medal in the 100 breaststroke at the PIAA State Class AAA Swimming and Diving Championships last week at the Kinney Natatorium at Bucknell University.

The Patriot senior won by a fingertip in 55:89, after trailing for most of the race.

"I was actually behind until the last five yards, the last three strokes," said Watlington. "I won by six one-hundredths of a second."

Watlington ended up outswimming Hershey's Kyle Ruddle.

"I kind of just came up from when I touched, and I saw the scoreboard because it was right there. It was an overwhelming feeling of joy and adrenaline," Watlington said.

Watlington was congratulated by teammates Scott DelFranco, Danny Csakai, Peter Conzola, and Eric Lawrence, as well as good friend and Liberty swimmer, Eric Burcin.

"It was kind of like a 'Finally!' type of thing. I'm just glad I decided to dig in and go for it," said Watlington.

In fact, it was DelFranco's father, Guy, who told Watlington that the swimmer who goes into the last wall the hardest comes out the fastest.

Watlington's own parents were ecstatic, and coach Barb Glaser was extremely happy and proud.

After the race, Watlington was interviewed on PCN by 2000 Olympic swimming champion, Kristy Kowal, and told her that he had worked on his kicking and his walls in preparation for states. Later, Watlington accepted his first state gold medal and Freedom's second since 2007.

Watlington also placed eighth See Swim on Page A10

STATE GIRLS BASKETBALL

Hawks, Liberty have seasons end

By KATIE MCDONALD
kmcdonald@tnonline.com

They say that lightning doesn't strike twice, but if you ask the Bethlehem Catholic girls' basketball team, they would probably disagree.

In the second round of the PIAA State playoffs last week, the Hawks were down by one point with time running out, when Becahi freshman, Kalista Walters, attempted a shot at the buzzer, and another before that. The Hawks pleaded for a foul, or three, against Prep Charter, but none were called.

The situation was reminiscent of the Hawks' first game against Allentown Central Catholic, in which Becahi found itself with a one-point lead, but on the other side of a buzzer shot. In that game, a foul was called against the Hawks.

In both games, however, it was Becahi who suffered the consequences with a 43-42 loss to Central in January, and a 49-48 loss to Prep Charter last week, ending one of the Hawks' best seasons under Coach Bill Lanscek.

Lanscek will graduate Brianna Morales, Rana

Plesko, Jaime Deischer, and Gabby Lacherza.

The Liberty Hurricanes also made it to the second round of state playoffs, but were stopped by Governor Mifflin, 51-42, also last week. Turnovers and missed shots, including a disappointing 1 for 10 from the foul line, contributed greatly to the conclusion of the Hurricanes' season.

Liberty coach, Amy Yenko, will say good-bye to seniors Jody Chickey, CJ Hilliard, JJ Hilliard, and Shay Lewis, whom she has coached since they were freshmen.

"This was Amy's team," said assistant coach, Terry Marcincin. "She taught them how to play basketball."

SPRING SPORTS PREVIEWS

FHS baseball back from Myrtle

By PETER CAR
pcar@tnonline.com

If there's one way to get your team's season kicked off, a trip to Myrtle Beach should certainly get your players excited.

Freedom's baseball team arrived from a four-day trip in South Carolina on Monday, where they practiced everyday, scrimmaged two contests, but maybe more importantly, had a unique team bonding experience to kick start the 2012 season.

Head coach Nick D'Amico felt a trip like this was needed and was pleased to see the positive reaction from his squad.

"We basically put it together last minute and it was a great trip," said D'Amico. "We felt like we needed some team bonding and what a better way than to spend time at Myrtle Beach."

With that out of the way, the Pates can now focus on the season head on when they open up their season this Friday and Saturday against Wilson and Pleasant Valley respectively.

Both games are at home and the Pates hope to have a solid start to their spring after missing out on the district playoffs a year ago.

D'Amico boasts the deepest team he's had in six years at the helm of the Freedom program, as seniors Eddie Milisits (1B/P), Brian Uliana (SS/OF/P), Kevin Rold (RF/all-LVC) and Josh Recke lead this year's group.

Pates softball expects a battle

By KATIE MCDONALD

Freedom softball coach, Denny Hollinger, feels that his Patriots are as ready as they can be for their season opener against Pleasant Valley on Saturday.

A combination of strong pitching, team speed, and great attitudes will be the Patriots' strengths as was evidenced when they were on the winning end of two shut-out scrimmages last week.

"We got a lot accomplished," said Hollinger.

Hollinger will be relying on junior pitcher, Emily Gundrun, who struck out 11 of 12 batters during Freedom's scrimmage against Northern Lehigh.

"She can dominate if she stays healthy," Hollinger said.

Ashley Eichlin and Jenna Heffner will also lead the Patriots as senior co-captains.

Eichlin will also pitch and play leftfield, and possibly first base. Heffner, who has started every game since her freshman year, will play centerfield.

Corinne Kline will return as Freedom's catcher. Ashley Husser will play first base, Kelsey Brandl or Carly Deichman will play second base, and the other will play rightfield. Freedom's shortstop will be Becca Herman, and Sam Cabrera will return at third base.

Thanks to the unseasonably warm weather as of late, Bethlehem Catholic's tennis team is farther along in its preparation of the upcoming season than ever.

Coach George Harmanos is returning five starters: Chris Blaszk at number one singles, Stephen Rossi at number two singles, Kevin Hamilton at number three singles, and Andrew Hoppe and Pat Keenan, both at number two doubles.

"It's a pretty good nucleus," said Harmanos. All are seniors and juniors.

Turco will be teaming up at number three doubles.

"They didn't start last year, but they play tennis a lot," said Harmanos.

Presently, Niko Frane-kic and Peter Demyan are paired at number four doubles, although Ryan Schmidt and Luke Mesko are pretty close, according to Harmanos.

Liberty tennis coach, Leo Schnalzer, will be looking to his seniors to set the stage for a winning season this year.

Seniors, Grant Wilsterman, David Krauss, and Kyle Manley are all back this season at number one, two, and three singles, respectively, and John Labiak will play at number two doubles.

"They will be the backbone of the team. No one else has played varsity," said Schnalzer.

Schnalzer is counting on each individual's experience to come through.

"I was pleased with

All are freshmen.

Regarding the team as a whole, Harmanos said, "They're far along, and they know how to play. They have a great attitude."

Harmanos sees Parkland, Freedom, Emmaus, and Allentown Central Catholic as the biggest challengers in the Lehigh Valley Conference, and believes that the Hawks will fall somewhere in the middle of the pack.

"Typically, we're in the middle group. There are no big-time players here. The top tier [of opponents] will be pretty tough for us," said Harmanos. "Our doubles teams are pretty good. We'll be able to compete with the best teams."

tennis season, and he does a nice job," Schnalzer said.

Cameron Angstadt will team up with Labiak. Jackson Berlow and Brendan Cunningham will play at number three doubles, and Everett Deluca and Larry Noble will play at number four doubles, although there may be some switching among the four players.

Last Friday, the Hurricanes defeated Saucon Valley, 5-2.

"Freedom and Parkland should be strong this year. Emmaus, I think, will have a nice team as well," said Schnalzer. "I see us making districts and finishing around .500."

Former Hawk Kyle John ends wrestling career at Maryland

By TIM ROBB

Special to the Press

Former Becahi wrestler and Maryland Terp Kyle John was eliminated in a heartbreaking loss to fourth-seeded Walt Peppelman of Harvard during the NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships.

John got taken to his back early in the first, and then reversed Peppelman to his back to end the first period at 5-5. John then rode Peppelman for 57 seconds before yielding the escape. The second period ended up 6-5, Peppelman.

John chose top for the third, rode for about 25 seconds to achieve riding time before Peppelman got a reversal that clinched the match, 8-5. The loss knocked John out of his tournament and ended his collegiate career.

"I am very disappointed, I had that match, and just didn't finish," John said. "I just hope the rest of the guys wrestle hard and score some points so we can finish in the top 20 as a team again."

The Lehigh Valley High School Basketball Hall of Fame announced the 2012 inductees to be honored at the Via All-Star Banquet, presented by First Niagara Bank and sponsored by the Sands Casino Resort Bethlehem, on March 28, 2012.

The Hall of Fame was established in 1978 and honors individuals who have made outstanding contributions to high school basketball in the Lehigh Valley.

The 2012 Inductees are:

Jackie Adamshick, Allentown Central Catholic player, class of 2002; Keith Groller, Morning Call sports reporter, hall of fame contribution honoree; Mary Lisicky, Whitehall player, class of 2001; Mike Polaha, Allentown Central Catholic player, class of 1983.

The Lehigh Valley Hall of Fame inductions will be made at the Via All-Star Classic Banquet, an exciting evening that honors the top basketball players in the greater Lehigh Valley. The Via All-Star Banquet is at Freedom High School on Wednesday, March 28, 2012 at 6:30 p.m., doors open at 6 p.m. The keynote speaker is Joe Theismann, ESPN commentator and former star quarterback for the Washington Redskins. Via Super Saturday, a riveting game of end-to-end, high-spirited basketball, is on March 31, 2012 at 10:30 a.m. at Northampton Community College, 3835 Green Pond Road, Bethlehem.

Tickets, sponsor information and event details for the Via All-Star Basketball Classic, Banquet and Lehigh Valley Basketball Hall of Fame are available online at www.ViaNet.org or by calling 610-317-8000 x489. Hall of Fame nominations are accepted online at www.ViaNet.org.

President Abraham Lincoln returns to Hotel Bethlehem for the second annual Civil War Banquet to benefit the Moravian Historical Society, scheduled for March 23. A Civil War encampment was held last spring in Bethlehem, featuring Lincoln as a guest of Historic Bethlehem Partnership and Hotel Bethlehem. This Press photo from last year's weekend event, depicts Lincoln actor Robert Costello of New Jersey posing in the Colonial Industrial Quarter with the belfry of Central Moravian Church in the background. The event helped kick off the Lehigh Valley's 150th anniversary of the start of the Civil War, which continues as part of a national four-year celebration. This year's banquet, hosted by Hotel Bethlehem, features Costello as the main speaker. The famous Federal City Brass Band and other Civil War reenactors will attend the festivities. The menu will feature 19th century recipes. The Moravian Historical Society of Nazareth will display rare Civil War artifacts from its collection. Tickets are $60 per person. For reservations contact the MHS at 610-759-5070 or e-mail info@moravianhistoricalsociety.com.

NCC trustee nomination stalls

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Bethlehem Area School District (BASD) school board minority members March 12, at the Human Resources Committee meeting on Sycamore Street, stalled a proposal by the administration to re-nominate former school board member Loretta Leeson to the Northampton Community College (NCC) Board of Trustees. The recommendation also would have nominated school board president Michael Faccinnetto to serve as a trustee.

Newly elected school board member Basilio Bonilla Jr., who said in an interview he is of Latino heritage, had previously told Faccinnetto that he, too, was interested in serving on the NCC Board of Trustees. Faccinnetto, instead of nominating Bonilla, put his own name forward.

Aurea Ortiz, a Latina, sided with Bonilla, as did Sudantha Vidanage. Ortiz said she would support nominations of Bonilla and Faccinnetto, but not Leeson.

"I strongly feel there should be a minority representation on the board of trustees," said school board member Vidnange, who teaches at the community college.

Faccinnetto said that he, Faccinnetto, is more qualified to serve as a trustee than Bonilla because of the younger man's short time served on the BASD school board.

Bonilla forcefully explained the rationale for his seeking the job. He said, as a member of a minority group, he felt that his appointment

"It would be wrong to not have a minority representative as a trustee," says board member Aurea Ortiz.

would bring needed minority representation to the NCC Board of Trustees. Bonilla, who is a student at Moravian College, said he is a graduate of NCC.

"It would be wrong to not have a minority representative as a trustee," said Ortiz. "Yes, Mr. Bonilla is young, but if you don't think he can do the job, there are other highly qualified minority candidates in the community."

A spokesperson for NCC said as of last fall the college had 11,350 students, 32 percent of whom identify themselves as members of a minority. The spokesperson said there is no policy of keeping trustee membership in the same proportion as student's ethnic backgrounds.

Leeson, in a separate interview, confirmed that she would accept re-nomination to the post. She said that as a woman she is a minority on the board of trustees. Two women are on the 14-person board.

Board member Michelle Cann supported Faccinnetto in keeping Leeson at the post for another six-year term. She said Leeson has been very effective at the job.

"NCC's most compelling issue is money," Cann said. "Loretta is amazingly skilled at finding revenue."

Member Eugene McKeon agreed with Cann.

"It would be wrong to take Leeson out of the board of trustees," he said.

Member William Burkhardt said he wasn't comfortable with the idea of nominating people to meet a non-existent minority quota.

"I don't know if it was ever designed to represent the makeup of the community," he said. "It would be like a token from the Hispanic community. Our candidates are good candidates who will serve us well. It's important that we pick the right people for the right reasons."

"If we don't need to fill the positions until June, we can continue this discussion," said member Irene Follweiler.

BASD's website describes the four BASD-nominated trustee positions as being held by school board members; however, that description is not a policy. Currently, Thomas Doluisio, a former BASD administrator, is a trustee. Other members of the board include a retired university professor, a dentist and a medical doctor.

The committee decided to invite the public to submit letters of intent for the two trustee positions from which it will select nominees in April. People interested in serving on the NCC Board of Trustees can contact any school board member or the administration via the BASD website (<http://www.beth.k12.pa.us/>).

St. Luke's among top cardiovascular hospitals

By CHRISTOPHER RICHIE
Special to The Press

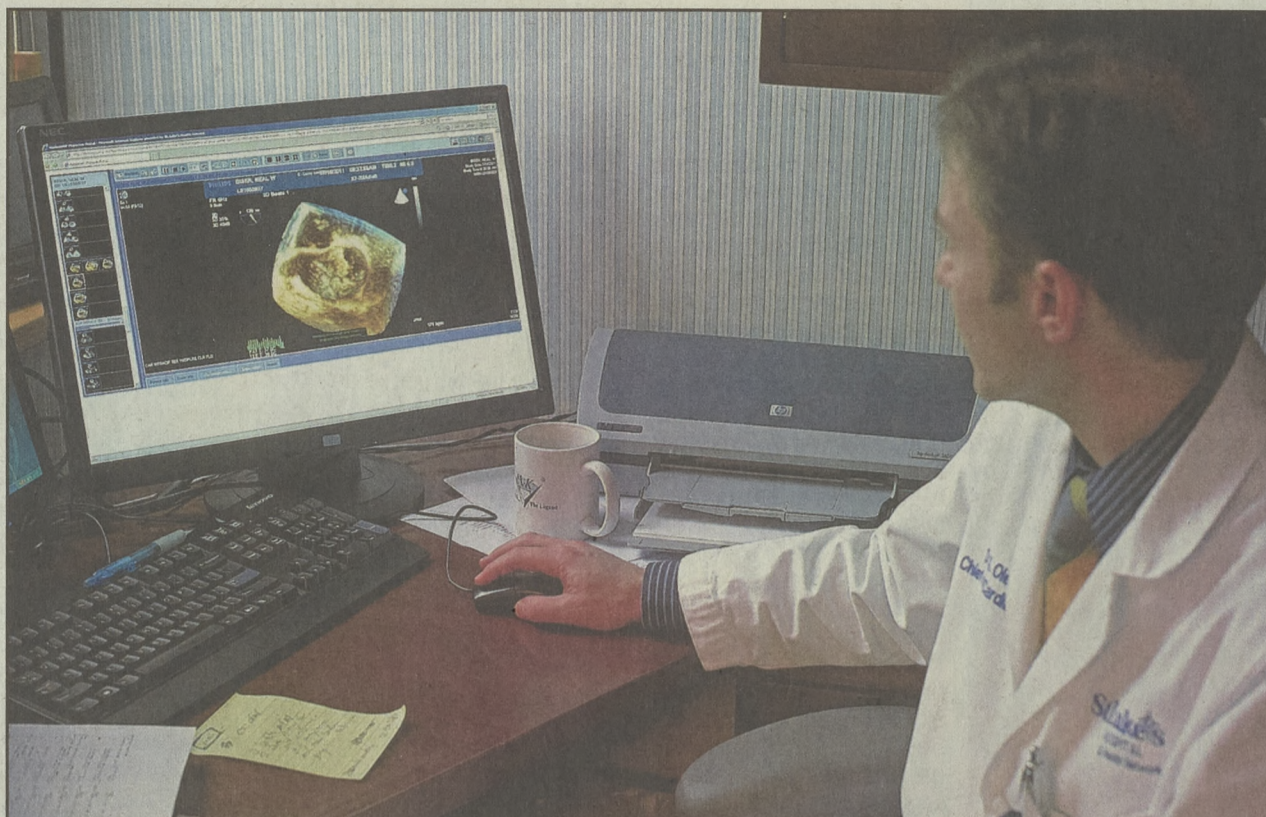

Neal Biser, of Coopersburg, was only in his 30s in the 1980s when he first noticed what felt like his heart skipping a beat. "From what I can remember, it was just like an extra 'click' when you listened to the heart beat," Biser explained.

As it turned out, Biser suffered from mitral valve prolapse, a condition where the leaflets in the heart valve bulge, overextending themselves when they open and close. The mitral valve prevents the back flow of blood from the left ventricle into the left atrium of the heart. One of the results of the this heart valve not working properly can be blood leakage back into the heart.

Biser's erratic heartbeat was regulated with medication and doctors advised him to schedule yearly stress tests, and though it wasn't an immediate concern, eventually he would need either valve repair or replacement.

By the spring of 2011, Biser turned 58 and after going through his annual stress test, his cardiologist at St. Luke's Hospital, Dr. Paul Gulotta informed him that the leakage from the prolapse was more severe and that the chamber of his heart was enlarging as a result. Surgery to repair Biser's prolapsed valve was scheduled for that July at St. Luke's Hospital.

In November of 2011 St.

PRESSPHOTO BY CHRISTOPHER RICHIE

Heart surgeon Dr. Stephen A. Olenchock Jr. brings up a 3-D echocardiogram of Neal Biser's heart in his office at St. Luke's Hospital.

Luke's was named one of the top cardiovascular hospitals in an annual quantitative study by Thomson Reuters, which compared more than 1,000 hospitals in the U.S. using Medicare patient data from 2009 to 2011. Comparing the award winners with a peer group of hospitals, the study found that if all cardiovascular providers performed at the level of the 2011 winners:

- Nearly 7,700 additional lives could be saved.

- Approximately 6,500 additional patients could be complication-free.

- More than $1 billion could be saved.

- According to the study, the 50 Top Cardiovascular Hospitals also:

- Spend an average $4,000 less per bypass surgery case.

- Have significantly better 30-day survival.

- Maintain lower 30-day readmission rates for heart attack and heart failure patients.

- Return patients to daily life half a day a day earlier, on average.

"What we try to do is create an environment for optimal care," Dr. Raymond Durkin, head of cardiology at St. Luke's said. Durkin believes any accolade to his department, the hospital and the network at large is the result of being at the forefront of the newest and most effective technologies and techniques. "Short of heart transplant, we do everything [from] checking blood pressure to heart surgery, whether it's valve or bypass," Durkin said.

"It was so easy. I just went to sleep, woke up and they were done," Biser said of his experience undergoing surgery, remembering only feeling a soreness in his neck and shoulders from the procedure. The last and only other time Biser had been under the knife was to remove his appendix years ago.

Biser is fit, doesn't smoke, maintains good cholesterol levels – something he credits to his wife's healthy cooking – and there's no history of heart disease in his family. Biser's overall health is a factor that made his operation and recovery easier, according to his surgeon, Dr. Stephen Olenchock Jr.

The fact that he didn't need valve replacement was also reassuring. "The big push and the goal is to be able to repair the mitral valve, not have to replace it, and to have a good durable long-term repair," said Olenchock, who explained in terms of valve replacement the options are either cow tissue or a mechanical valve made from carbon fiber. Both have their drawbacks, as tissue valves can wear out over time and patients with mechanical valves must take blood thinner to prevent clotting around the pivot point of the device.

Biser has two children in their 30s now and is retired from Mack Truck. His doctor's orders are to not overexert himself or lift heavy things. "You know, the usual stuff for people my age," he said.

He'll go for an ultrasound this summer with Dr. Gulotta and continue seeing him for yearly stress tests. He's enjoying retirement, which allows him time to get around to all the things he's been putting off, like working on his classic cars.

Revamped healthy eating guide

For many years the classic food pyramid has been the method by which many people plan their healthy eating goals. Recently the U.S. Department of Agriculture modified the food pyramid, transforming it into a different symbol altogether -- a dinner plate.

The general basis of the "MyPlate" model generated by the USDA is to give individuals a better understanding of the ratios of food that should fill their plates. While the average guidelines for the total amount of each food group that should be eaten varies according to age and sex, the overall messages of how much to fill a plate serve as a good indicator for healthier eating.

Taking a small dinner plate, half of the plate should be filled with fruits and vegetables, which a greater emphasis on vegetables. Slightly less than one-fourth of the other side of the plate should consist of lean protein. The remaining open portion of the plate should be made up of grains -- with at least half of those grains whole grains. A cup of low- or nonfat milk should be an accompaniment to the meal for dairy consumption.

Most people get their recommended amount of oils through many of the foods that they eat, including fish and nuts. The USDA advises anywhere from 3 to 7 teaspoons of total oil consumption daily, depending on age and sex. Otherwise, caloric need is surpassed and weight gain may occur.

Emil Diebitsch, civil engineer

Karen M. Samuels
Columnist

Lehigh University attracted Emil Diebitsch as a student because of its excellent civil engineering program and outstanding library. Emil graduated from Lehigh University with a degree in civil engineering in 1889. He showed his appreciation for Lehigh by heading the alumni association for several years. That was typical of Emil Diebitsch. He always took on the difficult jobs when he was needed. Although there are no monuments dedicated to him or books written about his life, he led a life worthy of both.

Emil was born to Hermann and Magdalena (Schmid) Diebitsch. His parents immigrated to the United States from Germany in 1850. The couple had a dream of owning a farm and raising a family. The family thrived, but the farm failed. Hermann Diebitsch was educated at the University at Breslau. He possessed great skills in mathematics and languages. The Smithsonian Institute and the Naval Observatory lured Hermann to Washington, D.C. to work for them as a mathematician and linguist from his farm in Forestville, Md.

The Diebitsch family moved to Washington, D.C., where Emil (born 1867), his brother Henry and his two sisters, Josephine and Marie, attended public school. All three children showed great abilities in school, which would serve them well in their lives. While Emil attended Lehigh University, he lived in rooming houses on Third Street and Market Street. He would have observed Bethlehem on the verge of becoming a great industrial town. During his years at Lehigh, the Bethlehem Iron Company completed the first U.S. heavy-forging plant, designed by John Fritz, to build Navy battleships.

Upon graduation, Emil expected a long career in civil engineering and putting his great skills to use in erecting buildings. However, his older sister Josephine had different plans for him. Josephine, a math and language whiz herself, replaced her father at the Smithsonian when he became too ill to continue the job. She had studied at Spencerian Business College and graduated as valedictorian in 1880. Josephine met Lt. Robert E. Peary at a dance club in Washington D.C. and they married in 1888.

Three years later, she accompanied her husband on his second expedition to Greenland. Josephine became the first woman to take part in an Arctic exploration. She was a useful companion as she hunted reindeer, ptarmigan and other game for food and clothing, along with preparing meals for the entire company. In 1893, Josephine gave birth to a daughter, Marie Ahnighito Peary, less than 13 degrees from the North Pole, the most northerly born white child. Marie was nicknamed "Snow Baby." As Josephine battled disapproving public opinion of role as a pioneer, her brother Emil supported her in every way.

In 1894, Robert Peary was on an excursion at the ice cap when his whaleboat "Faith" was lost in an accident. Emil wrote letters for donations to hire another boat to bring Peary back from the Arctic. He succeeded in raising the funds and traveled with the steamer "The Kite" as the business manager to rescue Peary.

Once at the ice cap, Peary presented Emil with a difficult problem. Would he be able to move two meteorites, known as "Woman" weighing 2,500 pounds and "Dog" at 1,100 pounds, onto the steamer? Several previous expeditions were unable to accomplish it. By using ice blocks, rigging and ropes Diebitsch moved the massive rocks on board.

Perhaps Diebitsch's greatest accomplishment was building the Grand Central Terminal, the largest train station in the world, completed in 1913. The work took 10 years but never interfered with the running of the trains. Diebitsch built several telephone, bank and school buildings in the New York area. His company constructed the New York Customs House, New York County House of Records and the New York Public Library.

He was president of the Mason Builders Association during the Great Depression and negotiated the first collective bargaining agreement, instituting a higher hourly rate and a 40-hour week for the bricklayers of New York City. Diebitsch was mayor of Nutley, New Jersey from 1916 to 1920.

In 1906 Emil married Roberta Franc Watterson, a graduate of Smith College, literary writer and librarian. Sadly, all three of their children died in infancy.

Roberta died in 1931 and Emil in 1949 at the age of 81.

Emil Diebitsch's greatest accomplishment was building the Grand Central Terminal, the largest train station in the world, completed in 1913.

PRESS DEADLINES

Bethlehem Press goes to press around 11:30 a.m. Tuesdays. Holidays can change that time and day, usually moving it ahead a day.

Our production schedule begins each Friday as we prepare copy for the coming week's paper. This is the day you need to have your items to us if you want them to appear in the next issue. It would be far wiser to send in copy much earlier.

Saturday morning, we get our page plan and begin working on pages — placing copy and photos.

Monday morning we look at coverage items from the weekend if we plan to use them in the coming issue. By 2 or 3 p.m. Monday, our pages are completed and proofreading has begun.

Tuesday morning we wrap up any loose ends, make corrections and prepare the pages to go to the plateroom and press.

Copy sent to us on Monday or Tuesday is not likely to appear in the upcoming issue.

We encourage you to send items early.

Liberty HS

Grade: 12

Family members: Mom, Jennie Gilrain; Dad, Mark McKenna; brother, Liam McKenna (freshman at LHS)

Favorite subject: I love math classes and physics because of the way problems force my brain to work in new and complex ways. Mr. Black's calculus class was especially enjoyable due to his constant wit and antics. I sometimes had a harder time figuring out his jokes than I did the problems. I also have enjoyed all of my English classes because of the opportunity for creative thinking and class discussion. My most memorable experiences in English classes have involved intense and mind opening discussion between classmates.

Activities: National Honor Society; Grenadier Band and orchestra; Liberty Student Government (president); Liberty Theater; cross country; Bethlehem Area Youth Council

Next steps: Go to college and get my master's degree in energy systems engineering

Career goals: Become an engineer and solve world problems

Heroes: My parents are both my heroes because they are passionate and deliberate in everything they do. Both of my parents have jobs through which they feel they are making important and purposeful contributions to the local community and in turn, to our world. In my life I want to emulate their passion, modesty and drive for purpose.

Hobbies: Playing basketball, juggling, adventuring, taking dips in the Lehigh, making faces in the mirror, eating ice cream at 2 in the morning after finishing homework, relaxing, thinking, beating my brother in chess (a rare occurrence recently)

Current job(s): Drum teacher for beginners. This could be my ad to get more students!

Volunteer/community work: Bethlehem Area Youth Council, help at Lehigh Daycare; assistant soccer coach GBSL; helped at homeless shelter; tour senior citizens who are Liberty graduates through the school; altar server at church; volunteer through NHS; assist Broughal Jazz Band

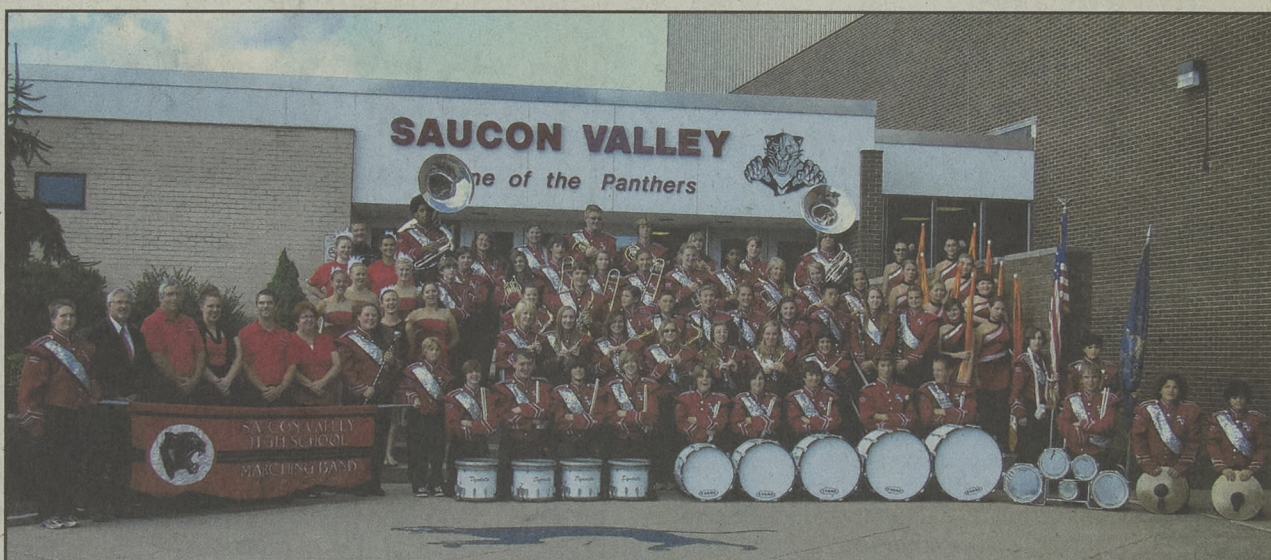

Likes: Fun, ice cream, Middle Eastern food, sushi, sports, movies, The Dark Knight, 50/50, Forrest Gump, It's a Wonderful Life, Charlie Chaplin; animals, dogs, but I don't have one because my mom is allergic

Dislikes: Not getting sleep, having to wake up early, writing on-demand essays

Greatest accomplishment (so far): President of Student Government; lead role in Sleepy Hollow; enjoying life; got awesome and pretty girlfriend Advice for peers: Search for the joys in everything you do and everyone you meet. Only involve yourself in things you are passionate about.

The Saucon Valley Panther Marching Band performed at 11 football games last fall.

Making director's last year memorable

By PEGGY TRAHEY
Special to the Bethlehem Press

Saucon Valley High School's marching band started up in August with 64 musicians and performers eager to make band director Kevin O'Connell's ("Mr. O"), last season the most impressive yet.

Through two grueling weeks of practicing hard at band camp, the students were able to pull together like never before. The band was hitting sets, marching proud, playing loud and keeping together by the time school started in September, a first for this marching band in a long time.

The band performed with its abundant talent at 11 football games and a few pep rallies. It has been featured on local television for the Hellertown and Bethlehem parades, as well as competed in local PMEA competitions at Easton, Allentown, and Phillipsburg high schools. The marching band has also received superior ratings at USBands competitions at Nazareth HS, NFL Giants Stadium, and USSBA Nationals at Allentown's J. Birney Crum Stadium. Mr. O even brought two professional clinicians from the USBands to give performing pointers and encouragement.

The band would not be anywhere, however, without the zealous support and assiduous work from dedicated staff members; the legendary and masterful Mr. O, the tireless drill instructor Dale Hillegiss, the excited assistant band director Herbert Payung, the enthusiastic guard coach Sara Gilly and talented twirling instructor Allison Farris have all pushed band members to reach their full potential. With their support, the students were able to push harder and harder with each game, gaining unflinching improvements with each roll step.

The marching band's final rating was 91.031 at Nationals, more than 10 points higher than its final score last year. The passionate students who wished to give Mr. O one unforgettable last year (especially the 21 seniors) take pride in the impressive show they've put on.

"The marching band members far exceeded what I thought they could do," O'Connell said. "This has been the best the most fun year I have ever had, and I can't think of a better group of kids to be with in my last year of teaching. The performance at USBands Nationals was flawless."

One of the three creators of the 'Big Inch' project, Ariel Karo demonstrates to Liberty HS algebra students Javian Rockmore, Sharrod Odums, Angel Nunez and Richy Bermudez how to take a pre-test using the 'Big Inch' puzzle.

Getting a handle on fractions

By DANA GRUBB
Special to the Bethlehem Press

The national award-winning 'Big Inch Project' created by Bethlehem Area Vocational Technical School (BAVTS) students Allana Karo, Ariel Karo and Tim Hofstetter, paid a visit to the Liberty HS campus to teach almost 50 freshmen the measurement of distance and fractions thereof.

In four one-hour sessions the Karo sisters and Ryan Zwickle, a BAVTS student from Northampton, pre-tested, taught fraction reduction, retested and timed the Liberty freshmen as their understanding of measurement skills improved dramatically. The Karo sisters, who claimed they can each do the 'Big Inch' puzzle used in the instruction in less than 14 seconds, were joined by Hofstetter in competing at the national Skills USA competition earlier this year.

The 'Big Inch Project' is designed to boost students' abilities to understand measurement of distance using a ruler. Each session begins with an assessment of the students' existing abilities to read a ruler and understand fraction reduction.

After additional discussion and instruction, students taking the classes use the 'Big Inch' puzzle to apply their knowledge and are timed. The use of timed competition between students and sometimes with their teachers adds a fun component to the learning experience.

A recap takes place followed by a post survey, and each student receives a certificate "acknowledging their ability to read a ruler."

To date the course has been offered to about 500 Bethlehem Area School District students at both elementary and secondary levels.

Using the 'Big Inch' puzzle, BAVTS student Ryan Zwickle and Liberty HS algebra teacher Kristin Stuby explain to Liberty freshmen Samantha Ritter, Emerald DeJesus, Destiny Singleton and Shainna Bermudez the use of fraction reduction as a way to understand fractions of inches.

Sisters Allana and Ariel Karo, students at BAVTS who created the 'Big Inch' project with BAVTS graduate Tim Hofstetter, time Liberty students completing the 'Big Inch' puzzle to show their improvement as the teaching session progressed.

LVPA NEWS

Spring performance, exhibit season begins

Spring is quite possibly the busiest season at the Lehigh Valley Charter HS for the Performing Arts.

Between performances, festivals and competitions, there is always something happening.

From March 7 to 11, selected dance majors traveled to the University of the Arts in Philadelphia to participate in the National High School Dance Festival. Nick Heffelfinger, Emily Nichols and Kristen Blundi were selected to take part in the festival, along with all senior dance majors. At the festival, the dancers partook in master classes taught by teachers from universities all over the world. While at the festival, many seniors were granted scholarships to various colleges and summer programs.

The next upcoming dance performance is Young Choreographers in Concert, which will run April 20 through 22. All pieces in YCC are student choreographed by seniors as a component of their composition classes. The pieces they choreograph also correspond with their graduation projects. On May 11 and 12, all LVPA dance majors will be performing in "Quilt." All pieces in this performance will be choreographed by the dance faculty.

Juniors from the theatre department competed in the High School Shakespeare Competition on March 3 at DeSales University. Abigail Gillespie and Sarah Tyler were selected to compete with a scene from "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Britton Hubbard and Michelle Siddiqui with a scene from "The Taming of the Shrew," Donavyn Quinones with a monologue from "Henry V," Haleigh Kling with a monologue from "The Merchant of Venice" and Max Ferguson with a monologue from "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Hubbard and Siddiqui won first place in the scenes category, and both Hubbard and Gillespie were awarded $1,000 in scholarship money.

This year, every theater student will be given the opportunity to perform in a showcase. The Freshman Theatre Showcase will be held Tuesday, April 10; the Sophomore Theatre Showcase on Wednesday, April 11; the Junior Theatre Showcase on Thursday, April 12; and the Senior Theatre Showcase on Saturday, May 12. On Saturday, April 21, LVPA's division of the International Thespian Society will be holding a dinner cabaret and fundraiser.

Region V band was hosted at Chambersburg HS Feb. 24 and 25. David Deiter, Patrick McGee and Katya Hrichak were selected to participate in this festival. At the conclusion of the festival, Deiter was chosen to advance to the state band festival, which will be held in Lancaster April 18 through 21. Regional choir was held March 8 through 10 at Waynesboro Area HS and Sarah Meinhardt and McKenzie Custin were selected to represent LVPA.

The music departments will also be holding showcases for the senior class this year. The Senior Instrumental Showcase will be held April 30. The date for the Senior Vocal Showcase has not yet been determined. The music department will also be holding a jazz band concert May 10.

Euro Yogurt will be hosting an exhibition of artwork by senior visual art majors. Senior artists will submit their original works, and selected works will be put in the exhibition. The exhibition will be part of the Artist Cafe that will take place May 10, although it can be viewed any time. Also on May 10, freshman, sophomore and junior artwork will be displayed in LVPA's Fowler Art Gallery. From LVPA, a Euro Yogurt where senior works will be displayed.

On March 24, LVPA will be holding the Gala of Dreams, its biggest fundraiser of the year at ArtsQuest's SteelStacks. Students of various majors and music faculty members will be performing for at this dinner event.

LVPA's musical, "Funny Girl," will run from March 27 through April 1. The musical is audition-based and is open to all students, regardless of their major. The lead roles of Fanny Brice and Nick Arnstein will be played by Jenna Miller and Teague Fernandez.

Lehigh Valley Barber School

By Vito Villani

As told to Jennifer Lader

I had noticed Bethlehem needed a barber school since I was 18, but I just never had the credentials until now. The community had completely neglected this profession, so I traveled to Philadelphia for my cosmetology license. I went through nails and thermal curling, but I didn't learn good scissor work or good clipper work. They didn't teach the latest styles.

For my barber's license, I had to go to New York and the license transferred to Pennsylvania. It took a long time to acquire the skills and it also took a lot of money to open a school, but I wanted to teach people. I have a technique that works.

To find out about it, you have to sign up.

I offer a nine-month course that includes clipper cuts, shaving, facials, perm waves, sanitary/disinfection procedures and a lot more. We talk about the different systems of the body, like the muscles and the skeleton. A lot of people don't go to the doctor regularly; if we can notice something abnormal, we can refer them to a physician.

We've been open for five months and now I'm working on getting accredited by the Pa. Department of Education. To do that, you have to be open for two years. After we get accredited, students will be able to get grants to come here. They cut the hair of our clients. A haircut for a man is $7, and the same for kids.

Anyone interested in enrolling can contact me through the website, and we'll set up an appointment for an interview. Students should have an eighth grade or equivalent education, and be at least 16 years old. I'm looking for someone who really wants to become a barber.

Hall of Fame

Lehigh County remembers their names

By PAUL WILLISTEIN
Focus Editor

It was as a celebrity-studded event as the Lehigh Valley has likely ever seen.

There were stars of the silver screen (Christine Taylor, along with husband Ben Stiller); television (Carson Kressley), literature ("Marley & Me" author John Grogan) and sports (former NFL standout Andre Reed).

The Lehigh Valley has produced a fascinating array of famous athletes, entertainers, media personalities and business leaders.

Look no further than the first inductees for the Lehigh County Hall of Fame at the Lehigh County Bicentennial Community Celebration March 10 in the Agri-Plex, Allentown Fairgrounds, Allentown.

The awards presentation provided humorous anecdotes and appreciative tributes. Recipients referred to, thanked and needled fellow honorees.

Ben Stiller, sitting front and center with his and Taylor's daughter, Ella, and Taylor's family, was a gracious target.

Lehigh County Executive Don Cunningham, credited with the Hall of Fame concept, quipped to Stiller, "I think you and Christine [Taylor] would have been better in 'Marley & Me' [the 2008 movie starring Owen Wilson and Jennifer Aniston based on the book by Hall of Fame honoree John Grogan]."

Gesturing to Stiller, Kressley said, "Reality TV. It's great. No script. Ben, you should try it."

When it was noted that Lutron products are in the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History, Washington, D.C., a trace of recognition crossed the face of Stiller, who starred in "Night at the Museum: Battle of the Smithsonian" (2009).

Three words appeared frequently in recipients' acceptance speeches: tough, love and drive.

These traits set them apart and powered their success. Many credited the Valley and their mentors here with giving them their start.

Some recipients turned the tables, saying the real heroes are those who stayed in the Valley, working day in and day out to help make the area, as was noted, a great place in which to live and raise a family.

Brigadier Gen. Anna Mae V. McCabe Hays, Allentown, first woman in the United States military to be promoted to a general officer.

"I'm 92 tonight," she said to applause. Then, responding to what sounded like fireworks exploding outside: "I see they're saluting me."

"I don't know what God has planned for me. I hope he's planning for me to come back to Allentown, the town that I love."

Gen. Thomas R. Morgan, Slatington, former Assistant Commandant, Marine Corps

"You're a youngster." At 82, I said, "Thank you," recalling McCabe Hays' comment to him and his response.

"She opened that door [for women]. She deserves great credit for that."

"I'm a little disappointed that Curt Simmons couldn't be here. We bumped heads in the Lehigh Valley League," Morgan said of the Whitehall native, former Philadelphia Phillies

"Whiz Kid" and inductee.

Ed Donley, Allentown, former Air Products and Chemicals, Inc. CEO

"Our experience was that the very first day we arrived in the Lehigh Valley, we were welcomed with open arms by this very loving community."

Lee Iacocca, Allentown, former Chrysler Corp. CEO

His niece, Laurie Kelechava, Bethlehem, a retired Allentown School District teacher, accepting the award for Iacocca, who lives in California, said, "A care package from the Lehigh Valley might include Tastykakes and Lebanon bologna."

Joel Spira, Coopersburg, founder, Lutron, first patent for "dimming device" in 1962

"He gave me a lot of support and wisdom," Spira said, crediting Donley.

"I am proud to be part of the global energy savings and also to be from the picturesque Coopersburg area."

It's estimated that Lutron products save the United States nearly 10 billion kilowatt hours or $1 billion in annual utility costs.

Michaela Conlin, South Whitehall, TV's "Bones"

"Dorney Park and the plays at Parkland and her friends" were among her Valley favorites cited by her mother Denise in accepting the award with her husband Fran Conlin.

Carson Kressley, Lowhill Township, "Dancing with the Stars" and "Love, Carson" Shop NBC women's sportswear and accessories

"I haven't been to Ag Hall since 1979 and it was a car show. My father was so glad I was into cars. And I was interested in Adam West [TV's "Batman"]. Where are the leotards?"

Thanking Spira for inventing the dimmer switch, Kressley exclaimed, "That man should get the Nobel Prize."

Amanda Seyfried, Allentown, "In Time," "Mama Mia!"

"When she was 11, she started modeling at Pro-Model [now Look]. Her first ad was a Dorney Park TV ad," said her mother, Ann, attending with her husband Jim Seyfried.

Christine Taylor, Lower Macungie, "Tropic Thunder," "The Brady Bunch Movie"

Taylor gave shout-outs to "St. Thomas More, where I saw my first play" and JoAnn Wilchek Basist, "my first acting teacher."

"I also want to thank Civic Theatre of Allentown, where I got my first show."

"I really want to thank Central Catholic for allowing me to ditch classes to go to New York City [for auditions]."

Charles Bierbauer, Allentown, former CNN correspondent

Referring to Valley residents, he said, "In a lot of ways, those are your heroes. They stayed. They worked here."

John Grogan, Coopersburg, "Marley & Me" author

"Why are you moving here from Miami?" we were asked. "Very, very quickly this [the Valley] became home. It's a very warm community. And it's a great place to raise the kids."

"And then I decided to write about that dumb dog of our ours. And that changed everything."

"Then we knew we could move anywhere in the country, in the world. And that's when we made the conscious decision that this is

THEATER REVIEWS

Thoroughly musical 'Millie' at Playhouse

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to The Press

Director Will Erwin brings "Thoroughly Modern Millie," a wonderful, fast-paced musical, to life with some of the Lehigh Valley's best dancers and singers.

"Thoroughly Modern Millie," with book by Richard Morris and Dick Scanlon, continues week-ends through April 1 in its Lehigh Valley premiere at The Pennsylvania Playhouse, Bethlehem.

When Millie arrives with her two cheap suitcases in Prohibitionist-Era New York City, she brings her irrepressible modern attitude with her.

The naive girl from Kansas meets handsome but apparently penniless Jimmy Smith, played by Doug Ace, but she keeps her hat set for a wealthy husband.

Gorgeous and immensely-talented Casey Elizabeth Gill is completely charming and perfectly-cast in the title role of Millie. Gill has great comedic timing augmented by a repertoire of smiles, eye raises and saucy poses.

Millie's best friend, roommate and apparent romantic rival is Miss Dorothy Brown, who claims to be a wealthy orphan who wants to experience life as a poor person.

Dorothy is played by strikingly-beautiful Kimberly Tassinaro. The part showcases her singing range and acting skills.

Gill and Tassinaro lead a talented troupe through Gwen Swanson's beautifully-choreographed numbers. Their duet, "How the Other Half Lives," is charming to see and to hear.

The biggest laugh-getter is Ted Williams as Mrs. Meers, the cross-dressing Chinese owner of the cheap hotel for single women where he and his henchmen do a thriving side business kidnapping any young woman who checks in, selling them into white slavery.

When Mrs. Meers sets out to Shanghai Brown, his bungling henchmen, Ching Ho (Peter Sikalias) and Bun Foo (Nathan Chipman), sympathize with the pretty girl.

Sikalias and Chipman are standouts in that their dialogue is mostly in Chinese, helped along by subtitles. Sikalias, who has a seemingly hopeless crush on the patrician Dorothy, charms the audience with his broken English and good-hearted nature.

Muzzy Van Hossmere, a wealthy socialite is, played with laugh-getting charm by Kirsten Rani Almeida.

Redheaded Miss Flannery, played by Mary-Catherine Bracali, keeps the comedy moving as the crusty floor supervisor who tries to keep effervescent Millie grounded in work-a-day reality.

The lighting by Ryan William Kloss is tremendous, especially when it suddenly captures and visually isolates Dorothy and Millie's boss and hoped-for husband, Trevor Graydon (played by Brian Vigorito), when the two first meet. It's smitten at first sight.

The minimalist but effective set design by Colleen Shea provides plenty of room for the energetic "Moderns" led by talented dance captain and eye-catching Morgan Reilly.

Though unseen in the production, the orchestra, led by Lucile DeMasi Kincaid, is wonderful.

Erwin also did the costume design with the assistance of the multi-talented Tassinaro, dressing the cast in striking costumes evoking the Roaring Twenties' style.

What you lose and gain with age

When I was a kid, I used to love walking on railroad tracks.

As an adult, I still did it whenever I had the chance, enjoying a remnant from my childhood, I guess.

Balance was something that came easy. So was flexibility. But my best strength was aerobic capacity.

I've always loved to move fast. Still do. And aerobic classes and fast-paced Zumba classes are still favorites of mine.

But over the past year or two I've been dismayed to see my balance isn't as good as it used to be. At the gym, when I'm in a class doing exercises that require balance, I find my body shaking as it struggles to center itself when I stand on one leg.

My once-prized aerobic ability is faltering, too. I've had to stop taking Zumba classes with much younger women. Instead, I take Zumba Gold with women around my age.

When, I wonder to myself, did my gym strengths erode to this extent?

At first, I worried this might be early signs of a disease. Actually, it's just signs of aging.

Like everyone else who finds the door called youth has slammed shut, I have to accept that there are skills I no longer have—not to the extent I once did.

As we age, our bodies lose balance, tone and a whole lot of other things. I hate it. No one likes to accept he or she can't do physical activity as they once could.

But here's what I've been thinking—it all balances itself out. We do, indeed, lose some things as we age. But we gain some good things, too.

Perhaps the most important thing we gain as we age is the ability to know what's important and what isn't.

It's not an inconsequential skill. It's life changing when we gain that knowledge.

Here's why: When we know what's important and what's not, we have more peace and harmony because we let little things go by.

Many people have observed older people are more tranquil. That's not because their minds went to sleep. It's because the tranquility comes from wisdom gained through the years.

You've heard the expression: Too soon old. Too late smart.

That's one way of saying we do, indeed, gain valuable wisdom as we age. If we would have had that wisdom decades earlier, life would have been smoother.

As we age, we learn to look at the big picture. We don't focus on the little burrs we encounter.

The wisdom we gain teaches us life isn't all about "being right." Sights and disagreements don't consume us as they once might have. Instead of harping on an issue, we remember the person is more important than the act. We learn to let a lot more go by without reacting.

Friends of mine just celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. I asked them what has made their marriage so strong.

"We overlook the small stuff," said my friend, "and mostly, it's all small stuff."

You've heard that before. There's even a book by that title: "Don't sweat the small stuff (and It's All Small Stuff.)"

We read it and hear it. But we don't truly take it to heart until the wisdom of age mellows us.

When my father was a young man, he was what we call "a hot head." He got in fights with people and his quick temper ruined his marriage.

Years later the temper was gone. In its place was the wisdom gained through the years. Looking back at his life, he said he wished he could have been mellower when he was younger.

Older people take more time for kindness, too. We stop running through life and stop rushing by people as if they weren't there.

It all has to do with learning, I guess.

We have learned that love is a renewable resource. The more we give away, the more we have to give.

I saw a survey the other day that concluded older people (defined as 65 and older) are happier and more content than younger folks. The article went on to list a lot of reasons why, focusing on the fact that in retirement we have time to do what we want.

I think the article missed the main reason we "older folks" are happy: We've gained a true sense of appreciation for all of life.

If I could name the main strength we gain as we age, I would put appreciating life at the top of the list.

When we are younger, we miss much of the beauty of each day. Sure, we appreciate what we have. But as we age, that appreciation takes on a sharper focus.

We take time to appreciate the small pleasures of each day. We don't gulp down a cup of coffee in the morning before we rush off. Instead, we savor that first cup of coffee as the first pleasure of day.

We take in every detail of life and relish every bit of it.

As we age, we become more introspective, looking back through the years at people who have shaped us in one way or the other.

When I do this, I feel a rush of gratitude for so many people who have touched my life. I may not see them anymore, but I carry them in my heart with love and a keen sense of appreciation.

When we're older, we learn not to take life for granted. We treasure the gift of each new day.

For all that we lose as we age, we gain a whole lot more.

What have you gained as you've aged? Share your thoughts.

Laughing at 'Death' in CKP comedy

By DOUGLAS GRAVES
Special to The Press

A shadow in the garden and a clammy touch or a close call in their fast cars give the willies to the happy revelers at Duke Lambert's castle.

Death is far from their minds — until Death takes three days off and comes to call.

"Death Takes A Holiday," presented by Crowded Kitchen Players week-ends through April 1 at McCoolle's Arts & Events Place, Quakertown, is directed by Ara Barlieb. The comedy is based on a Walter Ferris adaptation of a book by Alberto Casella.

Duke Lambert, played with regal dash and imperious attitude by Todd Carpien, is enjoying the life and perquisites of the very rich, including trying to seduce Alda, a pretty guest played with coy abandon by Barbara Jackson Root, when the Duke has an unwanted, hooded and sinister visitor.

Death, who has always wondered why humans were afraid of him and why they hold life so dearly, is played with marvelous perfection by William Alexander, Jr. in the title role.

More perfect casting could scarcely be imagined. Alexander's commanding presence and physical strength gives him a great edge as a leading man. He can be, by turns, charming and menacing.

When circumstances compel the Duke to invite Death as a guest, he assumes the name and persona of His Serene Highness Prince Sirki and is introduced and treated as an honored guest.

Prince Sirki quickly learns about wine and beautiful women as he pursues his quest to understand humans.

Though a couple of the young female guests fall for the Prince's charm, it is betrothed Grazia, played by lovely Kelly Herbert James, who captures his heart but not before Alda does her hilarious best to show the mysterious guest her sultry charms.

Grazia, who was to marry the Duke's son, Corrado, played with charm by Brian Kaller, finds that she must choose between life with Corrado, or Death.

Elizabeth Buss is wonderful as sexy, red-haired Erica Fenton.

Jack McGavin as old Baron Cesarea is delightful as he feels his energy and carnal appetites returning, not realizing that with Death on holiday the process of dying has stopped.

The servants, Cora and Fedele, are great fun as they provide needed light-hearted moments. Cora, played by Alexandra Racines, is beautiful as a peasant girl. Fedele, played by stout Dan Dacardi, does duty as a handyman on the Duke's estate.

Nancy Mikkelsen's and Brenna Wallace's costume design and selection capture the era perfectly on the simple but elegant set designed and built by Barlieb. The action takes place in the castle's garden patio.

The cast does a wonderful job of telling the author's story and leaving the audience contemplating the meaning of life — and death.

Symptoms to look for in alcoholism

Q. How can you tell if someone is an alcoholic?

Alcoholism is a disease with four primary symptoms: craving or compulsion to drink, the inability to limit drinking, high alcohol tolerance, and physical dependence.

The American Medical Association publishes the following list of physical symptoms to diagnose alcoholism. If an older person shows several symptoms, there is a high probability of alcoholism.

Bruises, abrasions and scars in locations that might suggest frequent falls, bumping into objects, physical altercations, or other violent behavior;

Cigarette burns on the fingers;

Flushed or florid faces; Jerky eye movement or loss of central vision; Damage to nerves causing numbness and tingling;

Hypertension, particularly systolic (the first number);

Gastrointestinal or other bleeding;

Cirrhosis or other evidence of liver impairment, such as swelling in the lower extremities, and other signs of fluid retention; and Psoriasis.

Q. I heard that gout is a form of arthritis?

Is this true?

Osteoarthritis, rheumatoid arthritis and gout are the three most common forms of arthritis among seniors.

You get osteoarthritis when cartilage, the cushioning tissue within the joints, wears down. This produces stiffness and pain.

Rheumatoid arthritis, which is characterized by inflammation of the joint lining, occurs when the immune system turns against the body.

Stress, alcohol, drugs or an illness can trigger gout. It's caused by a build-up of crystals of uric acid in a joint. Uric acid is in all human tissue and is found in foods.

Often, gout affects joints in the lower part of the body such as the ankles, heels, knees and especially the big toes. The disease is more common in men.

Early attacks usually subside within 3 to 10 days, even without treatment, and the next attack may not occur for months or even years.

Most people with gout are able to control their symptoms with medication.

Will you 'Friends' this movie?

"Friends with Kids" is "When Harry Met Sally" (1989) meets the "Friends" TV show (1994-2004) meets a comedy by Judd Apatow.

It's also "Bridesmaids" Post-Graduate since four actors in leading roles appeared in that movie.

In "Friends with Kids," Julie (Jennifer Westfeldt, who wrote and directed the film) and Jason (Adam Scott) have been best friends for most of their lives. They see their married New York City friends' lives go from martial bliss to martial law when the babies arrive.

Leslie (Maya Rudolph) and Alex (Chris O'Dowd) turn cohabitation annoyances into major battles against a soundtrack of two screaming young ones.

Missy (Kristen Wiig) and Ben (Jon Hamm), who had a case of the hots before they married, have a case of the blahs once the baby arrives. They go from eHarmony to disharmony faster than you can say "diaper change."

So, naturally — or unnaturally, Julie and Jason decide they'll be smarter, avoid complications and friend each other a baby.

After the bundle of joy arrives, Jason begins dating a Broadway chorine, Mary Jane (Megan Fox). Leslie starts dating a very eligible divorcee, Kurt (Ed Burns). All the while, they continue co-parenting.

How things turn out, or don't turn out, becomes a diving board for splashy comedy.

While there are a few bellyflops, "Friends with Kids" has some chuckles thanks to Westfeldt's rapid-fire editing which doesn't give the audience a chance to let the air out of the joke balloons whizzing around the rooms amidst snippy, sometimes snappy, dialogue.

Westfeldt (screenplay, "Kissing Jessica Stein"), in her big-screen directorial debut, uses typical pop music movie montages to smooth out the screenplay speed bumps.

The movie has a lot of heart in the final third. I made sure I brought paper tissues and used two. "Friends with Kids" is a two-hankie movie, if not a five-popcorn box movie.

Westfeldt gives herself the biggest and best role. After all, she is the writer-director. She does well by her screen time. She has the presence of a Terri Garr, mixed with a bit of Meg Ryan and Kate Hudson.

The casting could be stronger for her significant other. Scott (TV's "Parks and Recreation"), who resembles Tom Cruise, is fine. I would have preferred someone with more dramatic weight.

You can see the difference in the secondary roles casting. Hamm is solid as a rather despicable character. Wiig makes the most of her small role. Rudolph is becoming one of the screen's or TV's most watchable presences. Her mate also could have been less nondescript.

Fox makes a good impression as the femme fatale. Burns' confidence bolsters the case for more dynamic casting.

The cinematography wavers from romantically-lit to overly-lit. It's as though the film-makers spent more time on some scenes than others.

"Friends with Kids," a chick flick with testosterone, can be recommended for couples, married or not, with children or not, and those contemplating marriage or not.

Word to the wise: Take a tip from the song, "Love and Marriage." Don't put the carriage before the horse.

"Friends with Kids," MPAA Rated R (Restricted. Under 17 Requires Accompanying Parent Or Adult Guardian) for sexual content and language; Genre: Comedy; Run time: 1 hour, 40 minutes; Distributed by Lionsgate.

Anonymous: "Friends with Kids" ends on a jaunty note with the song by The 88, "Coming Home," written by Keith Slettedahl, who wrote or co-rote several other songs in the movie.

Box Office, March 16: "21 Jump Street" leaped to No. 1, opening with $35 million for Channing Tatum and Jonah Hill, dropping "Dr. Seuss's The Lorax" to No. 2, $22.8 million, $158.4 million, three weeks.

3. "John Carter," $13.5 million, $53.1 million, two weeks; 4. "Project X," $4 million, $48.1 million, three weeks; 5. "A Thousand Words," $3.7 million, $12.1 million, two weeks; 6. "Act of Valor," $3.6 million, $62.3 million, four weeks; 7. "Safe House," $2.8 million, $120.2 million, six weeks; 8. "Journey 2: The Mysterious Island," $2.4 million, $95 million, six weeks; 9. "Casa de mi Padre," $2.2 million, opening; 10. "This Means War," $2.1 million, $50.5 million, five weeks; 13. "Friends with Kids," $1.5 million, $4.2 million, two weeks

Unreel, March 23: "The Hunger Games," PG-13: The advance buzz has reached a hornets' nest pitch. Jennifer Lawrence stars as Katniss Everdeen in the big-screen adaptation of the first of Suzanne Collins' popular novels. Hollywood pundits see this as the next "Twilight" and "Harry Potter" phenom. Oh, and by the way, the hideous storyline is set in a science fiction future where a boy and girl are selected to fight to the death on live television.

Allegiant back to M. Beach

Allegiant Airlines flights from Lehigh Valley International Airport (LVIA) to Myrtle Beach, S.C., return May 3.

"We are excited Allegiant plans to return seasonal service to Myrtle Beach," said Charles R. Everett, Jr. LVIA Executive Director. "Myrtle Beach is one of our top vacation destinations."

Allegiant began service between LVIA and Myrtle Beach International Airport in May 2009. The service has been successful. More than 42,000 passengers have flown between the two airports on Allegiant since the route began.

Taylor to premiere new CD at Godfrey

By AMY HERZOG
 Special to the Press

Eric Taylor, who performs at 8 p.m. March 22, Godfrey Daniels, 7 E. Fourth St., Bethlehem, blends fiery finger-style guitar picking with vocals lightly flavored with a country twang in original story songs about the average Joe and daily life.

Godfrey's is one of the first venues where fans can hear material from his latest CD, "Eric Taylor and Friends: Live at The Red Shack," recorded over two nights in a Houston, Tex., recording studio.

"Live at the Red Shack" showcases Taylor with guest vocals from Lyle Lovett and Nanci Griffith.

"It was a wonderful experience," Taylor says in a recent phone interview. "The audience was somewhat spellbound at first as they were each invited personally to see Nanci [Griffith], Lyle [Lovett], Denice [Franke], Susan [Lindfors, his wife], Marco [Python Feccio] and me ... no charge. Even the drinks were free.

"We used no head-phones or back-line, so it was a true live recording — no over-dubbing, no do-overs. We recorded it over two days. We did songs that we did together so many years ago. We did some songs that have never been recorded before, but date back to our early years together."
